The Knight-Brinkerhoff Piano

We have just taken the agency for the Knight-Brinkerhoff Piano. It is a good, reliable instrument, that sells regularly at $350.00. In order to introduce this piano quickly and get 100 instruments in Los Angeles homes at once—knowing full well that such an introduction will bring us hundreds of other customers—we have decided to make the special offer named above and on these most exceptional terms. Of course, no Establishment could afford to sell these pianos regularly at $245. But in placing these 100 instruments we feel that a strong, steady demand will follow. The desire of piano manufacturers is to get [illegible] to 100,000 instruments of their special make into homes. An endless chain of buyers is thus formed. For how often one friend will say to another, "What a beautiful piano you have! Where did you buy it?" And it is to popularize this Piano, already established in the East and handled by the leading dealers, that we make this special offer in the West.

We receive no aid from the Manufacturer in this plan—piano manufacturers do not make such arrangements. It is sufficient for them to produce the best instruments possible for the money. It is for us to so place them before the public that a steady demand will follow.

We stand squarely behind the manufacturer's guarantee for the Knight-Brinkerhoff Piano. If the instrument does not fulfill our every claim, we will give you your money back. These Pianos are in Mahogany and Oak, in the latest designs—really handsome instruments. We could not afford to make these extraordinary prices and favorable terms unless we felt sure that at least 100 pianos would be sold in a very short time.

We will agree that should you buy with the idea of later wanting one of our Kranich & Bach, Sohmer or Kurtzmann Pianos, we will allow all the money paid to apply on such an exchange, at any time within three years. These Pianos will sell as secondhand instruments then for as much as we are offering them at now NEW.

An examination and trial will convince you of the merit of these instruments. Remember, after the first 100 are sold, prices will be raised to what they should rightfully be.

RAILWAY PRESIDENTS DIVIDE RICH EMPIRE.

Threatened Invasion of Gould Lines Into Southwest Causes Corporations' Heads to Trade Concessions During Conference on Coast.

Robert S. Lovett of the Southern Pacific and E. P. Ripley of the Santa Fé have divided an empire between themselves. Lovett's tour of inspection in the West is completed, and the Ripley conference held in San Francisco on Friday is the result. Now the West is wondering what the local benefits will be.

The field of operations, which is shaken up as a result of the tour of inspection, covers seven States, and in the game of chess which was played on Friday between the two great railway heads the figure of George J. Gould loomed in the background and made possible compromises that otherwise never would have been possible.

In spite of Lovett's statement that "If Gould comes to the Southwest, we can take care of ourselves," the whole meeting was worked out to prevent the Gould invasion from spreading beyond the single line of track which the Western Pacific and the Denver and Rio Grande now operate from Denver west, through Salt Lake to San Francisco.

By the terms of the conference, the Southern Pacific is permitted to break the Santa Fé monopoly at San Diego by connecting the old Tia Juana line recently purchased by the Southern Pacific from the Dobbins interests through forced sale, with the Southern Pacific lines now operated in the Imperial Valley and connecting with the main line at Yuma. This will give the Southern Pacific and the Spreckels interests in San Diego a shorter outlet to the East, and will obviate the long Santa Fé haul through Los Angeles, besides doing away with the heavy grades. It will also give the Southern Pacific a short line from the Coast to the Gulf for competition with the Panama Canal.

SHORTER NORTHERN RUN.

The Santa Fé in return for this probably will be permitted to use the Southern Pacific lines over the Tehachepi, which will permit this line to operate direct trains between Los Angeles and San Francisco, without making the long run around by Barstow. This will make the Santa Fé a direct competitor of the Southern Pacific in the Los Angeles-San Francisco business. (While this has not been definitely announced, as the return for the Santa Fé's permission to the Southern Pacific's entrance into San Diego, it is understood that it is the demand which was to be made for this permission.)

The Santa Fé and the Southern Pacific's decision to build the Northwestern Pacific into Humboldt and Mendocino counties of this State, also is a move to prevent the Gould interests from extending branch lines. The Northwestern Pacific's construction will involve $12,500,000—an estimated cost of $30,000 a mile.

As the San Diego line of the Southern Pacific blocks the Gould building, so does the Northwestern Pacific's construction close the door of the North at the present time in the face of the rival builder.

To keep this door closed for some time to come, a sop in the way of traffic agreements has been thrown him from the conference, and through the operation of these agreements Gould will be prevented from building branches from the main line of the Western Pacific, which otherwise might lead to too close competition with the Southern Pacific and Santa Fé lines now in operation.

KEEPS PANAMA BUSINESS.

In the same way the Southern Pacific's traffic agreement with the Rock Island, which operates a line as far west as Benson, Ariz., will prevent the building into San Diego and tapping the Panama business, while in the North the forests of Humboldt and Mendocino counties are the bone of contention, as well as the rich agricultural and mining districts opened.

The questions in California, thus amicably settled for good of both parties, the subject of other construction came up, but here there was a different attitude displayed in the meeting of the two great railway heads.

A few years ago when Ripley met the late Harriman in their remarkable thirty-minute conference, Harriman was a strong factor in Santa Fé operation. He controlled two of the directors, owned large blocks of Santa Fé stock, and was continually in the market for more. As a result he dominated the conference, and Ripley took orders with the best grace possible.

Now things have changed. The Lovett hand is not felt, as was that of Harriman, and the Santa Fé stock is safe from the clutches of the late railroad king's successor.

The Santa Fé will do as it pleases in many things. It was through this that Ripley refused to consider Lovett's terms for a Union Station, a station that was to have been an Espee affair in which the Santa Fé and Salt Lake were to rent desk space. The question is not definitely decided, but it is practically certain that unless Los Angeles business men make their demands felt a Southern Pacific and Salt Lake combine is all that can be expected, albeit the new station is expected to cost $1,000,000.

ARIZONA IS DIVIDED.

As a result of the recent tour of inspection through Arizona and the recommendations offered by Epes Randolph, who is in control of the Phoenix and Eastern and the other Southern Pacific interests in Arizona, Lovett and Ripley have formally divided Arizona.

By the terms of this division the Southern Pacific, taking up the San Diego line at Yuma, will use the regular El Paso line as far as the junction to Phoenix. From here the Southern Pacific's line through Durango, Colo., and Box Cañon, will take over the control of the situation, and the new line will give a north-and-south connection of the regular Southern Pacific lines, and also will give Denver and the Middle Northwest a short cut to the Pacific Coast end of the Panama Canal.

In return for the Santa Fé's keeping its hands off this building, the Southern Pacific gives the Santa Fé the advantage of the Santa Fé cut-off between Bengal and Parker, and gives the Phoenix short line trade with the Pacific Coast to the Ripley system.

This agreement practically divides the Territory, with its mining and agricultural resources in half, and gives the Southern Pacific an opening with the Santa Fé into Southwestern Colo-of the Southern Pacific to a large extent, but in Texas the Santa Fé reaps, for it is practically certain that the Southern Pacific will not interfere with the Santa Fé's development work in Western Texas. In that State the Santa Fé is building a line which will give the Ripley system a shorter cut from San Francisco to the gulf than the Southern Pacific now owns.

A complete account of this work was printed in The Times yesterday. Money for a large part of the construction has been voted and Wednesday the Southern Pacific's stockholders in the annual meeting at Louisville voted $50,000,000 bonds for improvements, while the Santa Fé is not a whit behind in the money question.

The Southern Pacific, in addition to the operation of the western lines, and the arrangements made with the Santa Fé's president, has been extending its lines in Mexico, and President Lovett's conference with Ripley also considered this subject.

The Santa Fé, through the parties who control its affairs in Arizona, has been looking into the Mexican situation, and a new Santa Fé subsidiary line to Point Lobos, on the Gulf of Mexico, will be built. Rails for this have been delivered at the Mexican port, and construction work will be rushed.

This line is being built on the hypothesis that the Santa Fé must control at least one port on the gulf.

In a word the whole railway map of the West was considered at the meeting of Ripley and Lovett, and the empire of the Southwest has been divided between them. If the Gould system attempts to build into this part of the country it will meet with a cold reception, and will find as many traffic points as possible closed to Gould trade.

It was for this reason that the Santa Fé permitted the Southern Pacific to build the Durango-Denver cut-off, as this will prevent the Denver and Rio Grande from coming south into Arizona and New Mexico, while the San Diego-Imperial Valley-Yuma line of the Southern Pacific prevents the Phelps Dodge-Rock Island lines from getting to the Coast through this territory.

Ripley and Lovett both come out of the conference with flying colors. Each has obtained something that he desired, but in the meantime the Los Angeles union depot and the new station required for Third and Townsend streets, San Francisco, have not been definitely reported on.

SMOOTH ARTICLE.

MANY FALL FOR CLEVER SCHEME.

TAILOR EVEN GETS STUNG FOR A WEDDING SUIT.

Police Declare That Former Bank Employee Who Uses Alleged Spurious Checks Bolstered Up by Deposit Record Secured Much Money and Goods from Victims Here.

Charges which, if proved, will stamp James A. Woodbury as one of the smoothest bank swindlers of the year, were made at police headquarters yesterday by various concerns, which allege they have been duped through the man's cleverness.

Woodbury, a man of middle age and unusual polish, with clothes always of the latest model and manners faultless, is even alleged to have swindled the tailor out of the suit in which he was married.

The specific charge against Woodbury, and which caused the issuance of a warrant for his arrest on a charge of passing a worthless check, comes from the Whitley Jewelry Company. But this is only one of many.

The Pinkertons, the Blair and the Harris detective agencies are working on the case, as well as the police. Woodbury is believed to be wending his way to Chicago or some other eastern point, leaving his troubles and a young wife behind him. The wife is a recent acquisition, having been obtained about three months ago.

Complaints against the one-time broker assert that he quit the brokerage business and entered the All Night and Day Bank as a trusted employé; that while there he began to put his system of worthless drafts into effect—depositing practically worthless drafts in one bank, having them entered in his deposit book, and then using this book as a guarantee of his financial standing so that he might float worthless checks.

It is alleged he worked this game on the Park Savings Bank and the Citizens' National, but that they saw through his scheme before he was able to do much harm. Detectives say Woodbury added to his already complicated standing at the All Night and Day Bank by borrowing $1000 to cover the deficits at the other two banks.

The Hollywood bank was the next. It is alleged that he worked his game there until he had deposited drafts to the extent of $9000, being warned regularly by the bank against drawing against these accounts on the ground that the drafts might not bear investigation.

With this nest-egg showing on his deposit book, Woodbury seems to have started to look for prey. Tailors, haberdashers and others, according to the police, furnished him with the latest of fashions. He then tried B. G. Lathrop, manager for J. C. Wilson, a member of the New York Stock Exchange. Detectives have the report that Lathrop was swindled out of $500. It was then that Woodbury is alleged to have turned his attention to Jevne's for a large order of select cigars and groceries.

Then he gave the Whitley Jewelry Company his check for $393, in payment of a diamond ring and a lady's watch, the latter being presented to his wife. As soon as she learned that the watch had been purchased with HIS STORY A RAW FAKE.

Young Man Who Declared Himself Wounded by Horse Thief in Fight Admits Shooting Self.

Frank Howard, 22 years old, who was wounded on the night of March 31, on the road a short distance west of Whittier, and who told a wild tale of a battle with a horse thief, confessed yesterday that he shot himself.

The young man wounded himself accidentally, while trying to manufacture evidence which would clear him of a horse-stealing charge. He now admits the theft, but will not be prosecuted, as he has been severely punished. He was seriously injured, but it is believed he will get well.

Howard was formerly employed by J. C. Friend on a ranch near Santa Ana. He quit work and rode his horse to a livery stable in Long Beach, where he was hired. On March 27 he sought to borrow a pony from the proprietor to go in the country after a horse he had purchased. The owner was suspicious of him and refused his request. Two days later he went away and returned leading a mare—the property of Friend.

The ranchman went to the beach city in search of his animal and found her at the stable. Howard declared he had purchased her for $50. He said he wished to get her back for Friend, as he was convinced the man had stolen her. His story was not convincing, and he was told he would be believed if he caused the arrest of the thief. He set out on his saddle horse, and that night was wounded. Now he confesses that he wished to give the impression that he had been shot at by the thief and fired his gun several times. His horse began to jump and he accidentally shot himself.

City Adopts a Test for the Rum "Suspects."

Condition of Prisoners Will Be Determined.

Los Angeles First in America With Innovation.

Drunkenness will hereafter be accurately diagnosed whenever prisoners are taken to the Central Police Station. The suspected inebriates will be subjected to a series of tests which can leave no doubt as to their condition. Every prisoner who is able to talk distinctly enough to tell the desk sergeant that he is not drunk, will be sent at once to the Receiving Hospital around the corner, where the doctors are "from Missouri."

Dr. Charles E. Zerfing, police surgeon, yesterday adopted the Parisian method of testing alcoholic patients. He has added many ideas of his own.

Observing tremor of extended fingers
Studying pupils of eyes

Determining Whether Drunk or Sober.

Making tests in the Receiving Hospital on prisoners suspected of intoxication. The new system adopted here leaves no room for doubt, according to the Police Surgeon.

The "suspect" must in each case pass a test for temperature, pulse, color of his skin, tremor of the fingers when extended, pupils, odor of breath, coherence, arousability, poise—mental and physical—and ability to walk and stand without veering or sagging. Any man who can pass Dr. Zerfing's tests deserves a gilt-edged certificate of sobriety.

The innovation of "drunk diagnoses" and a series of tests was brought about by the fact that there have been charges that sometimes an injured man is mistaken for an intoxicated person, or a sober man has been locked up because of some idiosyncrasy or physical defect.

Los Angeles is the first city in America to officially recognize the need of expert tests on persons suspected of being overloaded with alcohol. Some of the large cities have prisoners examined at the desk sergeant's office, but nowhere else do they use the tests.

OTHER TESTS.

Certain courts have held that a man may talk as though he had been drinking glue, walk like a jolly tar braving the bounding deep, and have a breath that would paralyze a turkey buzzard, without being drunk. It seems that there are other tests.

When asked if there is not a chance that a sober man might be unable to pass the tests and thus be wrongfully suspected, the police surgeon scoffed at the idea. He eyed his interrogator suspiciously and offered to put him through "some little exercises." The kindness was wasted, and the prospective "patient" beat a hasty retreat.

tions when they were forced to act as "booze experts" and decide whether a man was intoxicated when he was taken to the Police Station. In Chicago, St. Louis, Milwaukee and Pittsburgh there have been many cases where the arresting officers may have been booze experts, but their own condition was such that they could not well pass impartially on the condition of others. Under the new system this trouble is abolished. The police surgeon and his assistants take the burden of the case into their hands.

THEY WON'T ADMIT.

In rare cases only do intoxicated persons admit that they have been drinking too much or are mentally clogged. More than 60 per cent. insist that they will have the arresting officer fired from the force as soon as they can get around before the Police Commission; about 72 per cent. claim to know Capt. Dixon, and 36 per cent. threaten to speak to Uncle Aleck about the outrage. By this percentage compilation it can be seen that most of the "suspected" inebriates make several threats against the police department.

The most sodden bums assert that they are prominent citizens, taxpayers and martyrs to patrolmen who are plotting their ruin. "Szizzsh ish an ouwragshe. I'm zober ash a judsh," is frequently heard at the desk sergeant's window. Now they will be allowed to tell Dr. Zerfing about it. That expert of alcoholism, dipsomania and other things is a skeptic. Before the alleged sober person gets through the tests he will be about ready to be labeled accurately for the drunk tank or the medical ward.

DIFFERENTIATION.

Votaries of Bacchus who act as reservoirs for "brain-storm water" have many ways of telling their troubles. The police surgeon has compiled a book which classifies and enumerates different forms of alcoholic conditions. Dr. W. E. Carter is arranging a book which will show the lines of demarkation between those who are "ossified," "stewed," "petrified," "soused," "bunched," "piffed," "piped," "half-shot," "oryied," "lit up," "bunned," "drunk," "inebriated," "intoxicated," etc.

Only the very rich and socially prominent become "intoxicated." Others are "drunk" or "have a snoot full." A pick wielder who is habitually drunk is spoken of as a gutter drunkard. Should a Councilman, Police Commissioner or politician be a habitual indulger in too much alcohol, he is spoken of as a dipsomaniac or a sufferer from alcoholic excess.

Dr. Zerfing will gladly give any information desired—when it comes within the line of his duty. If any one has dined not wisely but too well, the safest thing to do is to rush over to the Receiving Hospital and take the tests in order to know whether it is well to go home to wifey. Embossed certificates might be issued; these should convince the most skeptical helpmeet.

DONS CLOTHES AND DIES.

Los Angeles Pioneer Passes Away After Suffering a Short Time from Heart Failure.

William Ferguson died at his residence, No. 758 Rampart street, of heart failure, about 8:30 o'clock yesterday morning. Previous to the attack which seized him about 2 o'clock in the morning, Mr. Ferguson was in good health. At that hour, however, serious symptoms developed and Dr. W. H. Smith, who resides at No. 742 Rampart street, was summoned. He was again called about 7:15 by Clarence Ferguson, who said his father felt like putting on his clothes. Dr. Smith advised the son that Mr. Ferguson might do so, but not to permit him to walk around. Mr. Ferguson dressed himself and an hour later succumbed.

As one of the pioneers of Los Angeles, William Ferguson was known to many citizens. He was born in 1822, and when a young man came West and interested himself in mining. He prospered, and some years later reached Los Angeles, establishing a livery business at the Plaza. He became a heavy stockholder in the old water company, and when it was sold to the city, he went into the real estate business. For a number years Mr. Ferguson had lived retired, devoting himself solely to his large real estate holdings throughout the city. He is estimated to be a millionaire.

The family home at Third and Hill streets where he passed so many days has been torn down and Mr. Ferguson was planning to erect there a modern building. About three years ago he built the residence at No. 758 Rampart street. His widow, a son, Clarence, proprietor of the Los Angeles Saddlery and Findings Company, No. 219 North

PATCHWORK.

TAKES HARD RAP AT PRIMARY LAW.

OPINIONS ARE GIVEN ON TWO KNOTTY POINTS.

Deputy District Attorney Says Office-seekers Must File Complete Petitions and That the Signers Must Be Affiliated With Same Party as the Petitioner.

The direct primary law received a few knocks at the hands of Deputy District Attorney Shaw yesterday in an opinon he gave County Clerk Keyes, in response to some pointed questions as to what paths the official should pursue in dealing with the tens of thousands of nominating petitions which will soon descend upon him in a deluge.

"The primary law is not in satisfactory shape," the attorney commented. "On the face of it, it is patchwork, having been composed of provisions from various sources, without proper care having been taken by the framers to see that the various pieces were fitted neatly together."

Keyes submitted two new and interesting propositions to Shaw for his consideration. One was whether the persons who desire to have their names placed on the official ballots can file their nominating petitions on the installment plan.

The question was whether a candidate could file an insufficient number of good petitions and, after they had been checked over, be allowed to supplement these with others.

WOULD MAKE EXTRA WORK.

If they should be permitted to do this, it would mean an additional amount of work for the Clerk's office. Some persons might fail half a dozen times to submit the indorsements of the required number of qualified electors and then be allowed to turn in another batch of petitions.

The attorney admits that he has been required to delve into a field which heretofore has been unexplored in this State and that his opinion is entirely his own, having no decisions on this particular point to guide him.

It is his judgment that all of the petitions must be filed at one time. This is a vital point for those who seek office. Any one who desires to be on the primary ticket must be careful to have all of his petitions checked up or he is likely to be disappointed. Shaw declares that the law provides for the candidate making but one affidavit and believes that this expresses the intention of the legislators to have all of the petitions turned in at the same time.

MUST DECLARE AFFILIATION.

The second question upon which the Clerk sought enlightenment was in regard to registration. He asked for advice as to whether he should disregard a petition signed by those who had failed to declare their affiliation, and the Republican petitions signed by persons who had sworn they were Democrats, and vice versa.

Shaw's opinion is that all such petitions should not be counted in. He declares that the primaries are as much a partisan proposition as they were under the convention plan and that to decide otherwise would be to go contrary to the theory of it.

He referred to the fact that a recent decision of the Supreme Court by implication, indicated that party lines must be adhered to and that the members of one political organization should not be allowed to break into

A TELLING RETROSPECT.

"THE TIMES" AND ITS PART IN THE FIGHT FOR A FREE HARBOR.

How the Great Battle Was Won Against All Adverse Influences and This Journal's Work in the Campaign.

IN THE front wall of The Times Building is set a granite tablet bearing the following inscription:

THIS TABLET, PLACED HERE
BY THE PEOPLE OF
LOS ANGELES, COMMEMORATES THEIR APPRECIATION OF THE EFFECTIVE SERVICES OF THE
LOS ANGELES TIMES
IN THE CONTEST FOR A FREE HARBOR AT SAN PEDRO.
APRIL 27, 1899.

The tablet marks the conclusion of what is, perhaps, the most remarkable contest ever waged between a municipality and a public corporation, abetted by some subservient public officials and legislators—the battle for a free harbor at San Pedro—a municipal-maritime drama that lasted more than five years, or, including the long-drawn-out overture, for nearly twice that period of time.

San Pedro was discovered before the founding of New Amsterdam on the Atlantic Coast. For 130 years it has been the chief port of entry for the commerce of Southern California. Richard H. Dana, when he visited the Coast in 1835, expressed surprise that this "desolate-looking place" furnished more hides than any port of the Coast. When he returned in 1859 he found that passengers for Los Angeles were landed from steamers by tugs. The channel at that time had a depth of from six to ten feet at mean low tide, sufficient for the accommodation of small vessels. At the mouth of the estuary was a bar, where the water measured only eighteen inches at low tide.

San Pedro harbor is particularly favored by being protected on the west by Point Fermin, and on the south and southwest by the Island of Catalina, the mainland lying on the east and north. Therefore, the only point needing protection was the southeast, from which quarter an occasional storm comes up during the winter months.

In 1869 a railroad was built from Los Angeles to San Pedro, the first railroad constructed in Southern California. In 1876 this line was acquired by the Southern Pacific Company.

The first appropriation for the improvement of the inner harbor at San Pedro, amounting to $200,000, was made by Congress on March 2, 1871. The total amount for the project was $530,000. Los Angeles was at that time a city of about 8000 population. In 1869 a report on the possibilities of the inner harbor had been made by Maj. R. S. Williamson, of the U. S. Corps of Engineers. The money appropriated by Congress was expended in extending Rattlesnake Island to Deadman's Island by filling the intervening distance with rock and timber. In 1872 Congress made a second appropriation of $75,000, and again about a year later of $150,000, a total of $425,000. From 1873 to 1892 appropriations aggregating $529,000 were made. The channel was deepened, widened and straightened. In 1891 it showed depths of sixteen to twenty-two feet, and the depth of eighteen inches on the bar increased to fourteen feet.

It was about the year 1887, at the time of the big real estate boom, when the idea of making a first-class harbor at San Pedro began to be discussed seriously in Los Angeles. As early as 1881 such a project had been approved by the late Senator Stanford.

In 1888 the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce was formed, an organization that has done so much toward furthering the development of Los Angeles and Southern California. One of the leading objects of this organization, as stated in its by-laws, is to foster the commerce of Los Angeles and Southern California. Therefore, work for a deep water harbor at San Pedro was taken up by that body, no other site having up to that time been considered.

In 1889 the Committee on Commerce of the Senate visited Los Angeles, while on a tour of the country to inspect various harbor projects. Senator Frye of Maine was chairman of the committee. He was taken down to San Pedro, but displayed no enthusiasm on the harbor question. In fact, he declared that a great mistake had been made in the location of Los Angeles, which should have been put at some point where a harbor already existed instead of calling upon the government to give us what nature had refused! Later on, however, Senator Frye developed much enthusiasm in favor of a harbor at Santa Monica.

In 1890, through the efforts of Senator Stanford and Representative Vandever, an item was inserted in the River and Harbor Appropriation Bill allowing the sum of $5000 to pay for the expense of perparing a project for a deep water harbor somewhere in the vicinity of Los Angeles. A board of engineers was appointed, which held public meetings in Santa Monica, San Pedro, and Los Angeles. The report narrowed the question down to San Pedro and Santa Monica, and concluded that San Pedro was the better location. The estimated cost of a breakwater was given at $4,594,494.

Meantime, Senator Stanford was out of the Southern Pacific Company, and the late C. P. Huntington took his place. This marked the beginning of a great change of opinion on part of the company in regard to the construction of a harbor at San Pedro. In 1893 a long wharf was completed by the company at Santa Monica.

After many tedious delays, in 1892 there was inserted in the River and Harbor Bill an appropriation for the appointment of another board of engineers, the "Craighill Board." The board was appointed in the same year. It announced that a public meeting would be held at the rooms of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce. The report of the board was filed in October, 1892. It concluded as follows: "Having made a careful and critical examination for a proposed deep-water harbor at San Pedro or Santa Monica bays, as required by law, the board is unanimously of opinion that the location selected by the Board of Engineers of 1890, at the present anchorage at the westerly side of San Pedro Bay, under Point Fermin, is the 'more eligible location for such harbor in depth, width, and capacity to accommodate the largest ocean-going vessels and the commercial and naval necessities of the country.' "

The estimate of the cost of the breakwater was $2,855,224.

In January, 1893, the Chamber of Commerce sent a special delegate to Pedro in accordance with the project outlined by the Craighill Board, but it never made its way out of the Senate Committee on Commerce, of which Mr. Frye was chairman. Meantime, C. P. Huntington was giving out suggestions in favor of Santa Monica as the proper site for a harbor. By this time the people of Los Angeles were beginning to be aroused on this important question, and The Times, as a representative of public opinion, entered the field. From this time on it stood in the forefront of the fray, a contest which, as above stated, lasted more than five years.

To print even brief extracts from a tithe of the editorials on this subject that appeared in The Times during that campaign would fill a book. Here are the titles of some of the editorials printed in 1896 and 1897, when the fight was at its hottest:

To "return to our muttons": On April 7, 1894, the Chamber of Commerce—and so far, for the only time in its existence—took a vote of its members, the question being San Pedro or Santa Monica. The membership of the Chamber of Commerce at that time was about 550. The vote resulted as follows: San Pedro, 328; Santa Monica, 131. By unanimous vote the members of the chamber decided to send the result of this ballot with another special delegate to Washington. The late Senator White was then on the Senate Committee on Commerce. It was mainly due to his tireless, fearless, and determined course that the people of Los Angeles finally won their victory. Representative James McLachlan was always an uncertain factor in the fight. Much was, however, yet to be done, as we shall see.

In June, 1894, the Commerce Committe of the Senate gave a hearing on the harbor question. C. P. Huntington, who appeared in person, asked for of eastern newspapers was called to the struggle. A motion was carried deferring the decision until the next year, to give the members of the Committee on Commerce an opportunity to visit the two harbors and form an opinion on their respective merits. Remember that two boards of government engineers had already reported at length on the subject—and reported the same way—favorably to San Pedro. No provision was made for the expense of the trip.

On the return of the Chamber of Commerce delegation from Washington expressions were secured by conventions of both political parties supporting San Pedro.

A period of discouragement to the friends of the free harbor covered the next two years. It was evident that Mr. Huntington was able to secure a majority in Congressional committees favoring his plan, notwithstanding the decisions of the engineers.

By this time the work of looking after free harbor matters had become too arduous for the Chamber of Commerce to perform without neglecting its other duties. There was, therefore, formed in October, 1895, an organization known as the "Free Harbor League."

Early in 1896 one of the government engineers suggested the possibility of deepening the inner harbor of San Pedro from fourteen to eighteen feet by a small amount of dredging. It was urged that it would be well this year not to waste time in asking for an appropriation for a deep water harbor, but to be content with an appropriation for the inner harbor. In the same year the news came from Washington that Mr. Huntington had been before the Senate Committee, and had put in a demand for $3,000,000 for Santa Monica. This brought up the absurd proposition for a "double harbor"—a small appropriation at San Pedro and a big one at Santa Monica. Binger Hermann, of Oregon, a member of the House Committee on Rivers and Harbors, appears to have been mainly responsible for this preposterous attempt to throw dust—or rather salt spray—in the eyes of the people. Two harbors within twenty miles on a coast that had no harbors at all for 630 miles! However, these two items appeared in the list of continuing contracts; San Pedro, $392,000; Santa Monica, $3,098,000. Los Angeles protested. Then Hermann arose in the committee and moved that all sums set aside for Los Angeles county be struck from the bill, which was done.

This "double appropriation" fake created much excitement in Los Angeles. The newspapers were full of it. Mass meetings were held representing both sides of the controversy. Not a few weak-kneed individuals argued that it would be better to take half a loaf than no bread, forgetting that they would quite likely not get even half the loaf. Petitions for and against the "double harbor" were circulated, including a big bogus petition got up by an employé of a local paper on behalf of the scheme.

About this time Senator White proposed that a new commission should be appointed, and that its action should be made absolutely final by the device of appropriating the money in advance to go to whichever place should receive the decision. This reasonable demand was refused by the committee. In May, 1896, Senator White supported this motion in the open Senate, his speech lasting two days. The debate occupied most of the time of the Senate for five days, during a busy session. This had now become a national question—a national scandal, in fact. Leading journals of the country discussed it, and without exception they were on the side of the free harbor. At last an amendment was passed calling for the appointment of a board of five engineers, one from the Navy, one from the Coast and Geodetic Survey, and three from civil life, to be named by the President. The $392,000 for San Pedro was restored to the bill with the understanding that if the deep-water harbor went to that place the amount was not to be spent there. In this form the bill passed both houses.

Thus for the fourth time the location of a deep-water harbor was submitted to a commission for "final" settlement. It had begun to look like one of Patti's farewell tours. In October, 1896, the appointments to the commission were made. It was headed by Admiral John G. Walker of the Navy. Public sessions of the board were held at the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce in December, lasting seven days, some weeks having previously been spent in studying the technical features of the question, a boat of the Coast Survey being placed at the disposal of the commission, which spent two months in a thorough, practical investigation of the sites. The report of the board, a bulky volume, was filed on March 1, 1897. It concluded as follows: "Taking all these considerations together, this board reports in favor of San Pedro as the location for a deep-water harbor for commerce and of refuge in Southern California." This part of the report was signed by all the five members of the commission except Richard P. Morgan, who later filed a minority report in which he mentioned as a reason why the harbor should go to Santa Monica, its "natural features of beauty and grandeur," and its name, "Port Los Angeles," which he thought more appropriate than San Pedro!

The decision of the board naturally aroused great enthusiasm in Los Angeles However, there was more trouble ahead. Gen. Russell A. Alger had been appointed Secretary of War. He had previously visited Los Angeles as a guest of the Southern Pacific Company, and in an interview had declared himself in favor of Santa Monica. This accounts for the fact that although the decision was rendered in March, 1897, it was not until April, 1899, that work commenced on the breakwater. It was for this reason that Alger came to be known hereabouts as the "Secretary of Delay." Repeated entreaties and inquiries had no effect upon him. He refused to state when he would advertise for bids. Senator White introduced a resolution in the Senate asking why. In his answer the Secretary presented a lot of devious and transparent excuses. Then Senator White introduced a brief resolution instructing the Secretary to proceed without delay. Soon after that Congress adjourned. It was adopted. Still Alger did nothing, but brought forward more excuses. Then the people of Southern California appealed directly to President McKinley. The Secretary said he would leave the decision of the matter with the Attorney-General. The latter promptly declared there were no legal obstacles in the way of beginning work. So passed the summer and fall of 1897. The Drink Puritas Now.

Plenty of Pure Water a Spring Requirement.

At no time is it more important that you have a reliable supply of pure water than during the Spring months.

People used to take Spring "Tonics" to cleanse the system. Nowadays we do not like to take any more medicine than is necessary. We turn to natural methods. Copious drinking of pure water is one of them.

Puritas Distilled Water is the only reliable pure water obtainable hereabouts. It is soft, sparkling and wholesome. Its constant use flushes the impurities from the body.

Puritas contains no minerals, nor any vegetable impurities of any kind, whatever. It is just pure wholesome water. Its sparkle and vim are due to the fact that it is aerated with pure ozone. This is secured by the passing of an electrical current through filtered air. The resulting ozone is forced into the pure water.

Puritas is most carefuly bottled in clean glass containers. Even the corks for these are covered with foil in order that the air percolating through the porous cork may not contaminate the water.

With all our care to insure an absolutely reliable product Puritas is most inexpensive—5 gallons cost but 40c. Just telephone us Home 10053, Sunset Main 8191, and we will see that you are supplied promptly.

of letters and telegrams were sent all over the country.

In October, 1897, Alger trotted out his next excuse, which was that the bill made no direct appropriation, and therefore, that nothing could be done until Congress met again. After that he discovered that he had no money to pay for the advertisement. In answer to this telegrams reached him from all the papers in Los Angeles, and several from San Francisco, offering to insert the advertisement free of charge, and from the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce offering to pay the bill, whatever it might be. Alger thought this would not be "dignified," and said he had submitted the question of funds for advertising to the Judge-Advocate-General, who finally decided that the balance of the $50,000 appropriated for the expense of the investigation was available.

Meantime, Atty.-Gen. McKenna had been placed on the Supreme bench, and his place filled by John W. Griggs. Mr. Alger now proposed to submit the matter to him. A former army comrade of President McKinley, living in Los Angeles, wrote to him about this time, telling him of the outrageous conduct of Alger, whereupon the President peremptorily commanded Alger to advertise for bids. This was done, and in February, 1898, the bids were opened. There was only one bid for an amount greater than the $2,900,000 provided by the law. The lowest bid was from Heldmaier & Neu, of Chicago, for $1,303,198.

Even then, when a few days later the Sundry Civil Appropriation Bill carrying the item of $400,000 as an initial appropriation for San Pedro under the continuing contract system, came up in the House, Mr. Grosvenor of Ohio arose in the House committee of the whole and wanted to know (you know) whether a proposition had not been made to make a similar harbor by private enterprise near San Pedro. This, of course, was a resurrection of the Santa Monica ghost. On the next day Representative Cooper of Wisconsin, in a peppery speech in the House, said: "This matter of San Pedro harbor is to me in many respects the most astonishing that I have ever encountered since I have had a seat in this House. I do not suppose it ever had its counterpart in the legislative history of the country." Mr. Cooper's remarks put a stop to the discussion, and the item was passed without further question.

All was not yet quite over, however. When the bill came up to the Senate in March, 1898, Senator Stewart of Nevada offered an amendment that the balance between the contractors' bid and the amount appropriated should be divided between San Pedro and Santa Monica. However, by this time the Senate had about enough of Santa Monica, and the suggestion was rejected.

It was not until July 21, 1898, that Secretary Alger managed to find time to approve the bid and order a contract to be drawn, and he did not do this until the entire California delegation called upon the President and urged that an examination into the Secretary's behavior should be made. This ended the delay, but it was not until April, 1899, that work on the breakwater actually began.

A grand celebration of the closing of this remarkable contest and the beginning of work on the breakwater was held in Los Angeles on April 26 and 27. On the first day there was a gathering at San Pedro, with speeches and a barbecue; on the second day a flower parade and other ceremonies in Los Angeles. About 20,000 people attended the ceremonies at San Pedro. On the 27th a large crowd of people assembled outside the Los Angeles Times building, where the memorial tablet above referred to had already been put in place. It was unveiled with appropriate ceremony. The principal speech of the occasion, directed to the editor of The Times, was delivered by T. E. Gibbon, who said, in part:

"Your fellow-citizens are mindful of the fact that when this contest first began a great phalanx of wealth and power was arrayed on the side which they conceived to be opposed to their rights and privileges; an opposition so strong and relentless as to give pause to anyone thinking to meet it. They are also mindful of the fact that at that time, and without pausing to count the odds opposed, but with the desire and intent of sustaining the right and advocating the truth, as you saw it, your journal, enlisted under the banner of the people's rights, waged unflagging and relentless war against all the forces which were seeking to enthrall and entrammel the commerce of our city for all future time.

"During the more than seven years which have elapsed since this contest was begun, there has never for a moment been a halt or shadow of turning in your pursuit of the path which you entered, a road at the end of which lay the fruition of a people's hopes and the vindication of a people's rights. During that time your fellow-citizens have ever looked to your columns for a defense of these rights and an expression of the arguments to sustain and enforce them, and they have never looked in vain. No sculptured or lettered stone is necessary to enable them to hold in lifelong memory the loyal and patriotic devotion which you have shown to the best interests of the community which your paper serves; but that their children and their children's children may be taught the lesson of remembrance and appreciation for services so rare in the purity of their patriotism and devotion to the public weal, as they were strenuous and unflagging in their constancy and devotion, your fellow-citizens now ask permission to present to you and to install in the wall of the home of your journal, the tablet which I now unveil, bearing an inscription intended to be expressive of their sentiments toward you."

Gen. Otis was absent on duty in the Philippines commanding his brigade of the Eighth Army Corps, and Harry killed by the overturn of a coach in Los Angeles. Subsequently the contract was abandoned by the firm and was relet by the government at a higher price, this time to the California Construction Company, which has carried out the work. For a short time the rock was brought from Catalina Island on barges. Since then most of it has come by rail from quarries in San Bernardino county and some from this and Ventura county quarries.

It is unnecessary to go into detail

$3,000,000 bonds required for the improvement of the inner harbor, so that Los Angeles may have a deep-water harbor capacious enough for the commerce of the world. [See editorial page.]

THE FIRST FRUITS OF VICTORY.

Elsewhere in this number of The Times is printed the story of a remarkable contest—the fight by the people of Los Angeles and Southern California for a free harbor at San Pedro, on the bay of Wilmington. This was a long-drawn-out contest, lasting more than five years, in which The Times was able to "be of some service to the State." Even its enemies admit that if it had not been for The Times the result of this terrific tussle between the people and the Southern Pacific corporation, backed by powerful "friends at court," would have been in doubt. During the greater part of the contest The Times stood alone, like Horatius at the bridge. Toward the end of the combat, however, one of the other Los Angeles papers changed hands and came over from the opposition camp.

It is only just to the great corporation which The Times and the people, in the performance of their duty and in the defense of their interests, were compelled to oppose throughout the long conflict, for us now to say that the attitude of the company was materially modified toward the close, showing that it silently accepted the inevitable and ultimately acknowledged the overmastering power of an aroused people.

There can be no question that three factors contributed to the winning of the San Pedro harbor fight. These were the late Senator White, the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce (of which the "Free Harbor League" was an offshoot,) and the Los Angeles Times. They all played their part, and they played it well. Incidentally, The Times gained an army of friends and subscribers. Its chief reward, however, lay in the knowledge of a good job well done.

The attitude of The Times in regard to the free harbor—now no longer of San Pedro, but of Los Angeles—is the same today as it was twelve years ago. Hence we desire our readers to be sure to vote on Tuesday, the 19th of this month, for the $3,000,000 bonds destined to be used by the city in improving the inner and outer harbors, for this will be the culmination of our strenuous fight, beginning so many years ago. It will be the means of securing for us the fruits of our glorious victory.

It is said that the late E. H. Harriman, shortly before his death, told a friend that Los Angeles would one day be the largest city in the United States. This, to some, may look like a wild prediction, but in view of the wonderful growth of the past quarter of a century, who shall dare to set a limit to the progress of the next twenty-five years? Look at the record: 1880, 11,000; 1890, 50,000; 1900, 100,000; 1910 (estimated,) 350,000. If the rate of progress of the past ten years is kept up, Los Angeles will in 1920 have a population of over 1,000,000, and will be the largest city in the United States west of Chicago.

There is every reason to assume not only that Los Angeles will continue to grow with equal rapidity, but that it will march forward with yet greater strides. The Orient, with its untold wealth, and its population of over 800,000,000, lies 1000 miles nearer to the United States than to Europe. With exception of San Francisco, Los Angeles has the only possibility for a deep-water harbor between Portland and San Diego. It is 100 miles north of San Diego and 500 miles south of San Francisco. It lies at the eastern terminus of the lowest grades, by the shortest route between the Pacific and the Atlantic—"below the snow-line and above the fever-line." When the Panama Canal is opened it will lie the nearest to the route of vessels plying between the Atlantic and the Orient. These facts point to the certainty that Los Angeles is destined to become a most important center of commerce. Therefore we must have our deep-sea harbor ready for the ships that will come to us from over the seven seas.

There are those yet alive who will see the Pacific Coast more densely populated than the Atlantic Coast is today. Our balmy climate and fertile soil insure this. Five acres of irrigated land in Southern California will support, in comfort, more people than fifty acres of New England soil. Had the Pilgrim Fathers chosen the Golden Gate, or the Angel Gate, or the Silver Gate for their landing, instead of Plymouth Rock, the history of California would have been far different.

For these coming events we must be well prepared. "Westward the star of empire takes its way." Nothing can stop the onward march of Los Angeles, but that progress may be retarded by lack of faith and energy on part of its people. In view of the record of the past, we have, however, no doubt in regard to the attitude of our people on this important subject. This article is not intended as a rebuke, but merely as a reminder. The vote on the 19th will not only insure us $3,000,000 for harbor improvement, but to that will be added nearly $1,000,000 appropriations now pending in Congress, appropriations that depend more or less on the action of our people in voting these bonds.

Suppose, therefore, we make it unanimous. What do you say, gentlemen?

DOES BRANDEIS KNOW?

The two things that rise all the time above the surface in the Pinchot-Ballinger investigation are the conduct of Attorney Brandeis, who is turning the investigation into a prosecution, and that of the principal witness, Louis R. Glavis.

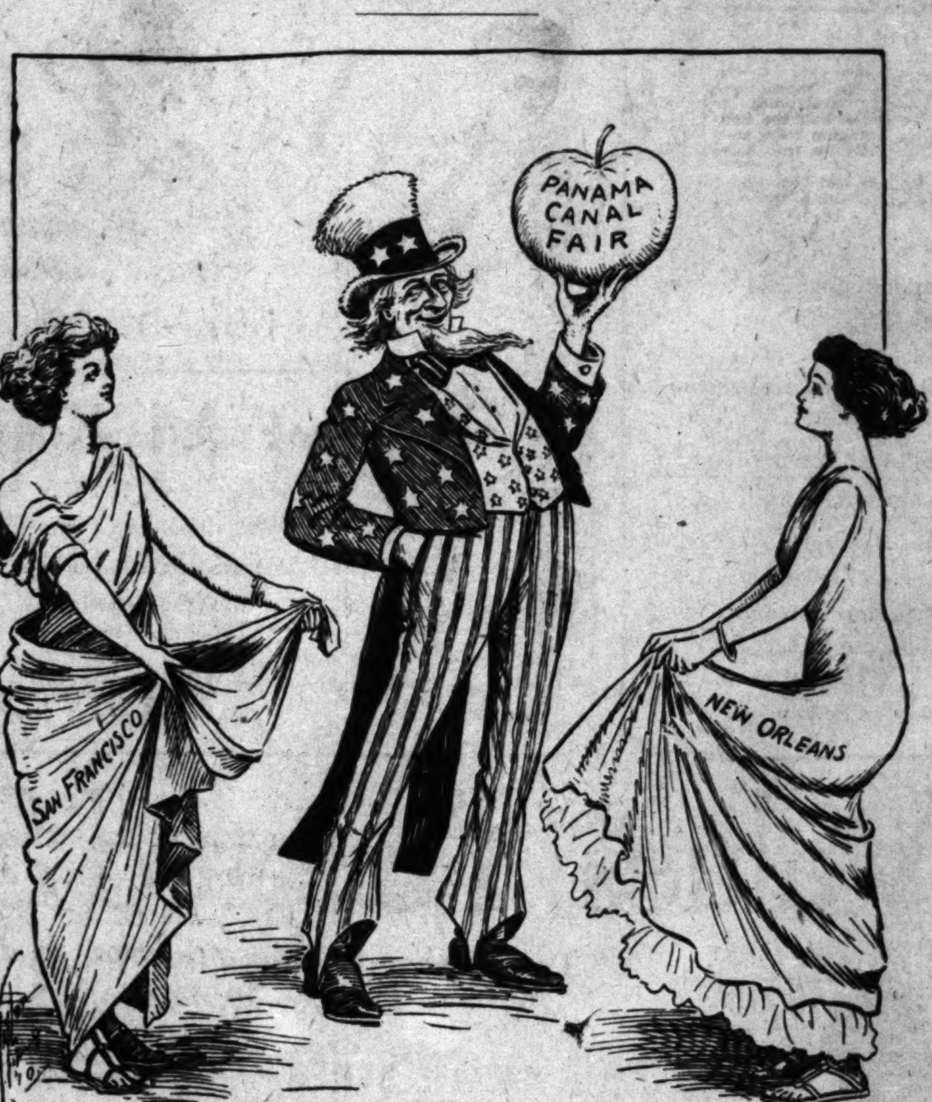
Frequently during this investigation the attorney has been called sharply to account for misconduct which would probably have brought a fine for contempt in a regular court. He is thoroughly biased, perhaps because he knows he has a bad case. If the principal witness, Glavis, has dealt fairly with his attorney, then Brandeis knows clear down to the bottom just what there is of weakness as well as what there is of strength in the case. His conduct before the investigating committee is precisely that of a pettifogging lawyer who intends to browbeat his way through a case he knows to be bad in an effort to get a verdict which he knows will be unjust.

As to the "prosecuting witness," Glavis, one of his associates who was on the witness stand on Friday stated, from personal knowledge of the man, that he showed "an utter disregard for the truth."

We have at least two witnesses who testify to the finding of certain papers important in this case which had been lost from the government files and discovered in a place to which Glavis had access, and in a way that, unless the testimony is contradicted, would indicate that he had purloined these papers. These are the very papers which were made the basis of the attack upon Secretary Ballinger through the biased, unfair, muck-raking magazines.

Out of the confusion, contradiction and the great mass of stuff that has been brought before this committee, the bitter prejudiced conduct of Brandeis and the shuffling, indefinite, confused testimony of Glavis, coupled with the discovery of these papers ostensibly in his possession and the statement of these other witnesses that he had an utter disregard for truth, rise as salient facts which are important enough to warn the public against the testimony of a man of this character and against the inferences

THE GOLDEN APPLE.



THE MAN'S THE GOLD FOR A' THAT.

He was a poor Scotch peasant farmer. In scanty garments he followed the plow over the "stubborn glebe" on the hills of his native country while the bleak winds blew through his tattered raggedness and the sleet fell around his feet.

But in his day did Great Britain contain within its borders another individual with as much real manhood in him as dwelt beneath the rags that covered Robert Burns? There were titled nobles, wealthy bankers, prosperous merchants and great manufacturers, but of the millions in the British Isles during these years how many of them have left noted names behind them, memories that survive or achievements the world cares to recall?

As he followed his plow and turned up the nest of the mouse with that heaven-sent inspiration he looked into the very heart of nature in its highest form, the heart of man, and made reflections that are beacon lights to the feet of humanity a hundred years after he wrote. It was himself that, looking out over society as it was in his time, warned all men then and to follow of the utter vanity of everything except character. "The rank is but the guinea's stamp; the man's the gold for a' that."

We are only echoing the philosophy of Burns in calling attention to these pregnant facts. But the task can scarcely be a vain one. Rank casts its glamour upon our eyes and dazzles our imagination. Some of us are prone to think that the man distinguished by the trade-mark of rank must necessarily be a man. Some of us are like careless merchants who take counterfeit coins merely because they have a facsimile of the government's stamp placed upon base metal. Many of us half accept the idea that there is nothing else which distinguishes an American citizen as does his wealth. Some of those who have acquired great wealth are fond of imagining that it is the only distinction that can lift a man very much above his fellows.

Yet this is after all only a superficial view and our own innate common sense corrects it every hour. We will concede that the maker of a fortune has won some distinction. It is his own achievement and while not the hardest task in life to perform if one concentrates all his powers upon it, yet it is something, yes much, for any man starting out in life with little or nothing to leave behind him an immense fortune. The world recognizes the right of such person to claim distinction, and if he is too modest to lay claim to this the world will not let it pass unnoticed. The rest of us are generous enough to lift him to a point where he must be in the nature of a city set upon a hill. We see that his light is not covered by any bushel of his own construction or of others.

But the rank that is but the guinea's stamp is generally not self-acquired and there are multitudes of rich men in the world whose wealth comes to them by inheritance just as the title comes to the noble. These men rich by inheritance are, like all classes of humanity, made up of various kinds. Some of them are sensible enough to know that until they do something for themselves their distinction is very questionable. They are modest, the opposite of ostentatious, and in every way estimable men in spite of their wealth. In other instances the only character stamped upon their personality by this inherited wealth is of a nature that degrades and not uplifts the person. He becomes distinguished not in a good sense, but in a very objectionable sense. He is ostentatious of his wealth. He is disdainful of his betters whose only disqualification in his eyes is their lack of money.

Los Angeles had an object lesson which was calculated to impress this philosophy which we are evolving upon our minds in a very profound way in recent days. We had here in the city a number of the most distinguished railroad men in America. These railroaders divided themselves into two distinct classes. The majority of them were those engaged in the operating and managing of immense railroad properties. They were in every instance, or nearly so, men of comparatively moderate wealth. The other division of these railroad men was composed of mostly persons whose connection with the railroads was for the most part that of stockholders. In some instances they were directors. But this class we are speaking of have never done anything toward the operating or managing of the properties in which their wealth is mostly invested. They have done nothing to build the roads or to acquire the wealth which thus far in life constitutes absolutely their only claim to distinction. We are not at all unkindly disposed toward these members of the class known as gilded youth. They seemed to conduct themselves with all propriety. They made no unusual or in any way improper display of their wealth. They asserted themselves in no way that constituted an impropriety.

These distinguished railroaders were met by the leading business men, bankers, merchants, manufacturers of the city. These were American gath- citizens or the visitors. These elements were the personal achievements of the one or the inherited wealth of the other class. In many instances the life achievements of these men had won them marked distinction because of the magnitude of the task performed and also because of the acquired wealth incident to the achievements. In the case of these big-worker visitors, the distinguishing traits were entirely those of achievement. They stood in their characters nakedly before their fellow-men without one particle of the glamour that comes from wealth, whether self-acquired or inherited. They were men whose incomes were represnted almost solely by their salaries. No doubt in some instances all their worldly possessions were summed up in their monthly pay checks. Yet these are the men who for the time being were the cynosures of all eyes. It was these our own men of great deeds delighted to honor. The encomiums expressed by eloquent speakers and by solid business men were all directed toward these men. They were the honored guests around the banquet tables and at every gathering it was these poor men who occupied every position on every pedestal that attracted the eyes of all their fellow-men. And they were all poor.

There was scarcely a man among this very noted assembly of railroad managers and operators who had not begun at the very bottom of the ladder. As in the case of men like Carnegie and Rockefeller, they were born in absolute or comparative obscurity. Few of them were men who could point back to a long line of ancestors distinguished in any way in American history. Most of them were born in positions very similar to that of the Scotch poet whose philosophy we have been quoting above. They depended on no pull from above or push from below to help them up the steep incline of great achievements along which they struggled to reach the pedestal of distinction which they now occupy.

Whenever a considerable number of the American people meet together it is not the inheritors of great wealth who attract attention and occupy the principal seats at the feast. It is not even the Rockefellers who have made their own fortunes that the American people most delight to honor. After all, our democratic instincts and hard, plain common sense are sure to triumph over all the tendency of wealth to cast a glamour over our eyes that dazzles and blinds. It was only the other day that a member of the Supreme Court of the United States died. His salary was never more than enough to support his family in a moderately decent way, and he left behind him perhaps not over $50,000 all told. But what millionaire has died in America in half a century who enjoys the distinction in the minds of his countrymen that we yield to be the just due of the dead jurist, David J. Brewer?

And may the day be far away when we shall become so like the careless merchant that we shall confound the stamp with the gold or when we shall put gold in massed fortunes against plain, honest, capable manhood.

BEYOND THE PALE.

There is one criminal who is outside the pale, who has gone beyond all mercy and all hope. This is the footpad. Almost any other crook is to be pitied. Usually, the thief is one who steals because he is unequal to the industrial struggle of modern life and whose crimes are his pitiable confession of weakness. But the footpad is a monster of pitiless and unpitiable iniquity. He is not so much a thief as a murderer. And his sin is infinitely greater than that of an ordinary murderer. He goes out in the dark with the deliberate intention to take the lives of men whom he has never seen, and against whom he holds no grudge, merely for the sake of excitement. No highwayman is in the business for money, because of all professions it is the poorest pay. Every footpad who points a gun at a man's head has already committed the sin of wanton murder; because the subsequent act of actual shooting depends upon the victim and not upon the hold-up man. In our opinion, the boy who was released on "probation" a few months ago by one of our Superior Judges was as guilty of murder as the thugs who shot a policeman Friday night. These men have declared war upon society. Let us take them at their word and accept their challenge and let the pursuit be without mercy and without quarter. When a "hold-up" is caught, there ought to be no "extenuating circumstances."

Took "the Same."

Representative Rucker of Colorado was in a strange town during the late campaign and wanted a drink, according to the Washington Post. He has a constitutional objection to drinking alone and called a hobo who was standing in front of the saloon to join him. They walked into the bar and Mr. Rucker ordered two highballs. Then he thought he might have offended his companion and said:

"I beg your pardon; I neglected to ask you what

How'd Do, Thon.

A number of learned grammarians are again agitating the necessity of a new pronoun to represent both male and female. They want to call it thon. "The American stands up for thon rights, etc."

As it is now, we would say, "The American stands up for his rights."

I am in favor of this change, for unless we hurry up with "thon," the customary way of speaking will be, "The American stands up for her rights."

Maud Allan's Appeal.

It seems to me that one of the most pitiful and touching incidents ever seen in a theater occurred one night last week when Maud Allan, the dancer, was called before the curtain in San Francisco.

Every one in the audience knew the bitter tragedy of her childhood, for she was the younger sister of Theodore Durrant.

Uncertain how they would receive her, she came timidly before the curtain in response to the applause. She seemed a pathetic, wistful child. I give the rest of the story as it is told sympathetically by the San Francisco Evening Post:

"She made an appeal to us, an appeal that brought the big lumps to the throats of big, red-faced men and started the tears. It was the most pathetically childish thing that was ever heard. In a sobbing, baby voice she told of her going away as a child with the firm baby resolution of making the city proud of her. She spoke of the happy days she had spent here and the bitter days. And then (it brings the tears again to think of it) she said: "I want you to take me to your hearts, I want it so much"—her voice broke and a sob.

"For a moment the audience was so taken by the pathos of it all that there was a dead silence, broken only when some woman sobbed aloud in the crowd. Then the tension broke and the applause shook the theater. It was the most heartrending thing that ever took place in a playhouse. No stage [illegible] ever moved half as much as that artless child appeal."

The Earl of the Aqueduct.

I trust it was only persiflage—the jest of a host to a guest—when Gov. Gillett spoke of Gen. Kitchener at the reception in San Francisco, as the greatest living general in the world.

Any day you can see on the streets of Los Angeles a sturdy old trooper whose war record throws Kitchener back in the recruit class. Gen. Chaffee knows more about soldiering and has been in more fights than Kitchener ever heard of. He has had more bullets shot at him than Kitchener ever saw piled up in ammunition boxes.

The glorious victory at Omdurman when Kitchener's troops cut down an army of dervishes who rushed headlong upon his machine guns with their rusty old water pipe rifles, may have been a great feat of arms; but you will have to show me. Gen. Chaffee has been in a dozen Indian fights that the world at large never heard of, but which were fiercer by far than the victory over the dervishes, because our Indians were trained and almost indomitable fighting men.

Kitchener is the Earl of Khartoum and Kandahar, and then some; Gen. Chaffee is a member of the Board of Public Works.

John Callan O'Laughlin.

Once upon a time, children, there was a small and woefully scared new reporter standing in the visitors' lobby of the White House, waiting for an audience with the "Colonel."

Perceiving the cold chills chasing up and down the spine of the green one, a distinguished Washington correspondent who was also waiting, stepped up and shook hands and filled him full of courage and told him what to do.

The green one was the "Lancer" and the kindly Washington correspondent was John Callan O'Laughlin, who has since become an international figure through his efforts to patch up the difference between Col. Roosevelt and Cardinal Del Val.

When one first goes to the press gallery in Washington you are made to feel your immense insignificance by some of the correspondents—mainly by the distinguished journalists from Cleveland, and Oshkosh and other flag stations. You are received with every cordial attention by the big ones—like Dick Oolahan, now head of the New York Sun, Otto Carmichael of the World, and O. K. Davis of the New York Times, Walter Wellman of the Record-Herald. But the one who is notable for his kindness to the new ones is John Callan O'Laughlin.

You have to get out of your own home town to get all that's really coming to you. Mr. Bob Armstrong is a [illegible] prize fighter and not a prophet; but I see now that we have never appreciated him at his true worth.

His apparel, to which we have grown somewhat accustomed down here, made a profound sensation. The sporting reporters forgot all about Jeff in their amazement, and the San Francisco papers were taxed by their efforts to do justice to this sartorial sunrise.

For a head cover "Mistah" Armstrong wore a moleskin kelly that was peaked until it bore a striking resemblance to Twin Peaks. Bob's overcoat was of a light fawn-colored material, and was cut so short in the back that when the big negro turned around his coattail looked like a neck muffler.

Bob displayed the loudest trousers ever seen in captivity, and his ample feet were encased in a pair of yellow shoes with white suede tops and pearl buttons.

The entire party almost had a convulsion when Armstrong hit camp. Jeff simply shook with laughter and between shakes he remarked: "Why didn't you put your clothes on before you made camp?"

"Lawdy, Mistah Jeffries, I am done dressed out in the very latest haberdashery. This is my Chantecler outfit. I'm done goin' to show these vil[illegible] some class."

[illegible] from Blingum.

It seems that there are Englishmen and Americans and people who live at Burlingame. The Englishmen and Americans are a pretty good sort; but they looked upon those who came from Blingum; and they won't do—except Eleanor Sears.

The Blingum chappies, as you probably know, came down here to play polo gorgeously arrayed in white [illegible]ly and repeatedly beaten. Instead of taking the licking like good sports, they went around like babies and begged the British cavalrymen to choose up sides and put half the British players on the Blingum team so it wouldn't look so badly on the score board.

As the Englishmen had come half way round the world with a trainload of ponies on purpose to win honors and laurels, they very properly refused, and the Blingum team went home mad.

It is hard to realize that these ridiculous little gilded snipes are the sons of the pioneers of forty-nine. They are not the real thing even as snobs. It amused me mightily to see the contrast when they were playing at Coronado.

Between the English officers and their servants there was a social gap that amounted to a Grand Cañon. Yet they never changed horses without a pleasant word of greeting to the grooms. The Blingum young men were so elaborately disdainful of their servants that it was funny.

I guess you have to be born to it—either to pound polo balls or patronize servants.

Nay, Nay—Also Nix!

Some day I hope that Miss Florence Roberts will get a really good play and that I will be there to see her acting in it.

To my mind, she is one of the most intelligent women on the stage and invariably has a millstone hung around her neck in the shape of a deadly uninteresting play. One trolley car could easily have carried the entire audience that came to see her in "Gloria" last Monday night; and to tell the truth I would have been glad to give up my seat in the car.

"Gloria" is one of these "Nay-nay-by-the-soul-of-St.-Andrew,-I-prithee-sir" sort of plays. You know, where the men dress like chorus girls and are forever clinking tin swords.

Oh, nix for this "Nay, nay St. Andrew" business. What we want is plays about the man next door in present-day clothes and within striking distance of the morning papers. Costume comedies are an outrageous bore, as a general thing, and "Gloria" was about the worst I ever saw.

I felt sorry to see a woman as bright as Florence Roberts struggling to put life into such a lot of rot. In that distinguished actor, White Whittlesey, she has a leading man who could ruin about the finest play ever written; so the lady seems to be in hard luck all around.

Boot-Licking.

I think we all had hopes that Pat Calhoun's valorous victory over the San Francisco labor unions would light a spark of something like courage in the business men of that city; but I see they are still timorously eating from the hands of the walking delegates.

I will give you a sample of the way the people in that city meekly swallow insults from the unions and smile as though they liked it.

An O'Farrel street restaurant proprietor got into a row with some of the dish washers and potato peelers in his kitchen and the Cooks' Helpers' Union promptly ordered a strike.

A rough-necked scullion was stationed in front of the place as a "picket" to drive the public away from the place. His manner was so offensive and abusive that people were afraid to enter the restaurant and the café man weakly caved in; he sent over to the union his abject surrender.

One of the rules of the union is that an employer is not allowed to hire his own help. He is required to employ whomever the union selects. In this case, the union haughtily sent word to the café man that the offensive picket on the sidewalk was selected to work in his place and would thenceforth be on the café man's pay roll, at a wage named by the union.

Trained as he was to kow-tow, the restaurateur could not restrain a gasp when he went into the kitchen and found the picket calmly putting on his apron.

"Are you the man who put me out of business?" he asked.

"Sure am," said the picket coolly.

"Oh well," said the proprietor in trembling haste, "you are just the man I wanted. You are so—so energetic."

One of the union-trained papers in San Francisco relates this incident with gusto and approval.

A Famous Painting

FOR TIMES READERS

It is universally conceded that, as an animal painter, Rosa Bonheur was the greatest the world has ever known. So conscientious, so devoted to the real in art, it was her custom when portraying the death struggle of an animal to visit the slaughter-house and there patiently observe the final twitching of the muscles as life became extinct. The results of her painstaking efforts soon made her a world-renowned figure in this most difficult line.

Biographical Sketch

Born in Bordeaux in 1822, Rosa Bonheur began exhibiting there as early as 1841, her work immediately attracting attention. She soon endeared herself to the people and during the Franco-Prussian war the Crown Prince of Prussia gave orders that her home and studio be respected.

In Paris she founded and directed the School of Design for young girls. Many of her works are owned in America, among them "Shepherd and Flock," August Belmont, New York; "Landscape and Sheep," John D. Rockefeller, New York; "Sheep," D. O. Mills, New York; "Highland Sheep," H. C. Gibson, Philadelphia; "Andalusian Bulls," W. T. Walters, Baltimore.

She died in 1899 and her death was mourned in every quarter of the globe, for, beautiful and real as her art was, it was not to be compared with her personality, which radiated sunshine and beauty.

HER MASTERPIECE ...

"The Horse Fair"

In 1853 this wonderful painting was exhibited for the first time and created general astonishment. In order to obtain material for this picture Mme. Bonheur adopted masculine dress, which she never discarded.

"The Horse Fair" was originally the property of the "merchant prince," the late A. T. Stewart, but was acquired by the Metropolitan Museum, where it now hangs and is viewed daily by hundreds of visitors.

PUBLIC SERVICE—Courts and Offices.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

A San Pedro dive-keeper, who defended herself in an appealed case growing out of her refusal to pay rent for a building, told Judge Hutton in the Superior Court yesterday that George H. Peck, a former San Pedro Councilman, owned the house and knew of the purpose for which it was used.

Judge Bordwell in the Superior Court decided an old action yesterday and awarded $3621.88 to W. W. Eakins against the U. S. Fidelity and Guaranty Company, which is guaranty on a bond in the estate of A. M. Ozmun.

C. W. Ellison filed a suit asking for $26,350 in the Superior Court yesterday against J. H. Lester as the result of a shooting scrape that occurred at Tecopa last November.

The directors of the Hamilton Mining and Milling Company, charged with violating the dividend laws, were released by Justice Chambers in the police court yesterday, after their attorneys had shown the complaint to be incompetent.

The Mayor is learning to run an electric automobile.

AT THE CITY HALL.

BARNEY OLDFIELD IN NO DANGER.

MAYOR WILL NOT CROWD HIS MANY WORLD'S RECORDS.

His Honor Has a New Electric Machine and Is Now Trying to Learn Its Habits—Enjoys Strenuous Politics, But Quails at High Speed and Great Horse-power.

After debating the merits of a gasoline auto, a steamer and an electric machine, Mayor Alexander has chosen the latter for his personal use. He is now taking daily lessons in maneuvering a shaft-driven Waverley, and expects to be able to venture out alone some time next week.

While it is all right to "beat it" from the executive chambers to San Pedro in a big car driven by a hatless chauffeur who is an expert, the Mayor says he believes in reduced horse power and less speed for himself.

"I am not, at my age, trying to crowd Barney Oldfield or Ralph De Palma," quoth the Mayor. "This life I am leading in the City Hall is strenuous, all right, but I don't believe I want to leave it to find solace in sixty-horse-power at sixty miles an hour. The electric has all the comfort I want and an excess of speed."

The Mayor is 70 years old, and will use the machine, which is a convertible phaeton, only for pleasure.

When he gets through his course of training he is likely to be an oracle on the traffic ordinance. He has already learned a whole lot about it by reason of the constant thrashing it has received before him, but he is looking out for the jokers that might bring him off his course and afoul of the traffic squad.

"This chauffeuring is serious business," said he. "You know there's a whole lot to learn in managing this macine so you won't try to run over the curbstones. But I'll get there, all right."

MORE MUSIC.

MUNICIPAL BAND DISCORD.

Sweet bells jangled out of tune is the import of a protest filed with the Council by H. P. Moore, band leader, against the present method of providing municipally-owned music for the parks.

Moore calls attention to the fact that $10,000 was appropriated by this financially distressed but artistically tempered city for free band concerts, and that $9000 was authorized expended in a contract with Harley Hamilton.

The Hamilton contract calls for sixty concerts at $150 each. The band is to contain thirty-five musicians, and at the rates of employment as regulated by the musicians' association, Moore says, require the payment of $105 a concert to them. This leaves, he estimates, $45 a concert for Hamilton, or $135 a week.

The other $1000 was spent with Moore for a band of twenty pieces for twenty concerts, and on the same basis it allows $9 a performance for Moore. Moore expresses a belief that this is not the proper way to dispense the city's fund.

He also declares that the appropriation will be exhausted July 1, just at a time when the public will really be able to enjoy open-air concerts. But he also intimates that the beach season begins at this time, and that musicians interested in municipal band work find abundant work at the oceanside.

His remedy for another year of municipally owned music is to award the contract by estimates so that all musicians may be able to share in the competition. He says there are 400 musicians in Los Angeles who are interested. The Finance Committee will recommend the reference of the protest to the Municipal Music Commission.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

HINTS OF IRREGULARITIES.

Hints of discoveries of irregularities, some of a grave nature, in the fire department, are floating about the City Hall, as a result of investigation made by the City Auditor through his secret service department.

The Mayor admitted yesterday that the investigation was being made with thoroughness, but said the Auditor had not presented him with "a full report."

It is understood the Mayor was before the grand jury and told as much of the condition of things in the fire department as he knew and that others have been asked to enlighten the jury.

The Council recently appropriated $250 to facilitate the investigation, but the commission let two meetings go by without making any order with reference to its use. It is understood, however, that investigators are at work, secretly, and that many things have been discovered that will require explanation at least.

FIRE MARSHAL O.K.

MAYOR FINDS NO OBJECTION.

The Mayor had a conference yesterday with Fire Marshal Sutton and C. O. Hawley, a member of the Fire Commission, and the result was that the Mayor believes the arrangement by which Sutton, who is head of the local fire insurance inspection bureau, and his deputies are made fire marshals is without objection.

LARGE PROBLEMS.

HEALTH OF WHOLE STATE OBJECT OF THIS MEETING.

LARGE problems will be discussed by the public health societies of California at a meeting to be held in Sacramento a week from tomorrow. Tuberculosis, pure milk, venereal diseases, housing conditions and the bubonic plague are subjects which will engage attention, and the net result of the meeting will be to harmonize conditions so that the various health boards will work hand in hand with the State Board of Health.

Dr. George H. Kress, secretary of the Health Commission of the State Medical Society, outlining the work before the Sacramento meeting, stated yesterday that California is menaced by the constant arrival of consumptives from other States. These patients infect the houses and hotels they occupy, and unless proper hygienic conditions are imposed, consumption will gain ground here among the native-born. A great deal is to be done toward purifying the milk supply. He stated that 25 per cent. of the dairy cattle in this State have tuberculosis. The government analysis runs from 15 to 35 per cent. throughout the country. It is a serious situation and must be done away with, and Dr. Kress said it could be obviated by a campaign of education.

Pasadena, he declared, is the only city of its size in the United States that has the courage to enforce the tuberculin test of dairy cattle. No dairyman in that city can buy a cow and use it unless this test has been made. The cost is covered by a special fee which the dairyman pays. Ultimately the tuberculin test will be required everywhere, and with the view of compelling it in this State, the Sacramento meeting will take steps to have the gravity of the matter brought forcibly before the various legislative bodies.

The overcrowding of tenement houses, a fruitful source of disease, is a large proposition, and the health authorities find themselves antagonizing property owners, who rush up these houses, regardless of sanitary conditions, with the object of obtaining the largest possible interest on their investments. The tenement houses should have ample ventilation and plenty of windows to admit the sunshine. An obstacle in the way of properly providing for the poor crowded in tenement houses is the legislation of recent years which falls far below what it ought to be.

The bubonic plague is another grave proposition. Because little is heard of it now, Dr. Kress declared the belief prevails that it has been stamped out. The State is facing a great task to exterminate the rodents, among which are classed ground squirrels, that disseminate the plague. It will require years of work and a large amount of money to accomplish this, and the public health societies of California will prosecute the work with all their vigor, according to Dr. Kress. It is stated that 2 per cent. of the rats that infest our cities and the squirrels which frisk in the parks, are infected by the plague. The disease is communicated to fleas which infest these rodents. Medical men are constantly on the alert to guard against another outbreak of bubonic plague, and are carrying on a constant warfare against the sources of infection.

The Health Commission of the State Medical Society will be represented in Sacramento by Dr. George H. Kress, secretary; Dr. L. M. Powers, Health Officer of Los Angeles; Dr. S. B. Black, Health Officer of Pasadena, and Dr. Fitch Mattison of the same city.

dangers without cost. The same system is in use in San Francisco, Portland, Seattle, Spokane, Salt Lake City and other western cities, and Sutton says meets with satisfaction to all interested.

Hawley, who is an insurance expert, says he can find no objection to the appointment of Sutton and his deputies as marshals except that it may be wrong in principle to create offices and put them in private hands.

The Mayor says he believes the work Sutton and the bureau are doing is not only a saving to the city of $5000 a year, but is valuable practical coöperation with the fire department in reducing danger.

Whatever objection S. G. Marshutz, who raised the question, may have about the application of the fire district ordinance to his building at Pico and Figueroa streets, must be made to the Council. Hawley says it would be dangerous to permit a garage with gasoline storage to exist in Marshutz's frame building over which a lodging-house is maintained.

Marshutz will probably appeal to the Council.

City Hall Brevities.

The Finance Committee has recommended the payment of a bill of $151.50 in settlement of the claim of R. J. Adcock against the city. Of this amount $100 is to be bpaid to Adcock for thirty-one dozen quarts of beer stolen from the Police Station, or otherwise disappearing, during the time the liquor seized at the Sells-Floto circus was taken to the City Jail. The mysterious disappearance of the "wet goods" during the control of the jail by the impeccable Capt. Dixon has not been explained—but the city is paying the bill.

The Board of Public Utilities has recommended that the Council deny the petition of certain east side residents who filed a "consent" for the granting of a street railway franchise for Evergreen and Blanchard avenues. The board says the signers show no intention to build or operate the line and that this is sufficient reason to deny it.

F. F. Hedden, who says he was refused a transfer because he did not ask for it when he paid his fare, has appealed to the Council to require companies to issue transfers when demanded. The rule of the companies is to issue transfers only when fares are paid.

BAUMGARDT LECTURE.

Repeated visits to Norway, a thorough familiarity with the language, customs and ways of the Norwegians enables Mr. Baumgardt to present in his lecture today, in Blanchard Hall, most interesting information not readily accessible to the general public. The beauty of the fields and fjords is graphically portrayed on the screen with fourteen beautiful lantern views.

AT THE COURTHOUSE.

WOMAN SAYS SHE KEPT DIVE.

FORMER SAN PEDRO COUNCILMAN BRINGS SUIT.

Woman Declares Owner of House Knows of the Purpose for Which It Is Used and Gets Decision from Justice, Appeal from Which Is Heard in Court.

The odor of the old tenderloin district of San Pedro permeated a case, in which figured a notorious woman and a former trustee of the beach city, that was heard on appeal before Judge Hutton, yesterday.

George H. Peck, a San Pedro banker and a "city dad" before the annexation, was the complainant, and Mrs. Grace Gilbert, who admitted she has a reputation as a dive keeper, was the defendant. Peck sued her for a month's rent for one of his buildings, which she said she conducted as a dive. It was located at No. 108½ Sixth street, just around the corner from from the office of the owner. His side of the case is yet to be heard.

The case was originally heard before Justice Steiglitz. Mrs. Gilbert's defense was that Peck had known the purpose for which she leased the place, which was known as the York rooming-house. Her contention was that she should not be compelled to pay $75 rent for July, as her contract was illegal because of the known use of the premises. She made good her defense before the justice and was given judgment.

The suit was appealed by Peck because of its close relation to an action for $6900 damages for eviction which she has brought and is set to be heard this week.

A lot of filth was dragged into the hearing yesterday. Mrs. Gilbert, in a voice which spoke of free use of cigarettes, declared that both Peck and his agent, Charles Dreyfus, knew that she intended to conduct a house of ill-fame. She apparently was quite well acquainted with them from the terms she used in speaking of them.

Mrs. Gilbert was formerly the keeper of the "Greenlight," a crib house in "Hapy Hollow." She declared that she met Peck at that place on last Christmas Eve.

"I asked him about the talk about closing the houses," she said. "'Think of it from a business standpoint,' he answered. 'I'd like to get your house,' I told him. 'Everybody else has seemed to make a failure of it. I don't think I'm the best sporting house woman in the world, but—' 'Why don't you get it?' he asked me."

Dreyfus, who was in Peck's office most of the time during business hours.

Mrs. Gilbert said that Dreyfus collected the rent from her and that he came in sometimes at night and bought 'booze." She said she never saw Peck in the place, but that she met him several times at the door leading to the street.

The case was continued until the 18th inst.

MUST PAY BOND.

JUDGE DECIDES OLD CASE.

Judge Bordwell yesterday decided the suit of W. W. Eakins against the United States Fidelity & Guaranty Company, litigation which was the outgrowth of an action commenced many years ago, and which involved persons prominent in business and professionally. Death has intervened several times since the first suit was filed.

The point involved was as to whether the guaranty company could be held on a bond which was filed as a surety in order that an estate might not be tied up indefinitely. The judgment was in the affirmative and Eakins was awarded $3621.88, which he prayed for.

A. M. Ozmun, who was heavily interested in Riverside banking institutions, died June 27, 1899. A short time later T. S. C. Lowe made a claim against the estate and Roy Wheeler Ozmun, the executor, for $18,769.14. The demand was refused and suit was begun. The plaintiff was given judgment and the Supreme Court affirmed the finding.

Meantime the bond, which was for $30,000, had been filed in order that the estate might be distributed. The younger Ozmun died and left a widow. She later married Attorney Byron Oliver and death has again made her a widow.

The Lowe judgment remained partially unsatisfied and suit was brought against the bonding company. The claim was assigned to Lynn Helm and by him to Eakins.

The case was tried several months ago and was submitted to Judge Bordwell. It involved such technicalities that he was unable to formulate an opinion until he procured some leisure by calling in Judge Church of Fresno to preside for him.

The defendants contended that the purpose for which the bond was put up was not proper. The judge decided that it might have been out of the ordinary, but there were sufficient legal reasons why the company should be compelled to stand by it.

SHOOTING SCRAPE.

VICTIM SEEKS DAMAGES.

A shooting scrape, which took place November 29 at Tecopa, in Inyo county, is the basis of a suit for $26,350 for personal injuries that C. N. Ellison filed against J. H. Lester in the Superior Court yesterday.

It is alleged that Lester struck the plaintiff with the butt of a pistol, knocked him down and shot him as he lay on the ground. The bullet is asserted to have struck Ellison in the jaw, seriously wounding him.

The complainant asserts that he has been permanently injured and that he will never recover from the paralysis of the left side of his face that was caused by the shot. It is alleged that his jaw was fractured and that the bullet lodged in his neck in such a manner that the surgeons have not been able to extract it.

Ellison says that he can open his mouth only slightly and the resulting inconvenience is great. He was in the hospital for several weeks and $1350 of the amount prayed for, is to compensate him for money expended for medical attendance.

COURTHOUSE NOTES.

BREVITIES MISCELLANEOUS.

INCORPORATIONS. Articles of incorporation were filed yesterday by the Los Angeles Panama Land & Timber Company, capital stock, $300,000, incorporators, D. O'Donnell, Albert P. Johnson, Herman O. Meyer, K. O'Donnel, and F. E. Johnson, subscribed, $500; Hotel Redondo Company, capital stock, $500,000, incorporators, H. M. Dunlap, J. C. Penn, E. N. Childers, S. B. Webb and B. V. Rutledge, subscribed, $500.

Mrs. Caroline L. Prescott yesterday filed a petition for the probate of the will of her late husband, J. C. Prescott, who died at Long Beach April 5. About $25,000 worth of property is involved. It consists of Long Beach lots, a farm in Illinois and some money. The widow and O. W. Prescott, a son, are the only heirs.

Helen Gardner desires to have her husband, George Gardner, declared incompetent. She filed a petition yesterday, asking to be appointed his guardian. The instrument states that he has long spells of sleeplessness and that he cannot care for his own affairs.

Herbert von Hoenhorst will be sentenced on a charge of petty larceny by Judge Willis Tuesday. He was charged with grand larceny but a jury found him guilty of a less serious offense. He stole a suit case which was the property of Charles L. Davis.

THE INFERIOR COURTS.

LONG ARGUMENT; NO HOLDING.

DIRECTORS OF MINING COMPANY SECURE DISMISSAL.

Justice Finds Complaint Charging Violation of Laws Governing Manner of Declaring Dividends Faulty in Not Clearly Setting Out the Facts—Human Carver Arraigned.

After more than a week of argument on technical objections, complaints charging the directors of the Hamilton Mining and Milling Company with violating the laws governing the manner in which dividends may be declared and issued were dismissed in Justice Chambers's police court yesterday morning.

The charges against the directors were the first to be filed under that section of the law in Los Angeles, and were more in the order of tests to decide the strength of the law than anything else.

Justice Chambers finally ruled that the complaint was faulty in not clearly setting forth the facts charged and ordered the case thrown out of court.

E. M. Hamilton, Sherman Page, F. H. Hamilton, Truman W. Hamilton and W. Lester Hamilton were the defendants named. They, as directors of the company, were charged with misdemeanors by A. E. Wiley, a trustee and director in the Antelope Valley Mining Company. Wiley made the following allegations: That on February 9 the directors of the company declared a dividend of 400,000 shares of stock of the Hamilton Mining and Milling Company and issued this stock to themselves and two stockholders, and that the dividend was made from the treasury stock, and not from the that his company bought up the controlling stock of the Hamilton mine for $8000, and that the directors of the company turned about and again took control of the property by issuing all the stock in the treasury to themselves.

Justice Chambers, shortly after a jury had been secured to try the case, declared that it was a pity the case should ever have been taken up in a criminal court. A continuance was then asked for by attorneys for the defendants, and a number of technical objections were entered, one of which pertained to the lack of fact alleged in the complaint, and this objection was sustained yesterday.

Bushet Arraigned.

Charged with assault with a deadly weapon, T. J. Bushet was arraigned before Justice Frederickson in police court yesterday. His bail was fixed at $1500. The preliminary examination, tails of the case are briefly as follows, as told by Rosick: He alleges that Bushet introduced him to a pretty woman, who, said Bushet, was his sister, and that he, Rosick, fell in love with her and was paying ardent court when Bushet burst in upon them and attacked him with a knife, alleging the woman was his wife, and not his sister.

Dog Owners Suspended.

Following out his campaign to clear the East Side of vicious dogs, Capt. Lenhausen arraigned ten men and women in Justice Frederickson's police court yesterday on charges of violating the muzzling laws.

Justice Frederickson lectured the defendants after they had pleaded guilty and warned them that it was a duty they owed the community to protect neighbors and pedestrians from attack. He suspended sentence upon Tarheel and Tadpole.

Miss Bixby was not given to coquetry, but she was pardonably anxious to make an agreeable impression upon Prof. Clark, according to the Youth's Companion. He was young and handsome, and, like herself, learned, she gathered from the common friend who was plotting to bring them together. Also the friend, a sprightly North Carolina woman, referred to him as a "tarheel."

"A what?" Miss Bixby inquired.

"Tarheel," it appeared, was the vivacious name for a native of North Carolina.

Miss Bixby, who modestly felt the need in herself of an added touch of vivacity, impressed the term upon a memory which, surcharged with knowledge, had been known to be treacherous.

However profound a conversation is destined to become, it should begin, in society, Miss Bixby was aware, with graceful nothings. "You are a tarheel, I believe?" it seemed to her would serve the purpose of breaking the ice. she addressed him across her friend's dinner table.

"I believe, Prof. Clark," she remarked, with sweet graciousness, "that you are a tadpole."

The Way of One Princess.

So much has been said and written about the debts of Princess Louise, eldest daughter of the late King of the Belgians, that any story illustrating her carelessness in money matters is of interest. Princess Louise literally does not know what money means, says the London Globe.

Some time ago, during a stay she made in Paris, a dress which she had ordered was brought to her hotel, says a Brussels paper. The girl who brought it was pretty and charmingly dressed, with that simplicity and grace peculiar to the little work girl of the Rue de la Paix. Princess Louise admired the child and told her so and admired, too, a little silver medal which the girl wore around her neck.

"Perhaps Your Highness will accept it," said the work girl. "It is a medal of the Virgin of Prague."

"That is too sweet of you," said Princess Louise, "and you must let me give you something in exchange to put she took the necklace to a jeweler's to be valued. It was worth £11,000.

A New York poet, at the Authors' Club, in Seventh avenue, told this Conan Doyle story:

"Sir Arthur Conan Doyle," he said, "sat at a dinner, on his last visit here, beside a lady who asked leave to consult him about some thefts.

"'My detective powers,' he replied, 'are at your service, madam.'

"'Well,' said the lady, 'frequent and mysterious thefts have been occurring at my house for a long time. Thus there disappeared last week a motor horn, a broom, a box of golf balls, a left riding boot, a dictionary and a half-dozen tin pie plates.'

"'Aha,' said the creator of Sherlock Holmes, 'the case, madam, is quite clear. You keep a goat.'"

SHORT SHRIFT FOR LIBELER.

Parker Citizens Eject Slanderous Editor, Thrice Lifted from Ground by Necktie Party.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PARKER (Ariz.) April 5.—Just at present there is a good opening in Parker for a newspaper man of the right sort. The wrong sort might find an unwelcome opening in the shape of an abandoned prospect hole on the desert. The community is a trifle overcritical of newspaper men just now, and will hardly calm down for a week to come. Till it does calm, it might be as well for journalists to pass Parker by.

The trouble was all precipitated by one James J. Healy, late of Phoenix, a newspaper man whose ideas of correct journalistic ethics were gained by close study of Hearst journals and methods. In the last general election, Mr. Healy was a sort of general agent for W. R. Hearst in Arizina, a walking delegate, so to speak, for the Independence League, which really had a candidate in evidence for the office of Delegate to Congress. Worthy of camp of Bisbee, Healy is frankness itself in stating his opinion of men and things, and can be depended upon at all times to hammer capital and to uphold labor of the unionized variety.

STYLE NOT POPULAR.

For several months Healy has been editor of the Parker Herald, a weekly publication which occasionally missed an issue. It was printed in Phoenix, though mailed at the Parker postoffice. As the business men of Parker are generally a conservative lot of citizens, mainly bent upon the development of this wonderful mining and agricultural region, Healy's peculiar style has at no time been exactly popular. Finally the editor himself added the final straw.

There has been some sort of disagreement between the editor and the proprietor of the local hotel, a woman of industry and character, who had come here mainly for the benefit of the health of an invalid husband. Concerning this woman in last week's issue of the Herald was printed an article of slanderous nature that promptly brought the trouble to a head. As Healy has suffered ordinary physical an officer and charged with possession of concealed weapons. But a posse of business men soon gathered and secured possession of the prisoner without opposition. With him they started for the open country. Just exactly what happened has not been told by the members of the posse, though it is understood that the editor was thrice pulled from the ground up toward the top of a telegraph pole. For much of the march he was dragged at the end of a rope, while occasionally a Parkerite relieved his feelings by kicking the prisoner or striking him in the face.

Healy believed that he was to be hanged, and cried piteously for mercy, pleading individually with the men, all of whom he knew well.

GLAD TO KEEP LIFE.

Finally, Healy was asked if he would leave Parker forever, if permitted to go with his life. He eagerly assented to the terms. Then he was made to sign an order on the postmasetr for that week's issue of the Herald, which had been mailed, but not distributed. It was dark at the time, but the

THE SOCIAL HUB.

LOS ANGELES LIFE IN THE WASHINGTON SOCIAL SWIM.

The Triumphs of Mrs. Oscar Lawler, Who Is Very Close to the Cabinet Leaders—Lovely Home of Senator and Mrs. Flint—Other Californians Who Have Made a Pleasing Impression This Season.

BY LOUISE GEORGE.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, April 4.—California is a magic word of the national capital. "What's that you say, California?" exclaimed our handsome military attaché to the Court of St. James, Capt. Sydney A. Cloman, on his recent American visit, as we chatted at a White House function.

"I have just one more year abroad, then I am coming back and going back to California. I was stationed there once, and I have always intended to go back as soon as I could get the chance."

"Did you hear about the big fish I caught at Catalina Island last summer," interrupted the Chief of Engineers, Gen. Marshall, the only man in Washington bigger and jollier than the President. "Why, he weighed forty-six and a half pounds, a yellowtail, and I got a gold button for him. Murray there could not catch one like him."

"Well, well, well," said the second handsomest general in the United States Army, Gen. Arthur Murray, Chief of Coast Artillery. "I had a better time than you did, but really," he continued seriously, "I went all over the world last year, and I did not see any place that could beat Southern California for natural beauty."

"You know," said Mrs. Oscar Lawler, of Los Angeles, whose first season in Washington has been a social triumph, "I determined that I would not insist upon California at all times and seasons, when I first came to Washington; that I would try to be modest about my native State; but the mere mention of the word compels attention. It is the greatest conversational asset one could have. The moment people know you are from California, the ice is broken, for those who have been there want to discuss it with you, and those who have not been there, all want to go." And she was right, for even the poor worn out clerk at the dry goods counter, who had spent his years with the yard stick, had evidently had dreams of that golden Eldorado, for when I mentioned California to him, he brightened at the magic word, and said wistfully: "That's one place I always wanted to see."

The Californians in Washington have climbed high. They have scaled the social as well as the political heights, and Washington society is no longer a democratic institution. Senator Flint, who achieved the Finance Committee of the Senate, early in his career, has established an equally distinguished social position as the "gentleman from California."

Mrs. Flint's gentle manners and delicate charm, and the wit and vivacity of the Senator's mother, Mrs. A. L. Danskin, and their lovely school-girl daughter, Miss Katherine, have made the Flint residence on Massachusetts avenue as much of a social center as the marble palaces of Thomas A. Walsh, and other multi-millionaire neighbors, which flank it about.

IN THE FLINT HOME.

There is a California palm at the modest entrance of the Flint home. Just off of the drawing rooms, is a bit of California in a tiny conservatory, which almost makes one homesick, but the keynote of individuality is struck in the Chinese dining-room, a stately dignified room, a perfect ensemble, whose arrangement reveals the aristocracy of brains. An altar piece of teakwood, once used in the old josshouse in San Francisco, supports a glittering array of silver and cut glass. The chairs are of teakwood. There are old Chinese prints on the wall—not too many, and a dragon-decked plaque two-hundred years old. There are Chinese brasses, and curtains of coarse-meshed net, with straight side panels and valance of crepe in melon pink and pale gold storks. The dining table is of teak wood, and about it have gathered, this season, many notable figures in Washington official and private life, Ambassador Bryce and rosy-cheeked Mrs. Bryce, the Jusserands, Count and Countess von Bernstorff, Senators and Representatives and visiting Californians, especially the Slausons, and Mrs. Hugh Livingstone MacNeil, who were the first California guests of the New Year and accompanied the Flints to the diplomatic reception.

MRS. LAWLER'S TRIUMPH.

Mrs. Oscar Lawler has been more associated with the Cabinet set than any other California woman in Washington this winter, by virtue of her husband's position, and her own frank and fascinating personality, not to mention good looks. Mrs. Lawler assisted Mrs. Ballinger at the brilliant New Year's reception at the Ballinger home. Mrs. Lawler's knowledge of German—her mother's native tongue—made her the center of attraction to many of the foreign diplomats, who delighted to chat with this bright American woman, in a language more familiar to them than English. Even the Haytian contingent, who have very kindly been likened to flies in a pitcher of buttermilk, on account of their dark color, hovered near in the hope that she might be equally conversant with French.

At the height of the Ballinger-Pinchot controversy, Mr. and Mrs. Lawler gave a dinner to the Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Ballinger. A prominent guest was Mr. Vertrees of Nashville, Tenn., "the country lawyer," as the papers dubbed him, who is bringing consternation into the Pinchot ranks by his masterly defense of Sec-fornia from San Francisco. "I was disappointed in Mr. Ballinger, who has not the frank, open ceountenance of his pictures, and in Mr. Vertrees, whose almost brutal thrusts in cross-questioning had ill prepared me to find him socially the most fascinating, scintillating dinner companion, and the most suave southern gentleman I had ever met."

Mrs. Lawler will not return to the Pacific Coast this summer, as she is planning to spend this season in New England, taking with her her dear little Lady Jane and Charles, her small son.

QUEENLY MRS. NEWLANDS.

"If I should be called upon to select the most queenly woman in Washington, I should say it was Mrs. Francis Newlands, wife of the senior Senator from Nevada," declared an ardent Californian, last summer, and a great man with a smile, who was touring the country, said "Amen" to the sentiment. Mrs. Newlands is the daughter of the late Ward McAllister, of San Francisco. She is indeed a queen among women, and her splendid home, just off of the Chevy Chase road, is the true setting for such a jewel.

Senator Newlands is a courtly host and dear to his heart is the historic mansion of "Woodley," with the fair Maryland acres falling away in wooded slopes from the commanding site on which it stands. The house was built more than a hundred years ago by a member of the Key family, of Star Spangled Banner fame, and the late grounds. A tangle of wild sassafras and grape vines skirts a ravine at one side, and here the gentle mistress has had an old-fashioned garden planted. Tulips flaunt gay colors on the slope, violets hide their purple heads in the borders, perriwinkles, and marigolds and hyacinths broider the hillside. The veranda at the back of the mansion is a favorite place for afternoon tea, and the view stretches out over hill and dale twenty miles away, where the Potomac is a silver ribbon in the distance. One can scarcely realize that the city is pushing right up to the side of this stately demesne, and that the solid block of houses, with no spaces between, can be seen just beyond Woodley Lane, "unearned increment," Senator Newlands dubs them.

Mrs. Newlands moves in rather an exclusive circle, and her niece, Miss Marian Wise, of San Francisco, is one of the beauties of Washington society, having made her debut the early part of the sason.

Mrs. Kranklin K. Lane is another San Francisco woman who holds an enviable position in Washington.

PANSY PERKINS.

Senator Perkins has been desperately shaken by the accident and subsequent illness of the winter. His daughter, Mrs. Cleveland Baker of Tonopah, was with him at Stoneleigh Court for some weeks. All Washington was glad to welcome dear Pansy Perkins, who has long been a favorite of the National Capital. She was her father's constant companion and accompanied him each winter to Washington, until her marriage to the brilliant young lawyer, who is prosecuting attorney of Tonopah. Her health was drunk right royally at the "Appropriation dinner," at the Arlington Hotel, when the Californians gathered to celebrate their triumphs in winning such a large appropriation for San Pedro Harbor. This was Senator Perkin's first social function after his illness, "now, Tonopah," he said, "when Pansy Perkins was toasted and asked for a speech.

Mrs. Baker was entertained in the Bancroft room at the Tea Cup Inn, by Mrs. Duncan E. McKinlay, wife of Representative McKinlay, from Santa Rosa. Mrs. McKinley has entertained a number of times this season, and is one of the brightest women of the California Congressional group.

A beautiful bride of this season is small children, when he married this lovely Virginia girl. The Knowlands are living at the Highlands this winter, and are now entertaining Miss Tisdale of Alameda.

A GAY HOME.

There has been a gay household at Representative Hayes's home this season. Miss Sibyl Hayes, a very attractive daughter, was presented to society in January, and Miss Lyetta Hayes, the piquant, dark-haired daughter of "Black Hayes," insurgent editor of the San José Mercury, was a house guest at the time.

Washington is greatly interested in the unique story of "Red Hayes," and "Black Hayes," of California, and their respective families, who are said to dwell together in peace and harmony, in a wonderful community mansion in the Santa Clara Valley—said mansion and families having a community purse as well.

Congressman Smith of Bakersfield, is established with his wife and two daughters in a pretty home on the edge of Rock Creek Park. They are a very happy family, but are lamenting the fact that an unfeeling real estate firm has put up a row of houses just opposite, cutting off the glorious sweep of woods and dales and little tumbling brooks, which they thought could never be taken away from them.

Miss Eva Smith, the eldest daughter of Representative and Mrs. Smith, is a Berkeley graduate, and took a course in sociology at the University of California. She has lovely serious eyes, and she has a character to match. During the past winter, which has been the most severe that Washington has known for a decade, Miss Eva has spent one day in each busy week at the headquarters of the Associated Charities, dealing out the bare necessities of life to the very poor, driven to this last resort. Bundles of coal and kindling, oh so pitifully small, were more interesting to this California girl, than the costliest cotillion favors.

"Yes, her name is " 'Little Dorritt,' " said motherly Mrs. Smith, referring to the exceedingly pretty and graceful daughter of eighteen. "Her father and I had been reading Dickens the winter she was born, and we decided to name her 'little Dorritt.' " "Little Dorritt Smith" is a prime mover in all the gaiety of the young California set. She even engineered a coasting party, where the young people of the Hayes, the McKinley, the Needham and Englebright families all got together one moonlight night and coasted on bobsleds down a steep hill in the neighborhood of Rock Creek Park.

GIRL VISITORS.

Mrs. Smith had two California girls under her wing this winter, Miss Irma Weill, and Miss Idella Crilley, of Oakland. Mrs. Needham, wife of Congressman Needham, of Modesto, Cal., and a very handsome charming woman, is also entertaining a pretty California girl, Miss Alma Myers of Los Angeles. Mrs. Needham and Mrs. Smith gave a large reception at the Congressional Club this season in honor of visiting California girls. Representative and Mrs. Englebright, and their sons, are living at the Cairo, and Mrs. Englebright has had a busy social season. Representative Kahn of San Francisco has been alone in Washington this winter.

AT THE BARRACKS.

Lieut. Chaffee was pointed out to me at the weekly exhibition drill at Ft. Myer, Va., and the commanding officer, Col. Garrard paid a tribute to his ability, which would warm the heart of that grand old man in Los Angeles, Gen. Adna R. Chaffee.

Capt. and Mrs. William Graves are now in Washington, Capt. Graves being a member of the Gen. Staff. There are Best Piano Value in America

Tone
A pure, vibrant, singing tone which comes forth with the utmost freedom. A tone-quality equally charming for solo piano work or for song accompaniments. You can easily distinguish a genuine Lyon & Healy Piano from other makes. This quality reaches the ideal of the Lyon & Healy tone experts, the men who also build the world-famous Lyon & Healy Harp.

In beauty of appearance the Lyon & Healy Piano reaches a very advanced standard. The designs are naturally very different from those of ordinary pianos, as they are after drawings by Zimmerman and other authoritative architects. The action, strings, sound board, full iron plate, etc., etc., are excellent examples of the latest and best thought in piano construction. Everything is planned for solidity and endurance. That the workmanship is of the highest order a brief examination will prove to any unprejudiced judge.

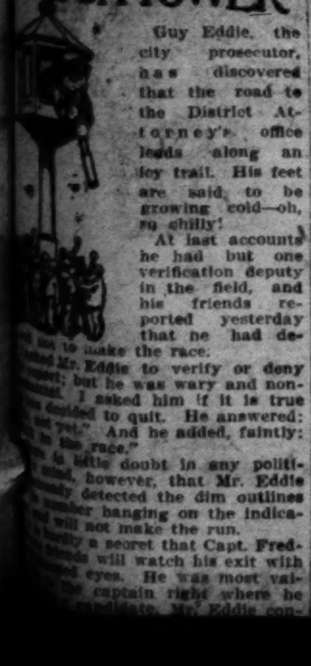
THE POLITICAL WATCHTOWER



Guy Eddie, the city prosecutor, has discovered that the road to the District Attorney's office leads along an icy trail. His feet are said to be growing cold—oh, so chilly!

At last accounts he had but one verification deputy in the field, and his friends reported yesterday that he had decided not to make the race. [illegible] Mr. Eddie to verify or deny [illegible] report; but he was wary and noncommittal. I asked him if it is true [illegible] decided to quit. He answered: "Not yet." And he added, faintly: "[illegible] in the race."

[illegible] is little doubt in any political mind, however, that Mr. Eddie [illegible] detected the dim outlines [illegible] number hanging on the indicator and will not make the run. [illegible] hardly a secret that Capt. Fredericks' friends will watch his exit with [illegible] eyes. He was most val[illegible] the captain right where he [illegible] candidate. Mr. Eddie conant Goo-Goo boss, Editor Gibbon of the Herald, is apparently anxious to support E. J. Fleming, and his attitude toward Woolwine is that of the young lady who says to her young man caller: "Don't hurry; here's your hat." But Fleming says: "Not for me—I'm out of it."

Gibbon has announced in a faint, far-away tone of voice that Tommy is a nice child, but——

Had it not been for the haste with which Thomas and Mr. Eddie flung themselves into the race, it was the intention of the Goo-Goos to have brought forth a stake horse to run against Capt. Fredericks. But now they don't know what to do about it.

Those who know the circumstances are much amused by Tommy Woolwine's attempt to make political capital out of the raid on the Pasadena gambling rooms.

"Why?" demand the Goo-Goo newspapers, "why did not the District Attorney go after these poolrooms?"

Of course, every one knows that among the prisoners triumphantly captured by Woolwine in the celebrated raid were detectives who were collecting evidence for the District Attorney, and by reason of whose collected evidence the poolroom men pleaded guilty.

The list of candidates for township justice resembles an avalanche.

If Justice Stephens runs again for office, his friends say it will not be for township justice. Justice Ling and Justice Pierce are both running for the Superior Court. This leaves three certain vacancies.

Akerman, C. W. Stahl, James W. Creede, J. W. Summerfield, George W. Carey, W. S. Baird, Benjamin P. Welch, A. A. Sturgis, T. S. Bowers, G. A. Prichard, J. B. Holly, Howard A. Peairs, Charles S. Burnell, Sidney N. Reeves.

One of these candidates is now in the insane asylum. The others are still at large.

The four incumbents are running for reëlection as Police Judge, with Georgie McCullough as the only opponent so far.

In the canvass for Superior Court, the chances of the three incumbents, Hervey, Moss and Davis, look particularly bright. The voters of this county have always shown a marked aversion to unseating judges who have shown fairness in their positions, and the three judges whose terms are expiring have been markedly successful. Here are three good judges, tried and proven worthy. The people are with them.

Among the outsiders, Paul J. McCormick and Gavin Craig are regarded as having the best chance.

Attorneys all through the State have been impressed by the quiet, dignified campaign conducted by Judge James, the Southern California candidate for Supreme Court.

Without any melodramatic speeches or endless chain advertising letters, James has quietly announced himself; sent out his petitions and left it there. He has refused to make any other kind of campaign.

Lest a request place them in an em-have voluntarily pledged themselves and have asked for the privilege of signing the James petitions.

I don't know whether or not James will be elected; but if he is elected, he will be "elected right."

WARM CONTEST NEARS CLOSE.

HANFORD POLITICIANS INJECT VIM INTO FIGHT.

Saloon Question Really the Main Issue—Editor's Comments on Civic Affairs Anger Certain Section, Which Presents Grievances to the Grand Jury.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

HANFORD, April 7.—Monday one of the warmest municipal campaigns ever waged in this city will come to a close. Three Trustees, a City Marshal and City Clerk are to be chosen. Two tickets are in the field for Trustees, one known as the Citizens' ticket, composed of J. H. Dawson, Freeland Parrish and A. W. Bass, and the other, known as the Peoples' ticket, composed of Grant Starkweather, John Hedgeland and Charles Flemming. Starkweather is the only incumbent seeking reëlection. The Citizens' ticket was first selected and is said to stand for a reorganization and reformation of municipal affairs, while the Peoples' ticket is said to have the backing of the present administration and the saloon interests.

asking the submission of the saloon question, Trustee Starkweather was one of the majority of the board which voted not to call a "straw vote" on the matter. It is charged by the supporters of the Citizens' ticket that the saloon interests seek to reëlect Starkweather to maintain a majority of the board, the two holdover members having also voted against submitting the question.

Reorganization of city affairs, especially relating to the street department, is being made a burning issue. So severe has been the criticism of the present administration by the Journal that the board sought to introduce evidence before the grand jury to vindicate themselves of the paper's charges and prove the editor, F. V. Dewey, guilty of libel. Chairman Barney presented the board's grievances to the grand jury, which instead of taking evidence then and there, appointed a committee of five to investigate municipal affairs and adjourned until April 18.

For Marshal, A. M. Frederick, incumbent, and Scott Bloyd are the aspirants, while for Clerk, James A. Hill, present Clerk, and D. C. Williams are the candidates.

VAIN SEARCH.

For two days officers of Kings, Tulare and Fresno counties have made vain search for Alfred Weygant, accused of having assaulted a Laton schoolgirl Wednesday afternoon, after she returned home from school. The girl's parents own a ranch near Laton and were away from home when the assault was committed.

The Board of Supervisors has been tling up rapidly and it is probable the board will remove the inconvenience.

D. W. Jones, inventor of a road-making process and machine, was before the Supervisors yesterday with a proposition to build a sample road one mile in length, the board to place the matter of good roads before the voters in the near future should the people be satisfied with the sample highway. The board will view a stretch of the kind of road Mr. Jones builds, near Selma, and if the members believe it a suitable one, will probably order the sample road constructed. This proceeding will probably mean the inauguration of a "good roads" movement in this county.

Attorney Guy A. Dyar has been vested with full authority by the District Attorney and State Board of Medical Examiners to prosecute the charges of illegal practicing of medicine in this city without a State license against "Dr." L. T. Sue, a Chinese, who professes to only sell herbs. Sue has been acquitted by one jury and convicted by another, which latter finding was reversed in the upper court on the ground that the complaint was not properly verified. The higher court intimated that its reversal of the lower court's proceedings did not constitute the case "once in jeopardy" for the defendant on that specific charge, and it is upon that complaint, which has been refiled, that Attorney Dyar will seek conviction. Other charges against Sue were dismissed by the District Attorney when Dyar took hold of the cases. At Sue's last trial a number of his "patients" subscribed a large fund for his defense and took an active interest in the proceedings.

SAN JACINTO, RIVERSIDE COUNTY, SURGING AHEAD.

More People Than Ever Buying Land, Setting Out Fruit Orchards and Alfalfa, and Developing Water Supply—Negotiating for a Beet Sugar Factory.

BY E. C. PENTLAND.

IT IS often remarked by those familiar with the situation at San Jacinto a year or so ago, and at the present time, that there has been a great change for the better in progress and activity. It is a change which makes its impress on the stranger who visits San Jacinto, causing a desire to remain and take part in the plans for the future.

New residences have been built in San Jacinto; new business houses have been erected; streets have been smoothed and put in better shape; block after block of cement sidewalks have been constructed; shade trees have been trimmed; dwelling houses have been repainted, and there is manifest a general air of thrift and confidence. More new people have come in, and business is better than ever before.

But these conditions were not brought about by accident. Only one year ago not more than four dozen progressive residents of San Jacinto made a start in advertising the advantages of the city and surrounding country to those seeking homes, and the results have been a steady and substantial growth. Those same men are still in San Jacinto and are ready to do anything in their power to advance its interests. At a recent "boosters'" banquet there was an attendance of nearly eight hundred, which shows how the spirit of progress has taken hold of the residents in San Jacinto, when out of a total population of not more than 1500, 800 will turn out to help the good cause along.

If you want to know anything more about San Jacinto and surrounding country than is told in this article, write to one or more of the following persons, who are among the "live ones" of San Jacinto and near by:

WHERE IS SAN JACINTO?

San Jacinto is 105 miles easterly from Los Angeles, a terminus of a branch Santa Fé Railroad. It has a population of between 1200 and 1500, and is surrounded by a country which has vast possibilities, particularly if men with energy, push and capital continue to invest and locate. There are probably 200,000 acres of tillable land within fifteen miles of San Jacinto, the greater part of which has never been used for anything else than grain growing, or, as they say here, "dry farming." The land is level, it is fertile, and will grow almost anything when water is spread on the surface from irrigation ditches. Underneath the ground are known to be great lakes of water among the gravel formation, at depths ranging from 150 to 250 feet, which will often flow more than to the surface, when tapped by the drill of the well-borer. But it takes time and money to develop a water supply for a country, and although a good beginning has been made at San Jacinto, there are openings for hundreds of men and women, with their families, to locate.

IS SATISFIED.

"I came to San Jacinto a year ago," said Mr. Blankenship, "and engaged in business and also purchased a twenty-acre tract of land, on which I erected a residence. I felt that I would be making no mistake in investing, since the country had undeveloped resources which are sure to attract attention, and I have no cause to regret my decision. There has been an awakening among the residents of San Jacinto during the past year, to the advantages of diversified farming, more than for many years before. We have a climate here that appeals to the man or woman who wants to enjoy life. We have scenery that appeals to the artistic temperament of the most indifferent. These are facts to be taken into consideration when selecting a home. The twenty acres which I purchased are ample to provide me with a comfortable living. We have a class of old residents who have made money farming large tracts of land, and they are slow to be convinced that any other method of handling the soil will result in a profit. But the newcomers, like myself, can content themselves with a small tract, and farm it more carefully. The profits on 200 acres of land, at $10 an acre, or on twenty acres at $100 an acre, are just the same. Using the combination of our sunshine, our water supply for irrigation, and of selected soil, where one man, through his own efforts, can take care of twenty acres in alfalfa or fruit or some similar crop, brings a surer return than depending upon a large acreage and the uncertainties of the natural rainfall. What San Jacinto wants, to cause it to increase in population, is the small farmer, and there are opportunities here in abundance for him. My twenty acres are now planted in barley, the simplest form of farming here, and in six months' time will produce a crop that will pay me $500. I intend planting the same ground to potatoes that will bring me this fall $1200 more. Then I will seed the land to alfalfa, which will bring me next year eight tons to the acre, on nineteen acres. The price of $14 dollars a ton would bring a gross return of $112 an acre, or $80 an acre, net, a yearly profit of $1520, besides which I am living in a house that would rent in Los Angeles for $20 a month. I have the advantages here of schools, churches, good society, telephones, electric and gas lights, and twice a day I can, in three or four hours, be in Los Angeles or at the coast. By driving only a few miles I can reach the mountains, and soon attain an elevation of even 10,000 feet, where snow lies the greater part of the year. The man who is looking for a comfortable home, amidst pleasant surroundings, can find it at San Jacinto. The class of people who are settling in our valley are of a desirable kind. They do not expect to live without work, but they expect a sure reward for the output of their energies, and here they find it."

the kind we want. They are intelligent, they are progressive, and they grasp and appreciate our advantages. Men with capital are coming in, and this looks mighty good to me. They are developing the land and water as it has never been done before. This valley has been overlooked for the past twenty-five years and has, practically, lain dormant. Los Angeles capital and local people are just awakening to the fact that this can be made one of the most productive valleys in Southern California, and Los Angeles investors have been coming here during the past three months in considerable numbers. During the last three months I have brought down from Los Angeles at least fifty persons and they told me it impressed them as being one of the most beautiful valleys they ever saw, and they also acknowledged that the prices of land are much less than other portions of California, considering the natural advantages and the state of development in which the country is now. Nat Goodwin, who is known all over the United States, and has traveled very extensively, has purchased a tract of nearly 1000 acres, with me, and this shows the faith we have in the country. I believe that the San Jacinto Valley will be developed into one of the greatest alfalfa, fruit and sugar-beet districts in the West. There are at least 200,000 acres out this way that can be utilized. It is level, with no obstructions, is fertile, and can be supplied with water by piping. It is this development of water which is going forward now that is to make our valley a veritable garden spot, and provide homes for many thousands of people. This is the country where the man of moderate means can live in comfort and be independent on twenty acres. There is an abundance of land for sale in tracts of five acres upwards. This section of country has been held back by large land-owners, who would not subdivide. But the demand has become so great that they are selling to persons who are subdividing and giving the man of moderate means, who is willing to work, and that is the class of people who are building up California in a substantial way. It is becoming known that the 'opportunities' for 'homes' and investments in California have not all yet been taken up, and the principal reason why I came to San Jacinto was because I found here just what I had been looking for. I prophesy that San Jacinto will double its population in the next two years."

"The inquiries that are coming in to me are so numerous," said the secretary of the San Jacinto Chamber of Commerce, "that it takes more time than I really have to spare to answer them all. These letters come from all parts of the United States, and even from foreign countries, and they are generally from men of moderate means who want to come and make a home. Usually their first statement is: 'I am coming to California.' They have, in many cases, already been here, have become satisfied that they want to live here, and are arranging their affairs to come. I am receiving from four to five of these letters a day, and I answer them all, but I wish I could meet these people personally and show them the San Jacinto Valley from Bothin Heights, since I think I could locate them very quickly. The climate of our State is generally conceded to be all right, but they want to know 'how to make a living,' and that is one of the hardest questions to answer for anyone. There are never two men alike, and what one man might be successful in doing another would be a failure. The three principal industries of the valley are alfalfa, poultry and fruit raising. We have the supply of water, the sunshine, and the soil for many different kinds of farming. Each person who comes to locate must decide for himself. Some of our residents are raising alfalfa hay and selling it, while others feed it to dairy stock or hogs. Some make a living raising oranges, apricots, or other fruits. Some are doing well raising turkeys or chickens, and there is an ostrich farm near here, where there are over 700 of those monster birds. Some are making money in the mercantile business. Everyone who comes to San Jacinto and makes a success becomes a 'booster,' hence we want none to come and fail. But each must take chances. I want everyone to succeed, but I cannot give them such a guarantee, although it is my opinion that local conditions are as favorable here as any place I can think of. There is room for 10,000 families in this part of California, each to own twenty acres of land, and that can be purchased now, on easy terms, for as low as $1500, depending largely upon how far it is from town and a developed supply of water. The cost per acre for developing water is from $15 to $30 an acre. A $1500 pumping plant will usually irrigate 100 acres, which would be at the rate of $15 an acre. Each irrigation costs about 50 cents an acre.

"While we were talking the 'chug-chug' of an automobile was heard in the street, and Mr. Malone said: 'See that man in the machine out there, with the three ladies? Six years ago he did not own a foot of land. He has made $25,000 since then from farming in this valley, now owns at least 700 acres, and rides in an automobile. In order to do this he involved himself heavily at the start, but the profits have pulled him out nicely.'"

CHICKENS AND TURKEYS.

"What do you know about profits in raising chickens and turkeys at San Jacinto?" I asked of O. S. Hofmann.

"I have been told that Dan Myers, who raises from 1000 to 1500 turkeys a year, has done very well. Turkeys are freer here from colds than other places, hence the mortality is much less among the young turkeys. When a turkey reaches the age of six to eight weeks, it is most likely to live through. The average weight of males and females is about fifteen pounds, which, at 25 cents a pound, would be $3.75 each, and 1500 would bring a return of $5625 a year. The cost of feeding is not great when, like Mr. Myers, you raise your own feed. The turkey thrives best on alfalfa and grain. Mr. Myers has been in the business the past dozen years, and has been very successful. There are others engaged in the turkey business, but not so extensively."

"Chicken raising is certainly all right here, as far as healthfulness and laying qualities," continued Mr. Hofmann, "but the high prices of grain have reduced the profits the past year or so. It now costs me about $1.20 a year to feed each hen. During last year I kept an account of the product from fifty hens. The number of eggs received each month was as follows: January, 467 eggs; February, 950; March, 1104; April, 956; May, 587; June, 491; July, 489; August, 345; September, 280; October, 142; November, 128; December, 200—a total for the year of 6132 eggs, or an average of 122 eggs to the hen. The average price of 30 cents a dozen would bring a return of $184, or $3.06 a hen. I fed grain in the morning, a mash and alfalfa at noon, and grain at night. I of lots and acres in and around San Jacinto," I said to a deputy Assessor, who has been in the county for the past fifteen years.

"Business lots, on the main street, for about three blocks, are worth $25 to $35 a front foot; residence lots on the street to the railroad depot sell for $5 to $8 a front foot, and on other streets as low as one dollar a front foot. Acreage, close to town, without improvements, sells for about $250, while further out it can be purchased for much less. You can buy outside lands for as low as $75 an acre, and after developing water and setting it out to alfalfa it will readily sell for $200 an acre. It costs from $10 to $30 an acre for a pumping plant. To these prices you must add for improvements.

WILL RAISE ALFALFA.

"I came here eighteen months ago," said Mr. J. W. Thomas, "and purchased, with my mother, 420 acres of land without a water supply. I intend setting it all out in alfalfa, so that it will be necessary for me to install two large pumping plants. One of them, to cover 300 acres, will cost me about $6000, while the other, to cover 120 acres, will cost about $2500. I have 300 acres in barley this year, and this fall, after the crop is off, will commence leveling the land for seeding to alfalfa. It will cost from $7000 to $8000 for the leveling. I expect to get at least one and a half tons of barley hay to the acre, which will net me at least $10 an acre, or $3000. When I get the 420 acres set to alfalfa, I can depend upon six crops a year, or a total of eight tons to the acre, which, at even $5 a ton profit, will return $40 an acre, or $6800 for the 420 acres. That is interest at 10 per cent. on $168,000, and looks good to me. I have not yet decided whether I will sell the alfalfa as hay or feed it to stock."

MEDICINAL SPRINGS.

There are several medicinal and hot springs in the neighborhood of San Jacinto, and some of them have good hotels, bath houses and pleasure grounds, where go many hundreds of invalids, and those not invalids, and find the visits very beneficial. There are sulphur springs, lithia springs, magnesia springs, with hot baths, Turkish baths, mud baths, etc. The prices range from $10 to $20 a week, which includes the bathing privileges. At one of these resorts is a tunnel into the mountain, through a rock formation, the rocks being coated with a soda-like substance, the internal heat of the tunnel being so great that one is soon sweating freely. Many remarkable cures of rheumatism, dropsy, and similar diseases are reported. Automobile parties make the springs one of the points on their visits through the valley. They are well worth a visit.

DEVELOPED WATER SUPPLY.

"I came to San Jacinto a year ago last December," said W. J. Newenham, "and purchased, with other parties, 800 acres adjoining San Jacinto, but have sold all but 160 acres upon which I put a pumping plant that cost me abut $3500, including 5000 feet of cement and steel pipe, for irrigation. This land I have set out in alfalfa, and am now cutting my first crop. I do not know what the yield will be. The well is 148 feet deep, and the water flows six feet above the surface. I pump 200 inches of water a minute. I also put in a pumping plant on the 360 acres I sold to the Cawston Ostrich Farm, which cost about $6000 and raises 175 inches of water, the lift being fifteen feet. With this they have an abundance of water for the whole tract."

WHERE RAMONA LIVES.

On the Soboba Indian reservation, near San Jacinto, where is said to be living the true Ramona, the government has installed pumping plants, so that the level lands can be put into alfalfa, and the Indians have a supply of water for the lands allotted to them. These reservation Indians are self-supporting, states Supt. Stanley, and in twenty years will have the land as their own. The first body of alfalfa will be irrigated from the plants this year. A cement pipe line will be put in over all the lands next summer.

MORE WATER DEVELOPED.

"I came to San Jacinto in February, 1909," said J. S. Jackson, "and purchased 260 acres of very fertile land, upon which I have installed a pumping plant that cost me about $12,000, and delivers 200 inches of water, which is even more than necessary. I also placed 15,000 feet of underground steel pipe for the distribution, which cost me about $16,000 more. I will put the whole tract in alfalfa, there being 150 acres in now, the balance to be put in this fall. I also bought the Byrne ranch of 4000 acres, in November, last year, and sold it in January to parties who will develop water and sell it to homeseekers in small tracts. My opinion is that San Jacinto Valley has a great future, and will show a greater development during the next few years than any other section of Southern California. The talked-of railroad through San Jacinto, to connect with the Southern Pacific at Redlands, a distance from here of twenty-eight miles, will open up a country which at present has no railroad facilities. There are probably half a million acres of land, which is now used only for dry farming, where a major portion can be made more fertile by the development of water. The one item of sugar-beet raising will gain a great impetus through the construction of this road and a beet-sugar factory will follow. It will provide homes for at least 5000 more families in this section."

PIPES FOR IRRIGATING.

The firm in San Jacinto engaged in supplying cement and steel pipe for irrigating systems informed me that the demand for this method of distributing the water for the crops is largely on the increase, the business having assumed large proportions. Where the pressure is not too great, cement conduits are used, usually about twelve inches in diameter, with valves every thirty feet. Such a system costs about 33 cents a foot, while where the pressure is greater, steel pipes are laid, the average cost per foot being 65 cents. The cement pipes are everlasting and on that account are cheaper than any other kind, and require no repairs.

LUMBER SUPPLY.

There are two sawmills in the mountains where about fifty men are employed, the output being about 3,000,000 feet a year. The timber is pine and is used locally in the manufacture of fruit boxes.

NOTED ACTOR INVESTS.

Nat Goodwin, the noted actor, was in San Jacinto during the time of my visit, and made a purchase of nearly 1000 acres of land near the town. I asked Mr. Goodwin this question: "You have traveled over the greater part of the world, you have seen every country and been among many peoples, and had opportunities to remain had been singing the praises of the San Jacinto Valley, not only of the prospective values in making an investment, but also the natural beauties of the situation, until, in self-defense, I was compelled to come out and see for myself. As he and I stood on the terrace of Bothin Heights, southeast of here about a mile, I thought I never saw anything more enchanting than the view over the valley, with the towering, snow-capped San Jacinto Mountains in the background. I have traveled through Switzerland and the Austrian Tyrol, besides other scenic countries, but I had never seen anything like this, and I thought it the most beautiful of all. I returned to my home and told the story to my wife, who would not believe it, so I had to bring her out and let her see for herself. She is now as enthusiastic as I. I have found the land, the water and the sunshine, the very combination I had been looking for. It is my intention to make of this purchase one of the show farms of the San Jacinto Valley and of Southern California, and it will be my future home. I will set out at once 300 acres in oranges, lemons and grapefruit, and will add 300 acres to the 200 acres of alfalfa on the place. I will commence at once to beautify the land. There are two good farm-houses, one built of brick, but I have selected a sightly location, about 700 feet above the valley, and will erect there a residence after my own ideas of what a home should be. A large spring of water flows out of the mountainside, at an elevation of about 1000 feet, and I will develop electric power enough to light all the farm buildings. I will conduct a modern dairy of about fifty cows on the place, and devote the rest of it to the alfalfa and orange production. There will be beautiful driveways constructed through the orange groves and other fruit orchards to my residence on the heights. This can be seen for twenty miles across the valley. About next September I will resume my theatrical work and may not be back to San Jacinto for a year. The work of improvement will begin at once."

The price paid for the 879 acres, with all the improvements and the farm implements, and even the furniture in the houses, was about $90,000, and, considering what the income will be, the purchase was a wise one. There will be a crop next week of about $1500 worth of alfalfa, and there will be six or more such crops on the 200 acres during the year.

MANY GEMS.

E. F. Green, a painter in San Jacinto, has spent his spare time for the last three years tramping through the mountains, distant ten to thirty miles from here, prospecting for gem mines. Hot Water All Over Your House

At Any Minute, Day or Night

At last, a water-heater that solves the quick-cheap-hot-water problem, a heater with almost human brains, a heater that saves four-fifths of your hot-water expense, that saves you every bit of $73 a year, that does not store water, but heats it, that burns gas only when the hot water actually pours from the faucet, that heats water instantaneously—big rivers of it, that gives piping-hot water from any faucet in your house from basement to attic, at any minute of the day or night, a heater that heats its own water automatically without anyone's attention, and makes the old kitchen boiler a positive inconvenience and a back number.

The heater is the "Humphrey Automatic Gas Water-Heater," a marvel of ingenuity and a necessity to everyone who runs a house.

The "Humphrey Automatic" never gets out of order; there are no plumbing bills to pay. Its cost is inconsiderable, it quickly pays for itself, and is a marvel of ingenuity, a money-saver, gas-saver, time-saver, a perfect beauty, and will make your home a paradise.

SAN JACINTO.

of the Soboba Indian reservation. Mr. Green stated that there are enough ledges of gem mines to employ 100 or more men were they to be fully developed. These mines are generally on the top of the rocky peaks, at elevations of from 3000 to 5000 feet, and very difficult of access. He goes out with a supply of provisions for a month and does his assessment work on the claims he is holding, and often does not see a person to speak to in the whole time, but can see people moving around three or four miles away in the valley below. He makes enough on each of these trips, by bringing out gems in the rough and having them dressed, to pay him quite well. It is very interesting to hear him tell of the experiences he has had in the mountains. You do not have to go to Africa to get away from mankind. Deer, wild cats, fox and coyotes are quite numerous, with an occasional mountain lion. It is in these mountains, somewhere, that the "Peg-Leg Smith" gold mines are supposed to be located, although no one has ever yet found them. Smith is supposed to have been killed by the Yuma Indians many years ago, and the secret of the location of the mine, from which he brought so much gold, was lost. At least a dozen men are out in the mountains from San Jacinto prospecting from year to year, and it is the opinion of Mr. Green that there will be some good mines developed. Some of the gem ledges are sixty feet wide and half a mile long, and no one knows what treasures they may contain. The prospectors do only what the law requires to hold their claims, and that is not much toward development. I asked Mr. Green why he did not get capital interested by incorporating, but he said: "Not any stock company for me. I can make more money working the mines myself. My way may be slow, but it is sure."

FARMERS SHOULD ORGANIZE.

J. D. McDiarmid, who has lived in the vicinity of San Jacinto for the past twenty years, and is very aggressive in his ideas, says he has always maintained that the farmers should organize among themselves for the marketing of their products, and dispense as far as possible with the services of the commission merchants. His plan is for the fruit grower, the general farmer and the dairyman to each have a local organization for the marketing of their crops, and these several associations elect delegates to a central organization, similar to the operations of the orange growers. Mr. McDiarmid stated that when the railroads called twelve tons a carload he could then ship at carload rates, and get low freight rates, but they have increased the size of the cars to twenty and even forty tons, so that he can no longer take advantage of the rates made for carload lots. "If we would organize," said he, "and go to the managers of the three railroads operating from near here into Los Angeles, and pool our products, agreeing to ship a certain number of carloads a year, over a certain road, we would probably get concessions in the rating of the freight that would be in the nature of a lowering of our rates. What the farmers here want is a rate of freight that will give them more profit than they are now getting, and it can be secured, I think, by combination, and in no other way. We could at least try, and I would be willing to pool my products, with others, if by so doing it would result in the general good. If we should go to any one of the three railroads and say to them: 'There are 250 carloads of products in this valley that must be shipped out, and we will give it all to the railroad that will, for one year, give us the best terms,' that railroad would find a way to make better rates to get that freight, even if it had to pay the local rate to the junction of the three lines. My idea is that we should try to get a better freight rate for our products, and the way to do it is to have the railroads bid on the freight."

COST $20 AN ACRE.

H. R. Kumler has 250 acres of land near San Jacinto, of which 150 acres is now being seeded to alfalfa. His pumping plant for this part of the land cost him, he says, $1500, and will deliver enough water for the land he is seeding. He expects to put in the balance of the land this fall, and may increase the horse power of his pumping plants for more water. This pumping plant is using two, out of his five, wells, the water being elevated thirty feet through steel pipes that cost him $2000.

OSTRICH FARM.

About two miles from San Jacinto is an ostrich farm where are raised several hundred ostriches each year. There are now 700 and the increase this year will probably run the number up to nearly 1000. The eggs are now being set and in forty-two days will be hatched, the incubators holding sixty eggs at once. The eggs weigh nearly five pounds each. Alfalfa and grain are fed, the quantity they eat at present being nearly two tons a day. A baby ostrich is worth $50, while some of the finer grown ones are worth $500 and $600.

Franchises for Electric Railway Asked at Hemet and San Jacinto. School Site Chosen.

SAN JACINTO, April 9.—Applications for an electric railway franchise were introduced simultaneously this week before the Supervisors and the Trustees of both San Jacinto and Hemet. They were made by J. S. Jackson, a large land owner here. The announcement caused much excitement in San Jacinto and Hemet and people are looking for a boom in land values. Recently a party of local surveyors ran preliminary lines between San Jacinto and Hemet. The line will pass through Valle Vista, Hemet, San Jacinto, Lakeview and Moreno and from the latter point either to Redlands or to Riverside. The distance to either place is about the same and it will probably rest with the cities named as to which will get the road. Already the Riverside Chamber of Commerce and Business Men's Association have taken action to bring the road that way if possible.

O. C. Laizure, superintendent of Spanish mission work for Southern California in the Methodist Church, is here, and reports that on Thursday a site was purchased for the proposed Methodist Spanish Industrial School. The Cox ranch of 125 acres, situated eight miles from Corona, has been purchased, at a cost of $12,500. The property has eighty acres of alfalfa and a modern pumping plant with a capacity of seventy-five inches. It is considered by experts to be a bargain. The Purchasing Committee

C. Z. Sheppherd has sold his two-story residence and acreage property on South Central avenue to F. W. Stearns of Long Beach, for $4500. Mr. Stearns is in San Jacinto with his family and may decide to locate here. Mr. Sheppherd receives in part payment city property at Long Beach.

Charles U. Long, who was nominated for City Marshal by the Citizens' Anti-Saloon Convention, has withdrawn from the race and asks that his friends vote for H. L. Gandy.

Mrs. Mary VanDusen has sold thirty head of milk cows to S. S. Starr of Imperial, the purchase price being $835. The cows were driven to Beaumont for shipment to Imperial Valley.

A. G. Hubbard, capitalist of Redlands, was here Thursday and it is rumored that the gentleman's visit here pertained to the proposed electric line for this section of the county. Mr. Hubbard declined to make any statement upon the subject, declaring that he was not sufficiently in touch with the situation to discuss the matter. It is thought that the gentleman is backing the move financially.

J. H. Cresmer of Riverside, who has the contract for the new High School building, was in consultation with the school trustees Thursday relative to the new structure. It is announced that work on the building will be commenced next month.

Miss Libby of Riverside addressed the pupils of the public schools this week on the subject of birds and on Wednesday in Miss Adda Light's room an Audubon Society was organized among the pupils.

A union anti-saloon mass meeting will be held at the Christian Church sides seem confident.

Mrs. H. K. Smith and Mrs. M. D. Reed are in attendance this week at the State Missionary Society of the Congregational Church in Redlands.

A. E. Buck and family were in town from Auld Thursday and went to their ranch home in a brand new Buick automobile, purchased from a local agency.

William Hicks, who last week purchased the Hornback 165-acre ranch, will at once plant 15,000 eucalyptus trees on the property.

'Twas a Good Shot.

Bill Jones was an eccentric character, a local justice of the peace in a South Carolina town. He was exceedingly tall—so attenuated, in fact, that but for his hat he would not have cast a shadow. One night a number of fellow bon vivants joined him in a symposium, and many mint juleps were consumed. One of the party unsteadily produced a revolver. It was accidentally discharged, and a bullet struck Bill Jones in the leg.

Conscience-stricken and wabbly with excitement and juleps the owner of the weapon hastened to the home of the nearest doctor and pulled the door bell.

At length the physician, who had himself been spending a riotous evening, stuck his head from the second-story window.

"Whazza mazzer?" he demanded, thickly.

"I just shot Bill Jones in the leg," replied the man below.

"Shot Bill Jones in the leg?" repeated the doctor, wonderingly.

"Ash what I said," returned the offender. "Sho' Bill Jones in the leg."

Scrofula

Impure and Tainted Blood Cured by Liquocide.

LITTLE GIRL'S REMARKABLE CURE.

"Several months ago I wrote to you for Liquocide which I wanted to give to a little girl who had hat several physicians pronounced 'scrofula,' and who had failed to even relieve the little sufferer. Before the first bottle was finished, the swelling was entirely gone, and at this writing she is entirely well. I will write you a letter for publication some time in the future. I was in Charleston when I commenced using the Liquocide, and doctors had utterly failed to even check the disease, and said if the child recovered in two years, it would be remarkable. I don't think I used more than six bottles, and there is no sign of the trouble, only a few scars where the swellings were. There is no medicine like Liquocide. I will always recommend it wherever I go." Respectfully, Miss L. A. Newson, Cades, S. C., August 29, 1906.

THREE YEARS LATER. CURE CONFIRMED.

"I intended writing you sooner, but I was way from home. As regards the Liquocide, nothing you can add to my letter in praise of your wonderful medicine, will be too much. Since curing my little adopted daughter of 'scrofula,' it it has cured me of rheumatism after losing the use of my arm. It is all and more than you claim it to be. I never fail to tell what it will do." Respectfully Miss L. A. Newson, 130 Market st., Charleston, S. C., Nov. 3, 1909.

These letters are merely specimens of many thousands we receive unsolicited from grateful patients. Many more telling of remarkable cures of these as well as other germ diseases, will be sent anywhere on request.

cleanses and purifies the blood because of its power to kill germs. It is not like other germicides, which are poisons when taken internally, but a harmless germicide which acts as a tonic.

Liquocide is not a mixture of drugs. It is a scientific product, and the formula is printed on the label of every bottle. The treatment is both local and internal. Countless cured ones know from experience that it does what nothing else can do. Its effects are so certain and so immediate that we issue a certificate of guarantee which covers a two months' test at our financial risk.

Don't treat scrofula in harmful and ineffective ways.

If you are a sufferer, please send your name and address and ask for Book No. 82. We will send it and also our liberal guarantee certificate, which is free from technicalities and restrictions. Please send today; our offer places you under no obligation whatever.

Liquocide costs 50c and $1.

BIG DREDGER MUCH NEEDED.

Board of Engineers Advise Its Construction.

Prohibitive Prices Charged by the Contractors.

Machine Would Be Kept Busy in Local Harbor.

An important feature of the bill now in Congress, providing for an appropriation of $390,000 for dredging two channels in the inner harbor is the question of providing another government dredger. In the estimates furnished by the Board of Engineers, $170,000 is allowed for the construction of a powerful dredger.

The rivers and harbors bill will be pushed by Senator Flint, and with the numerous indorsements it has received, there seems little doubt but that the appropriation will be made. The plan of the government engineers is for one channel, 200 feet wide and twenty feet deep beginning at the turning basin and extending in an northeasterly direction to the east line of the east basin, and another similar channel extending from the turning basin to the north line of the west basin.

In his report to the War Department, Lieut. Leeds, in charge of all local government engineering work, sets forth some of the needs of the inner harbor.

"There are no terminal or transfer facilities at present in the west basin," stated Lieut. Leeds. "This is due to the fact that all access by water is at present prevented by the trestles of the Southern Pacific and Pacific Electric Railroads. The Los Angeles Harbor Commission has, however, requested that these be ordered removed or drawbridges erected.

MUNICIPAL WHARVES.

"The city proposes to establish municipal wharves in the west basin, and a direct highway suited to motor trucks being constructed from the business center of Los Angeles to the west basin."

In speaking of the east basin, Lieut. Leeds' report touches upon the project of the Banning Company to make Mormon Island a great railroad terminus.

"In view of the fact that the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors has recommended the deepening of the entrance of the harbor to thirty feet, there will be no government plant available for dredging these channels until the completion of the thirty-foot project," continues the report.

"The cost of another dredge of such capacity as would be necessary is estimated to be $170,000. It may be argued that on completion of either of these projects that the government might have on hand an idle dredge. There is a great amount of dredging not included in these projects necessary for the development of this harbor. If not done by the government, it will certainly be undertaken by the city of Los Angeles or private corporations. It seems probable that the city or private corporations would be only too glad of an opportunity to obtain a dredge from the government at a reasonable rental.

HOLD UP UNCLE SAM.

"The history of dredging contracts on this coast shows attempts by contractors to obtain from the government extortionate prices for dredging. It is extensively rumored here that all the dredging companies on the coast have a mutual understanding, if they are not actually combined. In at least two cases private interests here have found it more advantageous to construct their own dredges.

"If therefore the government has available a dredge, it would more than pay for itself by obtaining reasonable figures when necessary to do work by contract."

Lieut.-Col. John Biddle of San Francisco, division engineer of the government Engineering Corps, has this to add to Lieut. Leeds' recommendation:

"While generally in favor of doing work by contract, as being more economical and satisfactory, the situation on the Coast of California is such that satisfactory bids cannot usually be obtained. There is no doubt that economy will result from the purchase of a dredge for Los Angeles harbor and from the large amount of dredging that will be necessary to develop this harbor and possibly San Diego, this dredge can be kept continuously at work."

INDORSES REPORTS.

"Col. William T. Russell, senior member of the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors, indorses the reports of the Lieut.-Col. Biddle and Lieut. Leeds.

"The commerce of Los Angeles harbor has been increasing in extent and value for a number of years," he states. "It appears that the local authorities are to expend large sums in the near future in a comprehensive development of wharves and terminals, looking toward a further increase in traffic and a general expansion of business at this locality.

"There has been a rapid development at Los Angeles and vicinity in recent years and the steps being taken by that city and by private parties for the betterment and extension of harbor facilities will probably assure a decided increase of commerce in the future.

"The Board believes that reasonably prospective benefits are sufficient to justify the general government in undertaking this work, and it therefore recommends the adoption of the project outlined by the district officer at an estimated cost of $390,000."

W.C.T.U. DELEGATES ELECTED.

The following delegates have been elected to represent the Central W.C.T.U. of this city at the Whittier convention on April 20: Mmes. Upham, Patterson, Coke, Lewis, Kenney, Fredericks, Craig, Boyd and Hutton. A social, under the auspices of this union, will be held at the home of Mrs. Hutton, No. 1007 West Twenty-first street, on Monday evening.

An Enthusiast Regarding Cats.

Perhaps the greatest enthusiast the world over regarding cats is Mrs. W. Eames Colburn, wife of a Chicago banker. Mrs. Colburn's blue ribbon cats alone number thirty-five, and she has a collection of less patrician pussies which receive as much loving care. Each of the eighty odd cats in her possession is known to its mistress by name and pedigree, and each of them shows by its delighted "meows" and purrings it also recognizes its benefactress. For her prize cats Mrs. Colburn recently had built a modern 7-room house with every luxury known to architect and designer. It is fitted up with specially made brass beds, richly hung with silken draperies and lace curtains, each just big enough to hold one of the blue-

DUPED?

EX-MAYOR HIT BY FAILURE.

BANKRUPTCY OF COLE BLOW TO OLD FRIEND.

Harper Left to Hold the Empty Sack, According to Persons Who Should Know, and It May Cost Him Well on to a Hundred Thousand Dollars.

The filing by Nathan Cole, Jr., of a petition in bankruptcy in San Francisco, as related in The Times yesterday, adds another link to the misfortunes of former Mayor Harper, according to men who were closely associated with the latter in both his business and political affairs. It is understood that Cole's financial failure will still further involve the ex-Mayor to the tune of about $80,000, as Harper and H. C. Buhoun were on Cole's notes to that extent, and Buhoun four months ago also filed a petition in bankruptcy either in Chicago or St. Louis. Harper declines to discuss the matter in any of its phases.

"A. C. Harper has been left by his erstwhile friend, Cole, to hold the empty sack, and it will cost him well on to $100,000 to have the privilege," said a close friend of the city's former executive yesterday. "Harper was used by Cole to the queen's taste, and about everybody who knew anything at all about the situation, was well aware of this except Harper himself. It will take A. C. five years of the best hustling he can do to meet claims that he is not responsible for, but indirectly assumed helping Cole in one way and another. Instead of Cole and Buhoun standing by A. C., they seem to have hurried to look after their own interests first. Harper has been the only man in the lot."

Many rumors are in local circulation relative to Cole's business and political activities. His enemies are reviving stories reflecting upon his management never satisfactorily accounted for. Cole always stamped this story as false. Severe criticism is given his methods of securing money from his friends for investment in the sugar company.

Denial was given yesterday to the report that the Democratic State conference will ask Cole to resign from the National Committee as California's representative, although the men interested in the movement asserted last night that such a step will be undertaken. Cole is a delegate to the conference from Alameda county.

WHAT SHALL WE DO WITH ROOSEVELT?

What shall we do with Roosevelt
  Through the strenuous years at hand,
What shall we do with this hunter bold,
  This statesman, strong and grand.

What shall we do with Roosevelt,
  Who holds in bonds of steel
A people's love and confidence
  For his truth in word and deal?

What shall we do with Roosevelt,
  Great foe of wrong and greed,
Where can we give him fittest place,
  How fill our greatest need?

This should we do with Roosevelt,
  Our mightiest of men,
When, home from honors in all lands,
  He lives with us again.

Grant him that highest title,
  Our nation can extend,
Give him that highest title,
  Humanity's best friend.

Make him our great commander
  To strive on fields of peace
For unity of nations,
  That war and waste may cease.

Bid him all nations gather
  And 'neath flags of peace unfurled,
Found "The Parliament of Man,"
  "The Federation of the World."

"JERRY-MANDERED."

WHOLE THING AS POOH-BAH.

One-Man Power in Council Dominating Force.

Government by Committee Is Slap at Mayor.

How Andrews Manipulates in Legislative Deals.

When hunting Good Government in tabloid form take a dose of "Uncle Jerry" Andrews, Councilman-at-large, representing the former municipal division known as the Fourth Ward.

Gradually it is dawning on the whole administration that authority is gravitating, or has already gravitated, into "Uncle Jerry's" hands, and he is now looked on as the Pooh-Bah of the City Hall.

Being one-seventh of the (now) total membership of the Council, he is also the pacemaker on the roll call, and at least eleven-fourteenths of the Council committees.

An effort to compute mathematically his official status would be as difficult as to answer that ancient complexity: "How old is Ann?"

If a pyramid of the seven little Goo-Goo Councilmen was formed "Uncle Jerry" would be the base and support his six colleagues without a long breath.

The capstone of his official Pooh-Bah structure was placed last Tuesday when he harpooned the Mayor's veto of the brickyard ordinance and demonstrated, to the Mayor at least, that the rule of Committee Integrity in the Council is more absolute than any despotism that has ever been known on the Pacific Coast; or, perhaps in all the Old World.

BACKS HIM UP.

Unanimously the Council backed his scheme to drive a brickyard summarily from its property and thus confiscate something that is objectionable to a tract of land in which Andrews is part owner. The Legislative Committee reported unanimously—Andrews is chairman of the committee that acted on the question. And the rule of the Council is to obey the mandate of all committees. In this case the Legislative Committee made the favorable report—and it happens that Andrews, Betkouski and Gregory compose this committee.

Now there are only forty-three places on the fourteen committees of the Council. Of these memberships Andrews has eleven, Betkouski eight and Gregory nine. Thus twenty-eight of the forty-three memberships are in the hands of three members.

O'Brien ranks next with six memberships. Washburn has five and Williams four. By electing Lusk president to succeed Works he has been eliminated from membership, except for the general rule that the president is a member, ex-officio, of all committees.

Andrews, Betkouski and Gregory, therefore, have cornered the committee power of the Council. They control the Public Buildings, Fire and Water, Boulevards, Land, Supplies, Legislation, Water Supply, Bridges, Public Welfare and Health and Morals committees.

Andrews and Williams control the Finance and Supplies committees.

SOME HORSE POWER.

Here is the new list of committees and the distribution of power:

Finance—Washburn, Andrews, Williams.

Public Buildings—Betkouski, Andrews, O'Brien, Gregory.

Sewers—O'Brien, Williams, Andrews.

Fire and Water—Andrews, Betkouski, Gregory.

Boulevards—Gregory, O'Brien, Andrews.

Land—Gregory, Betkouski, O'Brien.

Supplies—Williams, Andrews, Betkouski.

Legislation — Andrews, Betkouski, Gregory.

Gas and Light—Betkouski, Washburn.

Water Supply—Andrews, Gregory, O'Brien.

Bridges—O'Brien, Andrews, Gregory.

Harbor—Betkouski, Williams, Washburn.

Public Welfare—Washburn, Betkouski, Andrews, Gregory.

Health and Morals—Washburn, Gregory, Andrews, O'Brien.

Can you beat it in Tammany? Here is an effort to demonstrate Good Government by Council control in committees. It finds analogy in the govern-in the creation of Aldermanic committees and their control of them.

A "GOOD" DESPOT.

It would be an affront to Good Government to suspect that any pernicious result might come from the distribution of power as it has been made in the Council. Any such intention is indignantly denied and a legislative despotism, whether concentrated in "Uncle Jerry" or any one else, is hostile to all the ideals of the Good Government administration.

But the Council has not lost the lesson taught by Works when he was ruling with an iron hand—that the Council is the supreme governing body of the municipality and that it has no flagmen or safety gates at crossings. The Mayor found this rule out last Tuesday. In effect the unwritten rule of the Council is to support the recommendations of all committees.

Why? E Pluribus Unum!

If the committees are to have authority at all it must be without appeal. Otherwise the Council will be in constant turmoil overturning the work of the committees. A theory of impeccability must be established and the action of each committee supported. This means that, right or wrong, the bulk of the Council's business will be cleared in the committees and the legislative action as a whole will be merely perfunctory. It also means congestion in committees, heedlessness, delay and error.

That condition has not been missed by those having dealings with the Council. The interests that opposed the sumptuary measure called an "occupation tax" ordinance found that the real power was "Uncle Jerry." So have many others.

HE'S A "PACEMAKER."

"Uncle Jerry" prides himself that he is the "pacemaker" of the Council roll-call and therefore pardons himself for loquacity, lugubriousness, and sometimes almost lachrymose pathos when he speaks of the "poor people." His clarion tones have challenged the bankers, the brewers, the corporations and the realty interests—and yet he is a banker, has corporation interests, and has realty interests. He cannot be accused of having brewery interests except that he wants to work them for high license.

A camel can go eight days without a drink, but "Uncle Jerry" can go on perpetually; so, "a bas le brewerie!"

Until last Tuesday the Mayor thought he had something to do with legislation, but "Uncle Jerry," posing as "pacemaker" for the roll-call (he is first, alphabetically first,) declared that the Mayor had no right to "differ in judgment" with the Council, which is the supreme governmental control, but is merely to "correct mistakes."

Assuming that "Uncle Jerry" was uttering the will of the Council the other members voted unanimously to overthrow the Mayor's veto of the brickyard ordinance. The Mayor is to search for misspelled words and commas upside down!

LEGISLATIVE PATHS.

So it is that all legislative roads lead to "Uncle Jerry" and he is working fourteen hours a day juggling the business that comes through the Council hopper. He is today with the Supplies Committee, tomorrow with another and every day uttereth speech and every night sheweth knowledge.

He and Betkouski and Williams are now trimming the city's pay roll—or trying to. They haven't reached a result yet, but they are estimating official skill and merit on the basis of private business and the result may be a sweeping reduction of all salaries. But this will not be before July 1, it is said, because of the fact that two Council seats are in danger in the $30,000 Plant-Works election in June.

It is not taking the people long to discover how the power is being concentrated in the hands of three or four Councilmen, one of whom is notorious-

WORK FOR CHILDREN.

Humane Society Hears Interesting Report, and Arranges for Annual Meeting and Election.

At Thursday's meeting of the Los Angeles Humane Society for Children a report made by Capt. F. E. Gray, humane officer, indicates the wide scope and great usefulness of the work accomplished. The officer's report covered the month of March, and showed 104 cases reported and investigated, involving 59 boys and 55 girls; 58 children were relieved, 24 warnings given, 8 were placed in private homes, 7 in institutions, and 7 were returned to their parents.

A girl of 15 years was sent to her mother in Council Bluffs, Ia., and a boy and girl were sent to their father in New Orleans. The humane officer and the district visitor, Mrs. Virginia Heap, made 363 calls during the month, the latter keeping in touch with all the girls in care of the society. One boy was sent to the Eldredge Home for the Feeble-Minded; a little boy whose mother died in the County Hospital was sent to a home; a little girl whose father was a confirmed drunkard was placed in a home by order of Judge Wilbur.

An inebriate mother who underwent three months' treatment at the True-love Home was released on one year's probation and placed in a home where she can work and keep her child; a man who abandoned his family, leaving a wife and two children destitute, was placed on probation and ordered by the Superior Court to pay $15 a month for their support. Another man was placed in jail to await trial, under $2000 bond, for failing to provide for his wife and children. On a former complaint of the same kind against this fellow, the bail was placed so low that his wife sold their cow to obtain his release.

The Board of Trustees also fixed upon May 4 as the date for the annual meeting, which will be held at the Hotel Alexandria. A committee consisting of Mrs. Marion Welsh, Mrs. Fred Hooker-Jones and M. C. Adler have arrangements for the meeting well under way, and expect to announce an entertaining programme. The Executive Committee consists of John C. Austin (president,) M. C. Adler (treasurer,) C. C. Desmond, E. J. Lickley, Dr. Helen Woodroffe, Mrs. F. E. Fay, Mrs. Fred Hooker-Jones, Mrs. H. R. Boynton, Mrs. J. B. Carpenter, Mrs. Marion Welsh. Following the election of officers and the transaction of other business at the annual meeting, the board will hold a reception, to which the public is invited.

CANTATA WELL RENDERED.

An amateur production of "The Haymakers," an operatic cantata written by George F. Root, was repeated for the third time within the past fortnight at the Y.M.C.A. auditorium on Friday evening, the occasion being "open house" at the association. The chorus consists of members of the "J. O.C." and "We Boys" Sunday-school classes of the First M. E. Church, and include: Misses Neva and Esther Lawrence, Misses Hattie Brown, Clara Boecker, Anastasia Powell, Lida Biddle and Mrs. Frank E. Loucks; Messrs. William Wilson, George Ziegler, Frank Shirley, Harry Marple, George Moore, Perrin Heaverin and Clifford Loucks. The solo parts were taken as follows: "Farmer," Frank E. Loucks; "William," the farmer's son, William McNaughton; "John," the field hand, Fred Littooy; "Snipkins," a young man from the city, Benjamin F. Wayne, Jr.; "Mary" and "Ann," the farmer's daughters, Misses Nan Fallis and Marie Olsen; "Dairy Maid," Miss Gladys Hill. The parts were all well taken.

NO SAFES IN TURKEY.

Precious Documents Kept in Exposed Places Because the Prophet Said So.

A Constantinople dispatch says all Moslemdom is fearfully wrought up over the proposition to provide the Ministry of Charities with safes and other burglar-proof paraphernalia. The government thinks safes are in order because 50,000 Turkish pounds entrusted to the Ministry are gone. No one knows where; likewise a number of important documents. The Minister says he can't help these losses since he is obliged by custom to keep money in wooden boxes and documents in linen sacks.

"Why obliged?" queried the government.

"Because the prophet said so."

The government indulged in some language concerning the prophet that wouldn't look well in print. Then ordered a couple of large safes and sent them to the Charity Minister. The officials in charge received the cargo without a murmur, but refused to put the money and documents behind the iron doors, since such "was the law of Mohammed."

The government threatened, whereupon the Sheik of Islam, the Turkish Pope, came to the rescue of the Charity Minister and upheld his action. At the same time, the principal clerics all over the empire began bombarding the Cabinet by letter and telegram, imploring it, in the name of religion, to take away the safes. There have prentices in the shops. At San Bernardino, Albuquerque and Richmond are schools of about twenty-five apprentices each, while smaller schools are maintained at Bakersfield and Needles.

The apprentices in these school are under regular pay and are constantly under the direction of student instructors in the shops, as well as competent instructors in the drafting room. Two hours a day or more is spent in the drafting room by each student, for which he receives regular pay.

The apprentice system occupies a four-year course, the students being paid on a sliding scale for each six months work, beginning with the boys at $1.20 per day for the first six months and ending with $2.20 per day for the eighth six month period. After the expiration of the apprenticeship, the boys are given a bank account bonus of 5 cents per day for the first year's work in the course, 10 cents for the second year's work, and 15 cents a day for the third and fourth years of study. This gives the young graduates in the mechanical department a solid bank account shortly after finishing the course.

Aside from the regular pay, the students are placed upon a bonus system which enables them to earn during their study period from $1 to $20 per month additional wage. The work of a master mechanic is listed as 100 per cent., and after the students attain an efficiency of 67 per cent. they begin to earn this bonus. The result is that one man, whose salary on the regular schedule would be about $60, for the month of March, was capable of winning a bonus of $90. This man's name is T. N. Jacobs, and while his salary check was only $66.74, his earnings totaled $162.64.

The apprentice instruction in the schoolroom includes arithmetic, drafting and elementary mechanical engineering. In the shop the practical work is carried on under able instructors. The general supervisors of the apprentices for the system is located in Topeka, Kan., and his name is Frank Thomas—one of the best mechanics in the service of the company.

Great care is taken in selecting the applicants for the apprenticeships. The sons of employés are naturally given preference, but before they are accepted they must furnish full references. As a result of the system's operation the Santa Fé is obtaining some of the brightest boys in the country for its service.

PENNSYLVANIA TOO.

The Pennsylvania system, which is closely allied with the Santa Fé, has adopted the Santa Fé system and has added to it, for it has arranged with the Pennsylvania State College to send professors to the school at Altoona for the purpose of giving two days a week to the instruction of the apprentices.

The first university class will be composed of apprentices of the fourth year, who are ready to graduate. This class will be optional with the student, but after registering attendance will be compulsory. This class will be limited to thirty students.

DEMOCRATS NOT IN HARMONY.

COUNTY DELEGATION FAILS TO REACH AGREEMENT.

After Two Hours of Oratory It Is Decided to Hold Caucuses Before Attempting to Vote as a Unit at State Conference—Resolutions Are Adopted.

After two hours of oratory yesterday morning, the Los Angeles county delegation to the Democratic State conference to be held here next week, decided that it would be necessary to have several other caucuses before there would be any probability of their ever voting the 110 delegates as a unit. There was difference of opinion as to the advisability of the conference naming candidates for the various State offices, although the prevailing sentiment was manifestedly in favor of such action.

The conference was held at Blanchard Hall. Police Commissioner Wellborn presided and Lou Guernsey officiated as secretary. There were addresses breathing of harmony, down-with-the-S.-P., Democracy forever, and the usual conventional oratorical efforts, the contributors to the entertainment including Joe Simons, T. E. Gibbon, T. H. Kirk, R. G. Loucks, W. L. Porterfield, A. M. Norton, Jeff Chandler, Mattison B. Jones, L. A. Handley, W. T. Harris, W. L. Moore, Timothy Spellacy, C. F. McNutt, J. D. Roche and Dan Neuhart.

The following resolutions were adopted and no other action taken, although it had been expected that the delegation would choose its chairman:

Whereas, the "Act to provide for and regulate primary elections," commonly known as the "Direct Primary Law," is not, in the form enacted at the last session of the California Legislature, as satisfactory in its provisions, as the people of the State desire, but is a step in the right direction; and, inasmuch as events have indicated that it was apparently adopted in its present form for the purpose of discrediting the "Direct Primary" principle, and of making it unpopular by making nominations for office under it difficult unless candidates are backed by a large organization, or are men independently wealthy; and

Whereas, the delegates from Los Angeles county to the Democratic conference realize that the imperfections of the present primary law seriously impair its usefulness; and

Whereas, the Democratic party has always been, and now is, the party of the people, and is an advocate of a genuine "Direct Primary Law," and does not desire to see the principle underlying such law discredited, but is desirous of making the best of the present law, by giving men of ordinary financial means an opportunity to represent the party at the coming election;

Now, therefore, be it resolved, that the said primary law should be amended so that the expense of perfecting nominating petitions will be reduced to a minimum in order that all men may have equal opportunity to become candidates at the primary elections; and

Be it further resolved, by this Los Angeles delegation, that said delegation does and will favor having the State conference take such action as will insure the presence upon the Democratic State primary ticket of one candidate of high character and known opposition to the Southern Pacific machine, for each office.

A Modern Method of Treatment that Cures

THE GREAT CLEARINGHOUSE OF A MAN'S BODY IS THE BLOOD STREAM. PURE BLOOD MEANS GOOD HEALTH.

Weak bodies can only be made strong by supplying them with pure blood. Health, energy, strength, vitality depend upon the blood cell. What the blood stream will not do for the Human Body cannot be done. Treating diseases on this basis we effect permanent cures.

We want to prove to you at our expense that our Blood-Making and Blood-Purifying Remedies cure you permanently of your diseases. WE WANT YOU TO KNOW YOU ARE RIGHT BEFORE SPENDING A DOLLAR.

Our Laboratory Examinations are Free. Physical, Chemical and Microscopical Urinalysis tells you facts everyone should know.

OZONE IS CONDENSED OXYGEN—It is breathed into the lungs; taken up by the blood; is carried to all parts of the system and commences to cure at once. It will correct any abnormal condition of the blood.

OZONE STERILIZES THE BLOOD—Ozone kills all germs of every kind in the blood and in all tissues reached by the blood-serum.

Ozone increases the number of red blood corpuscles. It increases the oxidation of food derivatives, and promotes elimination.

Ozone will correct a sub-normal temperature, even bringing the temperature to normal during the course of a thirty-minute treatment.

OZONE INCREASES BODY WEIGHT—It loads the body cells with oxygen and neutralizes all toxins. It acts as a tonic but stimulates without reaction as it increases resistance to fatigue.

Ozone cures after other treatments have failed. Take advantage of the free test treatment.

The Ozone treatment is extremely pleasant to the patient, and the absolute success of this simple and natural treatment is certain.

Patients are sent to the country and seashore for the one molecule of ozone to every 700,000 molecules of the air there. We can now administer more ozone in 15 minutes in our office than the patient could get in a month at the seashore.

No money required or a dollar need be paid to commence treatment.

Call or write for full information and illustrations of this wonderful new cure.

HOME AGAIN.

MAUD ALLAN RETURNS SUPREME EXPONENT OF VISUAL HARMONY.

WHEN a poor music student from California can evolve a phase of art that will make the critics of two continents devote pages of valuable space to its discussion, when the crowned heads of England, Germany, Russia, France and Spain command this girl to perform before their households, and bestow honors upon her; when her home theaters are crowded to see her perform—well, there must be something more than luck in it all. There must be genius.

That's the story of Maud Allan, the San Francisco girl, who went abroad to study music some years ago, took a side turn into terpsichorean investigation, and won all England by her remarkable performances.

Miss Allan will dance at the Auditorium tomorrow night, Tuesday night and Wednesday afternoon. She will have the assistance of the principal portion of the Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Harley Hamilton.

Maud Allan

in four of her famous dances, which she will present at the Auditorium tomorrow night, with the instrumental assistance of the major portion of the Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra.

Maud Allan has undoubtedly proven that the relationship of music and dancing lies in rhythm. In music rhythm is the principal thing; it is essential, fundamental. In dancing it is everything. Rhythm is the measurement system of vibration; it is natural and universal; sound is the audible result of vibration, as light is the visible result. As the sounds grow higher in music, they become more and more refined to our ears until we lose them altogether. If it were possible to sufficiently increase the vibration we could see the notes, for they would appear as light. Our ears receive the impressions of certain limited sets of vibration, and our eyes receive the impressions of certain others, but all are alike in character. Rhythm is important to the eye, and motions performed in perfect time are always pleasing to the musical sense. That is the main reason why people everywhere take delight in watching good dances. Even among the most primitive nations the dances are performed with careful regard to rhythm, while the accompanying musicians have little or no thought of doing anything more than keeping the time. Rhythm and pitch are alike based on rigid mathematical laws, from which not even the slightest deviation can be made with success, but the underlying principle of music is in rhythm.

A strictly clasical musical programme by a symphony orchestra will ordinarily appeal to only those who possess musical training, for the impressions can be received only through the ear. An operatic performance of whatever class the music may be, makes impressions through the senses of sight, as well as through the sense of hearing, and so will attract the greater number of devotees. The imagination is more readily aroused by means of the eyes than by means of the ears, and so when beautiful music is illustrated or interpreted by means of an appropriate dance, skillfully performed, the well-trained eyes of the public lend aid to the ears that are not so well trained, and it is almost as if the music were made partially visible in addition to being heard. The reasons suggested seem sufficient to explain from a musical standpoint, and without consideration of other arts, the popularity of the classical dances that have come into vogue and for which Miss Allan stands as a premiere exponent. Music is not a visual art, and that is why the Allan dancing has become a fashion.

Maud Allan's greatest success in this country seems to be in the Peer Gynt suite, which she is said to interpret in a manner that shows not only a thorough understanding of Grieg's beautiful music, but also of Ibsen's play. Miss Allan has danced and interpreted the music of Chopin, Rubinstein, Mendelssohn, Grieg and other standard compositions, and created the "Vision of Salome," in London, Berlin, Paris and St. Petersburg.

The Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Harley Hamilton with several members brought down from the San Francisco orchestra, has been in daily rehearsal; the electrical effects have been installed, and everything is now complete for the California girl who has returned home to show why she has gained world renown as an artist of exceptional merit, and that, too, in an art that requires personal charm, abundant grace, and a knowledge of the best music.

Manager Behymer and Conductor Hamilton have arranged a musical setting to these dances that is of the utmost importance, and provided fifty of the best players who, in addition to assisting Miss Allan in her work, will give some splendid orchestral numbers from standard works, including Wagner's Lohengrin Suite, Gade's Scotch Overture, "In the Highlands;" Lug-

"Country Wedding Symphony," and Beethoven's "Turkish March."

Her opening programme seems devoid of the famous "Salome," as it includes the Chopin Valse in A Minor, the Mazurka in G Sharp Major and the Mazurka in B Flat, the Mendelssohn "Spring Song," the "Peer Gynt" suite and the Rubinstein "Valse Caprice." But of the "Salome" there is no mention.

VISITORS WILL GET TREAT.

New York and Boston Hotel Men Are to Stop at Redlands and Riverside.

The Boston and New York hotel men are expected to arrive at Redlands tomorrow morning. This will be the first stop made by the special trains on their way across the country, and will come as a veritable treat after the miles of mountains and desert. The stop was especially planned by the local hotel men who will be on hand to meet the visitors in order to properly impress the visitors with the beauty of Southern California, which at no season is better exemplified than at present, when the roses and orange blossoms are so fragrant that the perfume is noticeable many miles from Redlands.

The guests will be taken on tally-ho trips to Smiley Heights, and then will go on to Riverside, where they will be entertained in a similar manner. The scattered delegations of the Hotel Men's Mutual Benefit Association will begin to arrive today, and the first actual session of the convention will open at the Westminster Hotel on Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock. The programme for the week was published in full exclusively in The Times last Tuesday morning.

The season for shipping opens this year on the same day as last. Two years

PUT UP AT AUCTION.

Eight applicants for farms in the Yuma Reclamation District, defaulted on their payments yesterday, and the receiver at once put up the farm units at auction. The bids for the filing rights were $35 to $125. The drawings and other matters connected with the Yuma lands will be closed up by tomorrow. It is probable that there will be one more auction for the few remaining pieces that have not been paid for.

FOR A PRINCIPAL.

A government civil service examination will be held here May 4, for the position of principal of business department, Haskell Institute, Kan. The salary is $1200 a year. Applicants must have had at least one year's experience in some commercial school. The pupils in the business department at Haskell Institute are prepared for appointments in the various Indian schools.

MINING MEN GET OIL LAND IN MIDWAY

"COBALT" SCOTT AND BARRY HAMILTON IN ON SEC. 22

Two Strong Companies Organizing for Operation—Four Strings of Tools Running on Choice Section

BAKERSFIELD, Mar. 30.—Two strong aggregations of capital headed by mining men have secured holdings in the Midway field during the week and are already operating. A. W. ("Cobalt") Scott, James Morgan, a mining man residing in Eureka, Utah and Toronto, Canada, capitalists, have secured from the Midway Queen, W. J. Schultz, Dr. Bass and Captain Weed forty acres, the southeast of the northwest quarter of section 22-32-24. Barry Hamilton, formerly engaged in mining and the banking business in Goldfield, Nevada; J. Ross Clark of the Salt Lake route and W. A. Clark, Jr., son of former Senator Clark, have the northeast of the southwest quarter of the same section. Hamilton spudded in Wednesday and Scott will start his well tomorrow.

With the consumation of these deals four strings of tools will be running on this section. The land is located midway between the Lakeview gusher and the Honolulu well and a little more than a mile east of the Monte Cristo, section 32, which was sold ten days ago to the American Oilfields company for $1,000,000. It is considered one of the choice locations on the east side of the Midway field. Two strings were started last week, C. W. Wilcox of the Coalinga Mohawk and Mr. Meyerstein, a San Francisco banker, are drilling on the northeast quarter, and the Luxor, a San Francisco company, on the southeast.

A. W. Scott is known as an energetic operator and in the selection of this land for his first venture in Midway has displayed the good judgment which has made him successful in mining. He has started the construction of commodious quarters for his employes and is now in Los Angeles perfecting the organization of the company, which is to have a capital of $600,000. A superintendent has been employed and will start drilling Friday.

THE CALIFORNIA OIL WORLD,

MINING MEN GET OIL LAND IN MIDWAY

"COBALT" SCOTT AND BARRY HAMILTON IN ON SEC. 22

Two Strong Companies Organizing for Operation—Four Strings of Tools Running on Choice Section

BAKERSFIELD, Mar. 30.—Two strong aggregations of capital headed by mining men have secured holdings in the Midway field during the week and are already operating. A. W. ("Cobalt") Scott, James Morgan, a mining man residing in Eureka, Utah and Toronto, Canada, capitalists, have secured from the Midway Queen, W. J. Schultz, Dr. Bass and Captain Weed forty acres, the southeast of the northwest quarter of section 22-32-24. Barry Hamilton, formerly engaged in mining and the banking business in Goldfield, Nevada; J. Ross Clark of the Salt Lake route and W. A. Clark, Jr., son of former Senator Clark, have the northeast of the southwest quarter of the same section. Hamilton spudded in Wednesday and Scott will start his well tomorrow.

With the consumation of these deals four strings of tools will be running on this section. The land is located midway between the Lakeview gusher and the Honolulu well and a little more than a mile east of the Monte Cristo, section 32, which was sold ten days ago to the American Oilfields company for $1,000,000. It is considered one of the choice locations on the east side of the Midway field. Two strings were started last week, C. W. Wilcox of the Coalinga Mohawk and Mr. Meyerstein, a San Francisco banker, are drilling on the northeast quarter, and the Luxor, a San Francisco company, on the southeast.

A. W. Scott is known as an energetic operator and in the selection of this land for his first venture in Midway has displayed the good judgment which has made him successful in mining. He has started the construction of commodious quarters for his employes and is now in Los Angeles perfecting the organization of the company, which is to have a capital of $600,000. A superintendent has been employed and will start drilling Friday.

Twelve Reasons Why

I Advise the Purchase of MIDWAY SECURITY OIL STOCK at This Time

FIRST—Because the Company's holdings are located right in the heart of the Gusher territory, in the greatest oil field in the world.

SECOND—Because the company is already fully equipped and drilling, its first hole being down between 200 and 300 feet on Saturday, April 9th.

THIRD—Because the company's rig and machinery, tanks, buildings, water lines, etc., are all new, first class in every way and all paid for.

FOURTH—Because the company's backers are strong people who back their judgment with their own money, who have obtained the best expert advice and will sink to oil and win success regardless of stock sales.

FIFTH—Because the money received from the sale of stock will go into the company's treasury to be used for practical development and not into the pockets of promoters.

SIXTH—Because the company is capitalized for only 600,000 shares, and has placed 400,000 shares in the treasury.

SEVENTH—Because the company intends as soon as possible to list its stock on the Los Angeles and San Francisco Stock Exchanges and on the New York curb.

EIGHTH—Because I believe the company has secured the services of the best field superintendent in the Midway district—a man of wide experience who thoroughly understands every detail of the oil industry.

NINTH—Because there are no salaries being paid to officers or directors of this company; everyone having unlimited faith in the MIDWAY SECURITY territory and its future production.

TENTH—Because we are on the eve of the greatest legitimate oil boom ever known in the history of the United States—this being demonstrated by the wonderful developments during the past few weeks in the Midway fields.

ELEVENTH—Because I know that this is the most opportune time to buy MIDWAY SECURITY OIL COMPANY STOCK at this price, as it will sell at a much higher figure in a very short time.

TWELFTH—Last but not least, I advise the purchase of MIDWAY SECURITY oil stock because by buying now you are starting in on the ground floor with real live oil operators and in a real live oil district at the right time and place and at the right price.

WATER USERS' ELECTION.

The annual election of the Salt River Valley Waters' Association was held Tuesday. It was a quiet affair, only 30,000 votes being cast among about 120,000 eligible. This quietude was due mainly to the fact that John P. Orme was the only candidate for the presidency. Several weeks ago was announced the withdrawal of B. A. Fowler, who for ten years has been at the head of the association, during its days of organization and development from a mere idea to a moving force which has brought water in abundance to 200,000 acres of land.

Mr. Fowler's services are held in highest esteem both by the farmers he has so benefited by his work, and by the Reclamation Service officials with whom he has been so closely associated.

One of Mr. Fowler's plans was the building of a permanent home for the association, on the same block in Phoenix with the Y.M.C.A. and new postoffice. This suggestion was approved by the stockholders at Tuesday's election. It is probable that Utah canal will soon be acquired by the Reclamation Service at a price of $30,000, while the Mesa Canal is understood to have been offered for $43,000.

NEW MORNING PAPER.

A seven-day morning paper, the Capital City News, is to be issued in Phoenix within a fortnight by W. D. Bell, former editor of the Phoenix Evening Democrat. It is announced that the News will voice the ideas of the more radical Democracy of Arizona, considered unrepresented since the Evening Democrat passed into the control of the more conservative wing of the party.

A non-political society, the Good Citizens' League, has been organized by the colored residents of Phoenix for the betterment of the condition of their race in this city. John E. Lewis is the first presiding officer of the league.

B. A. Packard of Douglas has announced that he will soon resign from the board of directors of the Territorial Fair, with which he has been associated since the fair's beginning.

Secret Service Men Find Plant Buried Under Vegetable Garden in New York State.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

YONKERS (N. Y.) April 9.—Secret service men, who have been at work in this section for some time, have unearthed a rich counterfeiter's cache on a farm near Highland, N. Y. The stuff, found buried several feet beneath the surface of an old vegetable garden, includes several thousand sheets of paper in which the silk threads of the government paper are cleverly imitated, a dozen boxes of blue and red inks, an old printing press and enough cartridges to destroy a small army.

The plates used by the counterfeiters have not yet been recovered and search for them will be continued. The material is a part of the outfit used by the Lupo gang of Italian coiners, who were recently convicted in New York and sentenced to from fifteen to thirty years in prison.

Rumors that confederates of the counterfeiters were about to resume operations with the plates and material stored away by Lupo and his men were responsible for the activity of the secret service agents.

Sleeping With Notorious Machine Politicians in One Instance and Supporting Democratic Candidates in Another—Anything to Win an Office or Bit of Pap, Large or Small, for Themselves.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, April 8.—Here is a great opportunity for the editor of the Fresno Republican. The Times correspondent will donate $39.40 to the Rooster Booster campaign fund if Mr. Rowell will substantiate the statements made in an editorial in his paper this week, captioned "One Campaign Liar." There are campaign liars, of course. Not the least of the legion is Chester himself.

But it is boys' play to call each other liars. I am gratified to have many evidences of the fact that the president of the Lincoln-Roosevelt League is a regular reader of this column. And the gratification is not diminished by his irritated references to its chronicling. His latest outbreak has reference apparently to a statement last week to the effect that Rowell was a programmer, that his local machine had votes to deliver in State and other conventions, and that he broke with the Republican organization only when he could not control it. Further, it was stated that two years ago he was willing enough to dicker with the organization if he were permitted to go as a delegate to the Chicago convention.

Here are the facts, in more detail, regarding both the Santa Cruz convention and the Stockton convention, and the Rowell part in both.

At Santa Cruz, the Fresno delegation, which the Rowells boast of dominating, voted PROGRAMME, if there was a programme, from start to finish. The Fresno Republican, and Chester Rowell, president of the Link-Rooster League, have frequently declared that the ticket named at Santa Cruz was selected by the Southern Pacific Railroad; that it was a Herrin machine ticket, and that a majority of the convention simply accepted the "programme" handed to it by the bosses. But the Rowell delegation voted for Gillett, threw down Pardee, and accepted the "programme" from A to Izzard. They did so because they were programmers, because they entered the "combination." They did so because they wanted Williams nominated for State Treasurer, one of the fattest jobs. And to get Williams they threw over Pardee, just as half the nominees on the Link-Rooster State ticket this year did. Instead of "machine," it was the combination that controlled the convention, a combination of candidates, among whom were Williams, Webb and Kingsbury, all nominees for reëlection on the L.-R. ticket—all programmers. Is this not true, Mr. Rowell?

And after the Santa Cruz convention, the Rowells and the Fresno Republican supported the ticket. Didn't they, Mr. Rowell? And why not? The Rowells were as much responsible as any one for making it. And with equal responsibility stand the several candidates on the L.-R. ticket who have been indorsed for reëlection.

But Rowell and his coterie of demagogical machine politicians have seen fit, for the last three years, to denounce the Santa Cruz convention and its work as belonging to Herrin and "the Southern Pacific machine." It is a popular cry, like all demagogy. But if they are telling the truth now, they must admit that they were cogs in that machine, and the tools of Herrin and the aforesaid "machine." Whichever is true, they have stultified themselves and proved themselves ordinary campaign liars. And hypocrites.

NOW FOR STOCKTON.

So much for Santa Cruz. The facts narrated are history and cannot be refuted. Now for the Stockton convention. I tell this on the authority of Warren Porter, Lieutenant-Governor. Dr. Rowell, who thought he could control the district convention, found, when the time came, that he could not. Then he went to Warren Porter and proposed that Return Roberts, his friend, be ditched, that the regulars combine with him and name Chet Rowell, his nephew, editor of the Fresno Republican, as one of the delegates to the Chicago convention. Porter refused and Rowell did not go. Is this not true, Mr. Rowell?

And that is the last of the conventions, district or State. In all of them the Rowells have been programmers, and ready at all times to join the "machine," to get their bit of patronage, if the machine would let them. With the adoption of the primary law, there were to be no more conventions, so the Rowells had nothing more coming in that line. But what they did do was to resort immediately to the star chamber, secret caucus, the "programme" and even to call a nominating State convention, packed by methods that no other machine ever dared resort to. Every delegate was to be appointed, and by some one who had been named by Chester Rowell.

Are any of these statements "campaign lies?"

The hypocrisy of one E. T. Earl is well known at the southern end of the State. But the fact that the cheap demagogy of Rowell and Earl permeates the Link-Rooster League from end to end is perhaps not so well understood. There is the league's organ, the California Weekly, for instance, edited by A. J. Pillsbury. This gentleman was drawing salary from the State by grace of Gov. Pardee. And when Pardee went out, Pillsbury begged Gillett to retain him. Not getting another lease on the public pap, he has made a living since then by abusing Gillett and the party organization. Was Mr. Pillsbury's horror of the "machine" is great when he drew $500 a month as publicity agent for it? Hardly.

The league held another of its secret caucuses last week and took up the matter of completing the State ticket. A proposition was made to nominate Caughey for reëlection to the clerkship of the Supreme Court. Caughey is an out and out organization man, and openly declares so. He was also one of the nominees of the Santa Cruz convention. But, as already demonstrated, that makes no difference with the league. What it wants is political combinations with men who can deliver the votes. Caughey's friends on the league committee asked that he be not nominated but that the place be left vacant. In this way he can get organization support and have no contest on the part of the league. It is understood that this was the decision. It is also reported that the league will indorse Loveland for reëlection as State Railroad Commissioner—one of Gillett's appointments. We have been told by them that Gillett was under the domination of the railroad. Yet here is the only appointment he has made which directly affected the railroads, and the league leaders prove they are ordinary liars by approving it.

FOR DEMOCRAT IN MENDOCINO.

The league is trying to break into Mendocino and that section by favoring Caughey. And they have an idea that McNab is sore and may help them.

to succeed him. This doesn't look like a bolt in that quarter. Incidentally, I hear that Sanford of Mendocino will have the fight of his life for reëlection to the Senate. Billy Held, for two terms a member of the Assembly, will be his opponent.

The queerest thing about all this Mendocino situation is the candidacy of Assemblyman Preston, with the Link-Rooster backing, for the Republican Congressional nomination, against McKinlay. Any one may see for himself, by reference to the rolls of the last Legislature, a year ago, that Preston was nominated and elected as a Democrat. True, he was wont to declare that he was a sort of Roosevelt Democrat. But the fact remains that the league is backing a Democratic member of the present Legislature for a Republican Congressional nomination—for a Federal officer where party certainly counts. Preston is popular. He has votes to deliver. It is merely another characteristic Link-Rooster deal, regardless of party decency. McKinlay is close to President Taft, whom leaguers are fond of slurring. So they don't like him. Hiram is totally disloyal to the President and is at no pains to conceal the fact. In this respect Rowell is much more decent. In fact Rowell would be a very decent chap if he would try to be consistent. But he can't do that. It isn't in him.

Mendocino is for Curry at present counting. This is largely due to the work of Charley Orr, who was formerly in Curry's office. And it might as well be admitted that Curry is very strong in Sacramento county. But, despite his very strong organization throughout the State, I do not know of another large county where Curry can safely claim primacy. He thinks he has San Francisco. But this is the one place where Anderson's campaign looks really good at the present time, and it is not unlikely that Anderson will grow stronger in the big bay city as time passes. He has been devoting his time to getting his organization perfected there, almost to the exclusion of everything else. His petitions are out, however, in about sixteen counties. They have been completed in San Francisco and Yuba. It is not Anderson's idea to get the limit and he is not paying 5 cents a name to get any of them.

WAR IN AFRICA.

Anderson, more than any other candidate north of the Tehachepi, is carrying the war into the Link-Rooster camp. He has a strong following in Fresno county and also in San José. In Fresno, a large percentage of the party is weary of Rowellite pretensions. And in San José the flopping around of the Hayes brothers has left the Mercury without as much influence as it should have. "Black" Hayes, who was being slurred and denounced a short time ago by Hitchborne and the other hired men of the league, has returned to the caucus in a chastened spirit. He could hardly do anything else after the exhibition he made last fall when he wanted the league's indorsement for Governor. Johnson was a wry pill for Hayes to swallow. But "Red" Hayes must go back to Congress and a house divided against itself will fall.

Hiram the Hired Patriot has been barnstorming in the Sacramento Valley this week, getting press notices for use by his bureau. This bureau, in one of its latest bulletins, quotes an interview with Hiram in San Diego in which the Hired Patriot says: "We stand not only with Roosevelt but with La Follette. No mention of Taft, of course. I recall—and so will you—the speech La Follette made in Los Angeles about three years ago. In that speech La Follette made a statement in relation to his proposed amendment to an interstate commerce bill, which, reduced to figures, meant that if the La Follette amendment had been adopted, every railroad in the United States would have been reduced to bankruptcy. That's the kind of a demagogue La Follette is, and Hiram is his emulator.

POLITICAL POINTERS.

They are still guessing about Ellery. The fact of the relationship between Ellery and Gillett, as told by Ellery, is that Gillett's brother married Ellery's sister. But there is no doubt the Governor disapproves Ellery's candidacy. That much I know positively. I cannot vouch for the truth, however, of a current story that Engstrom, the Los Angeles contractor, was really the immediate cause of his entrance into the fight. It is declared that Engstrom has promised $25,000 to Ellery's campaign fund. The State Engineer was in Los Angeles when the announcement was made. He left word that it should not be made until he had gone there. He may have gone there to see Engstrom. So the story goes. He has stood by the Los Angeles contractor in some hard fights. And this may be the basis of the report. It is even said that Ellery is the candidate of the Citizens' Alliance. But this cannot be true, inasmuch as many of those most prominent in the Alliance are supporting other candidates. And Ellery makes claims to labor following.

Utter demoralization of the league forces in Alameda county, touted as a stronghold, is imminent. Guy Earl, brother of the Los Angeles rebater, and one of the league bosses, will duck the crisis by going to Europe, as will Col. Forbes of Marysville, another member of the Executive Committee.

The Graybill case—of which little has been said in the paper—is of some interest to the Los Angeles politicians. Graybill is a candidate for member of the State Board of Equalization, against Harry Scott, who may or may not run—if he doesn't he will be the only State officer who is not a candidate to succeed himself. And Graybill offered to file his petition with the Secretary of State. But the first equalization district is wholly in the county of San Francisco, and the Secretary of State refused to receive the petition, declaring that it should go to the County Clerk of San Francisco and remain there. In other words, no nomination certificate from a district wholly within a county need, or can, be filed with the Secretary of State. Not even that of a Congressman.

LOVE'S YOUNG DREAM.

On December 1, 1909, Laura E. Mowrer of Malden, Mass., who was spending the winter in Pasadena, was married to E. L. Story of Los Angeles by Rev. Matt S. Hughes, pastor of the Pasadena First Methodist church, but for reasons of their own the bride and groom have kept the wedding a secret until now, when they are about to return to Malden on a visit. Bishop E. H. Hughes, brother of the officiating minister, was for many years the bride's pastor at her former home.

BIOLOGICAL LECTURE.

The Biological section of the Academy of Sciences will hold a meeting at the Pacific College of Osteopathy

CALIFORNIA OI INVESTMENTS

California oil is profitable. Oil is the most profitable business, when handled as a business proposition, that exists.

The California oil fields are now in reach of the world, having excellent and well-organized means of transportation, both by land and sea.

The rapid change from coal to oil, the adoption of oils by the navies of the world, make overproduction impossible.

Thus, oil being cheaper and better than coal as fuel, being easily within reach of the world, and its apparent inexhaustibility, make a California oil investment the safest, most profitable and most shrewd.

California oil gives to the rich and poor alike a means of honest investment, which is found in no other business. The fairness of the oil operators and the conservativeness of the companies which we recommend make it possible for an investment of a few dollars to be as productive, in proportion, as an investment of millions.

For nearly two years we have been urging the investment of idle funds in the stock of carefully managed, listed, dividend paying California oil stocks.

Our clients, scattered all over the entire country, are receiving dividends at the rate of from 6 to 48 per cent per annum upon investments that they made through us.

The present intense interest in California oil is due entirely to the fact that California oil is making more money than any other industry in the State. Fortunes are being made. Many millionaires have been made from California oil. A new crop of millionaires will be made during the next few months. California oil will make these millionaires. You may not be able to make a million dollars, but you can have your share of California's oil prosperity.

We issue every week a newspaper called "The Oil Book," which tells in a clear, concise manner all about California's greatest industry. It contains much information of value pertaining to nearly all of the oil stocks of the State. We send this Oil Book free to any address upon request. Copies may be had at our office or by written request.

Premier Oil Company

We strongly advise the purchase of stock in the Premier Oil Company at present prices.

This company has a capital stock of 1,000,000 shares of a par value of $1 each. The officers and directors are: Tim Spellacy, Pete Spellacy, J. D. Thompson, W. M. Wallace and Clarence J. Berry. These men are among the best known, successful oil men of the State.

We have acted as the exclusive financial agents of the company.

The holdings consist of a one-sixth royalty lease on 160 acres of absolutely proven oil land in the heart of the Coalinga district, the legal description of which is: S.E. Quarter of Section 24, Township 20, S. Range 14. The lease was secured from the Union Oil Company August 19, 1907, for twenty years, with perpetual rights of all oil produced from wells drilled thereon.

While some of our friends secured this stock at 10 cents per share in the summer of 1907, the stock is now selling around $1.40 and $1.50 per share. From this time it will advance more rapidly than ever before.

Twelve wells have been drilled and the monthly production at this time is about 65,000 barrels. Three wells are being drilled at a time. Forty wells should give the company a net earning capacity of $100,000 per month, or 10 cents per share per month; this would be at the rate of 120 per cent. per annum on the par value of the stock. The company is already paying dividends from its net earnings, and these dividends will shortly be increased.

The stock is listed on the California Stock and Oil Exchange of San Francisco and its shares are dealt in daily.

We believe that the stock will advance to at least $2.00 per share within the next 90 days, and we advise prompt action. You can make no mistake by buying Premier stock at present prices.

Section Six Oil Company

This company is incorporated with a capital stock of 600,000 shares, each of a par value of $1.00. The company owns outright 43 acres of land situated in the famous Section Six of Coalinga and adjacent to the Silver Tip gusher. It also owns the Merrill lease in the Kern River district, 440 acres of patented land in the Devil's Den district and numerous other interests.

The stock is paying regular quarterly dividends of 1 per cent. on par, or 4 per cent. per year. This is an 8 per cent. investment at present prices. We believe that the dividend will be doubled in the very near future.

We advise the purchase of Section Six at present prices and will be glad to send detailed information upon request.

Mascot Oil Company

The Mascot Oil Company is incorporated under the laws of California, with a capital stock of 500,000 shares, each of a par value of $1.00. The officers and directors are: Tim Spellacy, Pete Spellacy, J. D. Thompson, W. M. Wallace and M. B. Tuttle.

The company's holdings consist of a one-eighth royalty lease on 160 acres of land in the Midway district, known as the N.E. Quarter of Section 26, Township 32, S. Range East. The personal property on the lease is valued in excess of $100,000, and 24 wells have been drilled with a production at the present time of 70,000 barrels per month. The company is earning at this time better than 3 cents per share upon the par value of all its stock. It is now paying regular monthly dividends, and these dividends will be increased from time to time.

We expect to see Mascot Oil stock sell at $10 per share in the course of a short time. At present it can be bought at a price ranging between $3 and $4, although the company recently refused a million and a half dollars for the property.

The best known oil men in the State of California are managing this company along careful, conservative lines, and the stockholders are sure of a fair and square deal and their pro rata of the earnings.

We have consistently advised the purchase of Mascot, and we strongly urge its immediate purchase at any price under $5 per share.

The stock is listed upon the California Stock and Oil Exchange of San Francisco.

Yellowstone Oil Company

This company is incorporated with a capital stock of 1,000,000 shares, each a par value of $1. Its holdings consist of the ownership outright of 45 of patented land in the McKittrick district, 160 acres of land in the Mari district and adjacent to the famous Midway gushers. Four wells are now ing drilled by the lessors upon the Maricopa holding. The company owns right 20 acres of patented land in the Kern River district, which is only ly developed, and is already earning over $4000 per month. These earn will shortly be increased. Mr. Levi H. Hawley of San Francisco is pres and H. B. Guthrey of Los Angeles is general manager.

We consider Yellowstone stock an exceptionally good offer and be that before the end of this year it is destined to reach $1 per share.

Detailed information with regard to this company will be mailed to address upon request.

The stock is listed upon the Los Angeles Stock Exchange.

Cresceus Oil Company

This company is incorporated under the laws of the State of Californi a capital stock of 320,000 shares, each of a par value of $1. The corpora ings consist of a one-eighth royalty and perpetual lease on 40 acres in the Midway district. Six wells have already been drilled upon th and the property is earning sufficient money at this time to pay one per per month upon the capital stock. It is not paying these dividends, howe for the reason that additional development work is going on.

Well No. 7 is being drilled. This well is being drilled deeper than the others, it being the belief of the management that by doing so they wil the oil sand from which some of the Midway gushers have gotten their gre duction. If a gusher should be brought in here (and it is not improbabl price of this stock should jump to $3.00 per share. If by drilling deeper not encounter these rich oil sands, the drillers will come back and take adv of the oil sand which has already been penetrated, making another good, producer, and the company can then go upon a dividend-paying basis imme

The officers of this company include such well-known men as Tim Pete Spellacy, A. L. McPherson, Jack Lundgren and William Wallace.

The property is carefully and conservatively managed, and its shares are upon the California Stock and Oil Exchange, of San Francisco. For a sure inve with the assurance of dividends in the very near future and great speculative we advise the purchase of Cresceus oil stock.

The stock is listed upon the California Stock and Oil Exchange of San F and is selling at about 54 cents per share.

It is planned to increase the holdings of the company at the next annual and we consider Illinois Crude a good purchase at present price. For immedi dend returns there is nothing better on the market.

These men have been much in evidence for the past week around Flagstaff and other railroad towns and have given the peace officers no little annoyance. The contractors have held up the importation of any more men till the thermometer has a somewhat higher reading.

FREIGHT CARS DITCHED.

Last Thursday, eighteen miles west of Gallup, twenty-eight west-bound freight cars were piled into the ditch by an open switch, believed to have been misplaced with evil intent. Though the engine was overturned, no one of the train crew was severely hurt. Several of the cars were loaded with automobiles and pianos, billed to Los Angeles, mixed in the wreckage beside the track in a smash-up that seemed almost complete.

Doctors Watching Itching Scalps Heal

(From Chicago Inter-Ocean.)

Eczema on the head and scalp, and dandruff, will soon cease to afflict mankind, according to Dr. Aloysius M. Churchill, who is in Chicago attending the convention.

"Any person can apply my treatment anywhere just as well as I do in the Franco-American Institute for Scalp Diseases," said he Tuesday.

"Get from your druggist 2 ounces of quintone, dissolve it in ½ pint hot water, let cool, and rub well into the scalp with the finger tips. That is all there is to it. Two or three applications usually accomplish the desired result.

"Of 98 cases treated 95 were completely cured and treatment was beneficial for the other three.

"The formation of dandruff causes an itching scalp. Scratching with the fingers spreads infection; therefore, quintone can be used with good results as a preventative by anybody whose scalp is itching or forming dandruff. It is the best thing I know to promote the growth of hair."

Prepares System For Hot Weather

Remarkable Results of Robinson "Thermal" for Rheumatism, Nervous Breakdown, Kidney Trouble, Skin and Other Diseases.

Does What No Drug on Earth Can Do.

The results produced by a Robinson "Thermal" Bath inside of 30 minutes are almost beyond belief. Physicians everywhere are changing from drugs to thermal baths in the treatment of many diseases.

It has been found, for instance, in the case of rheumatism, that uric acid in the blood can be extracted from the system completely in a few days' time.

Eczema can be completely cured within a week.

After one or two thermal baths, nervous wrecks find the change to strength and vigor hard to realize.

Similar results are obtained in cases of kidney trouble, neuralgia, pimples, all skin diseases, throat and lung trouble, insomnia, constipation, lumbago and bad colds.

This is to certify that the undersigned, a resident of Newton, Iowa, was afflicted for twenty-one years with asthma, heart trouble, kidney trouble and rheumatism. I had taken everything known to medical science, together with three seasons at Mineral Springs, without receiving relief. I commenced taking the Thermal Baths in the Robinson Thermal Bath Cabinet four years ago and was completely cured. I continue the use of them, taking the baths every week in preference to water baths for keeping clean.

$1.00 PROPOSITION

Security Home Builders Offers Its Stock at Par $1.00

WHAT IT IS.

Security Home Builders is a co-operative Building Company that is just beginning business.

It has an exceptionally bright future before it, and no mistakes or debts behind it. It starts with a clean slate and has the experience of all the older companies which work along similar lines, to guide it. It builds homes after they are sold, and does not speculate or go into debt.

This makes a bright future for its stockholders.

WHERE.

It builds homes wherever the purchaser wants them built, provided the chances for improvement in the locality are good.

It does not build for undesirable people nor in places in which the chances for advance in values are not good. While being liberal with the home buyer, it looks very carefully to its own interests. Scattered buildings are better in the end than developing tracts.

This makes a bright future for its stockholders.

WHAT IT OFFERS.

It offers a proposition that should pay at least 12% on the investment the first year, and that should increase from time to time.

All homes built belong to Security Home Builders until paid for; this makes the security back of the stock the best—clear, clean homes. An investment in this desirable stock is safe—sound—profitable and sure to very materially advance in value.

This makes a bright future for its stockholders.

The stock in this vigorous young company which is just commencing business and has an unusually bright future before it and strong men back of it is being sold at par, $1.00. It can be bought in lots of 5 shares or more, for cash or on payments of 10% down and 5% per month.

As a savings proposition this stock should prove wonderfully attractive because every stockholder is on the ground floor, and because by reason of the security of its investments there is no possibility of failure.

Nothing so good has been offered for subscription in a long time.

Wise investors who know a good thing and who keep their eyes open, see in such offerings as this the opportunity to make money rapidly and safely.

General literature is free by mail or at the office, or a representative will call on you if you prefer. If you have any money that you are thinking of investing in a home building proposition, don't make a decisive move until you have investigated this business. Get in at the bottom and grow with

CHURCHMEN ELECT OFFICERS.

California Conference of Swedish Evangelical Lutheran Church Meets in Fresno.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.] FRESNO, April 7.—The California Conference of the Swedish Evangelical Lutheran Church of North America is in session here. The new officials are: President, Dr. Philip Andreen of San Francisco; vice-president, Dr. E. Nelander of Los Angeles; treasurer, August Johnson of San Francisco; secretary, Rev. A. M. LeVeau of San José.

Fresno is the center of a very large population of Swedish farmers and fruit growers, and their attendance has made the conference a memorable one. Addresses are delivered in both English and Swedish for the benefit of the older and younger members of the church. The reports show the condition and to have a growing membership.

IMPALED ON POLE.

A double runaway this afternoon imperiled the lives of two well-known Fresnans and caused a pitiful sight on the principal street of Fresno when a driving horse of O. B. Olufs, a manufacturer of cement structural work, was impaled on the pole of a delivery wagon. The roadster of A. H. Kaiser, a well-to-do farmer resident of the suburbs of Fresno, took fright where the work of double-tracking the traction lines is being carried on. Kaiser was thrown from the rig and his feet caught in the reins. He was dragged for two blocks and so badly injured, with the skin stripped from his face and breast, that medical attention was required. Olufs was thrown from his rig, but not seriously hurt. His horse ran into a department store delivery wagon, and as a result of the collision had to be killed.

J. N. Walker, Sr., a pioneer of nia, sat with bowed head and tear-stained cheeks in the Superior Court this afternoon, while his youngest son, W. N. Walker, was given by Judge Austin into the custody of United States officers and returned to San Francisco as a deserter from the army. The father was at one time Sheriff of Fresno, and was well known as a cattle man. His misfortunes with his family have aroused public sympathy, his eldest son having been arrested a short time ago for stealing his cattle.

A fund of $2000 is being raised by an improvement association for the development of the natural beauties of the Mountain View Cemetery, which has hitherto been kept up by the individual enterprise of those who own lots, with consequent lack of co-operation. In addition to the sum that is being raised, to which the Chamber of Commerce, the various civic and religious bodies of the city and many private citizens have contributed, the revenues of the water company that supplies the cemetery

EACH BOY TO CHOOSE STUDY.

Trades School for Truants May Be Opened.

Vernon Instructor Proposes the New Plan.

Lads Take Much Interest in Their Studies.

The small Huckleberry Finns in town wont to look upon school as "too dismal, decent and reg'lar," may henceforth be accommodated in a school where the whilom truant may choose his "major," and correlate his other studies therewith, with a view to his life vocation.

This is the brilliant plan of James Lacy, teacher at Vernon special school, himself a mere youth, but possessing, besides the wholesome camaraderie of youth, the rare genius of tact, sympathy and understanding of boys with naughty little "pasts," and in whose school one's preconceived ideas of a truant school as a place of dire punishment, alternated with furtive fights in the alley—

"Watch 'em glare! See the air!
Full of language, hats and hair"— are completely upset.

The Board of Education is considering the establishment of a trades school, in connection with the work of compulsory education, and it is in view of this Mr. Lacy has formed his plan.

"'Sentimental Tommy knew everything, but Shovel knew other things,' you remember," said Mr. Lacy, "and it is on this basis of diverse individuality I mean to work with my boys. 'When a boy thinks he has a call to be a preacher, let him be sure it isn't some other noise he hears,' as Bill Nye says; so here we want to be sure and find the boy's particular gift and enthusiasm, and work to develop him along those lines. I believe one cannot begin too early to rouse their ambitions and awaken their wills in these directions."

Some of the City's Huckleberry Finns, who are finding a school that will please them and make them what they want to be.

PLAN IS NEW.

Mr. Lacy sprung his plan day before yesterday. In order to get at what subject would best suit each individual boy, he solemnly demanded what each intended to be when he grew up. It was a tremendous order for a small boy, with definite ideas only on baseball and fishing, and a hazy but firm faith in the immortality of youth, but they were in full swing when the writer arrived.

"Say, teacher, I ain't goin' to be no dog catcher," a soiled urchin was shouting as the door was opened, and thereafter were heard ambitions which included everything from artist to bricklayer, the latter "'cos there ain't so much money in nothin' else!"

Up in the front seat sat a tiny, dark boy, with shrewd, laughing eyes. He has invented a doll aëroplane which will really fly, and do all the regular flying machine "stunts." This he proudly displayed, telling us seriously all about "propellers" and "planes," and other things aëronautic. His teacher says he will see that the boy is properly dosed with mathematics and manual work. Charles wants to be a surveyor and his favorite study is geography.

One youngster, with a merry, shrewd, wizened little face and white hair, at first grinned mischievously, saying "he didn't want to do nothin'" when he grew up, but finally condescended to adopt the profession of an architect. He draws well, judging from the colored map that adorns the blackboard, with his name beneath, and the Indians that rears his feathers above. Drawing and mathematics, will therefore, become his "majors."

WOULD BE CARPENTER.

A small boy on a back seat with the face of a cherub and the heart of an imp, declared for the peaceful life of a carpenter and builder, and Mr. Lacy will see that he has special opportunities at manual training.

With lofty air, a big colored boy decided on the calm career of a barber, and contrasted wonderfully with Dave, who is a delicate-looking blond boy, with long, serious face, and the bumps over the eyes which indicate the perceptive and observational facilities, who wants to be an artist and "paint pictures outdoors."

One little fellow, with a "smile that's child-like and bland," and a record that reads like a Bloody Gulch series, declares for the life of a soldier, and mentally devours everything he can lay his hands on, in the line of historic and heroic deeds. His portion shall be history, literature, geography and a balancing of mathematics. He is pitcher on the baseball team.

crack, George declared for the glory that is the electrician's, only he "couldn't get no books." His teacher avers he will see to that. What brought trouble down on his devoted head was that he would run away downtown to view the electrical works, or moon around the sloyd room, trying to invent things, instead of sitting up, stiff and straight, in his class-room, preparatory to having "imperial gallons of fact" poured into him. He grew quietly confidential in the buzz of the room: "I like 'rithmetic, 'cause when you get a job workin' then nobody can cheat you out of your money, and you can help the boss more. Our teacher don't let us get into no trouble. We get to make things, and we can take 'em home. When I first come here I didn't know nothin'. I could tell you a lot more reasons why I like this school, but I guess this is 'bout enough."

ANTITHESIS OF NAMESAKE.

Narcissus, antithesis of his classic namesake, with his shock of black hair and mischievous eyes, declined, on the spur of the moment, to adopt a profession, insisting on remaining darkly non-committal, but whether from a high sense of honor and necessity for sticking to his work, or the dark suspicion that his teacher might be able, in later years, to hold him to it, we could not tell. He deigned to give his opinion on what subject he liked, however—said it was arithmetic, "'cause I might get a job when I grow up, and if I didn't know 'rithmetic, I might make a mistake. The special school is good for us boys, you know, because it keeps us out of trouble, and we go off on picnics in the woods."

On inquiry, one learns that "trouble" is the euphonious synonym employed by the boys to express arrest and durance vile in the Detention Home.

Mr. Lacy means to expand his plan of an individual course of study for each boy to the utmost of its practicality, and believes the "bad" boys can be saved.

Diplomatically Put Out.

Judge Walter Evans, of the United States District Court ought to be in the diplomatic service, his friends say. He is known as a man of rare tact. The other afternoon Judge Evans had a gathering of Masonic brethren in his chamber at the custom house. Before the meeting opened an outsider strayed into the room. The outsider showed no signs of going, and, as the meeting was a private one, the Masons began to wonder how the outsider was to be got rid of. Judge Evans was equal to the occasion.

Approaching the intruder he shook him warmly by the hand. "Are you a Mason?" he asked.

"Sorry, I'm not," replied the outsider.

"Well," observed the judge, "I was going to say if you were we would be glad to have you remain."—[Louisville Times.

Reporter Obeyed Orders.

John H. Raftery, now of Helena, Mont., was star reporter on a Chicago paper when the last national encampment of the G.A.R. was held in that city, says the Saturday Evening Post. "Raftery," said the city editor, "I want you to do a column introduction for the big parade story today. It will be a corking parade, but do try to get away from the old, stereotyped boys-in-blue, fast-thinning-ranks, faded-battle-flags stuff. Give us something lively and new. Get a new angle on it and have your copy in at 6." Raftery went out. He took a long look at the parade. He saw that most of the veterans wore new shoes and he came back and wrote his column, which began: "Heavens, how

ALL ITCHING STOPPED

Sound Sleep after a Night of Much Distress

Mr. B., a Philadelphia gentleman, first hesitated about applying poslam after he had obtained it. "But," he says, "afterward the itching became unbearable at night, so I arose and told Mrs. B. I would risk the poslam. I slept soundly all night. I used it three nights and three mornings, then discontinued. It is now over three months, and I have never had any return of the eczema; never had any itching after the first application."

JEFFRIES-JOHNSON FIGHT DOPE

A Question of Color Also of Stamina

JULY 4th will be a bad day for the race, all right, but the question is, will it be black or white? Lots of wise money says that it will be a case of "Too Much Johnson," but we saw Jeffries when he was here a short time ago and say—personally, we would rather buck Barney Oldfield at a 70-mile clip than mix it up with neighbor James. Our opinion is that Brother Johnson will need a horseshoe in each glove for good luck.

— But the one best bet is that the best dressed men at the fight will wear B. & K. system made to order clothes. These suits are the kind that are always in the pink of condition and weigh in at the ringside as full weight. They'll stand any amount of punishment and will meet all comers and get the decision. Thirteen years' hard training and a knowledge of every point of the game explain their supremacy. "Men Who Know" go down strong on them. The wise money picks the B. & K. every time. See their performance and you'll back them, too. They are always fit as fighting cocks, in fact, a guarantee of a perfect fit goes with every suit, or money refunded.

Suits to order. $20 to $50.

OIL OIL

TO THE PUBLIC:

Perhaps you have been reading in the papers about the great oil strikes that have been made in the California oil fields. Some of the wells are producing as high as 400,000 barrels per day. We have organized a company and while we are not anticipating a 400,000 barrel gusher, yet we confidently expect wells producing at least 10,000 barrels per day. As we will put down 16 wells within the next 90 days, you can readily see our income will be "right smart" for a small company with a capitalization of only $50,000. 16 wells producing 10,000 barrels per day—160,000 barrels per day, and at the present market price of 65c per barrel—$104,000 per day or $3,120,000 per month.

Our property is located at Midway, adjoining and within a stone's throw of the 400,000 barrel gusher, therefore there is no doubt about the value of our property. The Standard Petroleum Co., of America offered us $50,000,00 and one half royalty for our property, but we refused for the reason that we wish to let a few of our old friends in the basement window as there is sufficient to make us all rich just as soon as the gushers come in.

The state geologist was out and examined our property and he reported that our derricks are directly over the center of a large lake of oil with the borders of this lake extending to the outer edges of our property. The most expert calculations indicate that this lake is fully 1000 feet deep and the geologist has figured out that it will require 23½ years to exhaust the supply when all of our 16 wells are producing. Our first well will be in within 23 days. We are offering a small block of stock to a few of our special friends to procure sufficient funds to provide storage tanks to take care of the oil when the wells come in. We are greatly handicapped for lack of ground on which to place our tanks and may find it necessary to lease the 100 acres adjoining us to provide sufficient space for the tanks. This small block of stock we are offering at only 50c per share, par value $1.00, and an expert oil man who has begged us to sell him some of the stock, stated he figured the stock would jump at once to $107 per share just as soon as we bring in the first 10,000 barrel gusher, which will be in just 23 days. (Confidentially, this same oil man offered us $10.00 per share for a block, but we felt sure he was sent by "Jawn D." and we prefer to let our old friends in at only 50c, as we are dead "agin'" big corporations, which never gives the small fellow a show.)

We have just had our bookkeeper make an estimate as to dividends, and he figures that when our 16 wells are producing, which will be within 90 days, that we will be able to pay a monthly dividend on the par value of the stock of $62.40 per share, which looks pretty good to us.

We have no desire to urge you and we wish to be conservative, yet we feel that if you are willing to wait 23 days for your dividends, you will thank us for advising you.

Yours in Oil.

Where Noise Is Fined.

The most silent town in Europe is (or rather was until recently) not Bruges apparently, but Driesen-Vordamm, in Brandenburg. Here the municipal regulation with regard to street noises are so strict that a visitor a short while ago was fined 5 marks for sneezing out of doors. The stranger that this small fee saved him from the properly deserved punishment of prison, he remained unmoved by the expression of generosity and preferred to argue the matter out in the local courts. He was eventually acquitted, but since the verdict the head of the police of Driesen-Vordamm refuses to answer for order in the streets of that

Drinking Liquor Playing a Sucker's Game

The Man Who Drinks Liquor Is Bound to Lose—His Judgment Is Bad and Business Methods Erratic—The Gatlin Treament Cures Drink Habit in THREE DAYS—No Hypodermic Injections or Other Disagreeable Features.

TO BE called a "sucker" galls the average man—the average sober man; but when applied to a liquor drinker, the word "sucker" is especially galling—it fits him so well, and in a half-developed opinion he has of himself, he knows that it fits.

The idea of a man taking into his system a poison that has ruined hundreds of other men of his own acquaintance and ten millions of others with whom he wasn't acquainted and trying to make himself believe that he is immune from its evil effects! Is a man a "sucker," whatever that word may mean, who does that?

You may never have been burnt by fire—yet you know that it will burn. You know that liquor will destroy a man's brain, his health, his wealth and his business, still you will drink it. If you stuck your finger in the fire, deliberately, just as you drink your whiskey, you would be reckoned a fool, wouldn't you? The fire would be a whole lot less injurious than the whiskey.

It has been said that Canfield, the notorious New York gambler, at all times served his visitors with FREE whiskey—all they wanted of it—but his croupiers and dealers were not allowed to touch the stuff; he wanted brains on one side of the table, but not on the other, he wanted "suckers" to play his game—and he knew how to make the "suckers." Maybe though Canfield just wanted to be sociable with his patrons and didn't believe that his dealers deserved "social recognition."

Any man of business—any man who drinks liquor, no matter the quantity, needs treatment to eliminate the accumulated alcoholic poison from his system. He can't stop drinking until that is done. The Gatlin treatment cures the liquor habit in THREE DAYS by driving the alcoholic toxins out of the system. That means a perfect cure—a cure of the permanent kind—for with the disappearance of the poison, craving, desire and physical and nerve-demand for liquor also disappear and the drinker is as the day he was born as regards liquor. Nervousness, craving, desire, are but symptoms—effects of alcoholic poisoning—Stored up poison is the cause. Directing treatment toward effect instead of cause is why other systems of treatment fail to bring about many permanent cures. The Gatlin removes the cause.

Each patient is accepted for treatment at the Gatlin Institute under a plain, legal contract to cure in THREE DAYS—cure to the entire satisfaction of the patient and his family—or the full fee paid shall be refunded at the end of the third day and treatment shall cost NOTHING. The Gatlin Institute is TEN YEARS OLD. There has never been a failure to cure, and more than seven thousand men have taken the Gatlin treatment. Financial references of the very highest character.

If you cannot come to the Gatlin Institute for three days, send for the Gatlin Home Treatment. It is just as effective as Institute treatment if directions are followed.

Write for books of particulars, copies of contracts and other information. Institute located at 1125 So. Grand Ave., Los Angeles, Cal. Long distance and local telephones: Broadway 1377, Home F1022. Mail inquiries answered promptly and strictly confidential.

WHAT'LL YOU TAKE?

NEVER IN CALIFORNIA SUCH AN ANTI-SALOON AGITATION.

Issue Coming to a Show-Down in Many Southern California Cities' Elections This Month—Statewide Movement of the Enemies of the Liquor Shop—Hardest Fight of All in San Bernardino.

A "NO SALOON" campaign is at once to be inaugurated in every county in this State under the direction and supervision of the Anti-Saloon League. Plans to that end have been under consideration for more than a year, and the fight is now about to be made in the open.

In a dozen or more towns and cities in Southern California the preliminary skirmishes will be fought during the present month, at the time of the local elections.

Never before in the history of California has there been so many communities grappling at the same time with the liquor question. Booze is bothering dry towns and wet towns with generous impartiality. Where towns in the Southland are now dry efforts are being made to make them wet, and vice versa. Redlands is divided over a proposition of permitting even druggists to sell spirits without bona fide prescriptions every time from a reputable physician. Long Beach has many voters who want the Pasadena method of allowing wines and beers to be served with meals in restaurants and hotels during meal hours.

EACH COMMUNITY.

And so it goes. Each community has some phase of the liquor problem to worry over, and where there is no special agitation on the subject, there are enough busybodies at work to keep the subject agitated. In Compton the people will vote on the straight issue; saloons or no saloons. If the Taxpayers' party loses in the election at Watts, that classic metropolis will be drier than Death Valley. Colton will lose its two saloons, which pay a monthly revenue of $300 each to the city for their present licenses, if the temperance people win in the present battle that is being waged with fiery spirit and bitter earnestness on both sides. The "wets" are endeavoring to elect three trustees at San Jacinto so that alcoholic beverages may no longer have to be sought for up back-alleys or out in the woods. An effort is being made to install the high license system at Corona and Newport is to decide on the straight "wet" or "dry" list. Huntington Beach's election may result in the voters deciding to have the saloon question submitted to them for decision, and at Elsinore the agitation is on again. Even South Pasadena is not free from the "anti-rum ticket," even though both the contending parties are pledged to keep the community in the temperance fold. And there are other towns where the voters are being asked to register their approval or disapproval of either prohibition, anti-saloon, high license, open saloons, or some other phase of the way that John Barleycorn and his more or less distant relatives can present.

From Southern California, the fight against booze is to be taken into every county from San Diego to Modoc, and from Del Norte to San Bernardino. Leaders of the Anti-Saloon League admit that they are prepared for the most thorough "no saloon" campaign ever undertaken in California, and they profess to be sanguine of unusual success. Numerous conferences of the leaders of the Aanti-Saloon forces have been held in Los Angeles of late, as well as at other centers of the work in the North. Dr. E. S. Chapman, superintendent of the Southern California Anti-Saloon League, outlines the plans of that organization to make California free of saloons, in the following statement to The Times:

STATE WIDE PLANS.

"About one year ago the State Anti-Saloon League entered upon a Statewide campaign to secure the election of members of the Legislature who would enact a county unit and municipal unit local option law. We were moved at that time to begin this campaign by the failure of the State Senate to pass the local option bill we were then seeking to have enacted into law. The bill was introduced in both the House and Senate, but no action was taken in the lower branch of the Legislature as the unfavorable action of the Senate indicated that even if the measure passed the assembly it would not become a law. Our local option measure, if enacted into law, will not make liquor selling illegal in any portion of the State. It will simply confer upon the people of each municipality not having a charter, and upon the people of that portion of the county outside of municipalities, the right by petition to secure the opportunity to vote for or against the beverage liquor traffic as they prefer, and to have their verdict made effective as law until repealed or modified by themselves. It is simply what its name indicates—a measure to give the people an option, an opportunity, to express their wishes respecting this vitally important question.

"The measure which will become a law, if the people vote in its favor, will be in the petition which they sign and will be uniform throughout those portions of the State which vote in its favor. The petitions will be addressed to the Supervisors for an opportunity to vote upon the question within those portions of the county over which the Supervisors have jurisdiction respecting this matter—those portions of the county lying outside of municipalities. There will also be provision for a petition signed by people residing within the boundaries of municipalities asking for the same opportunity. The vote of the people in the country portions of the county will not affect conditions within the boundaries of municipalities, nor will the vote in municipalities be valid in the country portions of the county. But the measure will guarantee to the people the right and power to enact into law a saloon suppressing ordinance if they so desire. This is so thoroughly right and reasonable, so manifestly American, that we are insisting that every candidate for the Legislature, in order to secure the support of the anti-saloon people in his district, shall give them satisfactory assurance that it has his hearty approval and will receive his support.

"The time has come when the people who desire saloon banishment must demand of the State Legislature such a local option measure. True, they can now secure prohibition by electing Supervisors favorable to such an ordinance, but we have been so often betrayed by men whose election we have secured that the people are determined to secure for themselves the right to enact their wishes into law. Twelve years ago when I began work as Anti-Saloon League superintendent there was in Section 13, of the county government law, provisions by which the people had what we are now seeking, but the law was so worded as to be declared by the Supreme Court unconstitutional. In a large number of counties of the State, Supervisors have uniformly and defiantly refused to submit the question to a vote of the people, and in other counties—after securing the popular verdict on the question—the Supervisors have refused to carry out the wishes of the people. Serious difficultie have been en-area to the entire State of New York, but that leaves many times as much area as has been made dry still subject to the domination of the liquor traffic against the will of the people. In view of these conditions, the Anti-Saloon League decided before the close of the last session of our Legislature that a State-wide movement should be conducted for the election of members of the Legislature favorable to local option. This work has been prosecuted with vigor during the past year, and the people are alert and are eager to receive from the authorities of the Anti-Saloon League, instruction with reference to the attitude respecting question of candidates for the Legislature.

"We have wrought with untiring zeal and earnestness during the past twelve years to create a public sentiment in this State which we now seek to have enacted into law. By the greatest of our Presidents, this has been declared to be a "government of the people, by the people, for the people," and it has been the boast of Californians that in this State our form of government is more nearly in harmony with this language of Lincoln than is the case in any other State of the Union. This is true with reference to the Constitution and to some of the general laws of the State, but it needs this local option enactment to make effective the provisions of the organic law of the State. We shall not be timid or backward in seeking to ascertain the attitude of candidates for the Legislature respecting this question. Some may be offended but only such as are in sympathy with the liquor traffic or such as have not a full and clear realization of the authority and rights of the people. This is the paramount question now before the people of this State; the only issue respecting which there is any pronounced degree of enthusiasm. It was my privilege to be present at the hearing of our local option bill last winter before the joint committee of the Senate and Assembly, and then and there to hear the president of the Royal Arch and the attorney for the retail liquor dealers of the State declare that the people should not have the right to banish the saloon even though they might in overwhelming majorities desire to do so. That declaration made my American blood tingle in my veins, for it involved nothing less than a declaration that, in order to secure the liquor men in their traffic, every man in the State opposed to that traffic should be disfranchised, or in other words deprived of his right as an American citizen to vote upon that vitally important question. At the time that declaration was made I was superintendent of the league throughout the State. Since then it has been deemed advisable to organize two leagues, but this action does not in any degree interfere with our State campaign for a local option law. The anti-saloon people are a numberless host in this State. Again and again, by majorities of more than two to one, has the people's disapproval of the saloon been expressed at the ballot box. Los Angeles is one of the counties in which two-third of the people have voted in favor of no-license. That numberless multitude is a unit respecting this local option movement and will pay little heed to their party preferences or to any issues which may be before the people when deciding as to their support of a candidate for the Legislature who is opposed to local option.

"Yes, there are other officials beside Legislators whose ability to secure the anti-saloon vote will depend upon their position upon this question. Candidates for the office of Supervisors, District Attorney, Sheriff, etc., together with those seeking State official positions, must be willing and glad to afford the people every needed facility for expressing their wishes respecting the liquor traffic, and for having their wishes not only enacted into law but vigorously and faithfully enforced. For more than a quarter of a century I have been going up and down this great State and have been brought into touch with the people as has been the privilege of few men. I am, therefore, speaking within the limits of my own knowledge when I state that with more enthusiasm than they ever had in any campaign in the past, the people of California are enlisted in this State-wide movement for the American right of effective local option. It is with the greatest reluctance, but with unyielding determination, that the Anti-Saloon League enters into a movement that will interfere with partisan action. While our local option bill was pending before the Legislature last winter I addressed a special message to each member of the Legislature beseeching him, by enacting our local option law, to take this question utterly out of the realm of partisanship, but assuring him that it would not abate but rather increase our zeal and determination to have our constitutional rights made valid by a local option law if the then existing Legislature failed to grant our requests. They did so fail and theirs, not ours is the responsibility for the tremendous and determined struggle the people will make for the election of a Legislature sufficiently American and fair-minded to provide for the exercise by the people of their constitutional rights respecting this question."

Speaking in reference to the campaign in Southern California, Dr. Chapman said:

SAN BERNARDINO COUNTY.

"There is only one saloon town in Southern California where there is an election impending in which the saloon question is the main issue. The town in question is Colton in San Bernardino county, where an election will be held next Tuesday, April 11. The courts refused to permit the no-saloon question to appear upon the ballot and so the fight is being made on the election of trustees. From the present outlook we expect to be successful in banishing the saloon from Colton. My assistant, Rev. D. M. Gandier has been on the ground assisting in the campaign.

"There is a campaign on in San Bernardino, also, but it has a different phase to it. The city charter there contains the initiative and direct legislation provision, and under those provisions the Anti-Saloon forces are endeavoring to vote that city 'dry.' It is a hard proposition in San Bernardino because that city has some twenty and more saloons, each of which pays a monthly license of $100. The election there takes place the latter part of this month. Our people are conducting one of the most skillful and wise campaigns that I have ever known, and they are very much encouraged. I expect to speak there two or three times before election day.

IN MERCED.

"The only other saloon town in Southern California that I know of where there is a direct campaign on against the saloon, is at Merced, the county seat of Merced county. A very vigorous and promising campaign is being conducted there to put the saloon out of business.

"There are two 'no-saloon' towns nearer home where the saloon question is up, Oceanside and National City, them out. The saloon interests are doing their utmost to change the present situation. Our people have perfect confidence of winning in both these places."

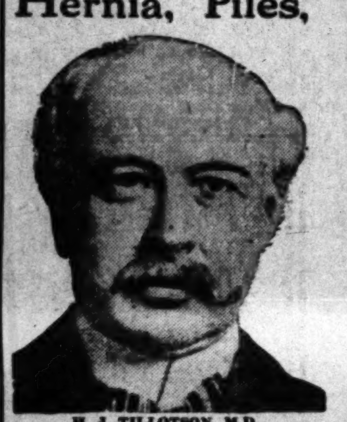
Cured in 5 Days

Hernia, Piles, Varicose Veins



H. J. TILLOTSON, M.D.

MANY CASES PERMANENTLY CURED IN ONE TREATMENT. MOST TIME-SAVING, MOST NATURAL, MOST SAFE. NO DETENTION FROM OCCUPATION, FAMILY OR HOME. A RADICAL AND PERMANENT CURE. I WILL GIVE $500 TO ANY CHARITY AS A GUARANTEE THAT EVERY STATEMENT IN THIS ANNOUNCEMENT IS TRUE.

The most valuable information in the world is to know where to be cured. I am the only Specialist in Los Angeles who does not advertise a fictitious name and photograph. I publish my true photograph, correct name, personally conduct my office. I am the longest established, most successful and reliable, as medical credentials and press records prove. I make this statement so that you will know you consult a celebrated Specialist, who sees and treats patients personally. I possess skill and experience, acquired in such a way that no other can share, and should not be classed with medical companies. Experience is the safe standard by which judgment may be valued, and it is unwise and expensive to embrace the statements of medical companies. It is impossible for a medical company to attend college. Companies have no diploma or license to practice medicine in California or any other State. Medical companies usually are named after a doctor. A portrait whose personality and identity are indefinite, is selected and published as the legitimate specialist of the office. Hired substitutes, ordinary doctors with questionable ability, give consultation, examination and treatment.

A thorough investigation should be made by every ailing man as to the specialist he consults. Duty and destiny to self and those who depend upon you demand the best medical attention. I have the ability and can give you this service. I have always charged a very reasonable fee, so that my services may be obtained by any man who sincerely desires to be cured. I make no misleading statements or unbusinesslike propositions; neither do I desire to be particularly independent, and I would like to have you for a patient, if you will come to me on a strictly professional basis, and the inducements that I offer, which are my ability and thirty years' successful experience Time-Saving Treatment; and Guarantee of cure of certain Diseases.

NO MONEY REQUIRED TO COMMENCE TREATMENT. Many patients have no confidence in their doctor, because he demands pay before a cure has been effected, and there are many who have been misinformed about their condition, or through unsuccessful treatment have become skeptical and think there is no cure for them. I want an opportunity to treat such men. It makes no difference about the financial part, as I accept pay for my services as benefits are derived, when I am satisfied the patient is reliable. Health is capital at interest. I will prove my ability to cure you before asking pay for my services.

WRITEN GUARANTEE.

Dr. Tillotson's Written Guarantee means a cure or no pay for services. I guarantee to cure certain diseases or refund every dollar you have paid me for my services. My services cost you nothing unless I cure your Varicose Veins, Hernia, Piles, Fissures, Ulcerations, or any disease I guarantee to cure. My terms are reasonable and no more than you are willing and able to pay. Established 1880

I cure rapidly, painlessly and at small expense. I will demonstrate actual results in your case. I will give conclusive evidence of my merit which is obtained and maintained by ability. I invite you to come to my office; I will explain my treatment for Hernia, Piles, Fistula, Varicose Veins, Pelvic, Nervous, Blood, Kidney, Bladder and Rectal Diseases. I will give you free a physical examination; if necessary a microscopical and chemical analysis of secretions to determine existing pathological and bacteriological conditions. Every gentleman should take advantage of this opportunity to learn his true condition. Certainty of cure is what you want.

VARICOSE VEINS.

In the cure of Varicose Veins, Rupture and Associate Diseases of the Pelvic Region, I am successful in bringing to bear the curative power of Nature's forces in such a manner as to supplant the old-time, wide-open surgical operations. Once it required several weeks to cure these conditions, and the method which some still use is such to endanger the life of the patient, and require a long period of convalescence. Now an absolute cure can be accomplished in a few days and with perfect safety.

TRUSSES SELDOM CURE RUPTURE. Disregard for existing Hernias has cost many lives. The smallest hernias are the most dangerous to life, because of the increased liability to strangulation. I am aware that a great deal of fraud has been practiced on the public in connection with the alleged cure of Rupture, and when I say positively that I cure Rupture, to stay cured, I do not expect any one to accept my statement without investigation of my professional work. My claim to your confidence is based on absolute facts; accomplished results. At a personal consultation I will make a free examination and can explain every detail of your Hernia and demonstrate to you the curative value of the method I have discovered. I invite the careful investigation of any person who sincerely desires to be cured. I cure Rupture, in selected cases, with perfect safety and entail no suffering, and do not detain you from occupation under Written Guarantee. Many cases cured to stay cured by one treatment.

PILES, FISTULA, RECTAL DISEASES.

These diseases are very common; most frequently found in persons of middle or advanced age; are exceedingly annoying, often very painful, and sometimes very dangerous, and frequently unfit one for pleasure or occupation. My treatment and success are the result of years of experience; my treatment is kindly applied. I cure Piles without cutting. Some cases are cured by one or more treatments. If I do not cure your Piles, Fistula and other Rectal Diseases, my treatment does not cost you anything. Gentleness in treatment comes from treating many cases, so I guarantee a cure of Piles, Fistula, Fissures, Ulcers and all curable Rectal Diseases.

Midway Chief

WE ARE authorized by the Midway Chief Oil Company to receive subscriptions for the stock at fifteen cents a share. This stock is treasury stock and is being sold for the benefit of the company. The Midway Chief Company is operating a forty-acre lease in the North Midway field and has a hole now down thirteen hundred feet, and operations continuing night and day.

The founders of the Midway Chief Company spent sixteen thousand dollars on this well, together with a standard rig and the necessary quarters for the drillers, before asking the public to subscribe for a dollar of stock. Besides the lease in North Midway the company has twenty acres of absolutely proven territory five hundred rods southwest of the Lakeview gusher. This property is surrounded with producing wells and good wells are assured. Thus the company has protected their enterprise with an assured asset. This enterprise is worthy of your attention and the strictest investigation is invited. The officers and directors of the Midway Chief are your friends and neighbors, men who have established themselves in this community and whose records are known to all. These men are developing a natural resource and invite you to join, assuring you honorable treatment and the fullest consideration, believing the stock of the Midway Chief offers an opportunity for those who wish to participate in one of the State's greatest resources. The men behind this enterprise assure every stockholder a square deal and an honest accounting of every dollar that is handled. The company is incorporated for seven hundred and fifty thousand shares, par value one dollar, of which amount there is remaining in the treasury five hundred thousand shares. The balance of the stock represents what has already been done and shows a record that merits the confidence of the investing public. It is expected that the first well will be brought in from the sale of one hundred thousand shares and there will still remain in the treasury over half of the capital stock. These facts with the men behind the enterprise and the price asked for the stock makes the stock of the Midway Chief Oil Company one of the best buys on the market.

WEAK SPOTS IN LEMON SCIENCE

Experts Sent to California to Study Situation.

Will Experiment in Methods of Handling Crop.

Gen. Sherman of Oakland Has a Grievance.

BY F. J. DYER.

(SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.)

WASHINGTON, April 4.—As an outgrowth of the important work done in California by the Department of Agriculture under the direction of G. Harold Powell in the determination of causes of decay in oranges in storage and during transportation, the department has undertaken to find out why lemons decay, and to see if there is any solution of various questions affecting the curing, storing and shipment of lemons.

The prospect that there will be a considerable increase in the output of lemons due partly to the increase of the tariff and in part to the coming into bearing of groves planted before the tariff law was enacted, has brought home to the growers and the department alike the necessity of widening the market. To do this, the average haul of lemons must be increased and new markets must be found.

Prof. William A. Taylor, in charge of pomological field investigations, has sent to California to conduct this investigation, A. V. Stubenrach, who has associated with him A. W. McKay, with headquarters in San Diego; H. J. Ramsay and B. B. Pratt, who have headquarters with Mr. Stubenrach in Los Angeles. Messrs. Ramsay and Pratt are conducting experiments at Pasadena and at Santa Barbara.

"There is a big problem," said Prof. Taylor, to the correspondent of the Times, "in the increase of the lemon crop in prospect, and the need of distributing it over a wider area. For the the first time, during the past year, the California lemon has become an important factor in the lemon supply of the Atlantic tidewater territory. Hitherto this territory has depended almost entirely on imported Mediterranean fruit. Until quite recently the territory west of the Alleghany Mountains has taken care of the entire California production. The trip to the Mississippi Valley being correspondingly shorter, the competition of the imported fruit has been comparatively mild.

"What we are endeavoring to find out by the work now being carried on in California, is the cause, or causes of decay. We want to locate the weak spots in handling methods. An effort is being made to ascertain how important careful handling of the lemon is in distinction from the ordinary commercial handling, and to determine the relation of washing, which much of the fruit undergoes, to the development of decay at a time weeks and even months after the operation of washing or scrubbing is completed.

"It is too soon yet to generalize on the results of the work, for it is necessary to cover at least an entire picking season, which, for lemons, is a whole year, before a safe generalization is possible. At the same time attention is being given to the relative durability of lemons picked at different stages of maturity or ripeness. I refer to the condition known as tree ripeness, the plain yellow stage and the green fruit. We wish to ascertain whether the stage of maturity affects the keeping quality of the fruit.

"We have selected men who are thought to be especially qualified for this work. They are carrying on similar experiments at each of the three places, San Diego, Pasadena and Santa Barbara. There seems to be a good deal still to learn about lemon culture, and the department recognizes that it would be a slow and expensive labor for private individuals to learn about it for themselves. In the end we hope to have some results which will be of substantial benefit."

THE RULES CONTEST.

Nothing which has happened in a long time has left the California delegation in such a disgruntled state of disruption as the contest over representation on the Rules Committee. Half of the delegation are nursing sore places, and only one is absolutely contented with the outcome. I refer to Smith, who was elected a member of the committee, and even Smith is just a little in doubt whether or not he will annex more honors or troubles from his preferment.

The fact is that the old-timers looked upon the new Rules Committee as a dangerous thing to fool with. Nearly everything good or bad which transpires in the way of legislation is ascribed to the committee. If a measure fails to go through it is the fault of the committee. If it does go through and somebody thinks it should have been killed, it's the committee again. Before the revolution in the House, when the Speaker was virtually the committee, the blame rested on the Speaker. Now that the Speaker has to some extent had his wings clipped the committee alone will be blamed. Consequently, members who had constituencies which were violently partisan regarding some measure looked on a membership on the committee as if it were loaded with dynamite. Those members who were most wary were the ones who had a large constituency of laboring men. Smith has no big cities in his district and few problems which arise in them, so he was picked as a man who could well afford to go on the committee and accept the responsibilities which would attach to it.

HOW THEY LINED UP.

Three members of the California delegation were active and two more were receptive candidates for a place on the committee, notwithstanding the question of policy as to whether or not they would better take the chance. Kahn was out for it and he was looked on as an eligible until in an evil moment he asked Hayes to help him. Then the sentiment against the insurgents worked to render Hayes a liability to Kahn instead of an asset. It was remarked that Hayes had made a speech, before the old Committee on Rules was dethroned, in which he said in effect that he had nothing against the Speaker. It was argued that he hoped, as titular leader of the insurgents, to be given a placve on the committee. Later he was quoted in an interview in the Washington Post, as denouncing Cannon. At that time his chance to get on the Rules Committee had vanished. Still later he refused to sign the call for the caucus, and his colleagues held that up against him. Then when he immediately stepped to the front as a champion of Kahn the delegation decided that Kahn with such backing would not do. McLachlan also was reported to be an active candidate, although he will not admit it. He was not acceptable to the leaders, however, and the delegation failed to give him its support, so he was dropped from the list of possibilities. He was very much incensed, but it did him no good. Needham was touted as a good man for the place, inasmuch as he was the member who, of all those from the Coast had the record of longest service in the House. He admitted privately that if selected he would not shirk but he was not exactly anxious to have the honor. Then Smith was picked, and the leaders agreed to accept him as a safe organization man, who was a good worker and not likely to fly the track. Knowland did not want the honor, Englebright did not ask for it, and McKinlay, who was away making speeches in Kansas, would rather be on the stump than on the committee anyway. The delegation never got together to talk things over and so there was never any organized expression of its wishes. The members are nearly all sore over the denouement, and several of them declare that in the future, if similar circumstances arise, they will caucus and have an understanding before anything is done.

By refusing to donate two old cannon taken in the Mexican War, the War Department has incurred the disfavor of certain veterans who fought against the southern republic, and the nation has been reminded that nearly twenty-five years have elapsed since a society was organized to build a monument at Monterey, commemorating the acquisition of California by the United States.

Gen. Edwin A. Sherman of Oakland, is secretary of the Sloat Monument Association. He made request some time ago that the War Department donate the old Mexican guns at the Presidio of San Francisco to decorate the Sloat monument. Gen. Barry reported that the guns were needed for ornaments, and the assistant Secretary of War thereupon refused to sanction their gift to the Sloat Monument Association. He offered, however, to give two other guns at Benecia, which, though not in any sense trophies of Commodore Sloat, were, in the opinion of the department, just as good. Gen. Sherman, however, refused to have any substitute palmed off on him, especially if that substitute were a reminder of the glory of the War Department. He accordingly wrote a withering letter to Senator Perkins, wherein he protested formally and forcibly, and announced that the administration, in treating the Mexican veterans with contumely, was drifting dangerously near the rocks of public condemnation.

Talks ON Teeth

BY

Rex Dental Co.

(Incorporated.)

"Eating His Meals With Pleasure"

There are two times in a man's life when he can say he enjoys eating his meals.

One is before he loses any teeth and all of them are in good condition—and the next time is when, after years of discomfort, due to lack of teeth, the wearing of an old fashioned "bridge," or a partial plate, he is fitted out by us with a complete set of the Rex Dental Co.'s Alveolar Teeth, and told to go and eat his meals with pleasure.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 30th, 1910.
Rex Dental Company, Los Angeles, Cal.

Dear Sirs:—It is just one year since you put in for me my full set of alveolar teeth, and not to be ungrateful I must say that they are comfortable as well as useful. With only four stubs left in either jaw, you have fastened a set of teeth in my mouth as solid as a rock. I now can chew hard crusts of bread, corn on the cob or anything eatable coming my way.

Yours respectfully,
(Signed) LOUIS WAGNER,
119 East First St., Los Angeles.

We do not say, favor this or that part of the work, but use the teeth exactly as you would nature's. Use them, but don't abuse them; keep them clean, and in all probability they will last as long as you do.

And to add emphasis to what we say we give each patient a written guarantee which recites that in the event the Rex Dental Co.'s Alveolar Teeth fail to prove satisfactory and won't hold, this company will replace it with a removable work "Free of Charge."

One reason we issue such a strong and binding guarantee is that the majority of cases which come to us are desperate.

We are the court of last resort.

And yet people hate to give up to the plate even when there are but a couple of teeth left.

A respite of one, two or five years, with a possibility of obtaining three times that much wear, makes them chance the Rex Dental Co.'s Alveolar Method, and especially when this binding guarantee goes with it.

It is one proposition where there is no chance to lose.

Now, friends, we ask you to give us a chance to put your teeth in perfect order, before your case becomes desperate.

So many times you will go to a dentist who knows nothing of the wonderful Rex Dental Co.'s Alveolar system, and let him file down, cut off or pull out good, live, natural teeth to make room for an old fashioned "Bridge" or partial plate.

Don't do this, we beg of you.

Every tooth in your head is worth a thousand dollars. Save them. We can use them all.

Come to us and let us at least look your mouth over, free of any charge or obligation, and advise you what is the "best plan" to follow, and we say it in advance—we know.

Don't let yours become a desperate case.

There is no pain, no boring into the jaws, nothing to be afraid of—and it is mostly laboratory work, so you won't be long in the chair.

It is a comfortable piece of work, while being done and afterward—

Send for our 40-page free book, "Alveolar Method of Dentistry." Read it carefully. If you are not near enough to call, all that is necessary is your name and address on the coupon below.

You will find this one of the most instructive books about the teeth ever written.

DAY NURSERY MEETS NEED.

Mothers and Babies Approve of New Plan.

Principal Says City Should Open Institutions.

Los Angeles club women are giving a great deal of attention to the founding and maintenance of day nurseries in the various sections of the city where such institutions are most needed. Two weeks ago the Utah-street grammar school celebrated the opening a new building which was donated by the Mothers' Congress, and which will be used as a nursery for the many infants cared for at the school.

The Utah-street school is located in the heart of the Russian district, and fully three-fourths of the pupils are of that nationality. Both the fathers and the mothers of the families work, and this necessitates the elder children remaining at home to care for the smaller brothers and sisters. Rather than have them stay home, the principal of the school, two years ago, gave the scholars permission to bring the babies to school with them, and leave them in her office during school hours.

The office is small, and when ten or fifteen babies were crowded into it, things became rather interesting for the principal, who, up to the time of the opening of the new nursery, took care of the little ones until their older brothers or sisters finished school for the day.

Three months ago Mrs. E. B. Maple, a member of the Mothers' Congress, visited the school to speak at a meeting of the Parent-Teachers Association. She was impressed with the need of a suitable place where the babies could be properly cared for, and she started a campaign to interest the members of the Congress in a movement of securing such a nursery.

One of the bungalows used as a school-room was given by the school board, and this was moved to the school grounds by the ladies interested. A Russian woman, the mother of several children, was paid $5 a week to give her entire time during the day to the care of the babies, and the nursery moved from its old crowded quarters in the principal's office into the new home.

The bungalow is large and airy, making an ideal nursery for the babies. A number of low chairs and tables, toys, flowers, playthings and little cribs comprise the furniture, and during the middle of the day the babies may be seen, two and three in a crib, fast asleep. They are carefully washed and dressed each day, and in [illegible] receive better care than would be given them by their own mothers.

A LITTLE MOTHER.

There is one little Russian girl in the first grade of the school, who is but seven years old, yet she cares for two smaller sisters, and is excused from school each morning at 11:30 so that she may go home and cook dinner for her father and mother who work in a factory near the school. Every morning she wheels the babies to school in an old soap-box wagon, seeing that they are safe at the nursery before she goes to her class-room. It is surprising, the care the little girls, hardly more than babies themselves, take of their little sisters and brothers, and a seven-year-old girl cooking dinner for the family is a common occurrence in the Russian district.

One of the little boys, named Ivan, who is six years old, brings his little sister to the nursery each morning, but he does not concern himself much about the welfare of the baby.

A few days ago, for some small offense against the rules of the school, Ivan was told that he would have to stay twenty minutes after school was out. Ivan was displeased, and that afternoon he did not return to school, but went down town and sold papers, forgetting all about his baby sister, who was taken home by one of the other children.

The next day when he returned to school wheeling the baby in an old wagon, he was met by the principal.

number of big trees, and on pleasant days the babies are taken out and allowed to sleep in the shade. For the other children, those who are not old enough to attend school, there are swings and games, which were donated to the nursery by the Playground Commission, and in one corner of the yard is a great pile of sand in which the babies dig, build sand houses and amuse themselves in various ways.

Some of the little ones have come to the nursery each day since the opening of the school term, and after they become acquainted with the woman in charge, and with the other children, they prefer the nursery to their homes. The children who attend the kindergarten at the school, and who are dismissed at noon, are cared for at the nursery until they can be taken in charge by their older sisters and brothers. Some days there will be as many as fifty children playing in the yard and playroom of the nursery at one time, and there are never less than ten small babies to be looked after by the woman in charge.

MILK IS PREPARED.

Several gallons of fresh milk are left at the nursery each day and this is carefully prepared before being given to the babies. At noon a hot meal is served, consisting of good plain food and plenty of it.

"There is great need in Los Angeles for a large day nursery, conducted by the city," said Miss A. J. Cushing, principal of the Utah-street school. "Such an institution could be conducted at no great cost, as a small sum, say 5 cents, could be charged, and while that would not pay the expenses it would help. The other nurseries operating in Los Angeles charge 10 cents a day for one child, and 5 cents additional for each extra child from each family, and while the money received in this way does not begin to pay the expenses of the nurseries, it helps considerable."

According to Miss Cushing the problem of a day nursery must sooner or later be taken up by the city, for if all the children are to have the advantages of an education the city must provide a place where the babies can be cared for while the older children are at school. Four nurses, she said, could care for nearly 100 babies without difficulty, and where a great many are fed, as would be the case at a city nursery, the cost of food for each child would not be great.

THREE NURSERIES IN CITY.

There are three nurseries in Los Angeles at the present time. Each of these is located within a few blocks of the other, all being in the district east of the river and north of First street. This fact, according to the ladies at the head of toem, makes it extremely difficult for mothers living in other sections of the city, to bring their babies, as they must pay an extra car fare. Many of them cannot afford to do that, and as the result, the older children are kept from school to care for the younger ones while the mothers and fathers work to support the families.

At No. 132 North Clarence street is located the nursery of the Order of King's Daughters. Here thirty-five to fifty babies are cared for daily, a charge of 10 cents a day being asked where the mothers are able to pay that sum.

This is the oldest nursery in the city, being organized in 1895. Since that date it has been compelled to move to larger quarters five times, having moved into its present home about two years ago.

This institution was established at the suggestion of Rev. J. J. Finley, who was at the head of the Bethlehem Institution, before Dr. Dana W. Bartlett took charge of the work, and who died the year after the nursery was put into operation.

MOTHERS GROW CONFIDENT.

At first it was doubtful whether it would succeed, but the work soon passed the experimental stage, and once the mothers saw that their babies were well cared for, they did not hesitate to leave them in the care of the nurse. It is non-sectarian, and cares for children of all creeds.

The work is carried on under the direction of a board of directors and a board of managers, with committees having charge of the various departments. Weekly classes are held in Bible study, sewing and physical culture. Children between the ages of 1 and 12 years are admitted. Daily lessons are given the children in household duties, cleanliness and deportment, and small entertainments are frequently held, especially at Christmas and Easter time. On alternate weeks a mothers' meeting, for the purpose of Bible study is held, a competent teacher being in charge. All the children over 5 years of age are sent to school, the nurse taking those who are not old enough to go alone. At noon a substantial hot dinner is served and a light supper is given the children in the afternoon before the parents call for them.

Each summer they are taken for an outing to "Rest Cottage," a large house at Manhattan Beach, where they are kept during the hot months. This cottage is also used during the year for children who are convalescing after sickness, or who are in need of a rest. As the income of the institution does not cover the expenses, the difference is made up by contributions and membership fees in the Order of King's Daughters.

THREE NURSES IN CHARGE.

Smith and Miss Blanche Rieche. A physician also gives his services to the children, and when they become too sick to be cared for at the nursery they are removed to the Children's Hospital.

One of the first difficulties which is encountered when a Russian mother brings her baby to the nursery, is in making her submit to having the baby "unwrapped." When brought there, most of the babies are wrapped in several blankets. To remove a single wrap, the mothers think, would mean the death of the child, but in a few weeks, when they see no ill-effects following the treatment the children receive, they gain confidence and cause no trouble.

The doors of the nursery open at 6:30 in the morning and close at the same hour in the evening. To have the mid-day meal, children must be brought before 9 o'clock in the morning. No child suffering from a contagious disease is admitted.

At No. 135 North Anderson street is the Brownson Home, the Catholic nursery, and here an average of thirty children are cared for daily.

Although a Catholic institution, no questions as to the creed of the parents are asked.

Why Do Men DRINK?

When you stop to think of the terrible results which come to men who indulge to excess in intoxicating beverages, well may you ask, Why do men drink? The fact simply stated is "A victim of the Drink Habit can no more resist liquor than a man with ague can stop shivering. Drunkenness is a disease and must be treated as such. The wives and mothers of those who drink intoxicants will be glad to know there is a remedy which will restore their loved ones to lives of sobriety and usefulness. Many thousands of grateful women praise Orrine for its benefits. Orrine has been known to effect a cure after all other means failed.

Paxson & Rockefeller, 24 West Park St., Butte, Mont., tell about a case of drunkenness of 25 years' standing. Read what they say: "A gentleman well known to us, who has been a hard drinker for twenty-five years, stated he had been entirely cured by Orrine. We consider this a remarkable case, as this gentleman has been treated three different times at a well known sanatorium. This and other cases that have come to our knowledge gives us confidence in your preparation, and it gives us pleasure to recommend it to those needing a reliable cure for intemperance."

Orrine is prepared in two forms. No. 1, a powder, absolutely tasteless and odorless, given secretly in food or drink. Orrine No. 2, in pill form, is for those who wish to cure themselves. Orrine costs only $1 a box. The guarantee is in each box. Write for Free Orrine Booklet (mailed in plain sealed envelope) to Orrine Co., 919 Orrine Building, Washington, D. C. Orrine is for sale in this city by The Owl Drug Co., Inc., 320 So. Spring st., Fifth and Broadway, 625 So. Broadway.

They know Orrine is a reliable and efficacious remedy for drunkenness and they will not offer you a substitute.

THE LITTLE TOWN OF WATTS.

BY CARLYLE C. M'INTYRE.

Oh, my brother of the city
  Of the Mellow Evening Bells,
Listen to the humble ditty
  Of a grateful heart that dwells
In the Valley of Contentment,
  Down toward the tumbling sea,
Clear thy mind of all resentment,
  Let thy fancy follow me.

Leave thy palace home and leisure
  In the shadows of the dream;
Leave thy mocking hollow pleasure
  Leave thy pride and joys that seem,
Come with me to sunlit spaces,
  To this cottage land of mine,
Where sincerity replaces
  Human traits far less divine.

Where the ardent sun is bringing
  Golden tribute to my door,
And the swaying roses flinging
  Shifting shadows on the floor;
And the breezes landward sweeping
  From the bosom of the sea,
As they sway the roses sleeping
  Whisper melodies to me.

Whisper melodies that mingle
  With the mother's baby croon,
As she chants the childish jingle
  Through the summer afternoon;
Whisper melodies that filling
  All the silences complete;
Join the childish laughter spilling,
  With the sunlight at my feet.

Come with me in humble raiment
  To this village of your jest;
We will reap a golden payment,
  For in blessing we are blessed;
You will see more life and living,
  Less of chaff and more of grain;
More of kindness and forgiving,
  Less of anguish and of pain.

Feel with us the grateful kindness,
  For the blessings that are ours,
Trust sincerely in thy blindness
  To the maker of our flowers,
For the life of prince or peasant,
  Be it hut or palace spent,
Is no greater nor more pleasant
  Than the depth of its content.

Maud Lillian Berri.
Olga Stech

Of the Kolb and Dill Forces.

The single pictures are of Miss Berri, who is the new leading woman of the organization, and clever little Olga Stech, C. Williams's Los Angeles find, who still remains as soubrette. The company, which will begin an extended spring engagement at Hamburger's Majestic Theater tonight, is said to be of the first order, and includes several local favorites in its list of principals.

DEPLORABLE.

NASTY FARCES EDGE ON STAGE.

FRENCH PRURIENCY THREATENS AMERICAN DECENCY.

Rapidly Increasing Evil Rests in the Hands of Two Men, A. L. Erlanger and Lee Shubert, Who Can, If They Will, Scatter the Filth by Refusing Bookings.

BY JULIAN JOHNSON.

There is coming a time—and that not far distant—when Abraham Erlanger and Lee Shubert will have abundant chance to prove the truth or falsity of their pious and oft-made assertions that they are really interested in the moral uplift of the American stage.

An evil day which can be averted or advanced by one or both of these men is foreshadowed, though slightly, by the decadence of vaudeville in the East.

Vaudeville has been going down in the East, and there are none who can honestly gainsay it. Whether it will come up again, in its own and Providence's time, is not the matter for present discussion. It is down now, and going further down.

It began with mediocre versions of Maud Allan's Salome dance, in which whatever art there might have been was omitted and only the nude details were exaggerated. Then came the Apache dance, and lately "Ma Gosse," which will not bear description, but which broadly suggests certain vices supposedly known only to the police and the doctors.

It will be noted that I said "eastern" vaudeville. Vaudeville of the West, so far, has been free from the main elements of this taint. The wide spaces and sweeeter airs of the plain and mountain country seem to kill these things as sunshine destroys a microba. But a plague is a contagion, and eastern evil and western simplicity cannot go on forever. One must influence the other in some degree. And a cup of muddy water will defile a whole tub of clear water.

This vaudeville question, however, is beside the main issue.

The mainstay of the stage—the legitimate drama—is threatened by an influx of dirty French farces.

"The Girl from Rector's," a brothelish thing with not one redeeming feature, is now followed by its kind—and worse.

One of the newest is "The Girl in the Taxi," billed as "Exceeding the speed limit."

Another, "Where There's a Will," advertised, "It's naughty but it's nice." The plot of this piece depends upon the necessity of an attractive young widow having an heir within a certain time limit in order to successfully claim an estate coming to her late childless spouse.

In prospect for immediate production are "The Girl From Lobster Square," "The Girl From Jack's" and "The Girl With the Whooping Cough," all depending for their success upon smut, and frankly appealing for patronage on that ground in just so many words.

Here comes the responsibility of A. L. Erlanger and Lee Shubert. Plays are valueless without theaters in which to present them. Lee Shubert and A. L. Erlanger control, between them, all the combination houses of the United States. There are no exceptions worth mentioning, and the manager whose show is refused by both these gentlemen has absolutely no recourse save to put his piece in the barn, scatter his people, and dispense with his production for what it will bring as theatrical junk.

In the East, however, this rot seems to be making a certain sort of money. In the show busines, more than in any other business, possibly, there is the axiom that "one man's money is as good as any other man's," and there are many managers—too many—who would as gleefuly clutch the drooling degenerate's dollar, received at a decadent show, as the same price of admission paid by a thinking, clean, sane man or woman to attend such a sweet play as "Your Humble Servant" or a bright, funny piece, like "Father and the Boys."

And money is very attractive to A. L. Erlanger and Lee Shubert. Both, on occasions, have issued philippics regarding their scruples and their lofty ideals—and now, let us see which will be the first to fall for the dirty farce

So far, neither has a lap on the other, for Abraham's little sins of commission are equaled by Lee's of the same nature.

Perhaps they will unite to stamp out the evil. That is, unite as far as uttering a like pronunciamento against it. Perhaps.

No art can deteriorate save from within. That cranks and would-be reformers yap ceaselessly at the heels of the honest men and women of the stage, and rail against the thinking, upright, progressive American author, in whom the hope of the whole drama lies, gives no cause for alarm. But it is a shame that lofty purposes and the thoughts of fine people must be debased by association with mental offal and panderer's refuse.

This is not an utterance of despair, by any means. The drama will reassert itself, just as a tree blown by the wind will turn upward to the life-giving sun at the first opportunity. This is merely an expression of passing regret.

NOVEL PICTURES.

Views of Roosevelt's Tour Through Africa Will Be Presented at the Auditorium.

"Theodore Roosevelt and What He Saw and Did in Africa," is the title of a moving-picture exhibition to be given at the Auditorium the week of April 18.

These are said to be the most costly films yet produced and represent the combined efforts of all licensed film manufacturers coöperating.

The obstacles to be overcome in following a hunting party through the wilds of a rough and often dangerous country will occur to all. Many of the pictures were taken under conditions that involved great personal risk on the part of the photographer. The credit belongs to Cherry Kearton of London, whose negatives, in spite of the adverse conditions, have been pronounced remarkably good.

The scenes include Roosevelt in all manner of intimate circumstances, views of many rare trophies secured by himself. There are studies of man-eating beasts taken in action and true-to-life views of African savages in native dress and occupations. Zulu war dance and pictures of Zulu society belles in prevailing African costume are among the human studies.

eliminating those pictures which did not project clear enough to be of value.

The pictures will be shown simultaneously all over the world.

Two full-length performances will be given daily and an orchestra of nine pieces will accompany pictures with appropriate selections.

The Mason Operahouse will be dark this week, but will reopen on the following Monday night to Herbert Kelcey and Effie Shannon, very well-known pair of players, in Henri Bernstein's "The Thief."

Following soon will be Grace George, in her success, "A Woman's Way."

THE WEEK.

KOLB AND DILL ONCE AGAIN.

TEUTONIC COMEDIANS RETURN TO MAJESTIC THEATER.

Ferris Hartman Comes to the Front With Elaborate and Long-Prepared Production of "The Cinaglee," Famous English Piece, for the First Time in Stock.

No team of comedians ever playing on the Pacific Coast has had such long-continued success as Kolb and Dill, who will return to Hamburger's Majestic Theater tonight, for a spring engagement, and who will doubtless be welcomed by a throng of admirers.

Possibly the inimitable personalities of the two have had the strongest influence in their retention of popularity, but not much behind is the art which they have interjected into their efforts during the past few seasons, and the constant care they have shown in surrounding themselves with clever actors, pretty and well-costumed girls, and bright new productions.

Their opening piece here is "The Rich Mr. Hoggenheimer," which has not been seen anywhere in the West save in San Francisco. The piece was a Sam Bernard success, and is different from anything ever done by Kolb and Dill. There are many musical interpolations.

Maude Lillian Berri, their leading woman this year, is a prima donna of note, and in addition to being a singer is a talented actress and the possessor of an unusually fine wardrobe.

Olga Stech is still the soubrette, and among other favorites are Percy Bronson, George Best, Charles Swickard, Laura Oakley, Nita Crane and Rita Abbott.

The costumes are new, and the chorus, a Kolb and Dill specialty always, is promised of larger size than ever, and of equal attractiveness.

After two weeks of grand opera, Ferris Hartman, at the Grand, will this afternoon again revert to musical

Mr. Hartman will show the most elaborate musical production that he has ever made on the Grand stage. All of the scenery has been built from the original models for this presentation, while the costumes are those of the original London production.

The book is by James Tanner, lyrics by Adrian Ross and Percy Greenbank, while the music is from the pen of Lionel Monckton, with additional numbers by Paul Rubens. So successful has been the piece on the other side of the Atlantic that it is still running in the English provinces.

The scenes are all laid in Ceylon, the production presenting the gorgeous color of the Orient, especially the big palace scene in the second act, which is a fine example of modern stagecraft. Musically the piece is way beyond the ordinary run of the later-day successes, there being many solos of high musical merit as well as an abundance of topical songs such as "My Cingalee," "Sloe Eyes," "In a Cinnamon Tree," and Chambuddy Ram's "Something's Devlish Wrong."

Ferris Hartman will have the role of Chambuddy Ram, a Baboo lawyer, which will allow him fun making opportunities from the rise of the curtain, while his topical songs will be an addition to his funmaking. In the role of Nanaya, Edith Mason will have beautiful solos and several duets with Thomas Persse, who will have the part of Harry Vereker. Little Muggins Davies will make her reappeaarnce after a short vacation in the lively soubrette role of Peggy. Walter de Leon will be seen as Bobby Warren; Joseph Fogarty as Boobambah. As Lady Patrica Van, Josie Hart will have a part well suited to her talents, while the three English girls will be played by Carmen Phillips, Myrtle Dingwell and Dorothy Spencer.

Another feature of the performance is the exceptionally fine opportunities allowed the chorus.

Following "The Cingalee," Ferris Hartman and his company will give the first production by a stock organization of Cohan's "George Washington, Jr."

At the Nielsen Theater, Grand avenue, near Seventh, large audiences have greeted Hortense Nielsen, Mace Greenleaf and others in the cast producing "Carmen," the drama. "Carmen," the drama, proved popular, but "Frou Frou," dainty comedy, will prove even more so, it is believed. "Frou Frou" will open for a week's run tomorrow night, with Hortense Nielsen as the elfish, flirtatious Gilberte and Mace Greenleaf as Henri Sartoris. Others in the company will be properly cast.

Manager Quintard has spent lavishly to make the Nielsen Theater a comfortable house. Following "Frou Frou," Maurice Materlinck's "Monna Vanna" will be the bill. Miss Nielsen has scored a triumph in other cities in "Monna Vanna."

Fun—good, new-fashioned fun, of the lightsome order—characterizes the incoming Orpheum bill opening Monday matinée, April 11, for all the new acts, with one exception, are frivolous, and the same holds with the four that remain.

Arthur Dunn, that diminutive bundle of foolerly and fun, is the new head-but that is only an excuse, of course. Arthur Dunn is always himself, and so long as he plays Arthur Dunn, no one asks anything else of him. Of course he can call his act anything, and it will come back to the same proposition—Arthur Dunn. He is funny to look at, though they do say he has ambitions to be a serious, even tragic actor. He is clever, bright, a fine dancer, has a voice as wonderful as Eddie Foy's, and is droll. With Marie Glazier they constitute a team hard to equal.

William Gould—no relation to George—is a monologist—but not of the ordinary sort. Gould—his friends call him "Billy"—has a fund of humor all his own, his stories are new and bright, and his methods different.

Elsie Faye, dainty soubrette with Joe Miller and Sam Weston, have "the act dainty." It doesn't mean anything, but it gives excuse for Miss Faye's dainty skirts and her twinkling feet to do some dancing, in which the two boys give her ample assistance.

Miss Violet King, who comes from England, is a violiniste of parts, who has been highly honored by royalty.

Holding over are Lottie Williams & Co. in Edmund Day's "On Stony Ground," Ida Fuller in "La Sorciere," Charlene and Charlene, and the funny Ahearn cyclists, with new motion pictures to make up a complete bill of varied excellence.

"The Garden of Lies" will commence the last week of its local career at the Belasco Theater Monday night. It will be the third week of this romantic play by George Broadhurst, and that the Belasco audiences like the piece unusually well is amply demonstrated by the series of crowded houses that have witnessed the presentation.

Lewis S. Stone has come in for praise for the excellence of his portrayal of Dennis Mallory, young soldier of fortune. Miss Oakley, too, contributes notably to the performance with a delightfully drawn picture of the young Princess Eleanor, while Mr. Ruggles, Mr. Camp, Mr. Vivian, Mr. Scott and the other Belasco actors enter into the romantic spirit of the piece with no little dramatic vigor. The stage pictures supplied by Mr. Brunton are veritable marvels of scenic skill.

The success of the "Lion and the Mouse" at the Burbank has made it necessary to continue Charles Klein's great drama of politics, love and finance, one more week. Miss Marjorie Rambeau has scored another personal success as Shirley Rossmore, and firmly established herself in the affections of Los Angeles play-goers. David M. Hartford's vigorous impersonation of John Burkett Ryder is one of the most striking character delineations ever seen in a local stock company. Harry Mestayer, as the strong-willed son of the masterful father; John Burton, as the Senator; Lovell Alice Taylor, as the statuesque society girl; David Landau, as the sympathetic lawyer, and all the other members of the Burbank company are to be seen. The demand for seats for the second week already is large.

"Something new" is the constant cry that is heard from vaudeville audiences. This week Manager Bovyer will offer the patrons of Sullivan and Considine's Los Angeles Theater the "Phantastic Phantoms," an acrobatic headed by Rosalia and Hilarion Ceballos, who, a few years ago, were the features of the performance of "Humpty Dumpty" at the New York Hippodrome. The act is staged and produced by Ned Wayburn, one of the largest producers for the vaudeville stage today. It is presented in a setting of black velvet illuminated with individual spotlights, making an exceptional stage effect. The Ceballos have a gymnastic dance, which, in the words of a prominent Portland critic, "makes the Merry Widow waltz a pink tea affair." Several of the young ladies of this clever company, in a costume that is not much more elaborate than Salome, contribute several graceful and eye-pleasing dancing numbers.

Now that the North Pole controversy has been the subject of conversation on both hemispheres, the arctic travesty, "At the North Pole," presented by Smith and Harris, is in all respects a timely oddity. The most thrilling details of Commander Peary's dash to the needle are given with entertaining humor. The characters of the skit are those of Commander Robert E. Peary and Matt Hansen, and it is given in a special and very picturesque stage setting, the fun running throughout.

German comedians are reliable and this week Collins and Brown will offer a line of Dutch chatter that is said to be funny enough to arouse the statuary ornamenting the gallery. Reese Prosser, minstrel tenor, is making his first vaudeville tour over the Sullivan and Considine circuit with an attractive musical offering. In this he is assisted by Miss Helen Reed, whose piano playing is a pleasing addition to the act.

Completing the bill is Lambert and Williams, melodious conversationalists, and The Lelands, scenic artists known as "The Men Behind."

DRAMAGRAPHS.

News Brevities Concerning the Doings of Actors, Actresses, Authors, Managers and Musicians.

Adolph Klauber's impression of the English stage recently appeared in a Chicago magazine. It is a well-written article, but not likely to be relished by English managers.

Ruth Maycliffe, who was with Charles Cherry in "The Bachelor," will again be a member of his company in "Spitfire," which will have its premier in New Haven on April 23.

Grace George goes to New Orleans next week and then travels westward to the Pacific Coast, which means that her season will be an extended one and, therefore, interfere with her summer prospects in Allenhurst, where she has a pretty home.

Charles Frohman has arranged with George C. Tyler for a London production of "Alias Jimmy Valentine" at the Comedy Theater, with Gerald Du Maurier in the part played here by H. B. Warner. "The Climax" has finished its run at this house.

One feature of the Sardou Festival to be held in Paris in May will be a series of six performances of "Tosca" at the Opéra. Geraldine Farrar has been engaged for these performances. Afterward she will sing the same role at the Opéra Comique, filling the en-was a member of David Warfield's company, was taken ill during a performance of "The Music Master," and died in Duluth. He was over 65 years old, and spent nearly half a century upon the stage. David Belasco paid all the funeral expenses.

Constance Collier, who has been appearing in the Henri Bernstein play, "Israel," has obtained permission from Charles Frohman to appear with Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree at His Majesty's Theater, London, beginning April 23, in a new production of Shakespeare's tragedy, "Othello." Miss Collier will play Desdemona.

Mrs. Patrick Campbell's son, Alan, is playing a minor role in her vaudeville sketch, and it has just been discovered that he is a pretty bad actor. He travels under an assumed name, and that is why the other fellow has been receiving the adverse criticisms.

According to a Berlin dispatch, the wealthiest of the world's composers is undoubtedly he who created "Elektra." Dr. Strauss is able to name practically his own figure as the price of the rights to one of his new works, and, whenever he conducts a concert of his own compositions he receives $500.

Chopin's centenary was celebrated in a unique manner in St. Petersburg. A concert was given in the Free School of Music at which a suite for orchestra conducted by Balakireff out of the great Pole's Etude in E flat minor, Nocturne in G minor, op. 15, Scherzo in C sharp minor and one of the mazurkas was played.

Leo Slezak, the giant tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Company, finds his size a considerable handicap when he undertakes to purchase apparel offhand in New York. "Why," he laughingly remarked to an interviewer the other day, "the only thing I can buy ready-made over here that will fit me is a pocket handkerchief."

Director Henry Russell of the Boston Opera Company is a determined enemy of the encore habit and has written an open letter to the Boston newspapers outlining his views on the subject. "Next season I contemplate asking the public not only to refrain from demanding encores," he says, "but to refrain from applauding at all until the curtain falls at the end of the act."

Anton Witek, concertmaster of the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra, is mentioned as the probable successor to Willy Hess, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who has been called to Berlin. Mr. Hess has resigned, to take effect at the close of the present symphony season, April 30, and, though his contract has another year to run, the orchestra management has consented to release him. The negotiations with Mr. Witek are still in progress.

William Gillette sailed last Saturday for Europe for a consultation with Charles Frohman in London. The actor will remain abroad until the time comes for Mr. Frohman to return to America. This winter Mr. Gillette is to appear in a repertoire of his former successes, including "Sherlock Holmes," "Held By the Eenemy," "Too Much Johnson," "Secret Service and Clarice." In the latter play Marie Doro will appear in the part she originally created.

Friends here of Giulio Gatti-Casazza, director of the Metropolitan Opera Company, have been informed by him in letters that two operas of Debussy, based on works of Edgar Allan Poe, "La Chute de la Maison d'Usher" and "Le Diable dans le Beffroi," will be produced in New York next season, as well as the same composer's "Légende de Tristan" and Gustave Charpentier's opera, "Le Vie du Poète."

Despite the Kaiser's duly reported amazement on learing that Engelbert Humperdinck's "King's Children" was to have its first performance in New York and the negotiations subsequently begun to secure the premiere privilege for the Berlin Royal Opera, it is now announced that the first performance of the work in German, following, according to the original plan, the premiere at the Metropolitan, will take place at the Vienna Court Opera, under Wingartner's direction. MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

DAMROSCH BEST NATIVE LEADER.

COMBINES VAST EXPERIENCE WITH ARTIST'S PERCEPTIONS.

Great Drill-Master Will Be Heard Here With His Fine Orchestra Early in May—News of Recitals, Club Concerts and General Musical Mention.

BY JULIAN JOHNSON.

Walter Damrosch, who will be heard with his orchestra at the Auditorium during the first week in May, should furnish one of the chief musical delights of the season.

Damrosch is our very best American orchestra leader. This, in spite of the fact that he is by no means a really great conductor.

Damrosch's rise to a foremost position has been slow, steady, and in spite of many obstacles. The son of a great father, he was literally born to the baton, but it was not long before careful observers realized that the genius of the father had not passed in the same measure to the son. Where the elder Damrosch was magnetic, powerful, inspirational, the son was quiet, deliberate, carefully studious.

Because he was not a human whirlwind, Walter Damrosch was alternately hailed and rejected, though there were no thoughtful ones who could decry his sincerity, his musicianship and his steady advance toward ultrafine effects.

Damrosch's great ambition was to become a director of the Metropolitan Operahouse, a la Mr. Dippel. Now Mr. Dippel is going the way of all things, and Mr. Damrosch may console himself somewhat by observing the exodus of another clean and energetic, though perhaps not powerful, man.

Certainly the rich directorate of the Metropolitan, which has dragged the earth for persons of German-Hebraic extraction, Italians who speak no word of English and others equally unfamiliar with American customs, to conduct the great subsidized music-theater, could have done much worse than to give some reins of authority into the hands of this cultured, honest, far-seeing American gentleman, who has been all his life identified with the very heart of New York music, and who knows probably better than any other living man the exact status of opera in New York.

However, bygones are bygones and, though Damrosch is not in the Metropolitan's board of control, he has gone ahead with his orchestra, and has made it a great orchestra.

He is the finest drill-master America ever produced. The balance of tone in his orchestra is perfect; the resonance and sonority of his strings incomparable, the quality and strength of his brasses adjusted to hair-splitting nicety, the shading of the whole body of players absolutely superb.

Damrosch has few recitals in which people shout, jump on their seats or toss up their hats. But he has no recitals in which programme building is not shown at its finest. And all compositions receive at his hands a keen, clear, artistic reading. Damrosch may not thrill, but he never fails to enchant. I would rather hear one Damrosch concert that the excitable and probably one-sided output of the biggest sensation hurler who ever threw his hair or shrieked at the second violins.

Assisting soloists this season will be Reed Miller, tenor, and Nevada van der Veer, soprano.

Alexander Saslavsky, Damrosch's clever Russian concert-master, remains at the head of the strings.

The Orpheus Club will present a programme of great merit on Thursday evening next at the Auditorium.

There will be eight numbers on the programme by the club proper, and in addition they will have the assistance of Mrs. W. A. Banks, contralto. Lester Donahue will offer several instrumental selections.

The Orpheus Club this year is composed of forty young men prominent in various business lines, who have endeavored to attain the highest perfection in club harmony. The success they have met with is best evinced by the giving of their concerts at a larger auditorium than Simpson's.

Each year the patrons of symphony music in this city look forward to the concert given by the members of the Woman's Orchestra, which this year will take place on Friday evening, April 22, at the Auditorium.

This organization of players has played constantly under the conductorship of Harley Hamilton for the past eleven years, and now has attained a degree of perfection seldom

The second concert of the Los Angeles center of the American Music Society will be given at the Burlington Hotel Friday evening, April 15, and in addition to the regular members and patrons, the general public will be admitted at a nominal sum. The programme promises to be a most interesting one, including as it does the best of local compositions presented by the best local musicians in the city. Morton F. Mason and Miss Fannie Dillon will be represented in the instrumental compositions, while Miss Laura Zerbe's late songs, F. H. Colby's two new songs, and Waldo F. Chase's exquisite compositions will be sung by Mrs. Estelle Heartt-Dreyfus, Mrs. J. L. Selby and Harry Clifford Lott. Julius Bierlich will render Charles E. Pemberton's new concert-stucke. Among the other artists appearing will be Miss Margaret Goetz, Miss Hazel Runge, and twenty of the Ellis Club members under Mr. Poulin's direction, presenting one of Frederick Stevenson's late chorus compositions.

Estelle Heartt-Dreyfus will be heard in Pasadena in a short time as soloist at a function to be given at the Valley Country Club, and next week will be one of the soloists at the Wesley Clark home in this city.

The Ellis Club will be heard in concert at Simpson Auditorium Tuesday evening, April 19.

Mme. Ade Nee will appear at Simpson Auditorium in recital on Thursday evening, April 14. Mme. Nee is said to possess a soprano voice of extraordinary compass, rivaling in range any in the world. Her programme has not yet been announced.

It will probably contain some excerpts from "The Magic Flute," of which Mme. Nee possesses the original score, presented to her by Adelina Patti.

The seat sale is at Bartlett's.

Maud Allan, with the main portion of the symphony orchestra, led by Harley Hamilton, will occupy the Auditorium tomorrow night, Tuesday night and at the Wednesday matinée, presenting her classic dances.

An interesting arrival in the local field is Jaroslaw de Zielinski, veteran musician, who is widely known on the Atlantic Coast, and who comes here, after many years of honorable and successful endeavor in other fields, to enjoy the sunshine and balmy airs of Southern California.

Mr. De Zielinski is forming an operatic club, which meets on Wednesday evenings at Symphony Hall, Blanchard building, for the study of master works in music-drama. "Carmen" will be the first subject taken up.

The choir of Immanuel Presbyterian Church will give a concert at the church, corner of Tenth and Figueroa streets, on Friday evening. The programme will include the Liza Lehmann cycle of Breton folk songs.

J. M. Spaulding is the organist and director of the choir, which includes Miss Florence Pearce Wadsworth, soprano; Mrs. Norma Rockhold-Robbins, contralto; A. Sheldon Ballinger, tenor, and Gage Christopher, bass.

The Monday Musicale Club met Monday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Mary Schallert of No. 938 Beacon street. An interesting programme was given.

The Flonzaley chamber music quartette will give but one recital in this city on April 28. They will also appear in San Francisco, Oakland, Berkeley, Fresno, Sacramento, San Diego, Riverside and Redlands.

of April by C. S. Delano's mandolin, guitar and banjo clubs. An orchestra of fifty-five players will be presented. Miss Edith L. Knox, soprano, who has recently returned from three years' study in the East, will be the assisting soloist.

A complimentary silver medal piano recital was given in the Nielsen Theater building last evening by L. Susie England of the Los Angeles Conservatory of Music and Arts. Miss England was assisted by J. Florence England, reader, and Hazel Lewis, accompanist. Miss England has entire charge of the music department of the Lordsburg College, and has proven herself both a successful teacher and a proficient and enjoyable public performer. Her programme showed wide range and was well-selected.

The Municipal Band will play at Central Park this afternoon under Harley Hamilton's direction, presenting a programme including Sousa's "The Fairest of the Fair" march, the Waldteufel "Espana" waltz, the Herbert "Badinage," Elgar's "Salut d'Armour," the "Orpheus" overture of Offenbach, Bendix's "A Chinese Episode," Friml's "A Garden Matinée" and Kap's "Dinah's Jubilee."

With people turned away, Al Levy has felt well justified in announcing for the coming week, beginning with Monday's afternoon tea, a continuance of the same artists, but with complete new numbers and costumes from each.

La Estrellita, fascinating dancer, will top the bill again, putting on some new dances, and showing more costumes. La Estrellita has proved more than was expected. Her work is flawless; a true picture of the revels of Old Spain, and her supple grace and daintiness have been commented upon most favorably.

Rogers, Stewart and Elwood have been reëngaged every week now since they first opened. They have won high favor for the unctuous way in which they render songs of the day.

Bosanquet, whose instrumental work has aroused favorable comment, will exhibit more of the new and unusual in this, his last week. His instruments, of his own invention, are novel, as are the effects from them.

Miss Georgia Russell, also in her last week, will have a new list of Irish songs, in costume. Mr. Kammermeyer and his orchestra will render the usual music.

GREAT CONSTANTINO.

Remarkably Versatile Tenor Has Given Sixty Performances With Boston Company.

The repetition of Boito's "Mefistofele," with Constantino singing the part of Faust, as the final offering of the fifteen weeks' season of the Boston Opera Company last Thursday evening, was appropriate and fitting, says Musical America, giving as it did another opportunity for the subscribers to enjoy one of the most elaborate productions which has been given during this first season of the company and making it possible to once more hear the distinguished tenor in one of his most effective roles. Rarely, if ever, has an operatic artist received in Boston such marked evidences of heartfelt approval of artistic efforts as has been accorded Constantino again and again this season when he has made lasting impressions in such operas as "Aida," "Carmen," "Rigoletto," "La Boheme," "Tosca," "The Barber of Seville" and others, but the audience outdid itself in the applause at the last performance of the season, surpassing even the almost riotous enthusiasm which occurred when Constantino sang in "Pagliacci" for the first time in Boston last Tuesday evening. This, by the way, was his début in "Pagliacci," for although he studied the opera several years ago and knew it thoroughly he had never before sung the part publicly.

Constantino's abundant good nature and generosity, as well as his artistic singing and acting, have made him hosts of staunch friends and admirers during his stay in America this season. Undoubtedly it is these qualities which have made for him close personal friendships among such prominent artists in Europe as Blai and Querol, the sculptors; Casas, Sorola and Villar, the painters, and the Spanish littérateurs Rafael de Oltamira, Blasco Ibanez, Grandmontagné, Maeztu, and the hosts of composers, including Puccini, Mascagni, Boito, Mancinelli, Richter and Massenet.

It is probable that Constantino will not visit Europe between now and his return to the United States for next season's engagement in Boston. He will go to Buenos Ayres the latter part of April to sing during the operatic season at the Teatro Colon, and at the close of that season, in September, will sail directly to New York. He had originally planned to spend part of the summer at least in Northern Spain, but the closing of the Buenos Ayres contract necessitated changes in his plans. His many friends here will look forward to his return next season, when he will be heard in many of the roles in which he has become such a favorite with Boston audiences, and will appear in a number of new roles in operas which will be added to the repertoire during next season.

This week Constantino is to appear at performances to be given by the Boston Opera Company in Providence, R. I., and New Haven, Ct., and with the closing in New Haven he will have sung over sixty performances in fourteen different operas during his engagement for the season of 1909-10. This is a remarkable record, especially considering the character of the roles in which he has appeared, and in spite of the tremendous number of appearances and great amount of work necessitated in rehearsals and productions, Constantino is in excellent health and shows not the slightest evidences of fatigue.

OVER THE SEA.

M. FRANCOIS FERTIAULT of France, poet, novelist and biographer, recently issued a volume of essays written in his 95th year. The same country can boast the oldest editor in the world, in the person of M. de Molinari, who, despite the burden of 91 years, conducts the Journal des Economistes, and writes largely for its pages.

Dr. Liebknecht of Berlin, strongly opposes plans of separate establishments for the insane, for he cannot help fearing that the inmates would be treated more from the criminal than from the purely medical viewpoint. In other words, all the asylums must be under one superior, merciful eye, and not scattered here and there throughout the State, where things can happen that escape notice.

David Lloyd George, chancellor of the exchequer of Great Britain, was described in a French newspaper as the "yelling Apache of the British crisis." This is one of the quieter paragraphs in Figaro of Paris: "The eye of Lloyd George shoots out flames. It is with the innate majesty of a king of speech that he treads the platform, roaring, stamping, yes, howling, while he shakes the mass of his long black hair."

Robert E. Pluribus Unum Smith is an old age pensioner in Australia. In his application he added the words, character as "good," and he had no difficulty in getting his $2.40 a week from the State. The oldest Australian pensioner is a woman of 105.

Prince Oscar of Prussia, Emperor William's fifth son, was a particularly popular figure at the recent American embassy ball and was Miss Katharine Hill's partner in the cotillon. Like the Crown Prince, he is a fearless horseman as well as a capital dancer. Though not 20 years old, he is a lieutenant in the First Regiment of the Foot Guards, an officer of two other regiments, and knight of the Order of the Black Eagle.

Lord William Gascoigne-Cecil, rector of Hatfield, and son of the late Lord Salisbury, the famous Conservative Premier of England, is the moving spirit in the university movement to establish a big Western University at Hankow, China. The scheme has gained a remarkable following in Europe. All the Protestant bodies, all the universities, some Roman Catholic teachers, lord mayors, and notables of every section of activity have subscribed or otherwise shown their interest. Sir Robert Hart, the greatest authority on China, in the western world, has given the scheme his blessing and many European governments have notified the promoters of their

Silk Hose $1.25

Colors to Match Your Dress

Judges of silk stockings would consider this a mighty good buy at one-fifty a pair. It's an "Onyx" stocking possessing all the "Onyx" features of style, of fit and service. We bought the lot at under-value rates, else this offer would not be possible.

Colors: princess and taupe gray, wistaria, lavender, bronze, hunter's green, golden brown, tan, copper, suede, navy and copenhagen blues, also black or white.

Pure thread silk with lisle or lisle lined soles.

Specially priced, $1.25 pair, Monday.

Silk Petticoats $5

Plain or Pompadour Effects

If you compare these with the general "run" of five dollar silk petticoats you will readily see the difference; difference in the quality of silk, in the way they are made, in the fullness—in almost every detail. They are so much better, in every particular, than any we've seen before that comparisons are quite out of the question.

Plain taffetas, changeables or handsome pompadours in warp prints; every color or color combination. Special $5

Corset Cover Sale

Something like thirty dozen corset covers will be on the bargain tables tomorrow at prices that would barely cover the cost of materials.

They are odd lines and broken lots—some we are discontinuing—others are mussed from showing or, perhaps a little soiled. Of course not all sizes in each particular style, but plenty of sizes in some acceptable kind.

In quality of material, in daintiness of style and in value, these covers—at regular prices—will compare favorably with any we know of, so, you can judge of the savings at tomorrow's prices:

Why are they laced in front?

Easier to manipulate, and the abdomen is relieved of all pressure.

Support is given to the organs and deep breathing is encouraged.

They emphasize the long graceful line of the back, which makes it easier for dressmakers to fit gowns perfectly.

They gently but firmly compel a correct standing position and a graceful carriage.

But no argument is so convincing as a fitting—THAT is the proper test.

Give us a chance to prove these claims.

Five Splendid Silk Opportunities

Silks! Silks! Silks!—and still more silks! "Just the weight and weave I wanted—and just the very shade!" said woman after woman as she chose a dress or waist length Saturday. Little wonder, for the assortment is truly beautiful. Have you seen it? If not, better stop in Monday, for there's something here you want, we know. You'll want it when you see it, anyway. Among the most interesting items we list these few. See them particularly.

Printed Satin Foulards at 75c

Foulards, it seems, have always been worn—and dear knows when they will be "out-of-date." As yet no substitute has been found. No summer silk equals them. These at 75c are 24-inch.

Imported Shantung Pongees $1

A leader value in our silk section—as good as any $1.25 pongee shown anywhere. Every thread woven on hand looms from the purest silks made. In natural color, launders well; 34-inch.

$1 Glace Changeable Taffetas and Peau de Cygnes, Per Yd. $1

Changeable silks are again the thing. Not much has been seen of them for several seasons, but here they are for 1910 in all their glory. Make up beautifully with chiffon overdrapes, etc. These in plain effects or with hair line stripes, all new and pretty—just what Eastern and Paris shops are showing. Come full 26 ins. wide.

Pure Silk Tussah Pongee $1.25

The natural pongee color in these—most wanted of all in this weave. A silk that always retains its luster and looks fresh and rich. Ideal for traveling, street and auto coats. Comes full 36 inches wide.

Silk Crepe de Chines at $2

Dainty evening shades as well as popular street colors. Rich crepe weave always in fashion. 42-inch—the width that cuts to best advantage. 6 to 7 yards will make any style gown. Excellent value at $2.

Silk & Net Waists

When a silk or net waist is attractive it is stunning. These are of that order. Messaline, Peau de Cygne, Peau de Soie and taffeta have never been used in more artistic ways. Plain and stripes in black, white and colors, they show the touch of the artist designer. There are dressy net waists with yoke and front finished with venise lace, side ruches of net and val. edges and insertions. And by-the-way they're quite the correct thing to wear with tailored suits now. Late decree? Yes.

A Choice Line at $7.50

A style and a design in this lot for every suit you have. There are fancy ones and plain ones—each perfect, with all the late ideas given play in their construction.

Pretty Models at $5.00

Some of these are of net in cream and tan—the most called for shades in this material. Beautifully trimmed and tucked. There are many pretty taffeta and messaline silks in light and dark colors also.

Lingerie Waists

Summer decrees that you wear a lingerie waist with almost any kind of a skirt. You want it cut and made after the latest ideas, of course. In this lot it seems as if they are all different—each one an expression of an individual designer who has thought things out alone, thereby giving an exclusiveness not to be found every day—especially in ready-to-wear bought garments. See them Monday.

Some of the Embroidered Models

On fine linen these waists are embroidered to the waist line in fine dainty floral patterns. Full tucked blouse and tuck trimmed sleeves.

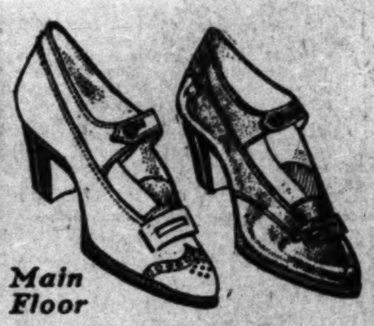
Others That Are Plain Tailored

Of pure Irish linen, there is a quiet elegance that's never questioned. One looks so cool and so clean they are a positive joy to possess.

These That Sell For $3.50 to $5

Extreme in style and dainty in trimming, you can't take the wrong one. A representative assortment of materials and trimmings at prices that please every one.

Hamburger Footwear for Women



Main Floor

It's almost impossible to suggest a desirable spring style that cannot be found in this stock. The Big White Store is always in the lead, even though, as in this case, it has to begin at the "foot." Every new idea hinted at in realms of shoe designing is earnestly considered and if found worthy, a model—the most perfect of that particular style—is ordered. You're always sure of getting the latest at Hamburger's.

The Hamburger Special Shoe for Women at $5

The increasing demand for black suede low shoes has brought the two styles we show into popular favor. The black suede oxford with short vamp and high arch has wing tips and flexible soles. Also a one-strap pump. Both come in patent leather as well. Inspect these.

The "New Pump" $4

At last a perfect fitting low shoe has been made. This will not slip at the heel nor can it bulge at the side. Medium sole and heel. Can be had in patent and gun metal.

The "Ebell" Shoe $3.50

No other line has a larger assortment of styles or leathers. A shoe that gives the appearance of costing $4 and $5. Black suede, vici kid, tan calf, in high or low cuts—one price.

Women's Kid Gloves—Four Good Styles

We open the week with a glove sale—the quality and the quantity of which will surprise the best informed on the subject. There are four styles—all in constant demand at our counters and the best from each is shown. $1.25

These are very dainty and sheer—all of them hand embroidered in beautiful designs. The assortment is good. Come in and see the collection.

If you are unfortunate enough to possess a plume which is NOT one of the famous

Cawston Ostrich Feathers

then the only thing left for you to do is to have it made over by Cawston so as to resemble, as nearly as possible, one of these world-renowned plumes.

Your Old Feathers Can Be Remodeled into the fashionable WILLOW PLUMES and made to look almost like new.

Cawston has now the most extensive repair department and dye shop in the United States connected with his factory on the Farm at South Pasadena.

It is one of the most curious sights in California to see how Cawston handles the plumes in the various stages of manufacture.

Visitors to the Farm at So. Pasadena are allowed to inspect the factory and should not miss the opportunity of becoming familiar with this important industry.

Bring your plumes to Cawston's City Store and we shall be pleased to advise you as to what can be done with them and shall be glad to see you, even though you decide not to have any work done.

Today's Ostrich Story

It has often occurred to the writer that the ostrich would supply an admirable subject for the vivisectionist to experiment upon as they seem to be endowed with a very low grade of nervous system.

Time after time the writer has seen ostriches that have been seriously wounded in various ways, either the result of an accident or in a fight with other birds, seem perfectly oblivious of the fact so long as they were able to walk around.

I remember on one occasion one of the birds had had its neck torn open by a nail in the fence to such an extent that the food it swallowed would travel the entire length of the neck and then fall out on the ground. Do you think this interfered with his enjoyment of his food? Not at all; on the contrary I believe he was beginning to think himself endowed with a perennial appetite when the surgeon appeared and sewing up the wound turned the food into the proper channel.

Eat and Get Thin

This is turning an old phrase face about but modern methods of reducing fat have made this revision possible.

If you are overfat and also averse to physical exertion and likewise fond of the table and still want to reduce your excess flesh several pounds, do this: Go to your druggist (or write the Marmola Co., 225 Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich.) and give him (or send them) 75 cents. Lot One—

An assortment including many styles, in a wide variety of colorings and materials. Suits in White, Blue and Black serges, in Black and White Checks—and in an unusually tasteful range of Mannish Worsteds.

The tailoring and style of these models places them in quite another class than that our selling price indicates. They will appeal to the woman of refined taste in dress—yet the price Monday is only—

In style these suits are quite beyond criticism. Among them are Blouse models and other late styles, as well as the more conventional tailored designs. Tailoring and workmanship in these garments is of the highest grade, up to the standard we require in strictly high-class models.

A sale that is to be of vital importance to every woman who needs a new suit. Then there's silk dresses, taffeta and foulards, but then we'll give full details under the separate prices.

Choice of navy, royal, reseda, new gray, dove, tan and rose. Coats are lined with fine satin and peau de cygne.

The dresses at this price are noted for the remarkable way in which they fit, for the quality of the silk, from the fact that they're made in the new sunburst and overskirt models. Taffetas and foulard silks principally. Rich spring shades as well as black. A sale and exhibit well worth while attending.

The Wonderful Response Accorded

April's Invitation to her Merchandising Events so far is an expression of Confidence in the store and its methods which we value far more than the sales themselves—determination to do and to out-do is strong within the month. That it is a time of extraordinary effort is evidenced by the unusual character of events which have been exploited thus far—and these are merely earnests of strong trade features still to come—all of which will be tempered by that conservatism which has lent to Bullock's a rugged personality.

To have the activities of this store forceful, convincing, free from frenzy—

To throw upon the shoulders of the goods themselves the brunt of the responsibility of business building—to keep stocks full and varied and attractive, with merchandise we can guarantee—

To have prices as low as they can be made, consistent with a sufficient quality—to reinforce them with unusual savings, which are safe, as frequently as wide-awake buyers can furnish them—

To organize systems of the store, so that service will constantly approach nearer and nearer to the Faultless—

To exercise Initiative and Leadership along right lines—

To be watchful of experience and eager for improvement—

To develop and make Bullock's more and more capable as a store which DOES satisfy its customers.

These are some of the principles in the Creed which is governing April in her endeavor to do and to out-do. That unusual savings are in large evidence is the direct result of months of careful co-operative work and planning.

is the fact that the first eight days of no one month, outside of December, have equaled records of the past eight days.

opens up another period that should prove even richer in accomplishment—as it will be richer in opportunities for shoppers. Many a mine of values and of new merchandise remains untouched—and every day, by freight and express, great new shipments come rolling in. gives publicity to hardly a tithe of the good news which should be today, a tithe which serves as an index only. Pictures.

A well of water, clear and pure,
Beside a shady country way;
And just beyond, a low green field
Ablaze with scarlet lilies gay.

A few dead leaves on bush and trees
That skirt the marshes lone and bare;
A flight of wild geese in the south,
And wail of wild winds in the air.

A deep pond bordered thick with shrubs
Intwined with tangled flowering vines
That overhang the waters dark
Where many a golden lily shines.

Coming Exhibition.

Grace E. McKinstry, one of the members of the Minnesota State Art Commission, arrived in Los Angeles about two weeks ago for the purpose of executing two portrait orders. One of the portraits has already been begun, the other probably will follow shortly.

In the meantime Miss McKinstry will hold a small exhibition of water colors painted in Holland and Spain. The gallery chosen is that of T. J. Boyd, which will be ready for the exhibition on next Thursday. Mr. Boyd's new gallery is at Illington Court, Washington street and Grand avenue.

The story of the Minnesota State Art Commission is inspiring. Seven years ago the State Legislature made an annual appropriation for the commission. This money was to be used for an annual exhibition of pictures by the best American artists, to be held first at St. Paul and Minneapolis, and then in some other Minnesota city, changed each year. This year the exhibition was held at the St. Paul Auditorium and in the Public Library in Minneapolis.

The commission, which is composed of five members, two being artists, all of whom serve without pay, were also authorized to purchase hundreds of large brown-print copies of the great masterpieces of art, and these are loaned to literary and art clubs all over the State.

In the outside city, which is harboring the exhibition, the public pays a small fee for the privilege of voting on favorite paintings, and this money is used for the purchase of the picture having the greatest number of votes, the picture then becoming the property of the city. As every picture exhibited is a good one, the nucleus of an excellent gallery is thus laid.

Pottery and jewelry by craftsmen of Minnesota are also shown at these exhibitions, and these articles of use and beauty are sent to all parts of the State to be exhibited.

Miss McKinstry has served on the commission since its inception. Its president today is Cyrus Northrup, who is also president of the State University.

Miss McKinstry has painted portraits of many distinguished people—Bishop Benjamin Whipple, Bishop Mahlon Gilbert, Senator C. K. Davis, Ex-Gov. Ramsay, Gov. Johnson, E. B. Herbert, founder of the National Editorial Association, etc.

Two of her pictures appear in the Copley prints, "The Spanish Musician," and "The Spanish Girl." The first-mentioned was shown in the Paris salon. One of the most successful of her portraits is that of Miss Luette Bentley, vice-president of Lake Erie College at Painesville, O. Recently an exhibition of the works of three American painters was held at the college, the exhibitors being W. L. Lathrop, Charles E. Curran and Grace E. Mc-on the day when this remarkable man was taken to the hospital at Rochester, Minn.

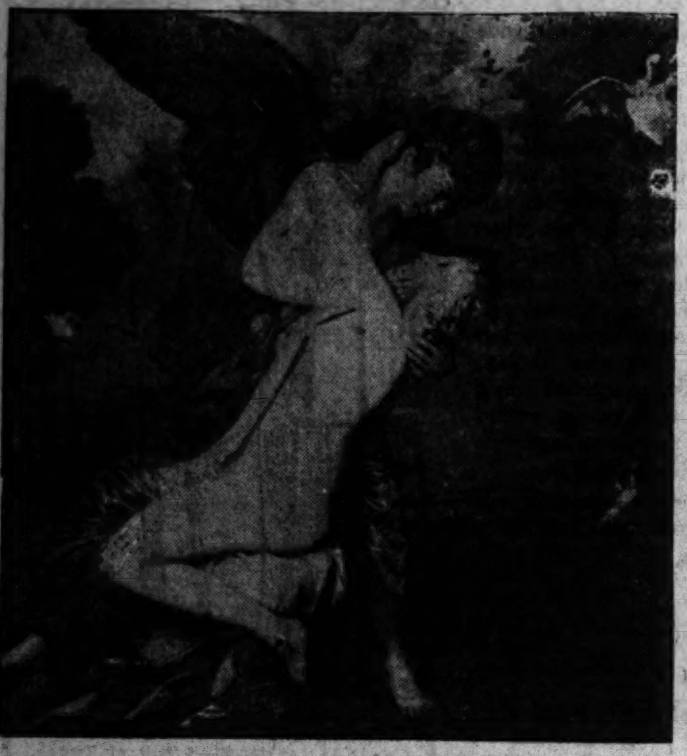
The charming portrait of the two small cadets of the military school at Fairbault has a charming history. The boys, who are brothers about ten and eleven years old, are the sons of a well-known merchant of Winona. As the date of their father's birthday drew near they decided they would surprise him with a portrait of themselves. So they saved their money for a month and finally amassed the sum of $5. This they brought to Miss McKinstry. They posed with extraordinary patience, and the artist made a charcoal drawing of them, which they sent to their father. He was so pleased with the picture that he immediately gave Miss McKinstry a commission for an oil portrait of his sons.

Unfortunately there will be no portraits from Miss McKinstry's brush at the exhibition to be held at the Boyd gallery, but the water-color genres that she will show are delicate in feeling and fine in color.



Cupid and Psyche.
From a painting by Benjamin West.

Cupid and Psyche.

America has now the opportunity to see a canvas painted by one of the greatest of her early artists more than a century ago, "Cupid and Psyche," by Benjamin West. It was brought over here a few months ago from London by the Blakeslee Galleries, of New York City, and has been sold to the Corcoran Art Gallery, in Washington.

The American painter was the first president of the Royal Academy in London, and the canvas was painted in 1808 for exhibition under the auspices of that institution. It contains nearly life size figures and is in its color and tone a work of distinction.

The composition reveals the god of love depicted here not as a rosy-cheeked boy but rather as a winged youth who is embracing the fair-haired Psyche. The work was until recently in the possession of an English family.

The Painter and the Dealer.

At its last meeting, the California Art Club had the pleasure and the benefit of an insight into the picture dealer's point of view in contra-distinction to the artist's. J. F. Kanst spoke at length on the subject of his experiences in Los Angeles, when he talked to the club last Saturday evening, at the Art Students' League.

The address was, in part, for the purpose of clearing up a misunderstanding known to exist between the local artists and the art dealers; which has included distrust on the former's part, and which has been supposed to consist largely of contempt on the part of the latter. The club had invited Mr. Kanst to make known his ideas of the cause of this unharmony, and he responded with pleasure to the invitation.

He began by saying that he had tried repeatedly, at the outset of his work as a dealer, to get the pictures of local artists to dispose of. With the exception of one or two instances, he had met with little success. Out of a certain amount that he knew to have been spent by local buyers for pictures in Los Angeles in the last year, not over 2 per cent. had been paid to local artists. It is not so much, Mr. Kanst said, that the public craves eastern work, but that the dealer has not the local work of merit to sell because the artist distrusts him.

The reason for this distrust, the speaker went on, is that the dealer handles what is called "commercial stuff," with which the good painter dislikes to associate his work. But taste in pictures is a thing gradually acquired, and the dealer, seeing so many people who start with the medi-that buyer will care for the finer things.

In a land so new as our own, where deep culture is a rare quantity, the dealer has, in fact, to conduct a sort of "general store," Mr. Kanst put it, where every one may choose to suit his advancement; but where at the same time there will be some of the best for those who appreciate it.

The speaker mentioned several instances of the sort of progressive buying that he had in mind. In one case a gentleman had, one might literally say, outfitted his house with pictures, all from one store, of whose proprietor the most significant thing that might be said was that he did not deal in originals. Why this gentleman kept on buying is something unexplained, but hopeful. His taste, in its many vicissitudes, went from water colors to oils. The first oil painting he had by a local artist he was urged to put in his house as an experiment. He now owns thirty of that artist's works.

Mr. Kanst said he had decided that it was often necessary to start with the "commercial stuff," but in his experience the buyer by no means finished there.

In speaking of the lack of wall space for pictures in many homes now being built, Mr. Kanst said:

"I think that the artist, the art critic and the picture dealer all over this country ought to call the attention of the public by letters and by personal appeal that, unless people study sharply the house they are building, they will not get any place to hang the most beautiful of all house decorations, pictures. The artist and art dealer should have more influence with the architects of the country and not let the decorators and upholsterers be the [illegible] advisors."

[illegible] and Found.

Calthea Vivian, in charge of the art department of the State Normal School at San José, made a brief visit in Los Angeles last week on her way home from Paris and New York. She had with her only a few oil sketches and half a dozen etchings, but these were exceedingly good. She will probably hold an exhibition here some time in the summer or fall.

The etchings, scenes from Venice and Holland, are the first the artist has done, and as such show that she has a remarkable talent for this mode of artistic expression. They are broad and simple in treatment, and full of rich color suggestion. Miss Vivian brought them with her from Paris.

While in New York last December, visiting her friends, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Markham, she took a trip around the city and accidentally lost the etchings in the snow. Mrs. Markham advertised for them, but two months elapsed before they were heard of again. A friend of Mrs. Markham's who had heard of the loss stepped into a florist's shop, and for some unexplained reason the florist mentioned the etchings he had found in the snow. The friend asked to see them, and at once discovered that they were Miss Vivian's. Of course they were returned —and today they are in San José.

ART NOTES.

Nellie Huntington Gere is holding an exhibition and sale of her collection of Japanese color prints at the Bachman Art Shop, No. 1306 South Figueroa street. More than half of the prints, including all the landscapes, are the work of Hiroshige. Among the other artists represented are Kunisada, Toyokuni, Yeisen and Yeizan. Miss Gere's prints have been selected solely for their beauty of color and line, and not to show historical development. The exhibition will remain open until April 13.

An exhibition of about twenty pictures by Charles A. Rogers will open at the California Academy of Art tomorrow, to continue for two weeks. The gallery is in the Copp building, immediately north of the City Hall. Half the pictures will be in oils, the rest in water colors. A number of Chinatown subjects, Mr. Rogers's metier, will be shown.

A flourishing class in painting and drawing has been established by Rob Wagner in his studio at No. 625 South Figueroa street. Recent strong and interesting portraits from the artist's brush are those of Alfred Allen and Elmer Wachtel, one or both of which will be reproduced in these columns in the near future.

C. M. Buxbaum, a Hungarian sculptor of great ability, who has been working in New York and Chicago, but who came to Los Angeles three months ago, has just finished a noble bust of Bishop Johnson. Mr. Buxbaum studied in Budapest under the famous Hungarian sculptor Izso.

The complete collection of paintings by Warren E. Rollins was recently purchased by Mrs. D. M. McQueston of Spokane, and has just been shipped away to enrich the northern city. It is Mr. Rollins's intention to start for the Indian country in a week or two. His wife and younger daughter will accompany him.

An exhibition of artistic jewelry by N. Aktarian is now being held in the Kanst gallery. Mr. Atkarian comes from Chicago, but it is his intention to remain in Los Angeles. As an arts craftsman he is both strong and original, and his work is artistically very beautiful. Brooches, fobs, chains, rings and stickpins are shown, mostly of copper and silver, in conjunction with semi-precious stones and abalone hearts.

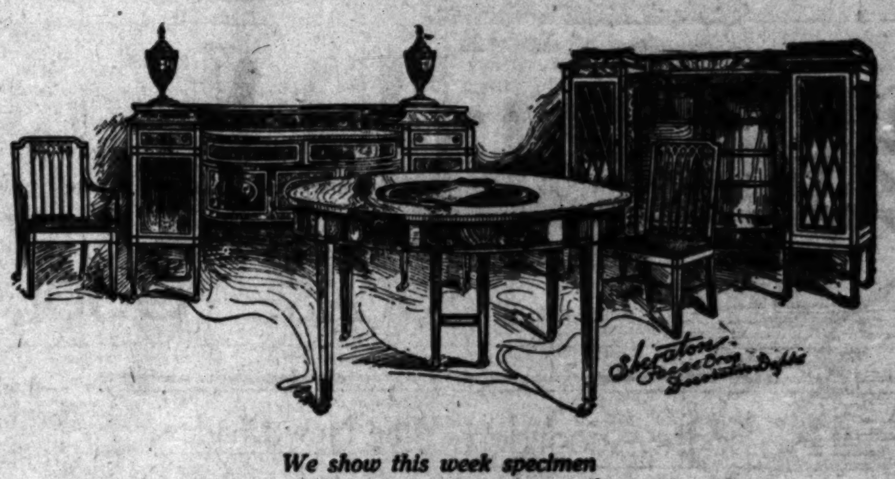
Joseph Greenbaum left for Paris last Monday, to be gone until September. While abroad he will execute a number of important commissions.

An exhibition of paintings by Carl Oscar Borg will open in San Francisco at the Helgesen gallery, No. 2239 Fillmore street, on April 17. A description of the pictures to be shown was published in last Sunday's Art and Artists.

A lecture on "The Beneficence of Art," which S. Henrietta Housh, late president of the Ruskin Art Club and the Fine Arts League, recently delivered before the students and faculty of the State Normal School in Los Angeles, is published in its entirety in the April number of Art and Progress, a magazine printed in Washington, D. C., under the auspices of the American Federation of Arts.

There is the making of a good husband in every man—providing he isn't already married.

Many a man who makes a bid for fame winds up with more or less questionable notoriety.



We show this week specimen of Sheraton, whose prime of activity was 1755 to 1810.

ONE of the foremost decorative artists under George III., 1760-1820, in England, was Thomas Sheraton, the "father of Marquetry work."

He was a purist, and the first who introduced inlaying of pear, walnut or tulip woods into mahogany. He also is the "father of tapering lines," the first who emancipated his works from Dutch influence, showing the daintier forms of classic arts revived by the discovery of the long buried Grecian cities of Pompeii and Herculaneum.

His intricate treatment of plain surfaces, by utilizing classic designs and "inlaying" them, ignoring everything carved, made him a recognized leader of his time.

Heading with Boule, the Frenchman, and Riesener of Germany, scores of famous artists of those days systematically participated in the international works of excavations; and due to these researches the world today possesses such treasure works of art as those of Cipriani, Angelica Kaufman, Wallis, Copeland, Pergolesi and many others.

WHICH SUIT?

MONARCH WHO IS IN TERROR OF HIS MASTERFUL BROTHER.

There Is Trouble Brewing in Afghanistan and That Means Complications for England, Russia and Germany—And as If That Were Not Enough, There Is Bibi Halima in the Background.

BY ANGUS HAMILTON, F.R.G.S.,

Author of "Afghanistan," "The Heart of Asia," etc.

LONDON, April 7.—There is trouble brewing in Afghanistan, owing to domestic intrigues, and the situation is interesting not only for its own sake, but because trouble in Afghanistan, the most powerful Mahommedan country in the world, if Turkey be excepted, means trouble for Russia and England, with Germany lurking in the background to see what she can get out of it.

And may the writer be permitted to add that he knows whereof he speaks from personal experience, and from personal observation of the characters in this drama now being played in Afghanistan.

The power behind the throne in Afghanistan is divided between two people, who are each directly interested in the varying fortunes of the state. These two are Nazr Ullah Khan, brother of Habib Ullah, Amir of Afghanistan, and the Queen Dowager, the Bibi Halima, wife of the late Amir Abdur Rahman, and the mother of Sirdar Mahommed Omar Jan Khan.

For the practical consideration of the present position of affairs, the influence of the Bibi Halima and her faction may be ignored, since Habib Ullah has taken effective measures to preserve his position from the intrigues of the Queen-Mother. The jealousy of his brother, Nazr Ullah, is a far more important and disturbing factor. Afghanistan needs the firm hand of a man who is as much a maker as a ruler of men. Habib Ullah is weak-willed and so subject to the influence of his brother that the most commanding positions at the Amir's court are those filled by Nazr Ullah Khan himself and his party.

In a measure Habib Ullah understands the situation, but while the Bibi Halima and the Sirdar Mahommed Omar Jan Khan are so closely "protected" by the Amir's bodyguard that they are state prisoners, it is more difficult for the Amir to assail the position occupied by his brother, as he is the commander-in-chief. In consequence of his high rank, little attempt is made to curb Nazr Ullah's masterful will, and Habib Ullah's subjection to his brother has attracted universal attention. Nazr Ullah Khan not only holds the position of commander-in-chief of the Afghan army, but he is a Hafis, or Repeater of the Koran, as well as a Shahgassi, or gentleman usher, and the Itwad-ul-Dowlah, or pillar of the state.

REACTIONARIES.

In domestic politics Nazr Ullah is the leader of the Afghan party—that is, the party who, represented by the old Mussulman elders, are opposed to foreign influences and modern innovations. This faction objected to the Amir's trip to India, and it was due to its machinations that Habib Ullah encountered so much hostility on his return. In his official capacity, and at the instigation of the head mullahs, Nazr Ullah assailed the Dane mission with the whole weight of his influence, and, in the end, secured its complete discomfiture. It was said at the time that Nazr Ullah's extreme antipathy to foreign intercourse and his hostility to Habib Ullah's Indian visit had incensed the Amir against him, and that relations were on that account considerably strained between the Amir and his brother. It is hardly possible, however, that Habib Ullah would risk a quarrel with Nazr Ullah because, in spite of his amiability, the Amir does not possess a very secure seat upon the throne. If open estrangement between the two sons of Abdur Rahman gave rise to an alliance between Nazr Ullah and the Bibi Halima, the intrigues of these two parties might very easily bring about the Amir's downfall.

It has always been recognized that Nazr Ullah himself aspires to the throne of Afghanistan, and there is no doubt that, should opportunity offer, he would make a bold bid for it. At the moment neither his plans nor his partisans are quite prepared, but if the rift between the two brothers widens events in Afghanistan may move with incredible swiftness. It would be impossible to forecast the issue, since the influence of the mullahs would bring to the support of Nazr Ullah's party the great bulk of the Suni Mohammedans, whose real leader is Nazr Ullah, while at the same time Nazr Ullah as commander-in-chief would influence a large section of the have been caused by the Amir's passion for traveling about his own dominions his hold has become proportionately weakened.

POWER OF PRIESTS.

Afghanistan is the most powerful Mohammedan country in the world, if Turkey be excepted; and religion exercises a deciding voice in its affairs. The gross superstition prevailing in the country is the direct result of this religious bigotry. The priests are the real rulers—not only the wise men who have made the pilgrimage to Mecca, but also the wandering fakirs, whose fanatical tendencies are so easily aroused. Nazr Ullah has never failed to identify himself with the mullah's party, and on all public occasions he participates in whatever religious celebration may distinguish the event. This prince is the offspring of a Wakhan concubine named Gulriz, and his claim to the throne is in support of the theory that might is right. Since possession is nine points of the law, and Habib Ullah is in possession, it is obvious that Nazr Ullah must make a considerable effort before he can displace the Amir. The Bibi Halima, the second factor of the situation, lays claim to the throne through her direct descent from the Amir Dost Mohammed Khan. She is of the blood royal, and if she were in possession of her liberty she would compel her son, Sirdar Mohammed Omar Jan Khan, to take the field. His chances of success would be as great as those enjoyed by his half-brother, Nazr Ullah Khan, who is full brother to Habib Ullah.

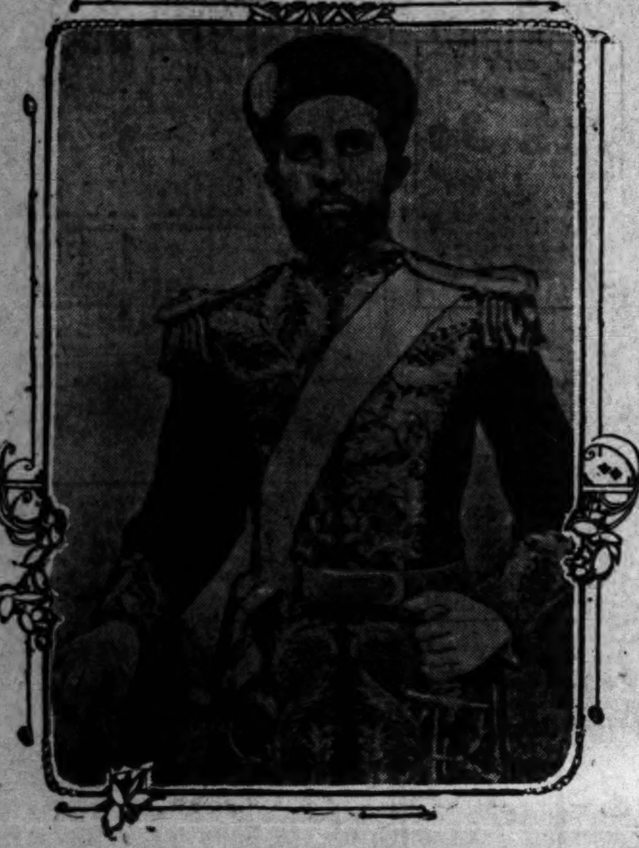
The disparity in the ages of these three sons of Abdur Rahman is a factor in the situation. Habib Ullah, born 1872, and Nazr Ullah, born 1874, are many years the senior of Sirdar Mohammed Omar Jan Khan, who was born in 1889. In this direction it is interesting to recall that the lawful heir to the throne, Sirdar Inayat Ullah Khan, the son of Habib Ullah, was born in 1888, and is actually six months older than his uncle, Sirdar Mahommed Omar Jan Khan. Habib Ullah, however, watches over the interests of his son very carefully, consolidating his position wherever he can do so. He has made him Governor of Kabul, and he sent him to India to greet Lord Curzon.

One of the alleged points of difference between Habib Ullah and Nazr Ullah is connected with the Amir's partiality for foreign-style dress. In his attendance at the Kabul court Nazr Ullah himself formerly appeared in the uniform of his military rank, but the court attendants are clad in black cloth coats, vests, trousers, circular astrakhan hats and white collars, with black neckties. All who are desirous of attending a durbar must don this dress. Nazr Ullah's military uniform comprised a scarlet coat richly embroidered with gold lace, cloth trousers and white gloves; for headgear he wore an astrakhan hat. In his attire as commander-in-chief there was not much difference between his own style and that adopted by the Amir. In his official undress Nazr Ullah assumed a black uniform faced with revers of braid and deep astrakhan cuffs, black cloth trousers braided, and patent leather knee boots.

HIS PYJAMAS.

The Amir upon ordinary occasions in public wears the garb of an English gentleman, but Nazr Ullah always preferred to return to native dress, when he wore silken tombons, or pyjamas gathered in at the waist and falling in tapering folds from the hips to the ankles, silk socks, and an embroidered silk piran, or vest, which reached to the knees, a long-sleeved waistcoat in velvet embroidered in gold, and a long coat richly ornamented with fur or other decorative material. While Habib Ullah disapproves of ostentatious habiliment, Nazr Ullah, at the bidding of the priests, claims that foreign-style costume is opposed to the tenets of the Mahommedan religion, and accordingly he has abandoned all foreign fashion clothing in favor of sacredotal garb, whenever he is called to officiate at any public or official function. Nazr Ullah's sincerity perhaps may be questioned, but the cleverness of the move cannot be gainsaid. Naturally it appealed with silent force to the people whose secret prayer is Afghanistan for the Afghans.

In speech Nazr Ullah recalls the mannerisms of his father, Abdur Rahman. Of equal height with the late ruler of Afghanistan, he is not so bulky as his brother, Habib Ullah, although he, too, in feature is very like his father. In appearance he is of darker complexion than Habib Ullah, but his features are not so heavy. His temperament is morose, his manner reticent, and he lacks the bluff frankness of Abdur Rahman. At the same time, he suggests a man who thinks deeply, and possesses no small capacity for intrigue. His attitude towards current affairs in Afghanistan suggests, indeed, that he is alive to his own interests, although his views are distinguished for their bigotry and superstition.



Nazr Ullah Khan,

Black Opal Jewelry of Wonderful Beauty

¶ The rare beauty and artistic possibilities of the true black opal are conspicuously revealed in the remarkable Brock & Feagans' showing of this exquisite gem.

¶ To those who are not familiar with the black opal, its beauties are beyond comprehension. Through it vibrate all the ever-changing colors of the rainbow—some in small pin point markings, others in fantastic, peacock, and formal designs.

¶ Some of the stones exhibit broad flashes of red, blue, green and purple, others cloud effects and gorgeous sunsets, such as only Turner could paint, or a Ruskin describe.

¶ There is no gem which more readily adapts itself to beautiful jewelry creations. The Brock & Feagans display is beyond all question the most important and comprehensive in Los Angeles. We invite you to see it.

The Brock & Feagans' showing of fine coral jewelry is also of unusual importance and interest to lovers of art in jewelry.

Health and Beauty Sec

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN.

"Annie Laurie:" Last week I referred to the new fashions of dressing the hair, and told an anxious inquirer what to do when she put away her puffs, rats and false braids. As all the women are now interested in this very live topic I will repeat the recipe for making quinine hair tonic that I gave. Get from your druggist one ounce of quinzoin, dissolve it in ½ pint of alcohol and add ½ pint of cold water. If you will gently rub this quinzoin tonic in the scalp and roots of the hair once or twice a week, you will find the treatment not only refreshing, but invigorating and nourishing. It restores the hair and scalp to a healthy condition and keeps it healthy. Quinzoin is just splendid for preventing dandruff and irritation of the scalp and its regular use will keep your hair from coming out. It puts life into the hair and heightens its natural color, although it will not change it. It keeps the hair fine and glossy.

J. M. S.: You say you are unable to find a face powder that will protect your complexion from the wind. You can make an inexpensive complexion wash at home that is far superior to any powder, for it will not rub off, streak or clog the pores of the skin. Get from your druggist 4 ounces of spurmax and dissolve it in ½ pint of hot water adding 2 teaspoonfuls of glycerine. This lotion will make your sallow and oily skin look fresh and youthful. It is splendid also for pimples, tan, freckles and cold sores, for it keeps the complexion soft, smooth and velvety.

Mrs. A. V.: You are not alone in your misery. Spring always finds thousands of women who are troubled with superfluous flesh gained during the inactive life of winter. Here is a simple and harmless remedy that will not only stop the accumulation of flesh, but will reduce your weight if you are too fat. Just get from your druggist 4 ounces of parnotis, dissolve it in a pint of hot water and take a tablespoonful before each meal. I have a friend who "takes off" about ten pounds in a few weeks every spring with parnotis—and she says she feels better for doing it.

Ella W.: The large pores and blackheads that cause you so much embarrassment are probably caused by the use of face powder. Almozoin cream jelly is the best remedy I know for clearing the skin of blackheads, large pores and those little skin pimples that are so annoying. You can make it yourself. Get from your druggist one ounce of almozoin, mix it with 2 teaspoonfuls of glycerine and

Kind Hearts--Good Deeds

"How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

Miss Julia Gleeson, a Chicago shopgirl, earning $12 a week, served an Easter dinner to sixty prisoners at the Harrison-street Police Station of that city, paying for the food out of her savings. Miss Gleeson regularly sets aside 50 cents a week for such work, and she has become known among the women prisoners of Chicago as the "Angel of the Stationhouse."

For two weeks, Miss Gleeson, helped by Miss Helen Anderson, another working girl, had worked after office hours preparing the details of the dinner. A dozen policemen were placed at her disposal when the dinner was ready.

Mrs. E. Beatrice Christie and Miss Mary Hogan, two courageous nurses, are to receive certificates of honor from the New York Department of Charities, because of having nursed a woman leper for three weeks last December. When the patient was taken to the hospital in November the physicians pronounced it one of the most aggravated cases of leprosy that had come under their supervision in a long time. Mrs. Agnes S. Ward, superintendent of the training school, called for volunteers to assist at the operation deemed necessary, and to administer to the woman, and Mrs. Christie and Miss Hogan signified their willingness to do the work. The woman died late in December.

Lord Mount Stephen has generously allotted $300,000 for sending young children from England to Canada. His lordship has selected Dr. Barnardo's Homes as the medium by which his scheme shall be put into execution, and it is his earnest desire to send the young emigrants at the earliest possible age at which they are fit, in order that they may grow up in a new country strengthened by the larger hope of sturdiness and independence.

Mr. Baker, the present head of Dr. Barnardo's Homes, explains that the income from Lord Mount Stephen's trust will amount to nearly $15,000 a year, and this will enable the homes to send out an additional 300 children annually. The whole of the income will be spent on emigration pure and simple, none of it going to establish charges, either in England or Canada.

Bernard Carithers and his sister, Grace, of Seattle, recently saved two young men from drowning because of an overturned canoe. They were out in a launch when they discovered the young men clinging to their capsized craft, which was being so tossed about by the wind that it was hazardous for the launch to come alongside. When they came within reaching distance of the canoe Miss Carithers, reaching over the side of the larger craft, caught one of the men by the neck just as his fingers were relaxing their hold on the canoe. It was with difficulty that Miss Carithers clung to her charge and more than once she was in danger of being jerked overboard by the half unconscious but still struggling man. Both men were finally taken into the launch and carried to the boathouse, where, after half an hour of hard work they were resuscitated.

The men said they had been in the water ten minutes and were about to give up when help arrived.

One of the best replies, perhaps, to the objections to the Rockefeller Foundation may be found in the character of the work of the General Education Board, which was chartered by Con- One of the means adopted by the general board for aiding the new "reconstruction" of the South involved the encouragement of the youth to stick to the farm and become expert farmers, and this illustration of how it is being done is authentic but is related without the knowledge of any member or officer of the general board.

The executive secretary of the board, Dr. Wallace Buttrick, was in rural North Carolina some months ago, where he met a Southern enthusiast.

"Talk about the South's growing," said this man, "why, do you know that every boy in this county has turned farmer? You never heard of such enthusiasm as these boys from 12 to 16 put into their work. A man in this county whom every one respects has offered the boys prizes for the best corn, the best potatoes, the best vegetables, and the best of everything that the land will produce. The only stipulation is that the boys must do all the work. Did you ever hear of such a thing? You ought to stay down here a week and see what those boys are doing. Perhaps you might want to help them some."

"The last thing I did before leaving New York," replied Dr. Butterick with a quiet smile, "was to sign a check to pay for those prizes for the boys."

All the preliminary work of organization had been done, the prizes had been announced, and every boy in the county was striving for them, but all had been accomplished so quietly and unostentatiously that one of the best

FEMALE DEVELOPMENT.

Harvard's Physical Director Believes Time Will Come When Woman Equals Man.

A time is foreseen by Harvard's physical director when women as a result of their devotion to athletics will overtake man in physical development.

By grace of tennis, golf, horseback riding, swimming and through gymnasium training young women who have leisure for such pursuits have greatly improved their physique within a generation. Yet the progress made, Dr. Sargent thinks, is only the beginning. Fashion, freedom from worry and other causes are all helping a development which will eventually make woman man's physical equal if not his superior.

It is not to be forgotten that woman is fast becoming man's equal in business and politics, as well as his partner in athletic sports, and that she may be expected to assume her share of the cares and worries from which she is now free and which retard physical growth. There are other considerations. It has not been shown that a girlhood given to strenuous athletics is conducive to good looks in middle life or that an uncorseted outdoor existence fosters the desired symmetry of outline in the matron. Fashion may yet interpose objections. It is not impossible that a regulation of feminine college sports in the interest of scholarship and class standing may be enforced as the result of masculine agi-

The Miracle.

She's but a little colleen gay,
Scarce thicker than me thumb,
But oh, the word she spoke the day!
'Tis blind I am, and dumb.
Her small mouth had a pleadin' twist
As though 'twas wishful to be kissed;
I thought it gave the true word whist,
And hope lept in the heart o' me.

But when I tried it—oh, the blow
The little hand laid on me cheek!
'Twas but a feather's weight, I know,
But sure, it left me faint and weak.
And oh, the look that changed her eyes!
'Twas like the change of Erin's skies
From shine to storm—the black surprsei
And sorrow burst the heart o' me.

She stood there lashin' me bold ways—
So weak the gentle tongue of her,
Compared with some I've got 'twas praise—
Then somethin', sudden, seemed to stir
Within me breast. The truth it lept
Straight out, belike as if't had slept:
Then—right into me arms she crept.
Sure, joy's near crazed the heart o' me.

Gossip of Interesting People.

HEREABOUTS.

CHARLES R. SLIGH, one of the leading Democratic politicians in Michigan, at one time, and at present confining his efforts to the manufacture of furniture, with his wife, is registered at the Lankershim. Mr. Sligh at one time ran for the Governorship of the State against Gov. Pingree. D. D. Whitten, chief clerk at the hotel, is an old friend of Mr. Sligh and tells this story of the campaign: "Both of the candidates spoke in the same place on the same day, one in the afternoon and the other in the evening. Nearly every one in the place was on hand to hear both of the addresses. The strange feature of the matter was the stand which the two men had adopted on the tariff. Sligh, the Democrat, being a manufacturer, stood for high protective measures, against the doctrines of his party, while Gov. Pingree on the other hand, running on the Republican ticket, was practically an advocate of free trade, and finally at the time of the elections won on this policy." Mr. Sligh has visited California a number of times and each time likes it better. According to his own statement, he will probably make Los Angeles his home in the very near future.

Dr. F. Stice of San José, has been a guest at the Hayward during the past week. With his wife he has returned from a trip through Mexico, and brought with him one of the wealthy planters of the central part of that republic. "The man fell from a horse and broke his leg right near the hip," said Dr. Stice. "Three of the doctors of the little place were called in to care for the man. They decided that the bone had only been displaced and not broken, and so set to work to reset. Instead of resetting, they actually tore another bone from the socket, leaving the injury far worse than it had been originally. It was impossible to do anything there in the way of a successful operation after this job of bungling, and so, with a nurse and physician, the man has been brought to Los Angeles and his injuries have been attended here."

Fernando Rodriques and wife, of Buenos Ayres, Argentine Republic, have been passing a few days at the Angelus, during the past week. Mr. Rodriques is a rich land owner of the South American country, and has been spending the last year in traveling in various parts of the world. The fame of Los Angeles has reached even Buenos Ayres, according to Mr. Rodriques, and for that reason he came to see the beautiful city himself. He is rather handicapped in this country, having only a superficial knowledge of English and for that reason was unable to give a lengthy interview on conditions in the far southern countries.

"The present high prices of meat are not from a scarcity of cattle," declared J. M. Gibbs of Cananea, Mex., who, with his wife, is at the Hollenbeck. "They are rather the result of the high prices of feed. We have more cattle in our part of the country at the present time than ever before, but it has been impossible to fatten them, owing to the scarcity of corn, the high prices asked for it. The farmers have found out there is just as much money, if not more, in the production of grain, as in the double production of grain and then cattle, and have been abandoning the latter. This is true in all parts of the United States, as well as in the northern portions of Mexico." Mr. Gibbs is an associate of Frank Proctor, one of the largest cattle producers in the northern part of Mexico.

"American lithographers and their tri-color work are winning the admiration of the German printers, although they are at the same time decreasing the business of the latter," said Robert S. Richert, a stationery manufacturer of Berlin, who, for several days has been domiciled at the Alexandria. "Until five years ago the German postcard manufacturers had all of the trade of America. Since that time the American printers have discovered their processes and are certainly doing excellent work. There are many things, however, in the way of manufacturing fine card novelties, high-class dye stamping and other lines of the stationery business that the Germans still control. You can imagine that it pays when we are able to send a man to America, who travels way out here to Los Angeles, every year."

"No matter what the press of the country may say against Joe Cannon, his friends in the Paris Congress district of Illinois will always stand by him," said R. O. Kirby of Paris, who, with his family, has been spending a few weeks at the Lankershim. "Uncle Joe," according to Mr. Kirby, is an idol of the home people. "The residents of the district feel in Cannon a certain distinction, feel as if they were just about running the government from that part of the country. You can't blame us for feeling proud of a man who has risen to be one of the greatest men the United States has ever produced. Will we vote for him again with the storm of opposition which has grown against him throughout the country? Well, I should say yes. Cannon has a life job as far as the voters of Paris are concerned."

Owner of several thousand acres of land near Guadalajara, Mex., Marshal P. Wright, who has recently returned to the Hollenbeck, after a trip through that country, can also boast of being one of the biggest producers of fine vegetables. He has nearly 2000 acres of his land under actual cultivation, some of it in tomatoes, other in onions, and some in grain. "The tomatoes and onions and a few other fresh vegetables bring the best returns," said Wright, "since they are on the market when every part of the United States is out of these things, from early in January to the end of March. Our tomato season is about over and has been a very profitable one, while the Bermuda onion season is at its height and shipments of these are going to all parts of the United States, two cars having been shipped right to Los Angeles."

PEOPLE OF THE COAST.

FRED D FISHER of Albany, Or., has been enjoying his first furlough after eleven years' continuous service for his country in the orient as a soldier, government clerk, and in the consular service. He went to the Philippines in 1898 with Company F of the Second Oregon Volunteers, and after the war remained in the islands as a clerk in the government service. He then became assistant Consul at Nagasaki, Japan, and was promoted successively to be Consul at Tamsui, Formosa; Consul at Harbin, Manchuria; Consul at Niewchwang, and Consul-General at Mukden.

James Fish of Valdez, Alaska, 70 years old, has started on a trip to his birthplace, Manchester, England, and proposes covering all the land portions of the route on foot. After visiting in Manchester he will travel on foot across Europe, visit the Philippine Islands and return to Alaska by way of the Pacific.

Hugh I. Dickson of San Bernardino, general counsel for the Brotherhood of Firemen and Enginemen, was recently admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of the United States. As a fireman he lost both his hands. Afterward he studied law. He signed

MRS. HOWARD, WHO BECAME RICH IN A NIGHT.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, April 2.—To be suddenly released from a life of toil amid humble surroundings and become the possessor of a million dollars as well as the wealthiest woman in her home city is the fortune that dazzles Mrs. Harriet B. Howard, a modest seamstress of this city.

Today Mrs. Howard lives with her husband in a little suite of rooms over a row of business stores. At the lower entrance is a sign in gilt letters reading, "Mrs. Harriet Howard, Dressmaking."

Mr. Howard is a hard working farmer on an estate belonging to Mr. E. B. Barrows, near this city. Until recently he was a truckman. The husband and wife have spent their lives in hard work. Their only son is now an electrician in Uncle Sam's army and stationed at Portland.

For twenty-two years Mrs. Howard has worked at dressmaking. A few months ago she received a letter postmarked Dublin, Ireland. This informed her that a fortune of $12,000,000 in realty and cash, left by the late Margaret Savage, awaited the latter's decendants upon proof of their identity. The letter suggested that Mrs. Howard send data for identification that would assure the lawyers of her relationship to the testatrix.

the week of George H. Williams left no survivor of President Grant's Cabinet. Williams, who served in the United States Senate from Oregon from 1865 to 1871, went into Grant's Cabinet as Attorney-General in 1872, and was succeeded during the warrior President's second term by Alfonso Taft, although this succession was not direct. Serving in the Senate with Williams were such statesmen as Edmunds, Sherman, Stewart, Chandler, Sumner, Trumbull and Hendricks, while in the House of Representatives were Colfax, Allison, Blaine, Conkling, Randall, Hayes and Garfield. John P. Jones of Santa Monica well remembers Williams as Attorney-General. Senator Jones went to the United States Senate from Nevada in 1873, and was in the Senate when Williams was nominated by President Grant to be Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court. This appointment, however, was withdrawn. When Senator Jones took his seat he was in company with Bayard, Logan, Morton, Allison, Ingalls, Sumner, Chandler, Schurz, Stewart, Conkling, Sherman, Thurman and Edmunds. Blaine was then Speaker of the House, presiding over a body whose roll call contained such names as Cannon, Frye, Hale, Butler, Hoar, Bland, Cox, Platt, Garfield, Randall, Mills, Rusk and Elkins, the last named then being a delegate from New Mexico. Mr. Jones remained in the Senate until 1903, and when he retired all that remained in office of the list of notables who were there to welcome him into the halls of Congress thirty years before were Cannon, Allison, Frye, Hoar, Platt, Stewart and Elkins. During the seven years that have passed since Mr. Jones gave up public life, Death's hand has fallen heavily upon that coterie of seven.

William Philip Stevenson of Seattle saw an electric car for the first time a few days ago. He had been confined to his home since January, 1881, with paralysis of the spine, since which time he has never walked a step. He has, however, kept mentally active, and with the aid of a telephone at his bedside kept in touch with his friends.

ARMY AND NAVY MEN.

SINCE the death of Brig.-Gen. Daniel H. Rucker, who was the oldest officer on the retired list of the army, Lieut.-Col. Frank Bridgman has that distinction. July 10 next, Lieut.-Col. Bridgman will be 90 years old. He entered the volunteers as an additional paymaster in September, 1861, and was not mustered out until January, 1869. He was then appointed a paymaster in the regular army, retiring in 1884, and was given the rank of lieutenant-colonel in 1904. He is now at Coronado Beach, Cal.

These officers follow in point of age: Brig.-Gen. Peter J. Osterhaus, January 4, 1823; Col. Henry L. Chipman, February 1, 1823; Brig.-Gen. Henry B. Carrington, March 2, 1824; Lieut.-Col. Edwin Bentley, July 3, 1824; Chaplain Daniel Kendig, November 10, 1824; Col. Benjamin C. Card, February 15, 1825; Maj. George H. McLoughlin, March 17, 1825; Brig.-Gen. David L. Magruder, April 23, 1825; Maj. Eugene A. Bancroft, June 17, 1825; Brig.-Gen. Nathan A. M. Dudley, August 20, 1825; Maj.-Gen. Daniel E. Sickles, October 20, 1825, and Capt. Thomas B. Briggs, November 16, 1825.

There are only two Mexican War veterans in the above list—Gen. Murray and Capt. Briggs. Soon after being appointed an assistant surgeon in June, 1846, Gen. Murray was sent to California, being stationed at Los Angeles, Monterey and Camp Far West until October, 1850, when he returned East.

Capt. Briggs served as a private in the Fourth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, commanded by Col. E. D. Baker, from June 17, 1846, until May 26, 1847. He participated in the battles of Vera Cruz and Cerro Gordo. Capt. Briggs also served in the volunteers throughout the Civil War, and was placed on the retired list, while a first lieutenant Crozier, chief of ordnance; Brig.-Gen. William L. Marshall, chief engineer, and Capt. Stabley Embick of the Coast Artillery Corps are back from Panama where they went a month ago in connection with the work of fortifying the canal.

Gen. Thomas L. Rosser, who lives at his home at Charlottesville, Va., was recently presented with a handsome gift by some of his friends and business associates, who, after the Civil War, were engaged in surveying a route in 1871 for the Northern Pacific Railway through the Dakotas. The gift is a large picture, in dry print, of a battle with the Indians on the prairie. The Indians (about fifty) mounted, with bows and arrows and some firearms, swooped down on a reconnoitering party of two, with the intention of murdering them before the cavalry troop could come up to help them. The scene shows Gen. Rosser in the rough garb of a civil engineer, and his sole companion, Lieut. Adair, in the cavalry uniform.

Gen. Walter Howe has been transferred from Governors Island, New York, to St. Paul, where he will assume command of the Division of the Lakes.

IN THE LIMELIGHT.

SECRETARY OF COMMERCE NAGEL, Senator Root and Representative Kronmiller, had the unique experience on the 31st ult., of having to crawl through a window of the White House to obtain an audience with President Taft. The entrance of the building was besieged by a thousand excursionists desiring to meet the President, and any other method of entrance than by a window or the chimney was effectively barred to the officials.

Rafe Simmons, a candidate for Congress from the First District of Georgia, is probably the most picturesque political figure in South Georgia. He can neither read nor write. It is probable that never before in the history of the State has a man made the race for Congress with such a handicap. Mr. Simmons is very shrewd, however, and one could associate with him for many months and not discover this defect in his education. He kept himself well enough informed on State affairs to win a seat in the Georgia Legislature, and this office he is filling with satisfaction to his constituents. Although unlearned so far as books go Mr. Simmons has an abundance of that native shrewdnes that makes the Georgia cracker a formidable man to deal with in a trade of any kind, be it a swapping of horses or the selling of cotton and merchandise. He started in life poor and he has made a fortune. It is reported that his income from the sale of Sea Island and short staple cotton this season will net him at least $60,000.

A unique and amusing situation will be presented in the House of Representatives when the Foss brothers divide on party line. Eugene Foss, the new Congressman from Massachusetts, is a Democrat. George Edmund Foss, Congressman from Chicago is a Republican. It is said to be the first instance on record where two brothers were arrayed on opposite sides in the House.

John D. Archbold, the other John D. of the Standard Oil Company, and the active working principal, is about five feet three inches in height, but his head is big enough for a seven-footer. It is a remarkable head, physically speaking, and when Archbold was on the witness stand the newspaper cartoonist properly accentuated his phrenological bumps. Once he leaped from the chair and snatched a pencil from a cartoonist's fingers. Like the other John D., this one has a pet college, the Syracuse University, to which he has contributed more than a million dollars.

ACTIVE WOMEN.

MRS. ELIZABETH MITCHELL of Marrow, Ga., 98 years old, has been for eighty-three years a member of the Methodist Church, and years and her hearing is somewhat affected, but she is still mentally bright and alert and takes a great interest in everything that goes on around her. She is the mother of fifteen children, nine of whom are living. Her children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren and great-great-grandchildren bring the total number of her direct descendants in the neighborhood of 500.

Miss Edith M. Hall, who has been acting as substitute for Prof. Louise Fitz-Randolph in the classical archeological department of Mount Holyoke College, has gone to Crete to work under the direction of Richard B. Seager in excavations which he is carrying on. Miss Hall will remain in Crete until June and in September return of Mount Holyoke.

Miss Knox, principal of Hevergel College, Toronto, and Miss Keys, sister of Prof. Keys, now on the staff of Vassar College, are the two women being considered by the governors of Toronto University for appointment as dean of the university. If either is appointed she will be the first woman on the staff of the University of Toronto.

CHURCHMEN.

THE lord bishop of Salisbury (England,) Right Rev. Dr. John Wordsworth, is to preach the opening sermon at the Cincinnati general convention of the Protestant Episcopalians next October. He will also deliver the Baldwin lectures at the University of Chicago.

The Rev. F. Robert Bunker, who, with his wife and five children, has been in Zambesi, East Africa, for seventeen years, has returned to America. His home is in Minnesota. He, with other missionaries, translated "Chindu," which is the native tongue of Zambesi, and made dictionaries and many transcripts of religious works.

A reception given to Prof. John S. Sewall of the Bangor Theological Seminary in honor of his eightieth birthday brings out the fact that he is one of the survivors of Commodore Perry's famous Japan expedition at the time when that interesting country was little known to the rest of the world.

Milan Smith, 15 years old, a member of the Laconia, N. H. High School, is the youngest preacher in New England. He holds services in a small community known as The Oaks and has just completed a half year of his pastorate over a hundred people. Smith spends his Saturday instead of playing ball in preparing his sermons for the following day. Sunday he has a walk of three miles to and from his parish. His parishioners revere the youth. He rarely reads his sermons, but talks from notes. After services his congregation gathers around him, grayhaired farmers and their wives shaking hands with him and offering encouragement. Smith is the son of William Smith, a railroad laborer. When he was 6 years old he decided to become a minister. At 9 he preferred reading the Bible to any other book and at 12 was the prize Bible scholar of New England. At 14 he become superintendent of Laconia Sunday-school and left this position to accept the call to The Oaks. He is a full-fledged pastor now and is going to erect a new meeting house in place of the present cramped quarters.

E. J. Lupson, parish clerk of Yarmouth, who has completed forty-four years' service, has attended 12,000 weddings at the parish church, and has been absent from church only three times out of nearly 2300 Sundays.

He has given away more than 1200 brides.

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR REMOVERS

The New York World, in Commenting Upon Unscrupulous Manufacturers of Them, Says:

"The fakes put on the market in the last ten years have numbered their victims by the hundreds of thousands. Empty promises have been made by scores of promoters in the wild scramble to get the money. The marvel is that woman has not become so thoroughly disgusted as to reject all treatments for good.

But her hope for a remedy was not in vain, and the credit of coming to her assistance fell to an American. Only a few years ago the now well known De Miracle treatment was brought forth and it proved to be a revelation in modern science. A representative of the New York World investigated the discovery and the methods by which it was introduced to the public. He found exhaustive tests have shown it to be the long desired, practical, expeditious and safe way in which to destroy the growth of hair. Those who put it before the public knew the fallacy and dishonesty of publishing extravagant claims. They did not resort to any catch schemes such as making a prospective customer a special offer of personal interest. . . . They started to win the confidence of those interested, and in this way they have been eminently successful. What is more to the point, it has been indorsed by prominent physicians representative medical journals and leading magazines devoted to woman's cause. There is too much at stake to risk such indorsements if they are not true to the letter. Only the result of repeated chemical experiments and a thorough knowledge of the origin of all hair growth could stand against the investigation of such authorites." The De Miracle Chemical Company is open and above board in every detail. The indorsements are not just claimed. A little probing on the part of the paper disclosed the fact that they are published and sent broadcast, with the indentity and address of the writer or publication added. This is the stumbling block of all so-called remedies. A reputable member of the medical profession or a publication in good stading could never afford to be identified with anything that savors of a fake, and the voluntary praise given through these channels is not to be bought with money. It is given on the strength of conviction.

When so great and reliable a publication as the New York World publishes such facts as the above in reference to hair removers it should be sufficient to convince any one that De Miracle is the only absolutely safe, reliable and trustworthy hair remover ever offered the public. De Miracle is sold by Owl Drug Co.

The complete article of the New York World and Editorials of many other well-known pulications with our Booklet containing testimonials will be mailed free in plain sealed envelope on request. Address De Miracle Chemical Co., Dept. 133, Park Ave. and 129th St., New York. Write for it today.

MY TRIP AROUND TH

BY SYDNEY FORD.

ON BOARD STEAMSHIP TENYO MARU, March 20.—Our first Sabbath on the sea. Tomorrow morning our good ship drops anchor in the harbor of Honolulu, and the first stage of our journey is completed. We have had a comparatively smooth voyage all the way from San Francisco. Sunny skies have smiled upon us from a heaven of blue. A brisk breeze on the second day out sent swells of sufficient size to send most of us to our berths. "New things were continually coming up," as one of our party facetiously remarked, and the dining saloon, which is the pulse of the general passenger list, showed more vacant than occupied seats.

We followed the advice of a gay girl friend of mine, who, in discussing the probable effects of the first few days at sea and its attendant malady, said: "Don't try to hold on, just yap it up."

We "yapped"—and we're feeling fine, thank you! Quite able to sit up and take notice and nourishment.

Really, one needs to go away from home in order to know how many friends he has. We have been literally kept busy reading our steamer letters. And such clever epistles as they are. Most of them were given us before our departure from Los Angeles, with the dates for opening written on the envelopes, and others were mailed to us direct to the steamer and delivered when we were well out to sea. Some are not to be opened till we are in the Orient, and one especially tantalizing envelope is labeled "Not to be opened till on your way home across the continent from New York to Los Angeles." Imagine keeping a letter unopened for six months or more.

PROMINENT PASSENGERS.

The Tenyo Maru, on which we sail from San Francisco to Yokohama, carries a full passenger list this trip, and among our fellow voyagers are some well-known people who are going to the Orient to fulfill important missions. There is Hon. W. J. Calhoun, recently appointed Minister to China, accompanied by Mrs. Calhoun, on their way to Peking. Then there is D. Willard Lyon, national secretary of the Y.M.C.A. in China, and traveling in company with him and his family is Mrs. J. S. Burgess, a bride of last June, who will be remembered by the Los Angeles Y.W.C.A. as Miss Stella Fisher, for two years Y.W.C.A. secretary in Japan, and supported by the Pacific Coast associations. Her husband, J. S. Burgess, was sent out by Princeton University last November as Y.M.C.A. secretary at Peking, and she is now going out to join him.

Charles Clarke of Detroit, freight traffic agent of the Grand Trunk Railroad, is another passenger bound for Japan. "Out for a holiday—my first in thirty-eight years," he says. "Ever since I was a boy I have been intensely interested in the Orient, and I have always planned some day to take a trip there. I am going out unofficially and will have just twenty-five days to spend in Japan, and in that time I intend to look about and settle in my mind several questions that have been keeping in my brain ever since, in 1862, as a small boy, I listened to a speech by an old man who stood on a dry goods box in the streets of a little town in Northern Michigan and declared that one of the most important international affairs of state would beckon us from the Orient."

Mr. Clarke is a man of affairs and a personal friend of such men as Theodore Roosevelt, Chauncey M. Depew and of the late T. C. Platt and Roswell P. Flower.

THE SHIP SERVICE.

The Tenyo Maru is a new liner, and she is absolutely spick and span and is kept in a state of immaculate cleanliness. You feel as if you were in a great floating hotel, with every want anticipated by a retinue of attendants. "Boy," as his official name seems to be, is everywhere present—not singly, but in hordes, as it were. Chinamen, clad in immaculate linen, stand about ready to wait upon you, hand and foot. You touch the bell in your stateroom, and in about six seconds a rap on the door announces that "Boy" is there ready to do your bidding.

Never did I see Japanese and Chinese working together in such harmony as on board this ship. The Chinese reign in the dining saloon, their long, smoothly-braided black queues neatly tucked inside their dark-blue linen uniforms. At dinner they all appear in immaculate white.

The deck stewards are Japanese, and can talk just enough English to take our orders from the menu card—for many of the passengers prefer to have their meals served on deck. The other day, after taking a tramp around the promenade deck, we asked our steward how far it was. He looked wise, hesitated the fraction of a minute, and then responded: "Fifteen miles." According to that, we had tramped forty-five miles before breakfast. Evidently his ideas of distance, measured as we Americans reckon, were rather hazy.

This steamer stride, by the way, is a gait in a distinct class by itself, and as you lie lazily in your steamer chair watching the passing promenaders you wonder why on earth every one goes galloping along, head pitched well forward, as if breasting a wind, and walking as though they were racing to make a train. When you try it yourself you understand. It's merely the balancing of the body against the motion of the steamer. Getting on our sea legs, as it were.

Yesterday we had a fire drill, and a small regiment of Japs and Chinamen came rushing down the decks, armed with pails and hose, the big, hoarse whistle blew, giving signals, the lifeboats were swung out and lowered and we all had a chance to see what would happen in case our big steamer should actually get on fire. Nor was the drill without its tragic feature, for one of the Japanese boys fell in making a quick turn, his foot turned under him, resulting in a painful fracture which will keep him bed-ridden for weeks. The discipline and service seem well-nigh perfect. Our stewardess is a [illegible], matronly Scotch-English woman, with a delicious burr in her speech. She has reigned undisputed as stewardess on this particular steamer ever since it made its first trip, and evidently her word is regarded by the officers with a good deal of respect. One day, when the waves were tossing considerably, and many of us were confined to our staterooms, an odor of pitch-pine invaded the corridors and staterooms, to the great discomfiture of the seasick passengers. Bells began to ring, pushed by distressed mortals to summon the stewardess. I heard her coming down the corridor, and her voice preceded her.

"I tell you, mon, it must be stopped," she was saying. "It's makin' all the passengers sick. It must be stopped."

Then there was a quick tap at our door and Madame the Stewardess ushered in the chief engineer, a dapper little Japanese gentleman, clad in his uniform. "Just smell that, mon," she admonished him, as the fumes of the pitch-pine greeted his nostrils. "It must be stopped."

It was stopped—and that without delay. When a steamer is run by four

Burgess, a bride of last June, who will be remembered by the Los Angeles Y.W.C.A. as Miss Stella Fisher, for two years Y.W.C.A. secretary in Japan, and supported by the Pacific Coast associations. Her husband, J. S. Burgess, was sent out by Princeton University last November as Y.M.C.A. secretary at Peking, and she is now going out to join him.

Charles Clarke of Detroit, freight traffic agent of the Grand Trunk Railroad, is another passenger bound for Japan. "Out for a holiday—my first in thirty-eight years," he says. "Ever since I was a boy I have been intensely interested in the Orient, and I have always planned some day to take a trip there. I am going out unofficially and will have just twenty-five days to spend in Japan, and in that time I [illegible] to look about and settle in my mind several questions that have been sleeping in my brain ever since, in 1862, as a small boy, I listened to a speech by an old man who stood on a dry goods box in the streets of a little town in Northern Michigan and declared that one of the most important international affairs of state would beckon us from the Orient."

Mr. Clarke is a man of affairs and a personal friend of such men as Theodore Roosevelt, Chauncey M. Depew and of the late T. C. Platt and Roswell P. Flower.

THE SHIP SERVICE.

The Tenyo Maru is a new liner, and she is absolutely spick and span and is kept in a state of immaculate cleanliness. You feel as if you were in a great floating hotel, with every want anticipated by a retinue of attendants. "Boy," as his official name seems to be, is everywhere present—not singly, but in hordes, as it were. Chinamen, clad in immaculate linen, stand about ready to wait upon you, hand and foot. You touch the bell in your stateroom, and in about six seconds a tap on the door announces that "Boy" is there ready to do your bidding.

Never did I see Japanese and Chinese working together in such harmony as on board this ship. The Chinese boys in the dining saloon, their long, neatly-braided black queues neatly tucked inside their dark-blue linen uniforms. At dinner they all appear in immaculate white.

The deck stewards are Japanese, and can talk just enough English to take your orders from the menu card—for many of the passengers prefer to have their meals served on deck. The other day, after taking a tramp around the promenade deck, we asked our steward how far it was. He looked wise, hesitated the fraction of a minute, and then responded: "Fifteen miles."

According to that, we had tramped [illegible]ty-five miles before breakfast. Evidently his ideas of distance, measured as we Americans reckon, were rather hazy.

This steamer stride, by the way, is quite in a distinct class by itself, and as you lie lazily in your steamer chair watching the passing promenaders you wonder why on earth every one goes galloping along, head pitched well forward, as if breasting a wind, and looking as though they were racing to make a train. When you try it yourself you understand. It's merely the balancing of the body against the motion of the steamer. Getting on your sea legs, as it were.

Yesterday we had a fire drill, and a whole regiment of Japs and Chinamen came rushing down the decks, armed with pails and hose, the big, hoarse whistle blew, giving signals, the lifeboats were swung out and lowered and we all had a chance to see what would happen in case our big steamer should really get on fire. Nor was the drill without its tragic feature, for one of the Japanese boys fell in making a quick turn, his foot turned under him, resulting in a painful fracture which will keep him bed-ridden for weeks. The discipline and service seem well-nigh perfect. Our stewardess is a nice, matronly Scotch-English woman with a delicious burr in her speech. She has reigned undisputed as stewardess on this particular steamer ever since it made its first trip, and evidently her word is regarded by the crew with a good deal of respect. One day, when the waves were tossing considerably, and many of us were confined to our staterooms, an odor of pitch-pine invaded the corridors and staterooms, to the great discomfiture of the seasick passengers. Bells began to ring, pushed by distressed mortals to summon the stewardess. I heard her coming down the corridor, but her voice preceded her.

"I tell you, mon, it must be stopped," she was saying. "It's makin' all the passengers sick. It must be stopped." Then there was a quick tap at our door and Madame the Stewardess ushered in the chief engineer, a dapper little Japanese gentleman, clad in his uniform. "Just smell that, mon," she admonished him, as the fumes of the pitch-pine greeted his nostrils. "It must be stopped."

It was stopped—and that without delay. When a steamer is run by four commander, purser, surgeon and freight clerk are American; otherwise the officers are Japanese.

GET A DECK BONNET.

If you, milady, are contemplating an ocean trip this summer, then you must, by all means, provide yourself with a Dutch bonnet made from an automobile veil. I have seen some fascinating ones worn on board. The chiffon veil is shirred over the wire frame of the bonnet, and the ends—to the length of half or three-quarters of a yard—left floating, to tie under the chin if you like. One pretty girl I notice has a wreath of tiny rosebuds over each ear and across the back of the neck of her bonnet, giving it a very chic finish. One could easily fashion such a bonnet herself and it is a most useful and necessary accessory to wear on deck.

SUNDAY ON SHIPBOARD.

This morning we witnessed the weekly Sunday morning inspection. Every member of the crew, to the number of some 160, each clad in spotless white, with shining brass buttons, were lined up on the decks for inspection. On one side of the promenade deck were the Japanese stewards and attendants, and on the other the Chinese, while the American and Japanese officials passed them in review.

Can anything be more sweetly solemn than the Sabbath service conducted at sea? At 11 o'clock the sweet-toned chimes announced the hour of worship, and the passengers assembled in the great dining saloon, which had been made ready for the occasion. D. Willard Lyon, China's national Y.M.C.A. secretary, led the beautiful Episcopal service, supplementing it with a brief and most impressive talk on the real test of life, lived as He would have us live it—not for self alone, but unto others. As the voices of the assembled congregation arose above the ripple of the sea in one of the grand old hymns of the church, our thoughts went out in loving worship to Him who rules the deep, and who is our Great Pilot.

As we near Honolulu the sea grows bluer and bluer, and with scarcely a ripple upon it. Our big ship glides as smoothly as if we were sailing up the Hudson River, and all traces of mal de mer have disappeared. Passengers are promenading the decks in the sunshine, the women in summer garments, and the calm of a perfect day rests over the sea. We spend but twelve hours in Honolulu, which we reach tomorrow morning at 6 o'clock, and that same evening again set sail, with our ship's prow pointed toward Japan, the Land of the Cherry Blossom, which we will reach just in time to behold this wondrous festival of petals.

IN THE SMOKING COMPARTMENT.

BY C. S. YOST.

On the side of a warehouse across the track from the station in Oklahoma, where the train had paused for a moment, appeared this announcement in red letters: "One night only. The Original Uncle Tom's Cabin Company. Genuine Bloodhounds. Jackson's Operahouse. Admission 25 Cents."

"My, my, my!" murmured the passenger from Albany, "I thought Uncle Tom was dead and buried long ago."

"Don't you believe it," said the red-headed man in the corner. "'Uncle Tom's Cabin' is as popular today, outside the cities, as ever it was, although its political significance is entirely forgotten. I'll bet there's at least fifty companies on the road playing it and nothing else year in and year out. You don't hear much about them, for they're not in the theatrical trust and their routes don't figure in the theatrical papers, but they play their territories as regularly as any of the big metropolitan companies. Most of them travel from town to town in wagons, and some of them have circuits that stretch from Texas up through Oklahoma and Kansas clear to North Dakota and back again."

"And if you want to live a care-free, gypsy sort of life, just travel with them for a while," put in the passenger from Buffalo. "I spent two years with a caravan of that kind, and it was the happiest time of my life. It wasn't so quiet as you might think, either. There was enough excitement about it to keep it from getting monotonous, and one time, I remember—I will always remember—the old play turned out a tragedy that was the real thing.

"The Eliza of our company was a rather pretty Ohio girl, whose real name was Edna Holt. She wasn't any great shakes as an actress, but she was as fine a little lady as ever walked back of the footlights. She nursed us when we were sick, she cheered us up when we were blue, and all the time she was the same good fellow, with a good fellowship that wouldn't stand for any nonsense. She had been married to a worthless scamp who had beat her when he was drunk and neglected her when he was sober. She stood it for two years and then she ran away; worked at one thing or another until by accident she got into the show business. But she was scared half to death all the time, fearing that husband of hers would turn up. In her imagination he was the devil's own half-brother, and every night before the curtain went up she'd put in a minute or two looking through the peepholes at the audience. She never told us, but we knew she was looking for him.

"Our 'Simon Legree' was as mild a villain as ever cut a stage throat. His name was Martin, and he was a gentleman from his toes up. He came from a good family in New York State and had been educated for the law. I never did find out why he was traveling around the country with a wagon show. He said he liked the life, but there must have been a stronger reason than that at the beginning. It was easy enough to understand, though, why he stayed with it, for everybody in the company knew that he was in love with Edna Holt. We knew, too, that she was in love with him, and if it hadn't been for that specter of a husband they'd have been married. She could have got a divorce easy enough, of course, but she would have had to leave the show and establish residence somewhere, which she couldn't afford to do; and, besides, she was afraid to make a move that might put her husband on her track. 'If he ever finds me, he'll kill me,' she'd say. And she believed it.

"One night we were playing at a little town in West Virginia when Edna went down to the curtain to take her usual peep at the crowd. A minute later she came back into the wings, her face as white as paper. 'He's out there,' she says to Martin, and then she tood there looking at him with staring eyes and shaking all over like she had a chill. 'There, there, there,' says Martin, patting her on the shoulder as if she'd been a child; 'don't worry about him. We'll take care of you—and of him, too, if he troubles you.'

"It took a lot of persuading to get her to take her part that night. She was so scared she could hardly close her mouth without rattling her teeth, but Martin got her a little wine and that helped her to go through with it case of play or call off the performance. There was an unusually good house, and the boss couldn't afford to lose it, and, anyway, there was no good reason why he should give it up just because one of his actors had an imaginary and no doubt greatly exaggerated notion of danger. So the play went on—and nothing happened. The man behaved himself, went out with the rest of the audience, and we didn't see or hear anything more of him for a week. Then he showed up at another town, watched the play and disappeared in the same way.

"For three months he kept this up, coming in about once every week or ten days, sitting quietly through each performance, his eyes fixed all the time on 'Eliza.' The girl literally wasted away under the strain. She got so thin you could almost see through her, and her eyes took on a wild, hunted look that give us all a heartache. And yet we couldn't do anything. 'I can't keep him out,' said the boss. 'The man isn't making a disturbance, and I can't make any charge against him.' But Martin never let her get out of his sight. Outside of the hall he was her constant escort and he was always prepared for trouble.

"Well, after about three months the man stopped coming. For six weeks or so he didn't show up and we began to think he's given up his game, whatever it was. Eliza brightened up and the color began to come back to her cheeks. Then one night, at a little town in Western Pennsylvania, the end came. After the show Martin started out with Edna as usual to take her to the hotel. The boss called him back for something and she strolled on. It wasn't more than ten minutes before Martin followed her.

"About half an hour later the boss came into the hotel where the rest of the company had already gathered. 'Where's Miss Holt and Martin?' one of us asked. 'Why,' said he, 'ain't they here? They started some time before I did. Guess we'd better look them up.' Back over the route we went, but no sign of either. Then, up a side street, not a hundred feet away from the hall, I noticed something white, and there, crumpled up in the her waist marking the place where a knife had gone into her breast. But she was not dead. We carried her to the hotel, called in a doctor, aroused the officers of the town, and then we looked for Martin. We searched every foot of that village, but he was not to be found.

"We had with us three genuine blood-hounds of which the boss was prouder than of any of the other members of his company. Before daylight we had the dogs brought out, put them on the scent and with a dozen armed and mounted men started on the trail. It was a crooked course they led us, now to the right, now to the left, now around in a circle—no fugitive was ever so uncertain as to his route as this one seemed to have been. But the hounds never once hesitated. The trail was so fresh and evidently the scent so strong that they went forward at a lope and in their turnings and twistings frequently got out of our sight. It was along about 10 o'clock in the morning that they disappeared over the top of a rise some distance ahead of us and a minute later we heard them bark. "They've got him!" we said and spurred our horses.

"From the hill top we looked down into a little valley and saw a man, bare-headed, seated on a stump. He was holding a long knife in his hand and was looking down at the ground as if in deep thought, while the hounds stood around him wagging their tails. It was Martin, and the thing he was looking at was what had once been the husband of Edna Holt. There were a dozen wounds in the body, any of which would have killed him. But Martin was unhurt.

"He had come upon the scoundrel just as he had driven the knife into the woman's breast. Believing her to be dead and half mad with grief, Martin had started in pursuit. For the first time in months he had forgotten his revolver and had no weapon of any kind. But he didn't think about that. He would tear him to pieces with his bare hands if he could get hold of him. He was a good runner and although the fugitive sig-zagged and circled to get him off the track, sight, the moonlight helping him. For hours they went on and then Martin caught him, tore the knife from his grasp and—well, you already know the result. Martin was tried and acquitted; Edna got well and he and her got married. Now they are living up in New York State as happy a couple as you ever looked at."

YOUR FIRST NAME.

Its Origin and the Famous Folk Who Have Borne It.

EUGENE EUGENIE

A name of great exiles—Eugenie, most famous bearer of the name today, and Eudoxia, an Empress 1500 years ago, who shared the same name and the same fate—Prince Eugene, famous Austrian general, and Eugene Sue, French novelist, both banished from the land of their birth—Some famous bearers of the name who were not exiles—A Greek name meaning well born.

By FRANCES MARSHALL.

Of all the women in the world today who have at one time graced a throne, the ex-Empress Eugenie is perhaps the best known and most pitied. Her wild and eccentric girlhood in Spain; her romantic marriage with the young French Emperor, Napoleon III, who dreamed of restoring the great empire of his uncle, Napoleon I; her brilliant social triumphs, when her tact, her beauty, her kindness, and dignity as Empress won even her enemies to her side; her bitter sorrows, in the loss of her throne, her husband and her son; her sad old age, when she lives alone and abandoned in England, have made her one of the most picturesque women of modern times.

But Eugenie, one time Empress of the French, and queen of the world of fashion, is not the only bearer of this name who has lived much of her life in exile. Eugenes, Eustaces, Eudoxias—famous as statesmen, writers, rulers, churchmen and soldiers in every age—have owed at least a part of their fame to the fact that the countries which gave them birth have for some reason disowned them.

The first of them, like the latest of them, to gain fame as an exile, was a woman. Like Eugenie, too, she was an Empress. Her name was Eudoxia, or Eudocia, and she was the wife of Theodosius, Emperor of the East in the fifth century A.D.

Eudocia was Athenian born. On his death her father divided all his property among his sons; for his daughter, he said, was so beautiful and gifted that she could well get along without other endowment.

Eudocia, however, was of another mind, and she journeyed to Constantinople to plead her cause before the Emperor, Theodosius II. There she gained more than she sought, for the Emperor fell in love with her and made her Empress, her natural legacy from her father proving a good endowment, after all.

For some time Eudocia practically ruled the eastern empire, Theodosius depending implicitly on the advice and counsel of his beautiful and talented wife. But finally, because he disapproved of some of her undertakings, and likewise because he grew unjustifiably jealous of her, he took all her royal honors from her, and in [illegible] banished her to Jerusalem. There she lived out her life, translating the Scriptures and writing poems.

Six centuries later, another Eudocia, wife of the Byzantine Emperor, Constantine XI, ended her days in banishment. After Constantine's death she married the usurper, Romanus IV, and when her former husband's brother gained the throne, he banished her to a convent. She, too, whiled away her time with writing, and compiled a dictionary of mythology, which she was pleased to call poetically "A Bunch of Violets."

Two of the four Popes named Eugenius died in banishment. Eugenius III, whose "innocence and simplicity" were his greatest drawbacks, according to one of his contemporaries, was forced for purely political reasons to leave his post at Rome in the middle of the twelfth century. But though the citizens of Rome opposed him because they wanted to restore the old republic, they loved and revered him personally.

Eugenius IV, Peter's successor 300 years later, was deposed by the Council of Basel, which set up an antipope. Eugenius was compelled to escape from Rome in disguise. Dramatically enough, also, he died just when there seemed probability of his restoration. "Better would it have been for you," he said to himself with his last breath, "to have been neither pope nor cardinal nor bishop, but to have finished your days as you commenced them, following peaceably in the monastery the exercises of your order."

Prince Eugene of Savoie Carignan, the greatest bearer of the name in any age or land, perhaps, gained his name and fame in exile.

His father was Prince Eugene Maurice, and his mother was a niece of the famous Cardinal Mazarin. But his mother was exiled, and when the young Eugene applied for a commission in the army of Louis XIV, it was refused him. So Prince Eugene quitted France, declaring that he would never again serve the land of his birth; and although the King later offered him riches and position as inducements to return, Eugene was true to his word.

It was as an officer in the service of Austria that he gained undying fame. His total defeat of the Turks in 1683, and his share with Marlborough in the great victory of Blenheim some 20 years later in the war of the Spanish Succession, made him the idol of the land of his adoption.

Three other great men of the name gained fame as exiles—a bishop, a pirate, and a writer.

St. Eustathius, bishop of Beroea, got into religious discussions as an opposer of Arianism in the fourth century, and was banished, on false charges, to Thrace.

The "Monk Eustace," in the thirteenth century, was an exile from all lands by choice. Confounding his nickname, he was a leader of pirates and freebooters who fought for France or England as their own interests could best be served, and long after his capture and execution he was the widespread terror of the coasts of France and England, for his cruelty was notorious, and he was supposed to possess the gift of magic.

Eugene Sue, the celebrated French novelist, who died in 1857, was the godchild of Eugene Beauharnais, the son by her first husband of the Empress Josephine, who, also, was a god-parent of the novelist.

Sue passed a varied career; he studied medicine and painting in Paris, and for six years served as army surgeon. During this time he wrote plays, and simply as an experiment, went into novel writing, finally producing his world famous "Wandering Jew." But in 1852 there was a change in the French government, and Sue was banished.

But long as is the list of exiled bearers of this name, there are some men and women who have helped bring fame to it who have never known exile, and they have represented many callings and many lands.

One of the first of them was Eudoxia, the mother of Theodosius II, and therefore, mother-in-law of the first exiled Eudoxia. Although she herself was allowed to enjoy to the full the luxury and comfort of her court at Constantinople, she caused the banishment of St. Chrysostum, who preached against her self-indulgence and avar-

Still another woman of the name who bore queenly honors was Eugenie Hortense de Beauharnais, daughter of Josephine before her marriage with Napoleon, and sister of Eugene Sue's god-father, Prince Eugene of Eichstadt. She married Louis Bonaparte, brother of the great Napoleon, and so became Queen of Holland and mother of Napoleon III, who married the most famous Eugenie of all.

At the present time the name is represented among royalty by the Infanta Eulalie, aunt of the King of Spain, who, when she visited this country at the time of the Columbian Exposition, was greeted with enthusiasm and honor, as a royal representative of a court which, 500 years before, had made the discovery of the new world possible.

The name has a good showing in letters and painting. Besides Eugene Sue, Eugene Viollet le Duc, who died in 1879, has brought the name fame among writers. As an authority on the architecture of France he stands unsurpassed. Eugene Schuyler, American Minister to Roumania, Servia and Greece about thirty years ago, was also a historian of some attainment. But the greatest man of the name in letters, at least in this country, was Eugene Field, the poet.

Eugene Delacroix, French leader of the romantic school of painting in the nineteenth century, and Eugene Fromentin, also French, are among the best-known painters of the name. Eugene Richter, the German radical leader, and Eugene V. Debs, American socialist, are two other well-known men of the name.

These names all come from the Greek word "eu," meaning well br happily. It was a favorite beginning for Greek names. The most usual names which trace their origin to it are Eugene, which means well born; Eunice, which means happy victory; Eulalia and Euphemia, which mean happy or fair speech; Eustace, which means happy in harvest; Eudocia, which means approval, and Eudoxia, which means fair fame or glory.

Evangeline, a name invented by Longfellow and made popular in this country by his poem of that name, means messenger of good tidings, or happy messenger, and comes from "eu" combined with the Greek "angelos" or messenger.

Mrs. Horace Lurton.

Wife of the Justice of the Supreme Bench from Tennessee Is a Southern Woman of the Old Type.

BY MARGARET B. DOWNING.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—From the social standpoint, the Supreme Court holds as august a place as its position in the tri-partite government suggests. The chatelaines of the homes of the judiciary are as a rule women past middle life dignified and rather reserved. Their position gives them immunity from many of the tedious obligations which are incumbent on those less highly placed. Every woman in official life except the wives of the President and Vice-President call on them first, and they are permitted much latitude about the obligations of returning calls. They receive at will on Monday afternoons during the season, and at all times they are courted guests in official and diplomatic homes. The latest addition to this exclusive circle is Mrs. Horace Harmon Lurton, wife of the newly-appointed Justice of the Supreme bench. Mrs. Lurton is one of the coterie of women who have made the old State sacred to the memory of Jackson a power in the social world during the past season. She has been intimately associated with Mrs. Dickinson and Mrs. Robert Taylor in all that meant the prestige of their State, and she is already well known to the numerous Tennesseeans domiciled at the capital.

"I am frankly enjoying my life in Washington," said Mrs. Lurton, "and if all winters will be as pleasant as this, I feel that official careers may have their troubles and vexations, but there is abundant compensation. I have enjoyed the intercourse with people not only from every part of the United States, but from all over the world. The American capital is proving a powerful magnet, and those who are resident feel that the opportunity afforded of meeting the renowned visitors, as for instance Sir Ernest and Lady Shackleton last week, is something worthy of appreciation. It is frequently said that life in the social sense is the same all over the world. In Washington it is somewhat different from the reasons I have given and much more interesting than social life is apt to be.

"But in the South the old order is passing. All those of my generation regret this change, though it is in the accepted law of progression. I have often been asked what caused life to assume such a different aspect in the past twenty years, and I can only reply that it comes of the fact that modern progress has brought all localities so close together that all are losing their individuality; southern people go north for the summer and northerners come south for the winter, and the stream of travel brings all kinds and conditions in all seasons of the year. This, of course, breaks down the barriers of environment and gives a broadness to the view. This generation of southrons are losing that soft, pretty accent which has made their charm for the stranger and which has been immortalized in song and story. The elder generation, of course, still has the old methods of dropping 'r's' and giving the liquid sound to certain consonants, but their grand-children would scorn such oddities.

"Southern hospitality is still ingrained in every southern heart, and I trust it will be many a generation, or, rather, never a generation, when these cherished traditions are forgotten; but even in this stronghold I note a change. The servant problem is acute in Nashville, as in every other section of the country, north, south, and in every direction, and that curtails hospitable desires. Wealth secures no balm for this ailment. Some handsome homes in Nashville are closed and their owners are living in apartments. The servant problem has driven them out of their homes and into apartments, where the question is not such a burning one. This would explain that such fetes as were ordinary in the old days, of entertaining big house parties, of having dinners and other festivities night after night are so much less frequent now. In the country homes which abound in Tennessee some semblance of old conditions may be found. But I regret that the hospitality of the South as understood in the historic sense is passed as much as the colonial, the revolutionary, or the ante bellum hospitality. No matter how much a hos- [illegible] in for supper or an impromptu dance, she realizes the effect of such spontaneity on the regions below stairs, and she curbs her inclinations.

"Southern cooking is likewise fast disappearing, and this is the direct result of new customs with new people. It seems that everybody all over the world eats the same thing and all prepared the same way now. Cooking a la mode is from Paris just as our fashionable gowns and hats must bear the hallmark of that city to be accepted. Home dishes still flourish: corn bread, fried chicken with cream gravy, all those familiar viands which are intimately associated with southrons as the air of 'Dixie,' but they rarely make up the menu for a formal dinner. One reason is that with the passing of the revered race of old mammies that delightful art of cooking such dishes is also passing. The old-time mammy was the finest cook in the world, if one may believe distinguished travelers to the land where she flourished some forty years ago. She may have taught her art to her children or her grand-children, but they have not proved apt scholars. No such soup or salads or flaky biscuits or delicious spiced cakes are attainable now."

Mrs. Lurton represents all that is best in the old South. She is well abreast of public questions and takes a keen interest in politics, a characteristic of the southern woman. But she seeks no recognition except in the home circle and here her influence is suggestive rather than impelling. Justice Lurton is a gentleman of the old school, a type so frequently reproduced in literature and in history. He is gentleness personified, courteous, with the low liquid voice of his era and full of pretty ways of making a guest feel at ease. He takes a delight in his new home and is undoubtedly one of the most approachable men who have sat in the august tribunal for many years. He and Mrs. Lurton are the most ardent Tennesseeans and few can talk with them for long without experiencing a new reverence for the State which has given the Union so many illustrious men and women. If there is one drawback to living in Washington, even in such exalted station, it is that they must give up their home in Nashville. Both have spent nearly all their lives in that city and have been identified with everything which means its advancement.

Mrs. Lurton is a well-educated and well-read woman, who was long identified with the university life of Nashville. Her father died when she was quite young and her mother married Dr. Gilbert Safford, a noted geologist of the Vanderbilt University. Dr. Safford wrote several text-books and was a highly-esteemed scientist not only in his own university, but in the intellectual world generally. Mrs. Lurton made rather profound studies for a girl of her era and, after finishing at home, she went to an institute, in her time much revered, but now passed away, the Patapsco Institute in Maryland. This school was to all intents a college, and Mrs. Lurton took the entire course. She has always been interested in the higher education of women, not, however, for the purpose of mingling in masculine pursuits or striving for masculine career, but because she believes that an intellectual mother is necessary for an intellectual race.

She takes a keen interest in the enlarging horizon for women and, though she modestly declines to call herself a college woman, she shows more erudition than the modern college graduate can boast. She is devoted to reading, but, like nearly all who are caught in the vortex of social affairs, her leisure now permits only journals and magazines. In the summer she makes up for lost time in the way of the best books and always gives part of each day to becoming familiar with the latest and most worthy productions of fiction, history or political science. But she confesses that no book has such an absorbing interest as the chronicle of daily events and the incidents in local and national affairs which make up politics. She has studied politics for years and her opinion, though rarely given, is well worth hearing.

On the burning theme of the woman's rights, Mrs. Lurton declines an opinion. It has never entered into the scheme of her life and it is unlikely that it ever will. Women from her section have all the rights they want or can well manage. They take their greatest glory in reigning in the home and their influence there is directly with the voters. Wives and sisters and mothers and even daughters are forces to be reckoned with in Tennessee politics, even if the women are not on the stump.

Justice and Mrs. Lurton are enjoying a visit at present from their daughter, Mrs. Horace Van Derventer, and her small daughter, who is the namesake of her grandmother, Frances Lurton Van Derventer. Their joy in this little maiden is a pretty sight, though she has kept them rather busy since her advent. Mrs. Van Derventer will remain for some weeks and it may be possible that Mrs. Lurton will return with her to Nashville. The justice and Mrs. Lurton have a son who has two children and they are experiencing all the delights of living again with these little ones. Mrs. Lurton will spend part of the spring in her old home and it may be that she will decide to pass all the heated term in the mountains of Tenessee. She has many friends who have homes in the rugged fastnesses of the Cumberland and she is already feeling a touch of homesickness for these old companions.

"There is one thing in which the South has not changed," said Mrs. Lurton, "and that is the strong bond which united families and their ramifications with a constantly-increasing circle of friends. The family feeling almost patriarchal in result still survives in the South. The friends of your father and mother are your friends and their children are the friends of your children, and so it goes. It is comparatively true that all the South is related. They have married and inter-married until it seem that the cousinships extend through every southern community. The strong tie of kinship is recognized and the obligations cheerfully accepted for better as well as for worse. This seems to survive the encroachments of other customs and, though general hospitality may be decreasing, the families exchange visits and remain as long as they feel inclined, and no trouble counts including servant troubles when it comes to the members of your family wanting to visit you."

Mrs. Lurton is the regent of the Campbell chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution in Nashville and, though she has never been an active worker in the society, she is a cordial supporter of all its tenets. Since coming to Washington, she has been more gracious in aiding all its propagandas. She has been the assistant of Mrs. Matthew T. Scott, the president-general at all the formal functions given for the Daughters and she has given several notable functions for the leading officers of the society. Mrs. Lurton also belongs to the Daughters of the Confederacy and since her residence here has taken a cordial interest in all its financial or social ventures.

The justice and Mrs. Lurton reside in the New Willard, but next winter they will figure among the home-keepers of the capital. Since the opening of the season, Mrs. Lurton has received on Mondays and has held some of the pleasantest and best-attended afternoon levees of the season.

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

MAKES HEALTHY HAIR

Healthy hair is a possession enjoyed by very few. Hair that lacks luster, is dull, brittle and uneven is unhealthy. Unless the cause of this hair sickness is removed the hair dies and comes out. A sick hair root placed under a microscope presents the appearance shown in the lower left hand picture. Such hair is far from beautiful.

"My hair was full of dandruff, faded and falling out from using bleach and dyes on it. I began to use Herpicide over a year ago. Now my hair is very thick and soft. I can't say too much for Newbro's Herpicide."
Detroit, Mich. MISS MADGE ELTON,
Jan. 27th, 1910. 47 Champlain St.

There is no surer way to have healthy, beautiful hair and lots of it than to use Newbro's Herpicide regularly. It destroys the germ that causes dandruff, keeps the scalp clean and healthy and the hair grows strong and luxuriantly. Healthy hair is always beautiful and is denied only to those who are chronically bald.

Sick hair is but one step removed from baldness and is a condition with which it is not safe to trifle. A reliable remedy is needed and that remedy is Herpicide.

It Kills the Dandruff Germ Stops Falling Hair

DON'T TAKE A SUBSTITUTE

When in need of such a remedy don't be persuaded to buy something "just as good" as Herpicide. There is nothing just as good. Newbro's Herpicide is THE ORIGINAL REMEDY.

ONE MILLION NEW FARMS.

More Small Tillages—Production in the Last Decade Has Been Doubled.

[American Agriculturist:] Nearly 1,000,000 new farms have been created in the United States during the last ten years. In the last ten years the total number of farms has increased 18 per cent. In the older states from Ohio eastward there has been going on for more than twenty years a tendency toward the amalgamation of farms distant from market into larger holdings. On the other hand, this sec-times as many farms as in 1870, and an unprecedented increase in the value of farm lands, and live stock is the even more momentous fact revealed by this inquiry. The land in farms with their buildings, improvements and live stock is today almost $30,000,000,000, a gain of 44 per cent. in ten years. Present values are two and one-half times the farm values of twenty years ago. In the north central states the increase in the value of farms is 43 per cent.; in the south central states 58 per cent.; in the north Atlantic 13 per cent., and in the south Atlantic 34 per cent.

The value of farm production in 1909, according to this exhibit, shows north Atlantic states is 71 per cent.; south Atlantic states, 57 per cent.; north central, 96 per cent. This represents the fair worth of all crops and the other returns from the soil, including live stock produce and the increase of live stock born during the year. The farm products of the year just closed were worth almost four times as much as the product of 1889. Summarizing the results, conditions have changed, American agriculture must change with these conditions. Population is overtaking consumption. Even with this increase in quality and value of farm products, the United States exported during 1909 a smaller quantity of agricultural produce in

Men Who Made Gettysburg, Chicka
burg Parks Possible and How—Reun and Confederate Survivors Who Foug to Be Held in July.

BY LIEUT.-COL. J. A. WATROUS, U.

THERE are three national military parks that are unequaled by those of any other country—the Gettysburg, Chickamauga and Vicksburg parks.

The stories these three parks tell cannot but prove of incalculable benefit to future generations for centuries to come—stories of American valor, of great sacrifice, of intense patriotism, good citizenship. The stories they tell teach American history better than books can teach it. Because of these and many other facts there is no risk run in saying that Congress acted wisely and patriotically in authorizing military parks.

Uncle Sam was slow and very reluctant to take up the work of creating military parks. He seemed to think that because he had established, filled and beautified about eighty national cemeteries and made arrangements for their proper care, he had done enough. But through the untiring and persistent efforts of a man who at the beginning of the war was an obscure lieutenant in a New Hampshire regiment, Uncle Sam changed his mind. The lieutenant, R. N. Batchelder, distinguished himself in fighting off Col. Mosby and his Rough Riders, and saving government stores worth millions. He was transferred to the regular army with the rank of captain in 1864, and twenty years ago had reached the rank of brigadier-general. After the war, his service was in the quartermaster's department. While looking after some work at Gettysburg, his desire to see a great military park there was so great that he at once began to agitate. In time, he became so absorbed in the effort that Congressmen and other officials sought shelter when they saw him coming. But the officer who could meet Rough Rider Mosby in a fair fight and best him was not the sort to let ordinary or extraordinary obstacles stand in the way of success. That is why there is a park at Gettysburg that every American may well be proud of, one that honors the nation and will do so for centuries to come. It is a spot I hope every American will visit, sooner or later.

That last sentence gave birth to an idea, and I believe it worth clothing and bringing up. Here it is: A plain, but unusual, reunion at Gettysburg, to last through the 1st, 2nd and 3rd of July, 1911, the forty-eighth anniversary of the battle, and the fiftieth anniversary of the war's beginning. The aim should not be for a Blue and Gray reunion, a reunion of the Grand Army of the Republic and the United Confederate Veterans' Association, or a general reunion of soldiers. It should consist only of Union and Confederate survivors who were in the three days' battle of Gettysburg—July 1, 2 and 3, 1863. I cannot imagine a soldier reunion that would equal such a one in historical value, interest and pleasure. Can you?

The first thought was to suggest those July days in 1913, fifty years from the time of the battle, but a glance, in imagination, at new-made soldier graves in thousands of cemeteries, North and South, led to a decision for 1911. Nothing is surer than that two years, from 1911 to 1913, will see many other new soldier graves made for the long rest of men who fought at Gettysburg under Gens. Meade and Lee—men who ought first to enjoy that novel, historical reunion on the field where the tide turned.

I am confident that such a reunion will take place at the time indicated if the press of the North and South will carry the message, the idea, to the "Yanks" and "Johnnies" still living, who clashed on the memorable field. Will the press "carry the message to Garcia"—to the old men who spent three very restless days at Gettysburg nearly half a hundred years ago? I am so sure that the press will comply with the request that I now place the message in the hands of managing editors and thank them in advance for making possible an historical, an out of the current reunion of American soldiers, a gathering notable for the pleasure its participants will experience. It is painfully true that most of the leaders in the battle, on both sides, are at rest, as are, probably, two-thirds of the rank and file, but a few of the leaders, on both sides, would be present. Gen. Dan Sickles, a corps commander under Gen. Meade, and Gen. E. P. Alexander, who had an important part under Lee, could not keep away; and there are other leaders and thousands who tore cartridges, passed shot and shell and swung sabers, who would attend.

It fills one with joyful anticipation to think and write about such a soldier assembly.

Having told how the Gettysburg Park was won—by years of persistent effort on the part of Gen. Batchelder—let me now tell how Vicksburg Park was secured.

An Iowa youngster, J. F. Merry, was a private in an Iowa regiment in 1861. Later he was transferred as a lieutenant to the Forty-sixth Iowa, of which the late Congressman and Speaker J. B. Henderson was colonel. In 1895 Capt. Merry, the whilom private, was impressed with the idea that as Congress had provided parks at Gettysburg and Chickamauga, it could be induced to do as well by Vicksburg. The captain consulted a few men who had been with Grant and Pemberton at Vicksburg, including the late Col. W. F. Vilas of Wisconsin, and the late Lieut.-Gen. Stephen D. Lee of Mississippi. All wanted the park, but they thought Congress had reached the limit in that line. Merry was a second Batchelder—he just wouldn't be defeated. He knew Col. Henderson, Capt. Hull and Col. Hepburn, Iowa Congressmen.

"Why, good morning, Capt. Merry. Glad to see you. What brings you to Washington?" That was Col. Henderson.

"I've come to get the Iowa delegation to ask Congress to take a hand in making a military park at Vicksburg," said Merry.

The colonel threw up his hands and said: "There is not influence enough on earth to get Congress to authorize another military park. You will labor in vain."

"May be so, colonel, but I want you to go with me to see Capt. Hull."

Capt. Hull, as now, was chairman of the Military Committee. He greeted the callers, and Capt. Merry began with: "Capt. Hull, a lot of the boys of the two old armies want Congress to give the country another military park."

"No use asking for it, captain. Congress can't be induced to make provision for another."

"No use asking for it, captain. Congress can't be induced to make provision for another."

That kind of an answer from Chairman Hull would have disarmed a less had commanded a company in the famous Vicksburg campaign, an experience of which he was very proud.

"What other soldiers are on your committee, Capt. Hull? I am not going to give up because you say no. There must be a military park on the Vicksburg battle field."

"Vicksburg! Did you say Vicksburg, Merry? A park should have been made there next after Gettysburg. Yes, sir, there should be a park at Vicksburg. Look here, captain, there's a little Irishman from Wisconsin on the committee, and he is always for giving the soldiers of both sides all they ask. Have a talk with him."

At that moment the "little Irishman from Wisconsin" entered the committee room and was introduced to Capt. Merry, who explained his mission.

"Good! Of course there should be a park at Vicksburg. The proposition will get a favorable report from this committee. Be sure of that, for I can lick anny man that is forninst it." Nobody was forninst it.

Capt. Merry had found a soft spot in Gen. Mike Griffin, the "little Irishman from Wisconsin," for he, too, had been with Grant at Vicksburg, a member of the Twelfth Wisconsin, the State which has a $100,000 monument to dedicate at Vicksburg on the 25th of May.

Capt. Merry, the private of 1861, had climbed over all obstacles and won a victory that deserves a place by the side of that won by Gen. Batchelder at Gettysburg.

The military park at Vicksburg is the most spectacular and beautiful the world has yet seen.

PHILIPPINE NOTES.

In the Philippines there are 193 intermediate schools, nearly all of which have an industrial course, and 28 manual training equipments, 21 of which are operative, and 3 of which are trade schools entirely, that have already passed the experimental stage and are now on a paying basis, says the Manila Times. To a certain extent industrial work is also taught in many of the 4194 primary schools. The articles made are sold, helping to pay the school expenses of the pupils. All this good work is simply "making mechanics"—a class very much needed in the islands.

Philippine purchases of American goods in the seven months ended January, 1910, amounted to $9,044,050, a gain of more than $3,000,000 over the corresponding preceding period. Our Philippine purchases were $10,428,530, an increase of $4,300,000, making a total interest in the joint trade of over $19,300,000. These figures will continue to increase now that Philippine sugar and cigars are allowed free entry into our market to a limited extent.

For months a German geologist has been surveying the copper mines in the Lepanto-Bontoc district in the interest of a German syndicate operating extensively in the South Seas, says the Manila Daily Bulletin.

The recent carnival at Manila was quite a success, both in exhibits and attendance, closing with a surplus of receipts of 20,000 pesos ($10,000.) Daily illustrated lectures on mining, agriculture and other necessary topics were given by government officials.

Filipino laborers are leaving Manila in batches of two to three hundred to work on the sugar plantations of Hawaii, when efficient, controllable labor is scarce.

Iloilo City now has its streets lighted by electricity, the city paying half the cost of the lamp installations to the local company.

Up to February 8 Manila had sent 45,136,367 cigars to the United States under the new tariff arrangement with the islands.

American planters are making a success of things in and around Davao, Mindanao. Without government assistance they have put in six miles of public highway, four miles of interplantation roads, bridged their rivers with good substantial bridges and connected their homes with a fine system of long-distance telephones. They comprise the Davao Planters' Association, and are only a small body of public-spirited men.

Manila has six boards of trade, the Camara de Comercio Española, the Camara de Comercio Filipina, the Chinese Chamber of Commerce, the Manila Chamber of Commerce, the Manila Merchants' Association, and the Philippine Shipowners' Association.

On February 12 last the first cargo of Philippine coal sent abroad left the docks at Batan for Hongkong. The cargo was sold in advance to several firms.

Starting June 13 next, the people of the Philippines are invited to go on a six weeks' excursion to New South Wales by the government of that State. The ocean fare to Sydney and return will be $300, but all expenses of hotels, railroads, and automobiles there are to be borne by the New South Wales government. For a long time official advertisements of the advantages of New South Wales have appeared regularly in the newspapers of Manila.

A Happy Life.

How happy is he born and taught
That serveth not another's will;
Whose armor is his simple thought
And simple truth his utmost skill;

Whose passions not his masters are;
Whose soul is still prepared for death,
Untied unto the world by care
Of public fame or private breath.

Who envies none that chance doth raise,
Nor vice; who never understood
How deepest wounds are given by praise;
Nor rules of state, but rules of good;

Who hath his life from rumors freed;
Whose conscience is his strong retreat;
Whose state can neither flatterers feed
Nor ruin make oppressors great;

Who God doth late and early pray
More of His grace than gifts to lend,
And entertains the harmless day
With a well-chosen book or friend;

This man is freed from service bands
Of hope to rise or fear to fall;
Lord of himself, though not of lands,
And having nothing yet hath all.

So Live.

So live that when thy summons comes to join

To that mysterious realm where each shall take
His chamber in the silent halls of death,

Through an unfaltering trust that on

OUR EACH-AND-ALL GROUP—Sunshine Society—With The Young Folk

CHARITY WORTH WHILE.

El Morera Circle Gives Its Best and Is Happy—Postal Cards Bring Cheer to Sick.

Los Angeles Branch, International Sunshine Society, Mrs. James Fox, president, No. 2801 La Salle avenue.

The El Morera Circle of Pasadena says: "If you want to give something to somebody, be they friend, acquaintance or stranger, give something good."

That is what counts most in the scattering of sunshine, and that is what they are doing this month. They have made thirty-five aprons for the Los Angeles County Hospital, and did some sewing for Pasadena Associated Charities, as well as some sewing for the Maternity Ward at the hospital. They also made twenty comfort bags for the County Hospital, each bag containing seven articles wrapped separately, with written directions, to be opened, one each day, beginning Easter Sunday.

Mrs. Foster, a shut-in, contributed many attractive booklets, and reading matter for distribution to those in need of that brand of sunshine.

Mrs. J. M. Porter, No. 157 North Euclid avenue, president of the El Morera Circle, says there is sunshine for every man, woman and child in Pasadena. And the members are ready to "pass it ou" to those in need, if they will just drop a line to her. No wonder these members are called "those happy folk."

The Los Angeles branch is very busy just now. The Visiting Committee is occupied fitting out several families with clothing. Sunshiners found a home this week for a woman and her child, where she can earn good wages, keep her child with her, and so help herself.

We have an offer of another place for a woman. She may be employed during the day, just to be there nights. Room and board free will be given. For particulars call up Mrs. C. S. Hawley, phones Main 3250 and 51223.

Little Ruth at the County Hospital has received about fifty postals from Sunshiners, which has made her very happy. She generously divided these with a little one in the next cot to her. Thanks are due to Mrs. H. Khudt of Upland, Cal., for two packages of paper dolls. Because Easter Sunday was so stormy the poor folk were cheated out of their automobile ride. It will not be forgotten, however, and it is planned for some day in the near future.

The Santa Ana branch of Sunshine Society meets once a month at the homes of the members, for an all-day meeting.

While the branch is not large, it is doing good work. The members are busy making articles which they expect to sell at a social to be held in the fall. Last year they made a tidy sum by this means, and they hope to do even better this year. Mrs. Clyde Bishop is president of this energetic branch.

The Alhambra Golden Poppy branch, assisted by the Sunshiners of the Happiness branch, gave a most enjoyable social recently at the First Presbyterian Church. Preparations were made for a hundred, but twice thta number attended. This was due to posters displayed in the shop windows and to notices so freely given in the papers. The Sunshine booth, where the offerings were deposited, was presided over by the president of the branch, Miss Florence Chase, and treasurer, Miss Helen Davidson.

The Gypsy booth, with burning logs beneath the kettle, attracted much attention. The pretty Gypsy fortune teller was Miss Alice Capron.

Readings were given by Miss Isabel Vaughn, Miss A. Jones Anderson and W. J. Hornby.

The singing by Mrs. Bergren was warmly applauded. Other young ladies who took part in the programme were the Misses Hornby, Capron, Krusel, Smithers and Hackett.

The Venice branch of Sunshine Society is trying to raise funds for a new rest home. It held a stocking social during the week. Each member made a silk stocking in which she put the number of pennies to correspond to the size of stocking she wears. The branch realized quite a sum. New members are enrolled at each meeting, it is reported, and so it is growing very fast.

Mrs. Sprague, the first vice-president, who was in Los Angeles during the week, announced that they expected to open the new rest home about May 18. The branch contemplates changing its name, as its members are from places outside of Venice.

An apron social will be the next effort of this branch for the benefit of their new rest home. The members have asked the Los Angeles branch to assist them by sending aprons. Mrs. Herbert Stone, No. 1314 Harvard boulevard, has charge of the collecting of the aprons. The apron social will be given during this month.

The Los Angeles branch of Sunshine Society held its regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Grace Geldreich Thursday afternoon.

The branch voted to hold its election of officers in May instead of June, as heretofore, and it was decided that no proxies will be allowed. Nine officers will be voted for, namely, president, three vice-presidents, treasurer, secretary, corresponding secretary, assistant corresponding secretary, and historian. Voting shall be by ballot, and plurality of votes will elect.

The chairman of the Investigating Committee asks for clothing for women. She especially needs garments for a woman of little more than medium size. Mrs. McKinney, from whose home Sunshine articles are distributed, states there is need for everything in the line of women's clothing. Garments may be sent to her house, at No. 2303 Budlong avenue. It is also reported a great many calls are made for flowers, fruits and jellies for invalids.

Mrs. Crowder, of the Wheel Chair Committee reports that her chairs are all now in use. She had one returned during the month, but as there were four on her waiting list, the chair was sent right out again to the first on the list. There are now seven applicants for wheel chairs. If we had twice as many chairs we would have use for them.

This branch has been asked to send aprons to the Venice Sunshine branch for its bazaar, to be held for the benefit of the rest home.

Authors' Chapter Meeting.

The Authors' Chapter of the Each and All Society will meet for study work Saturday evening, April 16, at the home of Mrs. Emily H. Daniels, No. 754 Hemlock street, at 7:45 o'clock. Take the Central-avenue car to Palmer street, walk one block east to Hemlock street, turn to the left, and Mrs. Daniels's cottage is the second house on the left-hand side. Any member may bring with her one friend, either lady or gentleman.

There will be no programme for entertainment, the evening being given entirely to discussions of literary technique and to criticism of manuscripts. Mrs. Georgia R. Runyan of Pasadena, an editor of years of experience, who acts as critic for the chapter, will be present, and the larger part of the evening will be given over to her, as there are quite a number of manuscripts to be reviewed. Some interesting questions are sure to come up during the discussions of the manuscripts, and even the writer girls who have prepared nothing for this meeting will find it helpful and inspiring to be present and hear the criticisms passed on others' work, and take part in the discussions.

Every woman reader of The Los Angeles Times, who writes even in a very small and simple way, or who thinks she would like to write, who would be interested in doing earnest study work, is cordially invited to be present, and to become an active working member of the chapter. Gentlemen who are sincerely interested in serious literary composition, may attend, and if they prove themselves acceptable to the members, become honorary members of the chapter, with all the study and criticism privileges accorded the women members.

MARGUERITE WINNIFRED.

EACH AND ALL MOTTO.

Golden thoughts, golden deeds,
Rid life's garden of its weeds.

"To make one another happy, to lighten one another's burdens, to share one another's cares, to be lifters, not leaners, to make the world a little sweeter place to live in, to be mutual encouragers, never discouragers of any one, to start songs, not complainings, and to do every day something beautiful, some kindness which will cheer and strengthen another."

FROM "GRANDMOTHER."

A Good Each and All Sister Who Wants to Do Something More for Mme. Canada.

Dear President: I suppose I am an Each and All girls, though I have never yet received my card from this society, and I am a grandmother besides. I have a card from the first organization, and sent for it from this, but am on the waiting list, I guess. What I want to ask about is, will it do any good to send money to help Mme. Canada? I will have some money the first of the month and not before, and I planned to send $3 anyway. So will you let me know if it will be worth while; I am so anxious to have her come. I have corresponded with her for over three years, and helped her as I could at such a distance. I feel I could do more if she was near. When Frances died I felt the little I could give then was needed, so I sent direct to her. The dear little lady has not answered my last letter. I suppose she is so anxious. Drop me a card if I shall send in my mite. I do pray she won't be disappointed. We all have our worries. I know I have mine, but I can always look around and see others that are worse off. I can't get out as I could if I had health, or I would see some of that twenty real soon. Just drop me a card. As ever, for Each and All

MRS. E. T. W.

Dear "Grandmother:" What would we do without such as you to pity and bless the sorrowing ones? Sure, you may send your mite, and it will be used toward providing a months' rent and food while she is resting from a severe winter and a hard journey. Then she will be on her feet ready for the battle of life, and we will all be glad that we have helped save a brave little woman for her three little daughters. There is no one who can so love and care for children as their own brave-hearted, sensible mother. It has only been for the love that she bears these little ones that this proud little lady decided to accept help, and then only on condition that she be allowed to repay it as soon a she could earn it. It is such people that we are glad to help, those who are willing to exert every faculty to help themselves, and who are ready to bounce up like a rubber ball after every flattening experience. But, when long illnesses and death come in the family, and the bread winner is gone, then loving hearts must come to the rescue, biding the time when conditions are so adjusted that the welfare of mother and children will be an object of solicitous thought upon the part of the government. No good mother of children should lack for the necessaries of life. Children should not be separated from a sensible mother, as a pure home life will do more in eliminating the evil influences of society than all the reform methods of the wisest of wiseacres. Let us work to keep children under the care of their own mothers; providing, of course, the mother is brave, loving, kind, true and sensible. Let us use preventive and formative measures upon which to spend our time rather than reformative deeds. "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," is an old adage, but a true one. Let us keep it in mind as we go on in our work for the upbuilding of humanity.

ARIEL.

Taken as a Model.

Marguerite Winnifred wishes the members of the Authors' Chapter to study the poem given below and be ready to discuss it at their next meeting.

While it seems almost sacriligious to tear such a poem to pieces for technical study, yet Marguerite feels that the Author girls can, without irreverence, read the verses aloud thoughtfully several times, noticing the meter in which the verses are written and the figures of speech used, and decide whether or not, and why, they like the meter and figures and think them appropriate to the subject.

The poem, "A Prayer," by Harry T. Fee, is, in part, as follows:

Make me, Lord, broad—broad as Thy plains,
Keep my heart light as the dew.
Make my life pure as the air after rains,
Lift up my soul to the true.

Make me as free as the bird in the wood,
Keep my path true and as fair,
Breathe the sweet peace of Thy own solitude
Over my spirit of care.

Firm as the hills as they stand through the day,
Help me to stand against strife.
World where Thy beautiful law holds sway—
Make me a part of its life.

Make me as broad as the forest at noon,
Mingling its shadow and light.
Make me as calm as that hour when the moon
Silvers the shimmering night.

Steadfastly true as Thy sun and its gleams,
Help me to strive for the best,
And then, with the song of the winds and the streams,
Sing me to sleep and to rest.

Motto for the Authors.

"A few days ago," Marguerite Winnifred writes, "I found a verse that seemed to me so beautiful and so appropriate to the literary, musical and artistic members of the Each and All Society, that I could not help wanting to send it to the Each and All page to be published, and I wish the members, particularly of the Authors' Chapter, would memorize the verse, as a motto for each individual member, and for the Authors' Chapter as a whole, in addition to the pledge of the general society."

The verse is from one of Horatius Bonar's poems, and is:

In the still air the music lies unheard;
In the rough marble beauty hides unseen;
To make the music and the beauty needs
The master's touch, the sculptor's chisel keen.
Great Master, touch us with Thy skillful hand;
Let not the music that is in us die;
Great Sculptor, hew and polish us; nor let,
Hidden and lost, Thy form within us lie!

Keep Manuscripts Going.

One of the good friends of the Authors' Chapter sojourning in San Rafael, whenever she sees a paragraph which she thinks might be interesting and helpful to the writer girls, cuts it out and mails it to the chairman of the chapter, Marguerite Winnifred. One paragraph is quoted here for the encouragement of those whose manuscripts persist in returning:

"If a manuscript is worth sending to any editor, it is worth printing by some editor. It may be a misfit in the first office to which it is sent, but it will fit in some office. If it is a genuine transcript of life, or record of important or useful truth, it is sure to find its way into print sooner or later, provided it is pushed around among the editors."

"There, timid little writer girls," says Marguerite Winnifred, "is what is said by one editor who ought to know what he is talking about. If his words give you a spark of fresh courage, get out that manuscript that you hid away the third time it came back; let the Authors' Chapter criticise it at one of its meetings, revise it if need be, and then send it on its way again and again, until it finds its own niche in the world of print."

We Make Our World.

One fact we must all keep fixed in our minds, and that is the fact that we make our own world, says an Exchange. This sounds a rather trite saying, since it has been repeated so often, but sometimes these old sayings suddenly come to us with new illumination, and there is, after all, no new truth—the philosophy by which life is made livable and lovable is all as old as the world. Our position in our world, among the people we know and are associated with, depends entirely upon our own qualifications and adaptability, and if we have not the qualifications to command the position we covet in the hearts and in the social life of a certain set of people, we must not blame them. It is exactly like a competitive examination—we cannot blame the questions if we fail to answer them, writes the Country Contributor. The only thing we can do in this event is to try again, or to turn our minds to something better fitted for us and go into it with hearts and soul.

The desire for friendship is an instinct, and a beautiful one, too, but along with it goes so much that is also instinctive and far enough from the ideal of friendship. Envy, jealousy, selfishness, all these things constantly mar our best and closest friendships.

In all the realm of social intercourse nothing pays like family congeniality. Many a young mother who is fretting over being neglected by a social clique is neglecting her very best opportunity for real social pleasure by allowing the minds of her children to be blank at the very time when she should be impressing on them the first and most lasting lessons of true social instinct; the habit of being interested and sharing that interest with those nearest us.

One thing we must try to remember, and that is that the thing that offers itself as a substitute for something we eagerly longed to do is certain to be the worthier thing of the two.

We are on the high road to development when we realize our limitations, without exaggerating them, when we see the lacks and faults of a loved one without blaming him for them, or feeling bitterly toward other people for noticing them.

While every woman naturally longs for social outlet, we should remember that any social joy we receive as a mere beneficence is a poor thing indeed, and not to be compared in any way with a half-hour's good chat with a neighbor, or a real visit with some friend or relative whose life makes it possible for her really to understand our peculiar interests and trials. Society has a swaggering air of claiming to be the best thing there is, and we all have a slinking way of allowing her to do it. That is because we mistake gayety for happiness and ease for pleasure.

If you are not good company for yourself you can scarcely expect to be good company for others—people who are not interested cannot be interesting. No matter what it is you are interested in, no matter how common or simple the thing may be, it makes you for the time being independent of the world. If we could but realize this, with what true joy we would take up our regular daily work.

Calendar.

General meeting of Each and All Society will be held Wednesday at 2 p.m., at Cleveland Hall, Walker Theater building. Business of importance will be transacted.

The study class of the Would Be Authors' Chapter will hold a meeting, Saturday evening, at the home of Mrs. Emily Daniels, No. 754 Hemlock avenue. Marguerite Winnifred will preside at this meeting.

THE ASSES' CLUB.

Curious Literary Ceremonies in Latin Quarter Involve Many Gastronomical Crimes.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PARIS, March 22.—Many are the gastronomical crimes committed in the name of some immortal author. Who has not staggered under the influence of a "Bernard Shaw," that weird mixture of dry gin, bitters and bubbles! Periodically a Bohemian club of the Latin quarter known as "The Salt Mill" gives dinners under the "presidency" of literary lights of the past, to whom the evening is consecrated. Shakespeare, Boccaccio, Rabelais, Le Sage, Corneille, Cervantes, Molière and Victor Hugo have already been thus honored. The other evening I attended their fantastic banquet to the memory of Lawrence Sterne.

Members of the club are known as "asses" and the president as "capitaine," or the principal ass. Lebegue, a well-known artist, had etched an exquisite menu, showing Sterne at the Paris glove-shop, while the place of honor on the board flaunted a plaster centerpiece disclosing Sterne with the Widow Wademan. Over ninety guests, including notable artists, mediocre actors and obscure journalists attended. The roll call of the asses, with which the proceedings began, was responded to by wrenching hee-haws, according to the rules of the club.

Suicide was individually attempted by partaking of this menu:

Potage Cock and Bull.
Saucissons de l'Ane Mort.
Andouillettes de l'Abesse Dada (hobby horse) de l'Oncle Toby.
Langue de Sansonette.
Haricots La Fleur.
Bombe de Caporal Trim.
Fromage Sentimental.
Marrons Phutatorius.

For wines, "Clos Yorick" and "Chateau du Roi de Boneme" were served. Coffee was "Café Shandy."

M. Durocher, who presided, confessed to a profound acquaintance with Sterne's works, keeping up a dribble of witty distortions of passages from the "Sentimental Journey," or "Tristram Shandy." He called out eight members with rather prominent features and blasted them with Sterne's reflections on big noses, after which the victims' probosces were measured with a tape measure, and the biggest were awarded comic sketches. The whole show revealed the extraordinarily intimate acquaintance the French have with the works of Sterne.

A play by Balzac—"L'Ecole des Ménages"—is being produced at the Odéon. It was written at the great novelist's dictation by a secretary, whom he not only engaged for the purpose, but required to keep his own eccentric hours. The "jeune homme pauvre" was compelled to rise at 1 a.m. and work till 7 a.m., when he was sent to bed again till midday. At midday he was sent for a four hour' walk, on his return from it, in the middle of the afternoon, he had to go to bed a second time. This extraordinary routine was described by Gerald de Nerval in a contribution to "La Presse," and it was from information supplied in this way that the manuscript, which had been lost, was recovered many years after Balzac's death by that famous collector of autographs, the Vicomte De Spoelberch de Lovenjoul.

Comparatively unknown to the general public, Henri Fabre is the author of ten volumes of "Entomological Souveniers," which will form his enduring literary and scientific mo At the little village of Serign Provence, Fabre is about to c his eighty-seventh birthday. If is a capacity for taking infinite this entomologist, once called by win the "King of Observers," claim to the title. Furtherm power of description which Victor Hugo to term Fabre the of insects" has enabled him to his observations with singular est.

Insect life, as Maeterlinck "seems to belong to another more monstrous, energetic, in atrocious and infernal" than our world. Fabre once amused him placing around a circular stone an unbroken file of processional pillars. For a week they pursue grim game of "follow my le never ceasing till they dropped their tracks. Ferocious energy to characterize every incident sect life. The Languedocian sc promenades with his inamorata in claw. They pause like human ers and approach their heads chaste salute. So far all is idyllic then the bride makes short wo her luckless spouse. Her jointed tail thrusts the mortal into his unresisting carcass and brief romance terminates with sumptuous feast off the dead body her late admirer.

In a preface to the French tr tion of Ellen Key's work on vidualism," M. De Quirielle says interesting things regarding the ent and character of the celeb Swedish feminist.

According to De Quirielle, sh both democrat and aristocrat; very advanced ideas, but her ments are reactionary; she tightly to tendencies, the conse of which she combats energe she defends causes with ardor, at every turn she shocks the habi long standing and the familiar pr dices of their adherents.

"I do not know," he says, "that one has drawn better and more pletely all the vices of half cultu contemporary democracy; not a vice is left out. For her there is one kind of culture, the scientific this culture must be in flower. superfluous alone is the nece thing. 'We should cultivate but roses.'"

DOFS AS COLLECTORS.

Clever Little Fellows at English Railway Stations Get Money for the Needy.

Little people who are fond of dogs will be interested to learn something of the clever little dogs who have become famous while on duty at the big English Railway stations, and who thus provide for the dependents of deceased employés of the Great Western and the Southeastern and Chatham railways. One of these faithful little animals collected $5000 during his lifetime and another one received a contribution of $1000 at one time in his little box.

Over $30,000 has been collected, during the past few years, through the mute appeal of these little messengers who are known as "charity dogs," throughout England. The fortune which these dogs have collected, has been contributed in small sums in the majority of cases; in many instances not more than a penny at a time has been the offering, but when all of the little workers' earnings were counted up, the amount was found sufficient to relieve the distress of all the orphans and widows of the employés of the two railways who have died in service.

The efforts of one earnest little worker, who is still on duty every day, has already yielded more than $5000, and as has already been stated, on one occasion a check for $1000 found its way into the tin box strapped about the neck of "London Jim," who was until his death a great favorite at Charing Cross Station. More than forty of these dogs are on duty daily at the English stations. With their little tin boxes fastened to their collars, they walk about the crowded platforms, they are treated with great kindness by all the passengers, and especially well treated by the station employés, who take a great delight in answering all questions concerning the dogs.

The dogs of the Great Western Railway, up to the end of last year had collected altogether the handsome sum of $15,000, or an average of $1500 a year since the unique work began. This sum is sufficient to meet the annual assistance given to twenty-five widows.

The most famous of the Great Western dogs was Tim, a red terrier, who collected for several years on the platform of Paddington Station. Tim died several years ago, but his coat was preserved and later stuffed, and is now in a glass case on the principal departing platform, where he still continues to appeal to the public on behalf of the widows and orphans. His glass case bears the inscription, "this dog, during his lifetime collected upward of £800 ($4000) for the Great Western Railway Servants' Widows and Orphans' Fund, and was on several occasions patronized by His Majesty King Edward VII, and by the late Queen Victoria. His Majesty has been pleased to accept a painting in oils of 'Tim,' the work of Miss Elizabeth Magill." Since Tim's death, he has been the means of collecting $1000 more.

Tim's history is an interesting one. On one occasion he was commanded through a telegram from Windsor, to be in readiness on Her Majesty's arrival at Paddington Station. He was taken to the private salon carriage, and in the presence of the Queen, who patted him tenderly on his shaggy head, spoke to him, and placed a bright gold coin in his tin box. Princess Henry of Battenburg, who accompanied the Queen on this occasion, seeing her mother so pleased with Tim also followed her example in patting him and placing a coin in his box. Prince Maurice and Princess Ena, who has since become the Queen of Spain, also placed a contribution in Tim's box. Tim's usual way of thanking his patrons was to bark distinctly three times, but he did not bark in the presence of the Queen. Acting with respectful homage, he swung his head from side to side in silence, and then let it rest on the floor of the carriage; this to Tim signified a bow. The royal ladies were delighted and charmed with Tim's cleverness.

Tim knew the time of arrival of each train and was always on the right platform punctually. He won a prize for the best novelty dog at the commemoration dog show, when he was presented with a silver cup.

Most of the "charity dogs," earn from $150 to $200 a year. "Jack" of Reading, who died last year of old age, collected during his lifetime about $2500. On one occasion Jack had the handsome donation in his box. Still another, "Jack" collected with his father for several years on behalf of the fund; between them they assisted the institution to the extent of $1000. The present Duke of Wellington, presented a beautiful dog which was named "Bobs," to Basingstoke Station, putting a gold piece in his box as a start. "Jim," another of these clever dogs, began collecting when only four months old. He was just like a ball of wool, and could easily be carried in a man's pocket. One Sunday, he was taken to collect at a hospital benefit, and when the box was opened it was found to contain 265 coins. Jim was considered remarkably clever; if a lighted match were thrown on the ground Jim would invariably run to it and step upon it, and put it out. Still another Jim was a waif who strayed into the hands of Stationmaster Abrahams of Kingswear; this little dog was drafted into service and earned $125 in a short time. He had a way of straying around the boats in and about the harbor, and once he fell asleep on a collier which was about to set sail. Jim remained unnoticed until it was too late to regain shore, and so he was forced to take a trip to Newcastle. The sailors made a great pet of him during the voyage, and brought his back safely to the station, and it is said since that time Jim pays stricter attention to duty.

"Box" is the name of a dog that is shakes his box enticingly at the passengers. "General Buller" is on duty at Exeter Station; it was a great occasion for him when he met his namesake, the real Gen. Buller, who was accompanied by his wife. A substantial contribution was then and there made to the tin box of "General Buller."

The Southwestern Railway boasts of an even more famous dog than "Tim," in "London Jack II," who is not only an able dog himself but comes of an honored family. His father, London Jack, part retriever and Newfoundland, collected for many years at Waterloo Station, London, and is now preserved in a glass case on the departure platform where his good work still continues. London Jack II. is the only dog who has collected $5000 during his lifetime. "Tim" completed his $5000 only after death, and was helped toward this great amount, by a check for $1000 at one time, and a check for $500 at another. "London Jack II., is now on duty at Waterloo Station only on Saturday afternoon, although he has no intention of yet retiring from the service. His collar is adorned with nine silver medals, each representing the collection of $500, and his tenth medal presented to him recently, representing his earnings of $5000 is of gold.

"London Jack II" is a fine robust animal, large and gentle. His work is to be shared now by his son, "London Jack

The Schoolboy Brain.

One of the most substantial and genuine of delights for those of humorous appreciation consists in a study of the answers made by schoolgirls and schoolboys in examination papers. A writer in the Harper's Weekly has collected a new batch of these, of which the following specimens are among the most choice:

"Blood consists of two sorts of corkscrews—red corkscrews and white corkscrews."

Asked to explain what a buttress is, one boy replied: "A woman who makes butter."

One pupil defined "primate" as "the wife of a prime minister."

"Gravity was discovered by Isaac Walton. It is chiefly noticeable in the autumn, when the apples are falling from the trees."

To the question: "What is a limited monarchy?" this answer was returned:

"A limited monarchy is government by a king who, in case of bankruptcy, would not be responsible for the entire national debt. You have the same thing in private life in limited liability companies."

Fun from the Tots.

Two little negro boys were having a row. The insults that were being hurled at each other were finally clinched by the following remark:

"Yo—why, yo mos' black enuff to go naked to a funeral."—[Detroit News Tribune.

A teacher after patiently defining words in a spelling lesson, gave the word "grewsome" from among them, to be put into a sentence, with this result from the brightest little girl in the class: "I cannot wear my last summer' dresses, because I grew some."—[Life.

"Here! Here!" reproachfully exclaimed good old Mrs. Kindlady. "What do you mean by kicking and slapping your baby brother in that manner? What has he done to——"

"Narthin'! howled the little-bigger brother. "But a big boy pounded me, and I'm pounding little brother, and he can go and hit the dog with a stick, and the dog can whip the cat, and the cat can kill a rat, and everybody will be satisfied."—[Puck.

Froggy's Long Swim.

This summer-time story a Fairy told me
Of Froggy, the venturesome frog.
The Fairy was perched on an old willow tree
By the edge of a pool, and there chanced to see
Froggy sunning himself on a log.

The list'ning Fairy there heard Froggy say:
"I'm glad that I know how to swim,
I'll find out some new kind of fun here today;
There's no one to hinder, and why should I stay
So close to the pool's shallow rim?

"I wonder who lives on the opposite side,
'Tis a beautiful place, I've no doubt;
There must be an ocean, the world is so wide;
I know I could swim over there if I tried—
I'll do it, and then I'll find out."

In jumped little Froggy to have a long swim
To the beautiful place—but, alas!—
Though the Fairy there shouted a warning to him
To keep near the shore or go round by the rim,
Froggy met in the pool a black bass.

There was one bunch of bubbles where Froggy went down,
Went down with the fish out of sight.
"I'll take Froggy in, he's so young he might drown,"
Said hungry Black Bass—"Over there in Frogtown, They'll miss little Froggy tonight."

The playmates and friends of poor Froggy may be More cautious than ever before,
Since Froggy's sad fate—but the Fairy told me
To put up this sign on the old willow tree:—

The Garden of Forgiveness.

There is a garden, far, oh, far a Kept for the souls who sinned suffered most.
The sword of God forever guards way
And round its borders camps a he enly host.

A gentle wind breathes through tufted grass,
Rich with the scent of roses in bloom;
And, with the wind, all sins and rows pass,
Leaving a sweet contentment in room.

Here are no troubles; here are that weep;
Here come no thoughts of sadne despair;
But fairest flowers in fullest b sleep,
And softest sunlight dreams upo air.

The murmurings of fountains, low sweet,
Forever fill the ear and never c
Soothing the silence with a beat
Like kindly voices speaking of peace.

And here, forever and forever,
The weary souls, unburdened of sin;
And cursed things are here forg and bless'd,
And wicked hearts are made clean within.

A MODERN CHRONICLE.

MODERN CHRONICLE. By Winston Churchill. The Macmillan Company, New York. (Price $1.50.)

WINSTON CHURCHILL is to America what Mrs. Humphrey Ward is to England—only not ite so much. He is the Ultimate mmonplace, the Unmitigated Medi- s, the Bourgeoisie-At-Its-Noblest- d Best. He knows instinctively just at the average reader wants. He ses out, with infallible accuracy, actly what the eminently respectable tizen delights in. Mr. Churchill can this as probably no other writer in merica, because his mind is the potheosis of the irremediably conven- onal. He is not a novelist but a prin- ple. He is a state of mind. In Win- on Churchill behold American hu- anity. To criticise Mr. Churchill is criticising the average American tizen with his bathos, his religious ruples, his patriotism and prudery. ch a task would be as impossible as would be futile.

Let these highly philosophical and ly remarks act as an introduction "A Modern Chronicle," the latest d most typical product of Mr. rchill's bourgeois genius. In this -hundred-page novel we have a ogie report on the development of ora Leffingwell. For of ch a novel Mr. Churchill would be in- able, and of the reading of such a vel Mr. Churchill's readers likewise ld be incapable. Throughout the k, the author merely acts as a con- ntious detective on Honora's trail. e is introduced in the first sentence the book, and is still with us in the one. Mr. Churchill occasionally lyzes his observations and deduces idence. He is conscientious and his ocinations are incontestable. Any y of the common people would bring a verdict affirming the irrefragabil- of his logic.

Peter: Destiny is a thing not understandable by finite minds. It is not necessarily continued tragedy and waste, of that I am certain. (And then some.)
Her eyes fill with tears.
He stoops and kisses her.
(Swift curtain.)

Now, let us reason together. It is evident that in this book Mr. Churchill still adheres to his ancient problematic ideal. He is trying to teach things. He is always didactic, and occasionally dogmatic. In "A Modern Chronicle" one is always conscious of Mr. Churchill's personal opinion about his characters. He admires Peter and slaps him approvingly on the back whenever he utters a proper platitude. And after he has given the reader to understand that the noble Peter and the ignoble Honora will eventually get together nuptially, he scores and lambasts her for daring to marry those two other men. He is the censorian rather than the psychologist. We are given to understand that when she at last chooses Peter as husband number three, she is justified in such a selection because of all her suitors he is the one genuine, guaranteed article. Mr. Churchill expects us to criticise severely, with him, Honora for her first two marriages and to commend her for her last one. However, the only reason the reader will have for showing this partiality to Peter is because Mr. Churchill himself has assured him, cantingly, that Peter is far more noble and more worthy of Honora than either her stock-broker or Chiltern. Possibly we might feel this way from an inner conviction were Peter anything but a dressed-up, unsympathetic, stock dummy. One's sympathy is much stronger even for Chiltern than it is for Peter, for Chiltern at least is a reality. This erroneous judgment which Mr. Churchill forces upon his readers is the weakest point of the story and, as this is the principal point in the story, it rather negatives whatever effect the book might have.

(I do not wish to appear indelicate, so I will close all the windows and doors carefully while I ask in a perfectly respectable whisper: What would have been the outcome and the solution of Mr. Churchill's problem had Honora had children? This timid avoidance of the juvenile element will have a tendency to detract from what little conviction one may find in Mr. Churchill's account of Honora's sentimental education.)

It is probably quite unnecessary for me to talk about Mr. Churchill's English. In "A Modern Chronicle" it is as platitudinously epigramatic as usual, and fully as ungrammatical. On page 123 we even come upon a plural subject with a singular verb, to-wit: "He talked of neutral matters with the charming ease and lightness that was(!) the gift of his race."

But this is being hypercritical, and fraught with staggering difficulties. His platitudes, his sentimentalism, his bathos, his eminent respectability, his insistence on goodness, his pronouncement of evil, will all go to make "A Modern Chronicle" a popular and widely-read book. It is written for the unthinking majority, for the uncritical and conventional bourgeoisie. It coincides at every point with the average American citizen's idea of a great novel.

Elizabeth Dejeans.

After a life of varied experience and constant travel, Elizabeth Dejeans Budgett, known to the readers of "The Winning Chance" as Elizabeth Dejeans, has chosen Southern California as her workshop. Her father was the late Capt. L. L. Janes, U.S.A., for several years instructor at West Point; her mother, a member of the Scudder family that is well known in early missionary and medical work in India, was born in India and lived there during her girlhood.

For a number of years Mrs. Dejeans's father was in Japanese government employ, and it was in Japan that Mrs. Dejeans spent most of her childhood. She lived for five years in Kumamoto, in the interior of the island of Kiushiu, and for two years did not see a single foreign face, living entirely among the Japanese. Her home was within the grounds of the high-walled and moat-surrounded Kumamoto castle, and she was old enough to remember vividly the last serious uprising in Kumamoto, the massacre of the garrison and the burning of the old Kumamoto castle, one of the oldest and most interesting castles of Japan. It was by accident that her father was warned of the insurrection, and his family barely escaped with their lives, a midnight flight by the river, the children huddled in the bottom of a sampan.

After several years in Japan, her father brought his family back to America to their home in the South, and Mrs. Dejeans's later girlhood was spent on a tobacco plantation. Until she was 17 Mrs. Dejeans received her education altogether at home, and from governesses and tutors, and was allowed to follow her own bent, but at that age she was sent north to the University of Michigan; it was as complete a change in life and surroundings as could well be imagined. She was two years in the university, and then married Dr. Sidney Budgett, an Englishman. Since her marriage she has spent fully a third of her time in Europe, having lived in England, France and Germany, and traveled constantly.

For some time Mrs. Dejeans has been living in Riverside, but her plans are already made to make her home permanently in Los Angeles. Last year she issued "The Winning Chance," a novel of both accomplishment and promise. She has just published, through the Lippincotts, "The Heart of Desire," a review of which will appear in an early issue of The Times.

"LOST FACE."

LOST FACE. By Jack London. The Macmillan Company, New York. (Price $1.50.)

A NEW book by Jack London is always an important literary event in the literary circles of the West. His devices for getting red-blooded effects have always been so obvious that I wonder that someone, long before this, hasn't jumped violently upon this flannel-shirted socialist.

That London has written much virile and vigorous fiction is undeniable. But that many of his effects are obtained through the most obvious literary tricks is also undeniable. His easy, off-hand use of such words as "stink," "guts," "belly," "hell," et al., has gotten him a reputation as a brutal, primitive, lamentally splendid writer—mostly in ladies' literary clubs. Relying on this reputation, easily acquired, London has made the very best of his pot-boiling opportunities. The number of pot-boilers that he has written is strikingly out of proportion with the amount of his real serious literary art.

"Lost Face" is a collection of seven pot-boilers, some better than others, but not one in London's best vein. "Lost Face," the opening story from which the book takes its title, is probably the best in the collection. It tells of the escape from a band of savage Indians, made by a Pole who has been exiled, and who has taken to stealing furs for a living. In this story London tells nothing new concerning the clash between the savage and the civilized minds, nor of the country in which the story is laid, and he does not use his old material strikingly enough to warrant the existence of the tale.

When it comes to the love element, London always manages to be absurd. It was this that spoiled the "Sea Wolf," and it is this that spoils the last story of the volume, "The Wit of Porportuk."

Also, when it comes to manipulating the keyboard of our spinal columns, London is sadly lacking in technique. His attempts at shivery tittilations convince one that as a Poesque operator he is all thumbs. He affects this pathetic form of fiction in "The Flush of Gold," and, instead of scaring us, succeeds only in irritating us.

At humor, Colonel Jack is equally thumb-fingered. His wit is elephantine. The ponderosity of his attempt at being humorous in "That Spot" is sad and crushing.

Probably the best description in the book is the account of a man freezing to death, in the story entitled "To Build a Fire."

But there is not enough good to compensate for the bad in this volume.

CENTRAL AMERICA.

CENTRAL AMERICA AND ITS PROBLEMS. By Frederick Palmer, F.R.G.S. Moffat, Yard & Co., New York. (Price $2.50.)

FREDERICK PALMER is a man of experience, ability and evident general knowledge, but he has allowed himself to be swayed by American muckrakers in the "Introductory chapters on Mexico and her relations to Mexico, and some of the matter in them makes interesting reading. But unfortunately the author attempts to condemn the southern republic on the ground of fostering slavery and maltreatment of peons. Referring to certain districts of Mexico at which irresponsible sensation mongers have aimed their shafts again and again, Mr. Palmer repeats as facts many of the statements he has heard. He even naively remarks that he has never been in these sections himself. The charges against Mexico are old and hackneyed, and have been disproved many times, not only by the Mexicans but by disinterested American residents and visitors. But these accusations are revived periodically by selfish agitators, only to be refuted over again. Mr. Palmer has lent his support to these extraordinary charges without reason, and, in the same breath, admits that he accepts hearsay as his source of information.

If the author's account of life and customs in the other countries of Central America are no more authoritative than his chapters on Mexico, the work is of no authentic value whatever—in fact, is misleading and inaccurate, and therefore entirely evil.

Various chapters are devoted to Nicaragua, Guatemala, Honduras, Costa Rica, San Salvador and Panama. And it is evident from his treatment of the little countries of the South, that Mr. Palmer had a good time in Costa Rica and a very troublesome time in the other countries. He finds little good and much evil in all of the republics except Costa Rica. For this country he has nothing but the most fulsome praise.

His inaccuracies regarding Mexico, however, detract from the rest of the book, and his alleged personal travels through Central America are to be taken gingerly. It is unfortunate, because little is really known of our southern neighbors. With the approaching opening of the Panama Canal, it is desirable and essential that someone contribute an accurate history of these republics, with descriptions of the peoples and their customs. No one else has recently attempted to give what Mr. Palmer pretends to give. This fact makes one doubly regret his dismal failure. And while his work may be accurate in regard to many of the nations between the United States and Panama, the fact that he supports definitely refuted accusations against Mexico, while openly admitting his ignorance of the subject on which he writes, destroys any claim he may have to honesty in dealing with other countries. One is unable to distinguish between the accurate and the inaccurate, with the result that the book as a whole, is practically useless.

WILDE'S RENAISSANCE.

THE SOUL OF MAN UNDER SOCIALISM. By Oscar Wilde. John W. Luce & Co., Boston. (Price $1.25.)

A BEAUTIFUL new edition of Wilde's "The Soul of Man Under Socialism," has just been issued by the John W. Luce Company. That an era of Wilde appreciation is setting in is attested by many undeniable signs. The same firm that issues "The Soul of Man under Socialism" has just sent forth a fourteen-volume, authorized, complete edition of Wilde's works. This Luce set, marked [Robert] Ross Edition Authorized, is the only complete edition in existence, and its issuance marks probably the beginning of a Wilde revival. The half-educated and the semi-immoral have too long pushed their petty prejudices into the appreciation of Wilde. In Wilde, we have one of the few great English stylists, one of the few great literary artists of the Victorian era, an epigrammist with whom there have been but a few comparable. As a poet he ranks third among the Victorians—Rossetti, Swinburne, Wilde. His poetry is purer art than that of either Tennyson or Browning. And as an essayist he is far greater than any living writer.

"The Soul of Man under Socialism," despite its many apparently false assumptions and its idealistic syllogism, (Wilde was not a logician—he was too artistic for that commonplace state of mind,) will probably stand among the greatest essays in English. Just as "De Profundis," taken as a piece of literary art, is superb, while, taken as a human tract, is despicable and maudlin.

Says Wilde, "The chief advantage that would result from the establishment of socialism is, undoubtedly, the fact that socialism would relieve us from the sordid necessity of living for others."

This really is the only thing that has ever been said in favor of socialism. And this isn't so.

DE GUSTIBUS.

THE CROSSWAYS. By Helen R. Martin. The Century Company, New York. (Price $1.50.)

I TRUST I may be pardoned for being unable to wax enthusiastic over "The Crossways." For this type of novel I openly confess to a lack of appreciation. This book, without question, is well written and well constructed, with all its characters admirably drawn. But, struggle as I may, I am utterly unable to take the slightest interest in the well-meaning, thrifty and superbly stupid Pennsylvania Dutchman.

It is not because I am suffering from taedium vitae. Many things in life interest me. Mme. Bovary interests me. Lily Czepanek hasn't left my memory since I read "The Song of Songs." Philippe Bridau, bullying his way through life, fills me with admiration. Kate Ede and Rose Leicester interest me. I would travel a long distance to meet Mme. de Rochefide, Eugenie Grandet or Cesar Britteau. Occasionally I am interested in stories of New Englanders. So I do not wish to be put down as a man of ennui.

In "The Crossways" we have the story of a young, sensitive southern woman who had never known what household duties were, and of her husband, a Pennsylvania Dutch physician. The man believes his wife is in need of domestic responsibility and makes her work like a drudge. The strain is too great and she nearly succumbs. The man, at the sight of her weakness, is reformed. His change of attitude from dominance to humbleness is one of the main features of the book.

But somehow I am utterly unable to sympathize with these people. And the Dutch types that are introduced and delineated throughout the book have a very lethargic effect on me. For all of which I wish humbly to apologize. I cellent novelist and that "The Crossways" is an excellent novel.

A SERIOUS AFFAIR.

OVER THE QUICKSANDS. By Anna Chapin Ray. Little, Brown & Co., Boston. (Price $1.50.)

IN "Over the Quicksands" we have problem novel. Women novelists always think it necessary to solve problems. As unprejudiced artists they do not exist. The rather lugubrious theme of Anna Chapin Ray's new book is the Jewish idea that the sins of the fathers are visited upon the children unto the third and fourth generation—although in the present instance it extends only to the first generation, which is sufficient for the purpose.

Bernon Tremaine is the victim of his mother's sin, and when he falls in love with Hilda Lynde the problem is up for solution. It is solved by the fair authoress in a most conventional and orthodox manner which I think will offend no one, although it makes a big sacrifice of realism. The book is conceived and executed in a highly moral atmosphere.

PLEASING READING.

THE TOP O' THE MORNING. By Juliet Wilbur Tompkins. The Baker & Taylor Company, New York. (Price $1.50.)

"THE Top o' the Morning" is a harmless, amiable, meandering, sketchy book concerning the doings of a sextette of aspiring artists. There is no continuity in the stories, and each chapter has an interest of its own, although the same characters and locale are carried throughout. Many vicissitudes and many little adventures are related, none of which are exciting, but all of which are written of with a semi-amusing humor.

Perfectly harmless dearie, perfectly harmless!

LITERARY SMALL TALK.

The much-abused phrase "race suicide" is generally attributed to Mr. Roosevelt, and most people would be astonished to learn that the mighty hunter was quoting Edward A. Ross, professor of sociology in the University of Wisconsin, whose "Latter Day Sinners and Saints" has just been published by B. W. Heubsch, New York. The former President, however, distorted Prof. Ross's meaning, for the latter referred to the possibility of an overwhelming influx of immigrants of the inferior races, rendering the whites a minority. To permit this and thus to depress the standard of living would be race suicide, he averred.

The Putnams will soon publish "George Sand," a biography by Rene Doumic of the Academie Francaise, which has been translated into English by Alys Hallard. There is nothing in this volume of the inquisitive curiosity of the scandal-monger, but at the same time, M. Doumic seeks to portray the idiosyncrasies of the woman's character no less than the genius of the writer.

Maj. James McLaughlin, author of "My Friend the Indian," got his title from having been Indian agent. When the Indians were under the charge of the War Department, army officers placed in charge of the Indian agencies were rarely below the rank of major, and when Indian affairs were transferred to the Interior Department, the civilian agents appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate were invariably addressed as "major," although the title was not authorized by statute. Maj. McLoughlin knows the Indians as few white men do, and his book includes for the first time the Indian side of the story of the Custer tragedy at Little Big Horn, and the story of Chief Joseph's famous retreat with his Nez Perces.

In "The Melting Pot" Israel Zangwill has turned preacher-dramatist, taking occasion to work out his latest theory concerning the Jews of America. He insists that his people break with the past, conquer their clanninsh pride, and merge their future and their interests with the future and the interests of America. The first dim foreshadowing of his theory—the germ of the idea—may be found in a poem by Zangwill that appeared in "Blind Children."

Some two years ago there appeared in America a historical novel entitled "The Palace of Danger," which had a large circulation. The story is now appearing, serially, in the Kreuz, the leading Royalist paper of Berlin. It was found expedient, under fear of imperial displeasure, to eliminate certain sentences which were thought to reflect too specifically on German sensibilities.

Melton, professor of English at Emory College, Oxford, Ga., has supplied the introduction to the Ruskin volume, while the one in Thoreau was written by Byron Rees, assistant professor of English at Williams College. Two forthcoming books in this series of little classics are "Southern Orators," and "Selected Essays and Addresses from Thomas Huxley."

James MacLaughlin; some early letters of John May, collection; and "Poems of Belief," by Theodore C. Williams.

Prof. William Cleaver Wilkinson, of the University of Chicago has written, and Funk & Wagnalls will shortly publish, "The Good of Life and Other Essays," in which are social essays, political essays, literary essays, essays of personal reminiscence, adventure and travel.

Doubleday, Page & Co. will publish in June another book by Ellis Parker Butler, to be called "The Water Goats and Other Troubles." It will contain three stories, "The Water Goats," "Mr. Billings's Pockets," and "Our First Burglar."

Gen. Mahone's Risk.

Gen. Adelbert R. Buffington, at a dinner in Madison, N. J., told a number of Civil War stories.

"Gen. Mahone," he said, "was very thin. One cold and windy December morning in 1864 he was taking a nap in his tent when his old colored servant, Uncle Davy, tiptoed in, and, stumbling in the darkness, knocked down the general's folding cot and spilled him out on the frozen ground.

"Gen. Mahone jumped up furiously, seized a scabbard and made for Davy. Davy ran. The general gave chase.

"Uncle Davy tore up hill and down dale until he was pretty well out of breath; then he looked back over his shoulder at his master, who bounded after him on slender limbs, blue and thin, his long, white nightshirt fluttering in the chill morning.

"'Fo' de lan's sake, Mars' William,' the exhausted Davy yelled,

The Broken Law.

A GREAT SERIAL—CONTINUED FROM LAST SUNDAY.

[Copyright, 1908, by J. B. Harris-Burland...Entered at Stationer's Hall. All Rights Reserved.]

They had both gone to see the first performance of Ibsen's "Wild Duck" in England. Gaunt had laughed heartily all through the piece, treating it more or less as a satire on a class of men he cordially detested. But in the last act, when the little girl Hedvig kills herself because she has lost her father's love, he grew very silent, and, as the lights were turned up after the fall of the curtain, Crawshay noticed that there were tears in his eyes.

"That sort of thing makes a fool of me," Gaunt had said in answer to a few words of ridicule.

"Why, my dear chap," Crawshay had exclaimed, "I'll wager you're responsible for greater tragedies, and that you've never shed a tear for the sufferers."

"It's different on the stage," Gaunt had replied. "When it is put to one like that it is different."

Crawshay had not forgotten this phase of his friend's character. It was not an uncommon one, even in men of a lower and less educated type than Richard Gaunt. The navvy who beats his wife, and starves his children to puchase beer, is moved to tears at the picture of the heroine dying in the snow, and shrieks out his execration of the villain as heartily as any good and loving husband. All this is the result of dramatic effect. If Gaunt could have seen some of the episodes in his own life placed upon the stage he would have wept tears of blood.

Crawshay resolved to make good use of his opportunities. The scene was set for the last act of a grim tragedy, and he occupied the center of the stage. He allowed nothing to soften the horror of the last picture. He refused to send for Gaunt or any of his friends, and died alone. Even in the face of death he was strong euough to do all that would further the accomplishment of his task. He relied on the picture. An innocent man, who was willing to spend his last days on earth in the gloom ann shame of a prison in order to avenge his sister's dishonor. Surely that was pathetic enough to touch the heart of one who had wept at the morbid sorrows of the little Hevdig! And this was real life, staged magnificently. The prison, the dying man shut out from freedom and sunshine, the dishonored name, all these were things that could not fail in their effect.

George Crawshay did not spend the last moments of his life in prayer. His thoughts were not of himself, but of his sister who might have been by his side. He died as he had lived—hard, relentless, and with one idea in his mind. And he guessed that he had not worked and schemed in vain. No man in the world, who knew the circumstances, could look on his death without pity and horror. Sir Richard Gaunt would not dare to break the oath that he had sworn.

And Crawshay was right. His death had produced the effect which he desired. Gaunt was afraid to break his oath. And, as he sat in the library with the letter in his fingers, he realized that he had put his hand to the plow, and there could be no turning back. He was not a scrupulous man, but there were limits, even in the mind of an unprincipled blackguard. And the manner of Crawshay's death had placed the possibility of fraud well beyond those limits. The man was literally and physically afraid to break his word. He was not superstitious, but in a case like this he believed that the very dead would rise up against but, as he sat there in the firelight, he began to think about himself and the magnitude of the task that lay before him. It might be the labor of years to find the man, perhaps the labor of a lifetime. And the finding of the man was but the commencement of a still more and difficult and unpleasant piece of work. The man was to be ruined, to be driven to take his own life. It was monstrous and impossible. The man was probably in a position that would place him above all attacks save those of scandal. It would be easy enough to fling mud at him, to publish the story to the world, to perhaps alienate the affections of those who loved him. But there are men who can stand a lot of that sort of thing without flinching. And Gaunt did not see how he was going to ruin the man, unless the man happened to be in a very humble station in life. It would perhaps be a dangerous job, and it would certainly be a dirty one. Yet he had sworn to attempt it. And he had been paid in advance. He was richer by thirty thousand pounds, and had been spared all the humiliation of being sent to gaol. It was certainly an unpleasant prospect, and his face darkened at the thought of it.

His meditations were interrupted by the entrance of the butler, the only remaining man-servant in the establishment.

"A box has just arrived for you, sir. It is marked 'urgent.' Williams has just driven up from the station with it."

"Bring it up here," Gaunt replied sharply. "Now, at once."

The arrival of the box did not interest him, and he was not anxious to see its contents. But they had to be seen and examined and thoroughly mastered. It was well to begin the work at once. Besides, the executor had spoken of a letter written by George Crawshay, and that could not fail to be of interest.

The butler returned with a box, and placed it on a table. It was securely corded, and the knots were sealed with red wax. When the man had left the room, Gaunt severed the cords with a knife, cut off the key which was fastened to one of the handles, and turned the key in the lock. As he lifted up the lid he saw a square, clean gray envelope lying on the top of bundles of dirty paper. It was addressed to himself in a handwriting that he hardly recognized. The writing was in pencil, and was feeble and shaky as the writing of a very old man.

Gaunt opened the enevelope, drew out the contents, and leaned forward so that the firelight fell on the paper.

"Dear Gaunt," the letter began, "I have ascertained that this letter will be delivered to you, unread by any of the prison authorities, who have really been very kind to me, and so I write without reserve—"

At this point the handwriting became almost ineligible, and Gaunt, after vainly trying to decipher it, was forced to light a candle and hold the paper close to the flame. In the stronger light he was able to master the sentences slowly, one by one.

"I have done my part of the business. It remains for you to do yours. You will find all the evidence which I have collected in ten years. It does not amount to much, but it will save you a lot of trouble.

"If I had seen you personally about the matter, you would not have learned more. Besides, there might have been some difficulty about the interview.

"You will find the diaries very comber, Gaunt, that I have paid you a big price, and I expect some return for what I have paid.

"You will be surprised to find that my sister, Violet, bears a different surname to my own. The explanation is simple. She is—she was only a step-sister, the child of my mother by a second husband. But I loved her none the less for that.

"It is possible that I shall watch you, although am dead. Yours truly, George Crawshay."

Gaunt folded up the letter and placed it in his pocket, Then he picked up one of the diaries and opened it, and the first name that caught his eye was that of Violet Hexamer.

He read a few lines of the small, neat handwriting, and then leaned back in his chair with a white face and eyes that seemed to be looking far back into the past.

The search, which might have lasted a lifetime, was already over.

V.
FREEDOM.

When Sir Richard Gaunt had recovered from the shock of the discovery, and was able to arrange his thoughts, his first feelings were those of relief.

His task was over, and he was a free man. What might have proved a long and wearisome search was already a thing of the past. He could spend his life as he pleased, and he was the richer by thirty thousand pounds. It was, of course, absurd to suppose that a man could be expected to ruin himself and hound himself to death. The spirit of the oath could not possibly be construed to include such a ridiculous task as that. The latter part of the business was, of its very nature, null and void.

Far from being appalled by the extraordinary coincidence, which some men might have regarded as the judgment of God, Sir Richard Gaunt chuckled to himself at the narrow escape he had had. For the past year he had seen a good deal of George Crawshay, and it was certainly most fortunate that the man had died before the completion of his task. A chance word, lightly spoken between two friends, might have provided the clew. Gaunt was not a man who talked much about his past amours, but still there might have been that chance word, and then—well, it was certain that Crawshay would have killed him. A man, whose life is doomed, cares little for the lives of others.

And now Sir Richard Gaunt was safe, and he was the richer by thirty thousand pounds. What more could a man desire? He smiled when he thought how near he had been to death. He had not known that for ten years a man had been seeking his life. Violet Hexamer had never spoken of her relations. She had only said that they were nothing to her so long as he loved her.

The thought of the unfortunate girl did not trouble him. He had almost forgotten her existence, and he had heard nothing of her since he gave her a thousand pounds to conclude the episode. She had passed out of his life, like others who had replaced her in his affections. She had been "fair sport," and provided the amusement of an hour. His conscience did not accuse him. He was only thankful that George Crawshay was dead.

He placed Crawshay's letter on the fire, and locked up the box which contained the labor of a man's best years. He had no desire to examine the contents of the box. The letters and the diaries were so much waste paper. They might be humorous to a man who knew that they were useless. But they could be nothing more.

"I will have them burnt," he said to himself, "but for the present—any place will do for them."

He put the box in a corner of the that night. He was always a pleasant companion when he chose to be so, and his mother's thin face brightened as she listened to his cheery conversation. She, poor woman, had suffered much through this son of hers. She only saw him about one week in every year, but she heard more about him than was good for her. He always treated her with kindness, and even with exaggerated respect. But he suffered no interference, and she had long ceased to reproach or even to plead with him.

Lady Gwendolen Gaunt was a grande dame of the old school, who did not seek advertisement in the daily papers. The daughter of a Welsh earl, whose pedigree went back to the days of Owen Glyndwr, she set great store on the claims of birth. Her creed was of the simplest. "High lineage demands respect it. It must do nothing to forfeit its right to receive it." The mere possession of wealth did not, in her opinion, entitle a man to ask for homage from the lower classes, nor confer on him the right to dine in the houses of the aristocracy. Thirty years ago these views were common enough, but in an age when the bearers of the greatest names in England were scrambling for gold, hobnobbing with financiers o. shady reputation, and marrying into families that had sprung from the gutter, Lady Gwendolen's opinions marked her as a woman of character.

To such a woman the conduct of her eldest son was particularly painful. She had but little sympathy for the lower classes, unless they happened to be tenants on the Gaunt estates; an the various women whose names had been connected with Sir Richard's escapades were in her opinion more sinning than sinned against. But she wished the name she bore to be kept clean. There were excuses to be found for the follies of a wayward, passionate boy, but none for a man, whose conduct was the talk of London.

The death of Lord Carfax had brought this proud old aristocrat to the last stage of impotent despair. The scandal, the story of the supper, the evidence which showed the relations between her son and Cynthia Paradine, the hideous headlines in the papers reflecting on the conduct of the upper classes; all these had left an indelible stain on her pride. For only one thing was she thankful. Sir Richard Gaunt had not been present at the fatal brawl. Yet the publicity of the whole thing had brought her to the lowest depths of shame.

She had never referred to the subject during the six days which Sir Richard had spent at home. But the man had noticed the change in her attitude toward him, and he knew well enough that she had suffered and was still suffering. Occupied with his own worries, he had relapsed into sullen silence, and at some of their meals—the only time they spent together—he had barely uttered a single word.

Tonight, however, there was a marked change in his behavior. He smiled, and even joked in a quiet orderly fashion. He talked about the estate, and certain improvements which he contemplated. He asked questions about the tenants, and appeared to take an interest in their complaints and private troubles. Lady Gwendolen snatched at the opportunity, and related a long tale of grievances which had been poured into her ears from time to time.

"I'll see Williams tomorrow morning," he said genially, as they sat over their dessert. "I shall not be leaving till the midday train."

"I did not know you were leaving tomorrow."

"Yes, I am going to town."

"I think it is a pity you do not spend more time here, Dick," she said gently. "The tenants don't like it."

"I'm sorry," he replied. "But I don't live for the benefit of the tenants."

"Someone ought to be here. I do a sneer. "I'm sure he's all that he should be—a dutiful son, a man of business, a loving brother. Henry gave me some excellent advice the last time I saw him."

"I wish you wouldn't speak like that of your brother, Dick. It's not good form."

He laughed. He cordially detested his brother Henry, who was his exact antithesis in almost every respect, and whose vices, if he could be said to have any, were those of a successful and virtuous prig.

"How old is Henry?" he asked, after a pause. "Making money, I s'pose, as fast as ever?"

"I believe he is making money," the mother replied stiffly. "In his last letter he said that he had cornered something—I think it was gum arabic. He expects to make one hundred thousand pounds."

"In trade, eh?" said Sir Richard. "Ha, ha, that's good."

"There is nothing to laugh at, Dick."

"No, indeed," he replied, "the very idea of a Gaunt of Gaunt Royal making a corner in gum what-d'you-call it is most tragic."

"I don't like the way you talk of your brother, Dick."

"Oh, it's only my fun. But look here, mater, if he wants to buy an estate, why shouldn't he buy Gaunt Royal?"

"Buy Gaunt Royal!" she faltered. "My dear Dick, are you mad?"

"Oh, no, I'm trying to look at things in a business-like light. I'm not going to marry, and the estate is in a bad way. It wants a man of business like Henry to manage it."

"Dick!" cried his mother, "my dear Dick. Do you mean to say that you——"

"Oh, let's have no false sentiment about it, mater. I know my faults, and you know 'em, too. One of these days this place will be in the market. Then Henry will step forward, like the hero of a melodrama, and he will plank down the gold, and every one will point to him as the man who saved his family by honest work, as the man who was not ashamed to put his back to the wheel, and bare his arms, and all the rest of it. He might as well buy it now, and not be saddled with two properties."

Lady Gwendolen rose to her feet, and there was a hard look on her face.

"You will see Williams tomorrow?" she asked coldly.

"Oh, yes," he replied, rising and opening the door. "I hope I haven't vexed you, mater, but it's as well to speak what is in one's mind."

"Just as well, Dick," she replied gently. "But I thought you had some affection for this place. I am sorry. You liked it well as a boy."

"It was different then," he muttered.

"I wish you would stay here, Dick, and not go back to London."

"It can't be done, I'm afraid," he replied. 'I feel like a fish out of water here. I can't breathe. If I could afford it, I'd have a house in town, so that you could spend the winter there. By the by, when is Betty coming back? It's wretchedly dull for you without her."

"She will be here tomorrow morning. The Anwyls are driving her over after breakfast. She'd like to see you before you go."

"It doesn't look like it. She left the day before I arrived."

"It was a long-standing engagement. But she'll be here by 10 o'clock. Shall I see you in the drawing-room later on, Dick?"

He hesitated a moment.

"No, mater," he said after a pause. "I've got some letters to write, and shall go to bed early."

"I shall see you in the morning?"

"Oh, yes, of course. Good night."

Lady Betty had first come to live at Gaunt Royal as a child of 10, when Sir Richard's father had been appointed her guardian. He died five years later, was allowed to continue the guardianship.

When the girl came of age she inherited a considerable fortune, but she continued to live at Gaunt Royal, and refused many offers of marriage. Lady Gaunt at one time hoped that she might marry the eldest son, but as time went on, and Sir Richard's name was associated with more than one scandal, the mother stifled her hopes, and would even have used her influence to prevent the marriage, if there had been any chance of it taking place.

As a matter of fact, both Sir Richand Henry Gaunt had proposed to the girl who had been a friend and companion of their boyhood. Henry did not discover that she was a suitable wife for him until she was 25 years of age. He was then laying the foundation for a successful business career, and more than one mother had marked him down as a proper quarry for the shafts of their daughter's eyes. He was not in love with the girl, but he liked her well enough, and she had plenty of money. Unfortunately for him, however, Lady Betty was not moved by his business-like statement of his regard.

Sir Richard's love affair had taken place at a very much earlier date. It had commenced when both were mere children, and had become a matter of ancient history when Sir Richard had attained his majority. It had never been anything more than a boy and girl affair. At the age of 15 the girl had accepted the boy as her true knight and lover, and had worn a small locket in token of the same. At the age of sixteen and a half she had returned the locket, and that was the end of it.

But tonight, as he sat in the dining-room, with a cigarette between his lips, it occurred to him that, after all, there was something in this boy and girl affair which might be used to his advantage. He knew well enough that women often cherished the memory of these early exploits in their craft, in the same way as an angler will have his first salmon stuffed and placed in a glass case. Lady Betty had passed the first bloom of youth, but she was still a handsome woman. It was just possible that life at Gaunt Royal might provide as good sport as any to be found in London.

He took a coin from his pocket, and, flinging it into the air, caught it between his two palms.

"Tails, I go back to town," he said to himself; "heads, I stay here for a bit."

He lifted up his right hand, and saw the head of the Queen. "So much for you, Bet," he murmured, as he emptied his fourth glass of port. And he chuckled quietly to himself.

PROF. STANLEY HAS NO AUCTION PRICES. YOU KNOW WHAT YOU HAVE TO PAY—NO MORE; NO LESS. DOES THIS APPEAL TO YOU?

$1—TO ALL—$1.

ALWAYS CONSULT THE BEST. IT IS THE CHEAPEST IN THE END. IT IS BETTER TO CONSULT NO PSYCHIC THAN ONE WHO IS NOT ABLE TO HELP YOU.

WITHOUT YOU WRITING YOUR NAME AND THE QUESTIONS YOU WISH TO KNOW, OR EVEN SPEAKING, HE WILL GIVE YOU NAMES, DATES, FACTS AND FIGURES.

He believes that he has passed the experimental stages and finds no one who is not willing to pay this small fee of $1, providing they receive reliable advice. If you have already made a mistake, thrown away your money and lost confidence through dealing with much-advertised and self-styled palmists and clairvoyants, and their cheap methods, start anew, consult Prof. Stanley. He will tell you frankly your condition and what you may expect; if nothing can be done for you he will not take a cent of your money. Has not this honesty on the face of it?

If you want the truth, with reliable advice, you will consult BYRON STANLEY on past, present and future. Also remember what has been told you, which too often is not the case.

Before you go into anything of importance—or undertake anything serious—in business or love, or marriage, or before you make any change—you should consult the master mind of psychics.

NO NEED TO TELL HIM.

There is no need to tell Stanley your story. There will be no "quizzing" or asking of questions. His talents enable him to instinctively know your wants and troubles. Without any attempt at mystification, but with unerring sight into the inner nature of things, he reveals that which you most wish to know. His advice on all matters, business, lawsuits, marriage, health, is invaluable. He is exact and correct — not guesswork. He gives names, dates, facts and figures and shows clearly and distinctly the road to success in business as well as in domestic and family affairs.

From Lillian Russell, the Well-known Actress:

I was greatly impressed with PROF. BYRON STANLEY'S reading. His powers are truly marvelous. He develops in one a force that enables them to attract people, to interest them and to please them to their good and to your advantage without the least effort on one's part. His advice and assistance have been of great benefit to me.

From a Prominent Minister:

I desire to bear evidence to the genuineness of PROF. STANLEY'S work. God does give to us an intuition whereby we may guide our lives. That PROF. STANLEY possesses this guiding power to a marvelous degree is evident. The fact that his clients are his warmest and truest friends is alone a tribute to his sincerity and honest methods in dealing with all. He has rendered me immeasurable assistance.
REV. W. C. JESSUP.

From M. Rothschild, the Well-known Financier:

For the past five years PROF. STANLEY'S advice and assistance have favorably influenced my business and financial affairs. I have tested nearly every psychic in this country and find PROF. STANLEY'S advice reliable and far superior to any that I have ever met.

PROF. STANLEY: I wish to give my testimonial for the benefit of those who wish to read it. Since I consulted you several weeks ago I have followed your advice and the instructions you gave me as nearly as I possibly could, and I can truly say the result has been marvelous. I shall consider it a privilege to recommend you to any person who will take the trouble to write me. Yours truly,
MAURICE WINKLER,
2829 State st., New York.

To whom it may concern: We take great pleasure in recommending our brother, PROF. STANLEY, as a life reader of good standing, having to our knowledge been fully developed in all the various phases of mental mediumship. We cordially recommend him to any individual or society that may need his advices.
DR. JOHN WESTERFIELD,
President Indiana State Association of Spiritualists.
Chesterfield, Ind., September 4, 1906.

Don't struggle with a burden you can divide. A troubled mind begets a morbid conscience. Sympathy, consolation and timely advice heal the worst of wounds. Be advised and relieved of anxiety.

Strange and startling are the revelations that flow from the cultivated lips of this wonderful psychic. Every word a pearl of wisdom. Born and bred in India, the land of the mystic, this wizard of phychism stands aloft and alone, far in advance of the ordinary readers you meet.

Would you lift the curtains to the mysteries of the veiled beyond? If so, consult this great psychic.

DIRECT FROM INDIA.

Does everything go all wrong? If so, there is a cause. Do you wish to continue on the downward trail, or do you desire to change and claim what God intended you to have? If you would rise to your natural sphere and enjoy life as others do, see

THIS WONDER OF PSYCHISM.

He will tell you the cause of your woe and how to overcome it. The peer of all psychics, the only graduate of the Ordoo College of Occultism to ever leave his native land. A herald of the mysteries of the prophets of olden times. This great psychic has spent all the years of his active life in the study and pursuit of this, his naturally endowed science, and stands alone at the head of a vast army of seers and prophets, many of whom he has taught and prepared for the pursuit of this grand calling. See him today, he may change the course of your whole existence. Many a sad heart has been gladdened, many a weary life made bright by the advice and magnetism of this wonderful man; he is unlike any you ever saw; does positively all that others claim to do and demonstrates the power of mind over matter free to every patron; the only man in America possessing this power. Seeing is believing. Try him. Then try others and see if they can do the same. A capable man has confidence in his ability and will not require you to deposit your money before his work is done. Mundo has read for many of America's leading citizens and a few titled foreigners, but he has more respect for his patrons and more consideration for their feelings than to publish their names broadcast for the sake of advertisement. Nor does he claim to have read for dozens of prominent people that common sense will tell you he never saw. If you need advice and want a reading from a real life reader, who does not spend half his time slandering his competitors, see Mundo, the real life reader, who really tells what you desire to know or no charge. A foolish weakling only will pay for a reading that gives no benefit. Stop and think, then see Mundo, the Indian seer, who stands behind what he says with a spot cash guarantee. If you wish, he will tell your name free and show you how it is done. This is the man the San Francisco papers said so much about for predicting the great quake and fire.

This man of mystery has rightfully gained the title, the wizard seer, the name so often applied to him, and we recommend him to you for dead trance readings and deep psychic work of all kinds, and to be the most thorough, consistent, concise and complete life reader before the public today.

MRS. MASSON,

the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at 322 S. SPRING ST. (over Owl Drug Store,) by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND-READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

The earnest student and thinker will soon learn in his investigations along psychological lines, that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HIMSELF HAS WRITTEN THAT INFORMATION.

PALMISTRY, HONESTLY PRACTICED, WILL NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in every-day life.

Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health and domestic life, financial conditions, and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill luck into wide paths of success and prosperity, can all be told you through scientific palmistry, WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.

MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS—
For Sale, Exchange or Wanted.

GET YOUR PIANO FROM THE FACTORY.

There IS a way to buy direct and save money.

You can do it. No one can stop you, because it is YOUR money that pays for the piano. Come right over to the factory and get the middlemen's commissions. It will save you enough to educate the children in music.

Remember, you only need to do these THREE things:
1. DODGE THE DEALER.
2. SIDESTEP THE AGENT.
3. LET THE TEACHER TEACH.

To do these three stunts will pay you well. Besides, you want piano quality as well as value. You want in on the piano ground floor. You want your factory at home; not 2000 miles away. We alone offer you all these things. Don't forget, we make the best player pianos in the market. In dealing with factory it will pay to make a good down payment; balance easy terms.

All yellow Garvanza, Eagle Rock and New York street cars stop in front of factory. We now have the Chickering, Schaff, Weber, Schumann and other used pianos taken in exchange. All bargains. Ours is the ONLY factory in Los Angeles. Will mail catalogue on application.

Decision of Judges in Fifth Race Brings Out Volley of Hisses and Cat Calls.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

Hisses and hoots from the grandstand showed public disapproval of the running of the race. Weather clear, track fast. Summary:

Seven furlongs: Bozerrian won, M. J. Wheaton second, Mugwump third; time, 1:28 2-5.

Seven furlongs: Kenmare Queen won, Jack Right second, Ben Howe third; time, 1.28 3-5.

THE NEW TREATMENT FOR CONSUMPTION And Kindred Diseases With SARTOLIN

The cure is achieved by following the methods propounded by authorities such as Galen (the father of therapeutics), Rhazes, Mascagni, Pasteur and others, viz.:—By means of the dry distillation of chemicals, breathed in conjunction with air (internal Antisepsis) and by the application of Balsam externally.

Sartolin goes to the Root of the Trouble, by killing the Bacilli, cleansing and renewing those blocked or impure air passages, which are responsible for Asthma, Bronchitis and Consumption.

Sartolin makes the application of narcotics unnecessary. No medicine is required, no Sanatorium—the Sanatorium being at Home.

Serum Therapeutics are today disavowed from the medical as well as the chemical point of view, the dispensing of drugs and medicines in treating tuberculosis has also proved itself to be a failure. The Sanatorium or open air treatment, which is costing the nation millions of dollars annually, has given but little, if any, effective results, whilst Sartolin is a remedy of which numerous concrete proofs of cure have been established, even in the most desperate cases.

The remedy has been recommended by specialists on Tuberculosis before the Berlin Medical Association and the Honorable Frank H. Mason, United States Consul-General for Germany, has made an official report to his Government on the invaluable discovery of Sartolin. Full particulars can be obtained post free from The Sartolin Co., U. S. Head Office and Depot, 3013 Evanston Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

FACT AND COMMENT.

IT IS a fine philosophy that teaches us everything comes to him who waits. Many things are coming o those who have been waiting some ime holding property in the north end f the town. There was a malignant ffort made for a long time on the part these interested in other portions f the city to "knock" grievously everyhing north of Third and Fourth reets away up to the river. The imes received a good deal of hostile iticism because in the wisdom of its resight and its patriotic disposition to ip all parts of Los Angeles this jourl insisted that there was no part of e city which was dead. Wisdom is stified of its children, and the chilen of time are justifying the contenon in behalf of the north end of Los ngeles as well as all the other ends d the middle.

—o—

tivity Broadening Out.

Early in the current year this dertment presented a careful review of e activity prevailing along First eet all the way from Bunker Hill enue westward to Bimini Baths, in t. This activity in building spread r the territory at least as far as mple street and dotted the whole ad district at many points. The st notable activity was from Corodo street west to Commonwealth enue, north to Temple and south to ird. In that region in six or eight nths the new buildings would numr away over 100. One company sellg lots began late last year and ten ys ago disposed of the last lot along ronado street, between First and ird. The same company has sold [illegible] nearly every lot on Rampart ulevard between the same cross eets. Not many week ago the dertment called attention to the hills ng between Boylston avenue and rlington, from First to Sixth eets. Already notable activity sprung up right in that trict. On the south side of urth street, west of Fremona, a fine artment building has just been be. On Fifth between Bixel and ylston a big flat building is partly nstructed. On Boylston, just south Crown Hill avenue, an immense artment-house is about finished. On wn Hill avenue, between Lucas Bixel, some women investors have chased a lot and put up four very dsome four-room flats. These are being turned out of the contracs' hands. This is a good example of at is going on there. The lot is of alue of about $100 a foot for fifty frontage, or $5000, and the building about $7000. It is a well conted edifice, and for this investment [illegible], the owners expect to receive $100 a month gross income. [illegible] on Union avenue, about [illegible]th of Sixth street, a good [illegible] of about eight rooms has [illegible] begun. The restrictions in [illegible] are [illegible]. On Burlington [illegible] First there is a good deal of [illegible]y going on in the way of new [illegible]. Recently former Senator W. [illegible]rk, the president of the Salt Lake [illegible] Company, purchased a [illegible] parcel on Loma Drive where [illegible] comes up from the west. It is [illegible] that the millionaire is intend[illegible] put up a handsome apartment [illegible] this plot for the use of deserv[illegible] women. [illegible] the building [illegible] out [illegible] all this dis[illegible] from Sixth to Temple and from [illegible] to Commonwealth avenue.

Sixth Street.

[illegible] three times within three [illegible] this department has called attention to the comparatively low [illegible] of property along Sixth street [illegible] Boylston west to Rampart boulevard. About three years ago a fine [illegible] Boylston avenue between Fifth [illegible] Sixth streets was sold at [illegible] for fifty feet. Fact and Comment at the time remarked that this was finding money on the part of the buyer. About a year ago a very handsome lot on Sixth street east of Bixel with an alley on the south was sold for $110 a front foot, and again the department congratulated the buyer who had made a "ten strike" in real estate. He has built a very handsome apartment house on the property, which is now just being filled up and will no doubt pay a very heavy income on his investment. Sales like these attracted the attention of the editor of Fact and Comment, who thought it was well to point out to investors opportunities going to waste. There are no more lots in that neighborhood at such low prices, although as the department remarked a couple of months ago, when compared with prices on streets farther south, Sixth street property still offers great inducements to investors. All through the district between Bixel and Burlington three years ago property was to be had at $100 a foot or very little more. There is none there at the present time that can be bought for less than $200 a foot. If you take the apartment hotel recently erected on the corner of Burlington and Sixth, and learning the cost of the edifice and then estimating the realty at $300 a foot, when you have found out the income it is returning it will be very evident that the prices are none too high. Within three years property on Sixth street west of Westlake Park went begging at $100 a foot. The writer is pretty well acquainted in the neighborhood and he knows of no lots there at the present time for less than $150 a foot. It is about four years perhaps since three lots on Coronado and Sixth street sold for $5100 to one buyer, a shrewd woman who built on the center of the three lots sold the south one for about twice what it cost her and then three years ago disposed of the corner at $3600. The opposite corner on Sixth and Coronado was purchased about the same time for $3500 and was sold early this year at $7500.

The Prescience of "The Times."

The Times has been pretty insistent upon the value of property in the north section of the city on its intrinsic merits. Some may have thought that this department harped upon the subject a little insistently, but there are hundreds of weekly readers of the department who freely acknowledge by word of mouth and by letter to the editor that the reasoning presented was so convincing to them that they put more or less money into the district we are analyzing. They have doubled, trebled and in some instances quadrupled their money by following the suggestions given out in this department. They are only beginning to know how wise they were. Property on these beautiful hills that we are referring to within fifteen or thirty minutes' walk of the center of the city at $100 a foot is a good investment to make still. Anywhere lots suitable for apartments or good flats within this distance of the business center is intrinsically worth not less than $200 a foot. It will pay interest on the money. Remember we are speaking here of unimproved property. Of course a lot with a little cottage on it, or even with a fairly good house, is under somewhat of a handicap at the present time. It is not a cottage district nor a moderate-cost house district. It is for the most part either suitable for handsome apartment hotels, straight apartments, high-class flats or residences of the best types. Why people with means hesitate to build on these knolls with their magnificent views is inexplicable. As to Sixth street, out as far as Sunset Park, development there is only just beginning. What has been done on the corner of Sixth and Burlington may be repeated at many points along the street. From Alvarado to Park View the family hotels seem to have marked that district for their own. It is the opinion of the editor of this department that property fronting on Westlake Park is intrinsically worth $500 a foot. On Seventh street as far out as Vermont small business structures have been erected, and they find tenants promptly. Sixth street is one of the most traveled thoroughfares running east and west in the whole city. From the northward it is the first thoroughfare that is used for constant traffic. The street-car service on it is of the best, and these cars reach not only the city limits but are now extending out into Hollywood. The population of that whole district will come into the city by that street and when a road is extended out through Cahuenga Pass into the San Fernando Valley, with the great population that will crowd in there, the traffic on Sixth street will be dense.

Down in the Center.

All this activity in the hills from Sixth to Temple streets is having its influence in the center of the city. The Union League Club is clearing its ground at Hill and Second streets for a fine clubhouse. A corporation has been formed to put up a magnificent office building on the old bank premises on the corner of Broadway and Second. The Higgins building on Main and Second will be one of the finest office buildings in the city. The Newell Hotel, planned for the other corner of Main and Second, will, in all certainty, be built before many months pass by. Around Spring, Main and Temple will cluster the great civic center of Los Angeles. The postoffice is there, the County Courthouse, the Hall of Records, the County Jail, and on the Temple block is to go the new City Hall. It is not improbable that the City Jail will be moved before long from its present quarter, although that is in the north end of the city, and find a permanent site somewhere near the great civic center clustering around the intersections of Temple, Main and Spring.

—o—

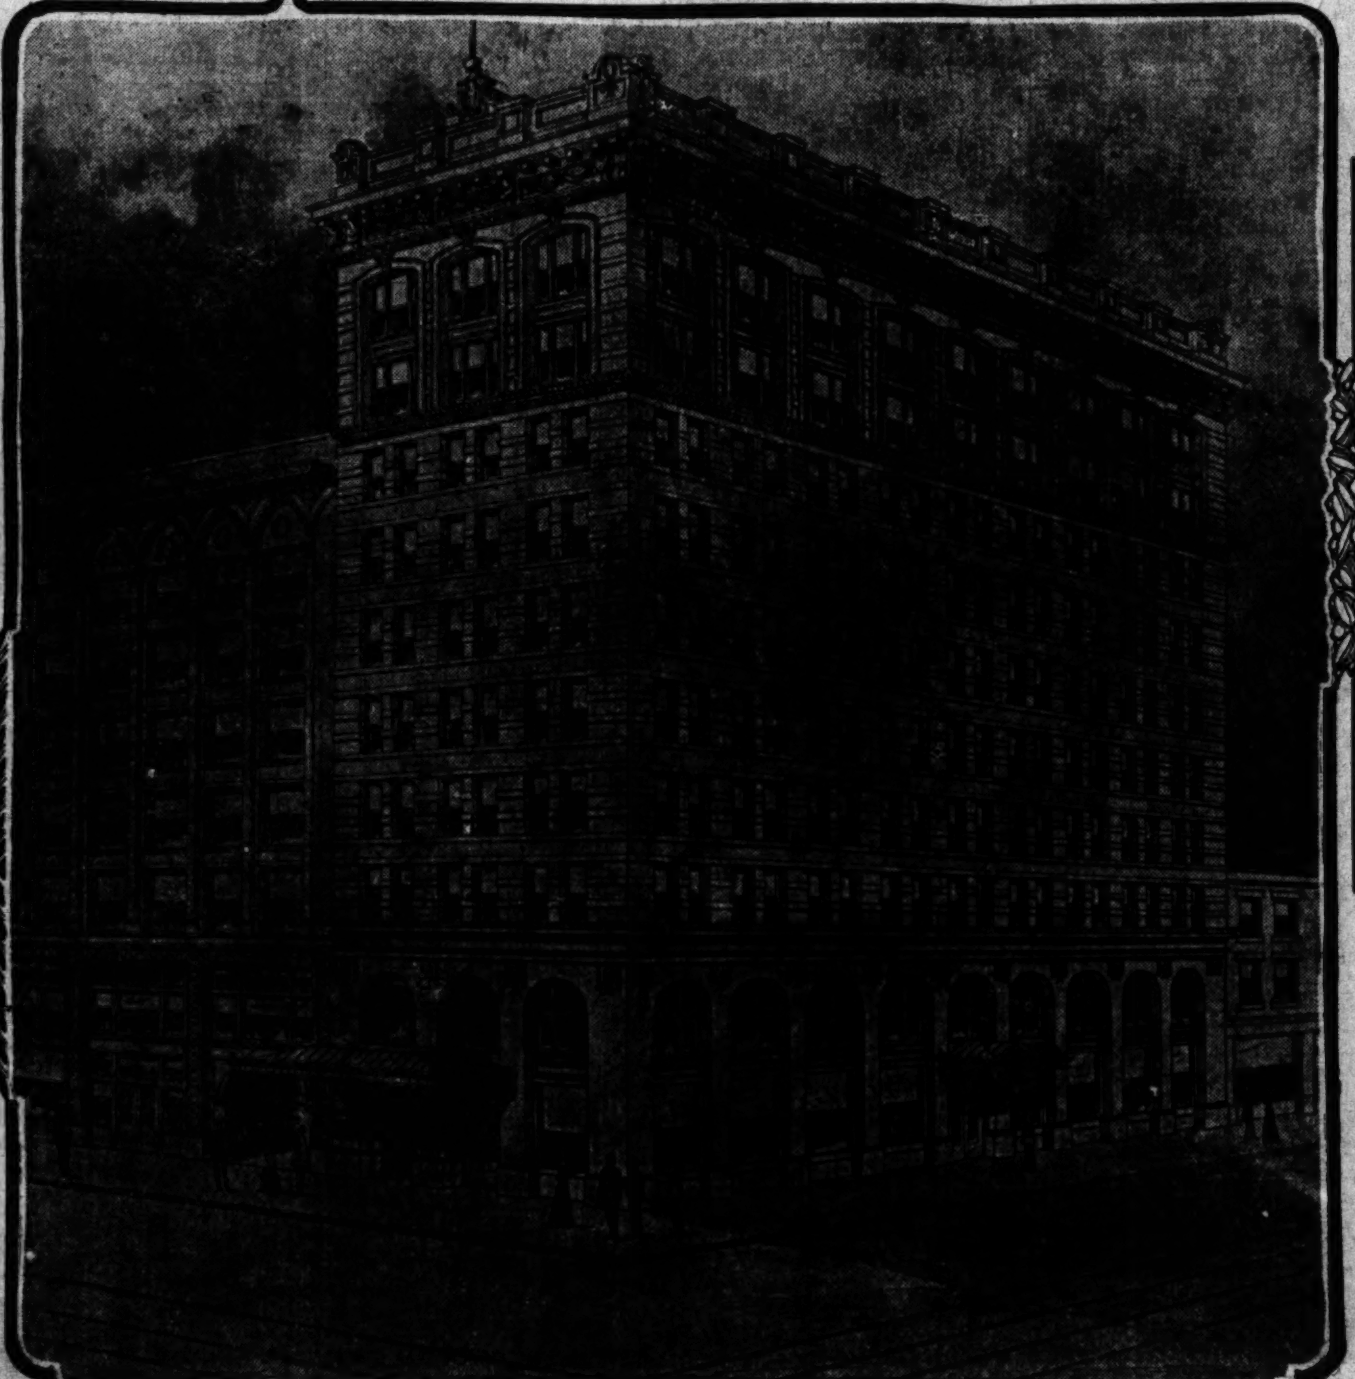
Another Potent Influence.

Now, if we may assume that the great union railroad depot is to be built about where Buena Vista street crosses the river near the entrance to Elysian Park we have another influence which will make the northern portion of the city an exceedingly lively place. The whole railroad passenger traffic in and out of the city will then pass along the pan-handle represented by Main street running up past the Plaza. All that traffic would reach the hotels, which are not far out of the way, being mostly on Broadway and Spring street, as far down as Seventh street. With the splendid car service H. E. Huntington has given Los Angeles and with streets put in the best [illegible] repair from the depot into the center of the town the access from the town to the depot and from the depot to the town would really be ideal.

—o—

A Word About the Streets.

One of the drawbacks to the end of the town we are discussing now for thirty years has been its poor streets. It is pleasing to note that property holders along Third street from Figueroa to Boylston are moving to have that thoroughfare well paved. It is an example that property holders in this whole district can not follow too promptly. The grades of the streets in the district, from moderate to considerable steepness, make the paving of the streets more imperative than where the ground is more level. Buena Vista street is now North Broadway, and if the depot is to go on the river bank, as suggested, that thoroughfare should be put into the highest possible condition. The same should be done with Main street and San Fernando street from the river southward. Of course, when this event is here, if it is to come, we shall have lighting systems for these thoroughfares similar to those on Broadway south of Temple and such as are now planned for Seventh street and Pico. There is no wisdom in lagging behind in these civic improvements. The property holders who are too niggardly to stand for good streets and splendid lighting are standing in their own way and making it positively certain that they will never grow very rich in Los Angeles real estate.



Ten-story block to be erected by Broadway Investment Company at Second and Broadway.

A LIVE SECTION.

TO CLEAR SITE FOR BIG BLOCK.

TEN-STORY BUILDING TO START IN SIXTY DAYS.

Broadway Investment Building at Second and Broadway to Be a Thoroughly Metropolitan Structure. Second Street Boasts Three of the Big Nineteen-Ten Blocks.

A perspective embodying the preliminary plans for the ten-story Broadway Investment block, one of the most notable buildings of 1910, is reproduced on this page of The Times. The illustration shows both the Broadway and the Second-street frontages of the huge structure, which is to be reared at the southwest corner of these thoroughfares, together with the imposing facade of the Merchants' Trust building adjoining on the south. The razing of the old American National Bank building now on the site will be begun within thirty days and the new building will be started within sixty days, according to statements made yesterday by the building company to The Times.

The block to be erected will be of absolutely fireproof, class-A construction. It will front 50 feet on Broadway by 163 feet on Second. The exterior will be of white glazed finish, the interior in tile and mahogany. The building will cost about $350,000, and with its site will represent an investment of approximately $650,000. The equipment will be the most modern. The officers of the Broadway Investment Company, the builder, are R. J. Waters, president; C. Wesley Roberts, secretary; and M. J. Connell, W. W. Woods and L. J. Christopher, directors. C. Wesley Roberts is the active promoter and will have the leasing of the building.

The structure will be designed especially for attorneys, and one of the features will be a $25,000 law library. There will be nine floors of offices, the first story being planned for a banking room at the front and for a large café at the west end of the Second-street frontage. One of the features of the financing of the proposition is the fact that the tenants and a number of property owners of the vicinity are to be invited to buy the bonds of the undertaking.

The negotiations leading up to this important building project began with the consolidation of the American National Bank with the Citizens' National last summer. The building formerly occupied by the former bank was pur[illegible] Company from the Citizens' National Bank last December, the consideration being $225,000. This deal was reported exclusively in The Times. On March 2 of the present year The Times reported exclusively the transfer by Dr. J. H. Martindale to the Broadway Investment Company represented by C. Wesley Roberts, of the property immediately adjoining the former banking house on the west, and 55x60 feet in size. This necessary addition to the building site represented an outlay of $60,000.

The building to be wrecked is four stories in height and of ornate exterior. The fact that such a structure should be destroyed to make way for a taller building speaks eloquently of values in that section of the business district. One block west, at Hill and Second streets, the Union League Club will soon start its nine-story home, and at Second and Main the ten-story Higgins building is nearing completion. Just across from the Higgins block H. T. Newell projects the erection of a twelve-story hotel.

A more charming room than the dining-room could scarcely be imagined, from a large window in front, Old Baldy is seen in the distance, and at one end is a circle bay window with window seat the length of window. The room is paneled in weathered oak and the built-in buffet is fashioned so that it displays cut-glass and fine china to the greatest advantage; leaded glass doors the full length, both sides; glass shelves, and when the electric lights are on the effect is most brilliant; finest hardwood floors throughout the house; fine furnace; the pantry between kitchen and dining-room would delight any housekeeper; white enameled, and lined on three sides with glass-inclosed cupboards, affording ample room for dishes; white enamel buffet kitchen; light and cheery; rear hall with closets; screen porch with laundry tubs and bath with toilet and lavatory; stairway and upper hall are most spacious, broad, inviting built-in seat at the landing; on the second floor are four of the most charming bedrooms imaginable, a delightful sewing-room that opens with French doors to a balcony; also a large outdoor sleeping room that can be entirely closed if desired—a home is not complete in California without such a room; all the upstairs is finished in white enamel; full-length mirrors in the closet doors in the bedrooms; one room, which has two closets, having two full-length mirrors; all floors upstairs are hardwood; two bathrooms on this floor, entirely in white, including all plumbing, which is the most expensive; in one bath is full-length mirror, with built-in drawers and cupboards either side; all closets are large and roomy, with built-in drawers and clothes rods; one of the most charming features about this house are its many windows; none of the bedrooms have less than four wide windows, thus giving all the sunshine, light and air any one could wish for; of course, there is the generous linen closet and other closets off the hall, all of which any woman can find use for; the pretty flower boxes, with their pink geraniums, outside the bedroom windows, add another charm to this wonderfully homelike home; the buyer of this home will be most fortunate to get a residence of this character all built and so complete in every small detail.

JUST BUILT.
JUST BUILT.

Handsome 14-room house, east front, on a lot having a frontage of almost 100 feet, within a few feet of Wilshire Blvd.

Here is a house which at once combines all those features which the homeseeker desires, new and modern construction, large frontage, eastern exposure, swell location, on the high ground. It reads good and is better than it reads.

As you enter the large reception hall you are at once impressed. The hall is finished in English "fumed" oak, piano finish. Wainscoting 5½ feet high, on the side walls. A costly chandelier hangs from the ceiling, in which are set 4 Tiffany globes.

To the left of the hall is the large spacious living-room, also finished in English fumed oak, just a trifle darker in color than the hall.

The ceiling has beautiful oak beams, arranged in a manner to make it look at its best.

The mantel in this room is all that skilled workmen can produce—olive green Gruby tile were used in the construction of the mantel—a costly set of andirons are set in the grate.

The chandelier is one of the latest designs and sends forth a splendid mellow light when lighted.

The dining-room is directly back of the living-room and is finished in mahogany—the side walls are wainscoted in mahogany up 6 feet on the sides and from there on up the walls are finished in padded English tapestry.

The south side is built in cabinet effect to a height of 3½ feet above the floor—casement windows are also on this side of the room just above the cabinet.

The mahogany buffet is a thing of beauty and just above is a large art-glass window.

A green-globe chandelier finished in art glass gives a fitting finish to this beautiful room.

A pass pantry separates the dining-room and kitchen and contains all of the little essentials so necessary in a room of this kind.

The front room on the north side of the house is made into a library, or can be converted into a billiard-room if desired.

It has a large clinker brick mantel of fine design, running from the floor to the ceiling.

A window seat, 12 feet long, upholstered in craftsman canvas, is a feature of this room.

A built-in bookcase of ample size and pretty design is another feature.

The walls above the wainscoting are finished in stenciled craftsman canvas.

A 3-light system for billiard table, and built-in cue and ball rack, are here for your use if desired.

You will have to see the Indian room to get the proper impression—it is a beauty and you will enjoy it very much.

A large breakfast-room is finished in oatmeal canvas wainscoting, padded cloth tapestry above it, a buffet with pass into the kitchen, four button and 3-light chandelier finished in "Murphy's gold."

There are six bedrooms upstairs, two on the south side of the house and two on the north side, which have a bathroom, all in white, and having tile floor, in between and by a unique arrangement by locking the hall door at each end of the hall, which opens into another little hall, these bedrooms are inaccessible.

The bedrooms are all done in white with plenty of closet room.

The large front bedroom has a pretty dressing-room attached, which is so arranged as to serve its purpose in the best possible manner.

A sewing-room, sleeping porch, servant's quarters, servant's bath, big cedar closet, large garage, with chauffeur's room, and the most to the garage, are all features which deserve more detailed mention. If you are interested in a house of this character at a price about $25,000, call me up by 'phone, or drop me a card and I will be pleased to show the house to you.

ELEGANT HOME.

JUST BUILT.

Beautiful home, near Westchester Place. Just built, never been occupied. Absolutely modern in every respect. Built by day labor under owner's personal supervision; no contract job. There are 9 large rooms, basement and garage. All woodwork downstairs is lavishly done in mahogany of different varieties except the library, which is in oak. Mantels are of imported Onyx and tile. The decorations are done in tapestry, gold leaf and oil. All on canvas; upstairs there are 4 large bedrooms in enamel with colonial doors and 2 bathrooms. The grounds are large, 80x200, with an east front. The woodwork in this house cannot be equaled in the city of Los Angeles. This house was built to live in, not to sell, but changes in owner's family necessitate the sale; it is conservatively worth $30,000; but owner is anxious to sell and will entertain any reasonable offer; will consider good acreage for part. If beautiful woodwork appeals to you and you desire a home come out and see it at 1245 VAN NESS AVE. (2nd house north of Pico.) Owner at lot any time except Sunday afternoon. 10

THE CUDAHY RANCH appeals to the investor who is serious in his motives, or to the man seeking a profitable home, "close to the city," where he may go to and from his work in the city each day if he wishes.

Considering the rapid growth of Los Angeles, the purchase of Cudahy Ranch acreage "close to the city" represents an ideal investment. Not only from the standpoint of profit derived from the anticipated advance in value, but also due to its capability of producing an additional income from the cultivation of the land.

THE CUDAHY RANCH offers several 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 acre properties possessing a fine stand of alfalfa.

The cost of water is less than rates charged in many properties of a similar character.

Alfalfa, fruits, potatoes, cauliflowers, cabbage, asparagus and general truck gardening are among the principal productions. The texture of the soil is particularly adapted to the growing of deciduous fruits and the raising of poultry.

THE CUDAHY RANCH invites those seriously considering the purchase of acreage "close to the city" to give the property a thorough inspection.

THE CUDAHY RANCH invites you to weigh its advantages and disadvantages in comparison with properties of a similar character.

Investigate—see it—and decide for yourself.

An acre of ground contains the equivalent of five large city lots. In many instances a 50 foot city lot 35 to 40 minutes' travel from the center of the city will cost you anywhere from $750 to $2000. We offer five times the amount of ground contained in a large city lot, comparatively speaking, the same distance away from the city, figuring from the standpoint of "length of time required to get there" and "actual distance," for less money.

We have sold several hundred acres to satisfied purchasers. The district is growing constantly. Many have improved their property with substantial homes, and go to and from their work in the city each day; others devote their time and capital to the tilling of their lands for profit. Others have purchased for an investment and have leased on shares or for cash considerations.

Give us the opportunity of talking to you personally regarding this property.

Our representatives are instructed to adhere strictly to the truth in all conversations with prospective buyers.

If, in all sincerity, you are seeking acreage of this character "close to the city," an inspection will prove to you the values and exceptional bargains we offer.

Call prepared to go to see this property, or for an appointment to inspect the property, or for further particulars, descriptive pamphlet, price list, etc. We would be glad to mail you a chart showing the location of the Cudahy Ranch on receipt of your request. Your interests will be well served by a personal inspection of the property itself.

EAGLE ROCK,

THE REWARD OF MERIT.

For three years we have listened to comments something like this: "Yes, Eagle Rock is the prettiest place we have seen—we like everything about it, but we MUST have GAS and ELECTRICITY." Of course, some folks were willing to put up with temporary inconveniences—otherwise we wouldn't have sold over one and a half million dollars' worth of Eagle Rock real estate—but a good many have either waited or built elsewhere.

To those who waited, we have GOOD NEWS—gas is in the valley now, and electricity is coming in right away.

THIS IS THE LOGICAL RESULT of the natural attractiveness of Eagle Rock—it has even charmed the gas men, and the electric light magnate. If it is good enough for them, how about YOU?

WHAT IS ENVIRONMENT WORTH

as an asset to the lot buyer and the home-builder? We have had some experience—let us tell you what it is worth. It is a REAL, TANGIBLE ASSET, THE WORTH OF WHICH IS HARD TO OVERESTIMATE. OAK KNOLL—SOUTH PASADENA, GLENDALE and EAGLE ROCK have the ASSET OF ENVIRONMENT. Don't fail to take that into account in buying your lot.

WHAT IS ALTITUDE WORTH

as an asset to the lot-buyer and home-builder? Especially what is it worth in the immediate vicinity of Los Angeles? Well, we have had some twenty-two years' experience right here in that line, and we can tell you with authority. THE RIGHT ALTITUDE—provided it is reached by easy grades—is all important to many people and means warmer winters and cooler summers. Don't forget that.

WHAT IS PURE WATER WORTH

as an asset to the lot-buyer and home-builder? Read what Pasadena, San Diego, Los Angeles and other progressive cities are doing to improve their water supply. EAGLE ROCK WATER is famous for its clearness and purity—for years it was sold in Los Angeles by the bottle; the supply is unlimited. The Eagle Rock Water Company is now extending its system to supply MOUNT WASHINGTON—they have a reputation of wanting the best.

NOW, WE DO NOT CLAIM that Eagle Rock alone, has these assets—but we DO CLAIM THAT EAGLE ROCK IS THE ONLY PLACE NOT CHARGING FOR THEM. You can buy magnificent building lots in Eagle Rock, NOW, for about one-half what is asked in the other popular suburbs.

WHY?

Because Eagle Rock has not had the conveniences we started out to talk about—NOW she either has them or is getting them. It is only a question of a few months at the most, when you will have to pay what this property is really worth. DON'T WAIT TOO LONG.

We are the largest dealers of Eagle Rock realty—and sell more of it than all other agents combined.

See the other agents if you wish to, but see us some time before you buy—REGRETS ARE POOR CONSOLATION.

If you want to make a sure profit in standard residence property, BUY GOOD AND BUY NOW. Buy in the Wilshire district, in Oxford Square, its most beautifully developed section. You don't need a great deal of money. A small cash payment will take a large, splendidly improved lot. Small monthly payments will take care of the balance. The property I offer is developed along the most thorough and artistic lines, and one of the prettiest tracts in the city. The large lots, adjoining beautiful residences, front on 70-foot oil-tamped boulevards, have cement walks, gutters and curbs and wide parkings planted to palms, shade trees and flowers. The street-car service is excellent. The Pico-street line passes the property. The West 9th-street extension and the new Subway line will run directly through it. The neighborhood is unusually select, built up to handsome homes, and restrictions protect the Oxford Square purchaser in his improvements. Select a lot now—more than one if you can. You won't have to hold it long before taking a handsome profit. Prices positively will be advanced May 1.

CLOSE-IN TRACT.

This is the best close-in tract of any size in the city which is available, having 62 choice lots now ready for building, as all street, sidewalk, curb and gutter improvements are in. It is beautifully located, on high, rolling ground, only fifteen minutes from the business center, and affords a beautiful view of both the mountains and the sea.

Building restrictions in this section are from $1800 up, with no house allowed nearer than 25 feet, and no outbuildings nearer than 75 feet from the front of lot. If sold in separate lots at reasonable prices, it will net on purchase price of tract 50 to 60 per cent. profit; or if developed by builders will show much larger returns. SATSUMA PARK.

THE PRIDE OF EAGLE ROCK VALLEY.

Lots average 55x163; set to a variety of beautiful 10-year-old fruit trees; located two blocks west of the present terminus of the car line and extending from the car line north to Hill ave. Hill ave. is a beautiful winding street, skirting the foothills and paralleling the car line, or Colorado st., which passes along the south boundary of this tract. Colorado st. is 120 ft. in width and will be improved at once by the Good Roads Commission. It will connect Pasadena with Los Angeles by way of Eagle Rock. Satsuma Park is the last of the choice pieces to be subdivided on the north side of the car line; has more beautiful trees than any of the adjoining properties. Mayfair tract adjoins it on the east and Los Flores tract on the west. This property commands a magnificent view of the entire valley and the surrounding foothills. It will be supplied with the softest, best water in the country. First-class street work will be rushed to completion at no cost to the purchaser. Good restrictions; low prices; easy terms.

DON'T FORGET OUR OPENING DAY, SUNDAY, APRIL 16.

SATSUMA PARK.

THE PRIDE OF EAGLE ROCK VALLEY.

Lots average 55x165; set to a variety of beautiful 16-year-old fruit trees; located two blocks west of the present terminus of the car line and extending from the car line north to Hill ave. Hill ave. is a beautiful winding street, skirting the foothills and paralleling the car line, or Colorado st., which passes along the south boundary of this tract. Colorado st. is 120 ft. in width and will be improved at once by the Good Roads Commission. It will connect Pasadena with Los Angeles by way of Eagle Rock. Satsuma Park is the last of the choice pieces to be subdivided on the north side of the car line; has more beautiful trees than any of the adjoining properties. Mayfair tract adjoins it on the east and Los Flores tract on the west. This property commands a magnificent view of the entire valley and the surrounding foothills. It will be supplied with the softest, best water in the country. First-class street work will be rushed to completion at no cost to the purchaser. Good restrictions; low prices; easy terms.

DON'T FORGET OUR OPENING DAY, SUNDAY, APRIL 16.

Our agent on tract, or see any Eagle Rock agent.

FOR SALE—
Business Property.

FOR SALE—$5500 PER FOOT.

60x150 to 20 ft. alley.

Look at it, 414-16-18 South Spring st.

In the heart of the Business Center.

Among buildings that could have held the "Center" at First and Spring—if they had been built there.

They are good enough to hold the center of the stage when this burg has a million people.

Don't be afraid of 4th and Spring, with its buildings, because the "center" shifted from 1st and Spring with its buildings.

And don't be afraid there's something the matter with the LOT or the PRICE, just because the Old Man is trying to unload it. That lot and that price are all right (except price ought to be $6000 instead of $5500.) The trouble is all with the Old man. Didn't you see by the papers the other day that the Deceiver, no, I mean the Receiver, of the Cal. Devilment—no, I mean Cal. Development Co. (you see, it looks like when you get in a fight with some railroads (not the S. P., though, mind you) it's so easy for the Deceiver and the Devil to slip in unbeknownst to you,) had beatem me "on every point in every court!" Waal, "that's" what they told 'em at the mill, but—it kept on a grindin'. So you see, according to the papers, which are so eager for to publish some news and so loath to publish some contrary facts, your Uncle Confed has already "got him." Now, you can't fight a R.R. without money, much less can you fight a corporation with as good a name as most Title and Ins. Cos., and inasmuch as it is my intention to give some fellers in this town an opportunity to show through the courts how carefully they guard the interests of minority bondholders whose interests happen to be adverse to a big R.R., unmentionable here, and also adverse to the interests of men in unsaid Title Co., it's going to put the Old Man up against a scrap that will be some interesting, to be shore.

But this is only an ad to sell this lot—not give you any of the details of the "troubles" which force it upon the market. To do so might put somebody in contempt of some court, and everybody the Old Man knows, his own self included, is not trying to do anything to show his contempt of any court or company, but would do everything he could to "conceal" his contempt of any court if the Old Man had any contempt of court, which said possession the Old Man hereby disclaims, denies or disowns. If a court which owned lands under a canal system should show unseemly, undue and unwarranted haste to stick his John Hancock to an order to put receivers' certificates out to the detriment of minority bondholders, just because the sentiment of the community in which his land was located would justify him in abetting such a scheme, then the Old Man, if he were a bondholder under such an acknowledged existence of such facts, might take himself off to one side and lay his hand on his own shoulder, and say, "Old Man, you're a lollapaloosa," whatever that is—your name is henceforth mud, and if you HAVE any contempt for anybody or anything, you just keep closed that false-tooth hole in your head and throw away your fountain pen and "keep your foot on the soft, soft pedal, and don't talk so loud." As far as the Old Man's expressin' any feelin' for anybody, "you bet my life" there's nothin' stirrin' in the contempt line. But nevertheless, howsomever, notwithstanding, the Old Man, for possible future contingencies, wants to now do this much "hedging," to-wit, viz., namely, that there are certain acts, of which some court or some trust company could be guilty, that might possibly so affect the Old Man with a revese peristaltic action of the digestive organism" as to make some of these new-fangled "D.F.'s" (that means Doctors of Finance,) incorrectly diagnose the case and call it "contempt." But any time you want to know "what ails" the Old Man, don't go and ask some of these D.F.'s, who want to "operate on him," but ask the Old Man himself—he can tell you better what really ails him, for he has "inside information."

So you jes' do the Old Man the favor of coming to him and buying this lot and givin' him the spondulix and he'll not ask you to send any "flowers at three bucks a throw" when you see a "rope-fest" announced for the Imperial Valley, with an S. P. hangman and a TITE rope Ins. Co., furnishin' the rope and the victim! Leave it to muh! whoever that it.

As to terms on this lot—any old terms—that I'll accept will go, if you come quick, while I'm good and skeered!.

For further dreadful particulars see yours truly, will represent the giant strides of the automobile in the manufacturing world of 1910. Los Angeles reflects the giant growth of the automobile industry more distinctly than any city in the world. Olive street reflects the best judgment of the motor car dealers as the coming street for motor car business. Olive street is limited to a few noiseless, trackless blocks in the heart of the city. Five years from now a solid mass of high type buildings will adorn Olive street from Seventh to Pico. An exclusive street for everything in automobiles. The only street for this kind of business. "Automobile Row." Get in on Olive street property while it is cheap; the other fellow will have to come later at the bigger price. We have the best 60-ft. frontage on Olive street in the best block at the best prevailing price, $25,000 cash will handle.
BOAZ DUNCAN.

FOR SALE— Suburban Property.

South Pasadena and Oneonta Park.

FOR SALE—

CAMDEN COURT, SOUTH PASADENA, has just been thrown open to public inspection. It is NEAR LA SENDA STATION, reached by either Oak Knoll, Monrovia, Sierra Madre, or Glendora cars. IT IS ADMITTEDLY IN THE FRONT BANK OF THE FEW MOST EXCLUSIVE ANR ORNATE RESIDENTIAL PLOTS IN GREATER LOS ANGELES.

The "Fact of Comment" man of "THE TIMES," appropriately referred to it as a "LITTLE KINGDOM UNTO ITSELF."

There are but 18 plots, ranging in area from a half to three-fourths acre each, and at opening prices $4500 to $5500 each. All face the boulevard and park. So quietly has the little army of skilled artisans worked for three months, that few have even known of the TRANSITION IN PROGRESS FROM A GROVE LADEN WITH GOLDEN ORANGES TO A LANDSCAPE OF MARVELOUS BEAUTY. Hidden from Huntington Drive, though only a block distant, it is protected from its dust and noise, and the stare of the curious.

The owners reserve the right to reject offers of the full price for plots, at their discretion.

THIS IS A RARE OFFERING. Those to whom it may appeal should investigate promptly.

ALFALFA LAND WALNUT LAND.
ORANGE LAND.

THE FAMOUS OLD RANCHO LA PUENTE—A DIVISION OF THE BALDWIN RANCH—in the heart of the great San Gabriel Valley, consisting of thousands of acres of the most fertile soil in Southern California, is offered for sale and will be sold in lots of TEN ACRES and up. It is located 14 miles east of the city, between El Monte and Covina, and on the main line of the Southern Pacific and the Pacific Electric railways.

We have two subdivisions containing 3000 acres of deep sediment loam soil, that cannot be equaled anywhere for ALFALFA, walnuts, vegetables or small fruit. Its merits are so well known that but little comment is necessary. We simply invite you to go out and see this land and you will be convinced.

THE WATER QUESTION.

That is already demonstrated. Wells that have been bored on tracts that we have sold tells an eloquent story. The water in many instances stands only fifteen feet from the surface.

There is not another tract of land so close to Los Angeles that can be bought at so reasonable a price. Now is the time to buy.

If you are looking for a home or for an investment, don't let this opportunity go by. Adjoining improved ranches cannot be bought under $500 and $600 per acre. Hundreds of acres already sold. We are simply besieged with buyers.

MARKETS.

Being close to the foothill section and to Los Angeles, there is always a good demand for alfalfa in the field at highest prices.

Price $250 per acre—one-third cash, balance on or before three years with interest at 7 per cent.

FOOTHILL ORANGE LAND.

We have a tract containing 1000 acres of choice foothill orange land in the Covina district, that is as near frostless as any land in the State. The soil is a deep sediment loam and is extremely fertile. It is water-bearing land and water for irrigation can be developed at moderate cost. Lots of 10 acres and up. Price $250 per acre. Terms—one-third cash, balance on or before three years at 7 per cent.

THE SUB-IRRIGATED LAND.

Ten miles east of the city and one mile south of El Monte, and the electric car line, we have a tract of land that requires no irrigation to grow ALFALFA, WALNUTS, celery or any other kind of vegetables or small fruit.

Just think of it, no labor expense for irrigating; just plant your crops and watch them grow. If you doubt this statement just board the Covina line cars, get off at El Monte and we will "show you" whether you are from the good old State of Missouri or not. Lots of ten acres and up. Price $300 per acre. Terms—one-third, balance on or before three years, interest 7 per cent.

Unlimited certificate of title by the Title Guarantee and Trust Company given with each purchase.

Extracts from the following article, which appeared in the Redlands Daily Review, hit the nail squarely on the head. The newspaper man has summed up the situation regarding apple raising completely. We believe that it will be of interest to readers of The Times.

"Bumper crop in the famous apple section adjoining Redlands. Did you realize that Redlands is approaching as an apple growing center its importance as an orange production section?

"Well, it is.

"Do you know that fruit grown in the apple orchards of Yucaipa and Oak Glen, comprising the Redlands apple growing territory, equal in quantity that shipped out of the great Hood River district of Oregon this year?

"Well, it did.

"Did you ever, in your wildest flights of agricultural imagination, suppose that two acres of Oak Glen apples would grow fifty tons of fine fruit?

"Well, they did.

"Did you suppose that apple orchards are this year pressing the valuable orange groves as to value, based on returns to the growers?

WALNUT TREES and VINEYARD.
A fine family orchard of deciduous and citrus fruits; a modern 6-room house with modern plumbing and superb cellars; a large, modern barn, and the usual appurtenances of a highly developed orchard and vineyard proposition with water for irrigation. Reason for selling: The owner is about to retire from active business on account of age. The price is so alluring that no person looking for an ideal country home or a gilt edge investment can afford to "pass it up." Terms one half down, balance on long time at 6 per cent. Can be subdivided. Merits immediate investigation. Particulars on application. The second is a
20-ACRE ORANGE GROVE.
Situated but a short distance from San Fernando. The grove is 12 years of age, in A No. 1 condition and in full bearing; mostly in Washington navels, with a sprinkling of Valencia Lates, St. Michaels and lemons. Plenty of water for irrigation, and the usual improvements of an up-to-date producing citrus grove. The price is exceptionally low, namely, $17,000 cash, or $18,000 half cash and the balance on long time at a low interest rate. Will stand close investigation.
MONEY IN SAN FERNANDO LEMONS.
NO CROP has given larger returns in the San Fernando Valley than the lemon. The reasons: An ideal climate, a rich soil and plenty water. The leading lemon growers in the Southern California Fruit Exchange own improved orchards here. Owens River water will make of this valley a second Riverside. I only ask the opportunity to substantiate these statements. Correspondence solicited.

FOR SALE—

Have you $25,000 to invest in a ranch at present yielding an annual income of over $15,000, and which can be made to yield considerably more? If so, here is a study in values, well worth while.

This ranch is completely equipped and located in the best section of Tulare County, close to R. R. station in the artesian belt. Comprises 622 acres of cultivated land, guaranteed to be all first-class soil. 270 acres are in alfalfa; 3 artesian wells; fine reservoir and ditch; natural gas; 4 houses; several outhouses; 75 cows; 50 yearlings; 25 horses; 5 brood sows; 300 chickens; wagons, all kinds of implements including mowers, plows, rakes, etc., etc.

The price is $100 per acre. $25,000 cash, balance to suit.

Raw land of this class without any improvement other than water sells around this price. You can't buy any full-bearing alfalfa land under $200 per acre. At this rate the 270 acres of alfalfa are worth more than the price of the entire ranch. Figure it out.

See Mr. Rottner.

LATE VALENCIAS, UNQUESTIONABLY THE HANDSOMEST GROVE ON THE MARKET TODAY; 20 acres 5-year Valencias, great, big, uniform trees, look two or three years older; produced a fine crop last season; crop now setting is IMMENSE; absolutely clean, practically perfect trees. We consider this half the place worth the price of the entire 20 acres. One acre 2-year Valencias, 3 acres splendid grove of 5-year soft-shell walnuts.

The soil is a rich silt loam, nothing better; the trees are sufficient evidence of this. Any amount of cheapest water for irrigating, and the place is perfect for ease of irrigating.

These trees were budded, cared for, set out and developed by one of the best orange experts in the State. He has "mothered" these trees from babyhood. THEY ARE PERFECT. Such groves are seldom offered for sale. If you never saw such a one it will pay you to see this. You will admire it. IT'S THE BARGAIN OF THE SEASON. [illegible]

"INVESTING FOR PROFIT" IS WORTH $10 a copy to any man who intends to invest any money, however small, who has money invested unprofitably or who can save $5 or more per month, but who hasn't learned the art of investing for profit. It demonstrates the REAL earning power of money, the knowledge financiers and bankers hide from the masses. It reveals the enormous profits bankers make and shows how to make the same profits. It explains HOW stupendous fortunes are made and WHY they are made; how $1000 grows to $22,000. To introduce my magazine write me NOW, and I'll send it six months FREE. Editor GREGORY, 77 Jackson Blvd., Chicago. x10

PROVEN OIL STOCK. I want to sell 10,000 shares of stock at 15c per share in company that owns a lease on 10 acres of proven ground. The company is only incorporated for $50,000 and nearly half of the capital stock is still in the treasurery. This is not a wildcat proposition, but is an honest, legimate undertaking that will prove a sure winner. If you are looking for an investment or a speculation in oil, investigate this proposition. The more thoroughly you investigate, the better satisfied you will be.

SISTER-WIVES ARE SATISFIED.

Foreign Women Are Held in Turkish Harems.

Public Baths Main Resort of the Women.

Moslem Religion Is Bar to Their Progress.

BY FREDERICK MOORE,

Author of "On the Balkan Trail," "Shadow of the Mosque," Etc.

Woman's place in society is a moving topic in every western nation. The traveler in lands like Turkey, therefore, looks with interest for signs of the merry suffragette in the strenuous movements that arise under the impulse of new ideas and broadening institutions.

In the Sultan's Mahmud's dominions there was a brief moment when women suddenly showed public activity that seemed to promise striking developments. But the movement was transient. The time is not yet when Turkish women may defy the tradition of ages, buttressed by the tenacious doctrines of a reactionary religion.

Among them are not a few western women whose nationality is sufficiently hidden by Turkish clothing. One such woman, an American, knowing nothing of the life in Turkey and attracted by the title "Effendi," which she imagined to be something more imposing than "Mr.," accepted the hand of a Turk, whom she chanced to meet in her own country. Now, living here with her husband, she is conforming to the strictest Turkish rules.

Another woman, a Russian, I know of, who resides at a poor hotel, the best her husband can afford, and does not veil. He has other wives, among whom he dare not take her unless she will say, "There is no God, but our God, and Mohammed is his prophet," at the same time conforming to the ways of the harem. It would probably be as much as her life is worth to go there without a change of faith.

The tale is told of a pretty, black-eyed American girl, a graduate of the American school, who went to teach at the home of a wealthy Turk and, arousing the jealousy of the women, was deliberately poisoned. Being the subject of Abdul Hamid—for it was in the old days—no foreign interference brought the murderers to trial.

A German nurse who was called in to attend the wife of a pasha in some illness, told me of her experience, which indicates the temper of many a Turkish household. Though the lady was seriously ill, no doctor was permitted to see her, her mother declaring that she would rather her daughter should die than be attended by a man, and the pasha seemed also to hold this attitude, though he was by no means as hostile as the old woman. The rooms, when the nurse left after each visit, were carefully fumigated, or, rather, some spell-dispersing herb was always burned in them to remove any traces of the departed infidel.

To give an insight into the restricted vista opened to women in Turkey, I shall begin by giving you a picture of a scene described to me by an American lady who went with an English friend on women's day to visit a Turkish bath in Brusa—the Eski—the largest and perhaps best-managed bath in the empire.

VISIT TO A BATH.

In many Mohammedan countries they would have been permitted to enter a Moslem bath no sooner than a mosque, because the presence of infidels is thought to pollute the place beyond all possible disinfection. But, while the Turks are more superstitious in several matters than other Moslems, they are not in this. Here, even native Christians may meet them on equal terms, on even friendly terms, in the bath.

About fifty carriages stood under the trees before the Eski on this woman's day, while the drivers, sure of a morning's siesta, sprawled or squatted on the ground. In the courtyard an old Turk—probably keeper of the place—seated to the right of the doorway, peacefully smoked his narghile, studiously paying no attention to the veiled figures that passed in.

To the left was a stall for the sale of coffee and lemonades of various colors. Immediately inside was a vast, marble-floored dome room, which at first glance reminded one of a famous picture of the slave market. The picture, however, gives no indication of a heavy, composite odor, not all of which is wholesome, though the best of its component elements is no less than the attar of roses.

Upon the raised marble divan surrounding the room were a few black slaves among the white women, seated or standing, as if for show, while the visitors leisurely changed their outer garments for those of the bath. The hum of many voices drowned the pleasant sound of water bubbling from a fountain in the center. Though dimly lighted, the scene was a bewildering display of color; for every woman, young or old, black or white, vied with her neighbor in the brilliance of her towel and her covering burnous, and some of them had brought fine rugs to sit upon.

Families appeared to have come to spend the day. There were infants, covered with gaudy clothes, sleeping peacefully in hammocks strung up in the corners; and there were children who wailed as their mothers took them into the hot room or left them behind. There were baskets of provisions not yet opened and others already turned out.

A few women in their loose burnouses were in the act of preparing a meal, while many, fresh from the hot room, their clinging garments saturated, puffed cigarettes or sipped tiny cups of coffee, brought to them carefully by little slave girls, walking uncertainly over the slippery floor on clogs.

PROCEDURE.

The first thing to be done on entering this room was to drop the shoes for a pair of Turkish clogs—slipper-like toes tacked to wooden soles, two inches in thickness—and on these one splashed through water constantly flowing over the floor. Then one proceeded to find a vacant space on the broad divan for undressing, or, if preferred, one sought a small private dressing room at the side, costing a few piastres extra. These latter, however, seemed to have been designed solely for the use of fastidious Europeans, as they were fitted with iron bedsteads in place of the divan and no natives occupied them.

More peaceful was the scene in the hot room, where the bathers, away from all possessions but their towels, sat beside little fountains in the wall, pouring water over themselves, or reclined in the steam. A group of tiny boys and girls played and gamboled like puppies, laughing, teasing and splashing each other with water from the central fountain; some drinking it as it bubbled from the topmost basin.

When the American ladies entered, two or three of the bathers rose and came clattering over to them on their clogs. They fingered the ladies' clothes, touched their gloves and hair and hats, indicating that they should take them off and bathe. But the ladies were only visiting, having no desire to take the risk of a long sojourn in a bath where persons with fatal diseases may go at will without restrictions of the law.

"Francisma?" asked one of the Turkish beauties. "Yok," was the reply.

Their eyes showed pleasure. But they could not understand why the ladies would not join them in the bath, where old and young plastered their hair with henna and stained their finger nails and eyebrows, or, if they were ailing, sweated away their aches and pains. What more could be wished for?

In all, that morning, some 500 Turkish, Greek, Armenian and Jewish women and children were crowded into these rooms, bathing, resting, smoking, eating and drinking; and the probability is that each of the women, accustomed to the indolent ways of the Levant, where many hours of each day are given up to gossip, and the bath is a long performance, would consider the foreigner's dip in cold water most uninteresting, not to say uncleansing. The impression of the average visiting man or woman, however, is that to be able to enjoy one of these public baths in the manner of the Levantine one must be bred in the country where the custom is to bathe at the bath which every little village provides.

WOMAN'S DRESS.

The Turkish woman's outer dress in Constantinople consists of a yashmak, a little curtain veil, which can be thrown back over the head or lowered; a ferije, a voluminous armless mantle, generally of rich black silk, though sometimes of blue, brown, red and even light yellow, completely concealing the wearer's figure, including her head, over which the tight-fitting hood of the garment fastens; a pair of overshoes; and a painted parasol for all occasions, wet or fine.

At first glance, each woman resembles the other in size and shape, and one can imagine that as sheep are known only to the shepherd and his dog, so the Turkish woman, once outside the harem, is known only to her husband, children or maid. On a closer inspection, however, you discover that there is a difference in these black sheep. It may be in the quality of the ferije, a trick in the lifting of the skirt in walking, a manner of carrying the head, a peculiar taste in stockings, gloves or shoes—but the difference is there and can be recognized by the initiated.

During the winter months, when Turkish streets are covered with snow and slush, you may wander round the city for days and see no more than a pair of black-robed figures, who, maybe, will stand bargaining with an Arabaji about a fare. Deep pools of liquid mud fill up the gutters and rest in the uneven roads; the wind, whistling down the narrow streets, drives the falling snow blindingly into your face, and puffs out the loose garments of the women, distorting their figures as they stand with petticoats gathered up to their knees, arguing with the stolid cabman. But when the sun shines and the dust rises, many Turkish women are tempted into the streets, perhaps on some shopping expedition, a thing they love, or out to the Sweet Waters of Asia in a skimming caique.

Sometimes one is accompanied by her servant, who walks beside her in this democratic country and sometimes by a friend or sister-wife similarly dressed. No lady ever appears alone, though a few began to be so bold in the early days of the Constitution.

As they cross a dirty road they are careful to lift their skirts high enough to show a pink skirt or flannel petticoat. It is like an old negro woman who never forgets to show her gaudy stockings fitting tight around a fat calf. "For East is East and West is West." How shocked the Turkish woman would be at the displays of face and neck that take place nightly at the foreign embassies in their midst!

EDUCATION.

A few of the better class speak a little English and more of them are learning. Many have already acquired French from governesses and, it is said, read too many of the latest French novels. But the mass of them cannot read or write even in their own language, for they, like the majority of their men up to the present, have had no real education.

The secluded life they lead acts on their intelligence. Not being educated themselves, they do not appreciate the value of educating their children, and it will be a long time before the ordinary woman can dispense with the service of the public letter-writer.

There is one young Turkish woman in Constantinople who holds a college degree and has been permitted by her husband to enjoy the acquaintance of a few European gentlemen. Her emancipation would without doubt have extended further, even perhaps to discarding the veil, were it not for the development of a definite reactionary body, which was little heeded prior to the counter-revolution, but is now being given much consideration.

I have been told by several ladies how this young precursor of liberty for women rose without nervousness to speak for the first time to an audience of European women, mostly American and English, the self-confidence and easy manner of the men of her race extending likewise to her. With yashmak thrown back—there being only those of her own sex present—revealing a pale, delicate oval face, whose fascination lay in large hazel eyes and an expressive mouth, the young woman spoke without hesitation in very good English, her low toned voice having but the slightest indication of an accent.

PLANS FOR HER RACE.

"I feel I must apologize to you, ladies," she said, "for speaking in your own language, but I have been commanded to speak to you by an American lady, and I am accustomed to obeying Americans, having been educated at the American College for Girls in Scutari.

"First, I shall say, the women of Turkey must be awakened to their need of education—though this is necessary for the men, too, as they have received almost as little education as the women.

"Then we shall establish head schools in Constantinople with English and American teachers; after which we shall have our own instructresses, who will be sent to different towns through the empire. Of course the process of education is a matter of years.

"For years past," she went on, "the teaching of Mohammed has been wrongly construed, but now we shall go forward, giving justice to all, as we are really commanded to do."

But I believe that this young woman does not represent her race. In fact, she found it advisable to leave her home and with her children go into hiding among European friends during the reactionary days. While many of them are interested to see and to meet women who go out into the world, it is known that they regard themselves as of a better race and creed. And what wonder, for those of Constantinople at any rate!

Besides the other women of the Levant, pale, gross-looking creatures, whose every curve is exaggerated from lack of exercise, overeating, and a desire to imitate the fashions of Paris, the average Turkish woman is a doll.

TASTE OF FREEDOM.

In the month immediately following the proclamation of the Constitution women often ventured into streets with their veils thrown back. Some of them began to raise their hair a little, giving their hoods more the appearance of European bonnets. They attended the afternoon performances of patriotic plays, where a section of the theater, sometimes partly screened, was reserved for them; and some of them began to ride through the streets in the open victorias which are to be hired everywhere in Constantinople.

But this is now all passed. Even before the Young Turks' power had been challenged, carriages were being stopped and the hoods put up by the mob, and on one or two occasions young officers who ventured to drive through Stamboul with their wives were dragged out of the vehicles and pummeled.

Later a system of attacks upon women was inaugurated, evidently to make it appear that the new liberal movement tended to promote outrages; women were pinched and squeezed and their veils were lifted. The police succeeded in arresting fifteen perpetrators of such acts. They then decided to let them go and to shadow them, when it was found that a number of religious men, Mullahs and others of the old school were provoking the trouble. Word then went round, more or less as a government order, that the conventional costume so long recognized should be adhered to.

It is not only the reactionaries, however, who support the rigid seclusion of women. Some of the leading reformers do likewise. One of the half-dozen controlling men in the Committee of Union and Progress, a staunch Mohammedan, the son of a highly intelligent Mullah of Salonica, told me that after a visit to Paris and London, where he went with friends to see the worst public haunts of women, he could but advocate a continuance of the veil for those of his own race.

WHITE SLAVERY.

White slavery, it is true, is comparatively scarce among the Turkish women, and of course this is due largely to the less rigid nuptial system prevailing for men under the laws of Mohammed. The Koran permits true believers to "marry what seems good to you by twos, or three, or fours, and if you fear that you cannot be equitable, then only one, or what your right hands possess"—that is, female slaves.

To a Turk the Christian system of one wife until death is slavery, to which he believes a man cannot adhere and which accounts for the prevalence in Europe and America of illicit alliances. The Moslem law is much simpler to keep, for not only may the man marry four times and possess as many slaves as he likes, but he may also divorce wives as he chooses without cause, putting them off, the Koran enjoins, "in kindness," taking from them nothing of what he has given them and making provision for them.

The liberties granted to men by the Moslem Prophet are generally upheld by the women. Virtuous women are content to share with others even the position of legitimate wife. While there have been, since the proclamation of liberty, protests against the veil and against other restrictions, none have been heard, publicly at any rate, against the system of sister-wives.

The loss of feminine influence under the Mohammedan system has been pointed out, and perhaps is a serious matter. The boy leaves the harem at the age of ten or twelve and goes to live in the men's side of the house. There, while he lacks the finer restraining influences of women, he also belongs to a generous fraternity which has many manly virtures and feminine failings.

But the fault is not in the it is where all the faults in medan countries lie—at the the religion itself. A creed teaches men to segregate their women, yet permits them to those not of the same faith ever at fault.

NOTES OF SPRING.

I. AMONG THE APPLE BLOSSOMS.

A waft of childhood trembles through my heart—
A searching ecstasy—the while I stand
All upward eager eyes, entranced with spring
And the pink budded pearl of apple-trees.

The air, divided with young leaves' white-green,
Drifts a delicious vagueness under boughs
That snow diaphanous perfume to the breeze
In fairy barques let free from golden moor.

An aching, throbbing sweetness breathes around,
Born of the opulent fragrance in the fair,
Entrancing blossoms of the apple-trees—
Plaintive as dear farewells, yet bearing me
A lovely, troublous, agitating joy—
A sense of childhood—tremulous and keen.

II. AMID THE GRAIN.

This much of vandal must I ever be:
To cross one lustrous field of quivering grain
With bold invading feet, just when the sound
Of touching blades is broken by the fine
High aria of the shaken, heavy tips.
Then, on a luminous day, to cleve athwart
That living radiance to its open heart,
And lie down on the lusty, prescient earth,
Is one dear tithe I claim of every spring:

Just to be still, and with luxurious eyes
Follow the interweaving of the stems,
And memorize that tracing of the grain
Against the peaceful blue of the great sky!

What Is a Safe, Sound and Conservative OIL Investment?

Previous to this only 100,000 shares have been placed upon the market. This was done March 31, 1910. The entire block was over subscribed in twelve hours.

A Safe, Sound and Conservative Oil Investment is One Which Eliminates All Elements of Chance—an Investment in a Company Which is Operating in Proven Territory—a Company OWNING EVERY ACRE OF ITS LAND, Free of Debt, and Operated by Oil Men of the Highest Standing and Integrity.

This Is What Merchants and Bankers' Oil Stock Means to You

Our directors have associated with them a number of the best business men and financiers of the country, forming the Merchants and Bankers' Oil Company, which is incorporated for the purpose of producing and selling oil. The company is incorporated for 1,500,000 shares of a par value of $1.00 each. Of the total, 100,000 shares are offered to the public directly by the company (no commissions or brokerage will be paid to anyone—all money going into the treasury for development purposes) at 40 cents per share. The company owns (purchased and paid for in full by the officers and directors) 160 acres of patented and proven oil land in the Kern River field, being the Northwest quarter of Section 20, 28-28 (see official map).

G. G. Gillette and friends already have organized and placed on a producing basis the California Midway, Wellman, Cleveland Oil, Bankers and other successful companies. G. G. Gillette, Sydney Smith and others organized the Famous Consolidated Midway Company. The success of all these companies, which are now producing, has been phenomenal. Read the quotations.

Kern River land is absolutely proven Oil land, with 250 and 275 feet of oil sand. Each well produces from 40 to 60 barrels daily, and, as has been proven, will keep it up for thirty years. Conservative experts and investors consider the Kern field the most valuable in the world, as it is absolutely sure and reliable—furnishing a constant flow of Oil.

The company also owns 160 acres in Section 4, 31-24, North Midway, which will also be developed, with the possibility of gushers.

The Merchants and Bankers' Oil Company is free from debt, has its property all paid for and has $40,000 in the treasury with which to begin drilling. Eighty (80) wells will be sunk on the Kern River property, the work having already been ordered, and it is safe to say that these wells will produce an average of 40 barrels a day each, or a total of 3200 barrels per day, which at a low estimate of 50 cents per barrel, will pay the stockholders $1600 a day, $48,000 a month and $576,000 annually, which will pay over 33 per cent. in dividends annually, or within 7 per cent. of your investment. This is a conservative estimate.

The object of offering this allotment of stock is to enable the company to more rapidly push the development work. It is the intention to put down and complete five wells per month.

For a safe, sound and conservative investment, with an attractive speculative feature, the stock of this comapny is the best that has been offered the investing public in years. It is not a gamble in any sense. It is a certain, productive investment. This stock will be listed on the exchange within ninety days and will be paying dividends within six months.

The directors of the Merchants' and Bankers' Oil Company ask the fullest investigation of their property, titles and ownership, and also of the character, standing and responsibility of their officers.

Application for stock of the company can be made by mail, wire or in person at the company's offices. Allotments will be made in the order in which applications are received.

WALSH'S START.

BLIND CITY HALL GUIDE AIDS HIM.

UCHES FOR HIM IN FIRST IMPORTANT DEAL.

te Colorado Multi-Millionaire ts Helping Hand When Down d Out in Leadville Mining Camp om "Old Blind" Tom Collins, for ny Years in Los Angeles.

The man who gave the late multimillionaire, Thomas F. Walsh, his real start in life was a Los Angeles man, and none other than "Blind Tom" Collins, the City Hall guide, according to the story as told by old Tom himself. Every local politician and public man of high or low degree knows the sunny-tempered, white-haired, sightless old man, who daily directs hundreds of callers to the various departments of the municipal government in the brown stone building on the east side of Broadway between Second and Third streets.

Collins is a native of Iowa, but he was a prominent citizen in both Central City and Leadville, Colorado, in the early days. When a Times reporter found "Blind Tom" in his cozy little cottage at No. 1122 East Fifty-fifth street yesterday afternoon, he talked interestingly of the days when T. F. Walsh, was a "greenhorn tenderfoot" just arrived from the Emerald Isle.

"Tom Walsh arrived in Central City in 1876, straight from Ireland," said Collins. "He had two uncles there, Pat and John Maher, and they kept a saloon. They had a sister with them, Maria Maher. I was then in the contracting business. Tom Walsh had a little money—it was a long ways from anything like $100,00 as it appeared in the papers when he died—and his first attempt at doing anything was to buy a little restaurant. Shortly afterward Mike Maher and Maria took it off his hands and Walsh joined the Black Hills excitement and went to Deadwood. When he returned to Colorado he came to Leadville—it was in 1878—and he was broke. I met him right in front of the Central Hotel on Chestnut street, and I introduced him to Harris, the man who then owned it.

"Two men wanted to buy this hotel and I made the deal for them. They were Felix Ludwig and Jerry Daley. They were the men who had the $100,000 that Walsh is supposed to have started in Leadville with. Neither of these two men knew a thing about the hotel business, but they had the money and wanted to try it. It was then that I thought of Tom Walsh and I made him acquainted with Ludwig and Daley and told them that he was the very man they wanted in the deal—that he was the best hotel man that ever came down the pike. And the best part of it was" added Collins with a reminiscent smile, "was that Tom made good from the jump.

"Daley and Ludwig took him and gave him a full one-third interest for his services" continued Mr. Collins. "That was the way that T. F. Walsh got his start. Everybody in Leadville at that time knew about it. All this talk of his having a bank-roll when he came there is all moonshine. Joe Cramer, who is now out here at the Soldiers' Home at Sawtelle, was the clerk at the hotel when the deal was made, and he helped me count the $40,000, which was the first payment made in the [illegible]. John Humphreys, father of Will Humphreys, who is on the Los Angeles Board of Public Works, was at that time mayor of Leadville. He can cor- [illegible] I say, too.

Minstrel Rehearsal at the Belasco, for the Players' Country Club show, to be given this week and in which practically all of the local actors will participate. In the center is Musical Director Harry Girard, and around him are grouped the principal members of the Belasco and Burbank companies.

"J. L. Murphy, the attorney here, was also a resident of Leadville at the time. He knew all about the matter, and about six years ago, he got to talking with me about it, and knowing of my affliction, he wrote to Walsh and acquainted him with the fact. He told me afterward that he received a letter from Walsh's secretary saying that Tom was on his way to Paris and that Murphy's letter would be forwarded to him. I never heard anything more about the matter. Murphy and others often said that Walsh might readily enough give me $25,000 in view of his great fortune, and the fact that I had been his friend in his hour of need, but I never made any effort to make a touch.

"George Harris, the man who owned the hotel that Walsh got into, is now running a five-acre chicken ranch at Clearwater on the Salt Lake road. It was only a short time ago that he was telling my wife that Walsh ought to feel under obligations to me, but that's neither here nor there.

"I knew Walsh's wife very well, too. Knew her before they were married. She was Carrie Reed, and I used to meet her at the dances. She came to Leadville in 1878. She had a brother in the fire department.

"Mike Walsh, a brother of Tom's, was a big Irishman who was certainly a greenhorn. Tom Walsh, later on, wanted me to get Mike on the police force, as I knew all the Councilmen and all the politicians, and I did so. Mike was so green he didn't know how to arrest a man, but he felt mighty big when he got his uniform on. He died about six years ago in Denver. I went and saw Billy Clark, the City Clerk, and through him and the six Councilmen, I fixed the appointment. There was one thing about those six Councilmen that I'll never forget—every one of them was in the saloon business. Yes, sir, there was six of them, and every one of them was an Irishman, too. There was Kelly, Monroe, Murphy, McMillan, McCone and Moriarity. And to cinch matters, Paddy Kelly was Chief of Police.

"In those days Walsh was a Catholic and used to attend Father Robinson's church. There is one thing that must be said for Tom Walsh—he was a generous, big-hearted man. No man in Colorado ever treated his workmen better than Tom Walsh. I have had many men tell me that they would sooner work for Tom Walsh in his Ouray mines than for any other mine owner in Colorado."

GOBS OF JOY.

MINSTREL MEN READY FOR FUN.

LEADING STOCK ACTORS APPEAR IN SAME PLAYLET.

Riot of Laughter Will Be Produced on Belasco Stage This Week and Players in Local Theaters Will Offer Some Clever Things in ClubHouse Benefit.

Everything is in readiness for the two presentations of the Players' Country Club minstrel show which will be given on the Belasco stage Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons of this week. Capacity audiences will probably greet the efforts of the minstrel men who have been taken from the ranks of the stock theaters of Los Angeles, and the advance sale of seats guarantees that the minstrel show will serve well its purpose of raising funds for furnishing the clubhouse in Ivanhoe.

One final scenic and dress rehearsal will be held tomorrow afternoon so as to allow every man who is to appear in the big show an opportunity to become letter perfect in his part. A strict rule has been made forbidding any but the participants in the show being present at the rehearsal. The rule was made necessary because of the requests from friends of the players who desired to see the show before it was actually placed on the boards.

LEADING MEN IN PLAYLET.

For the first time in the history of the local stage, two leading men of rival stock houses will appear in the same playlet. Managers Morosco and Blackwood have given their consent to allowing Lewis Stone and A. Byron Beasley taking part in the minstrel show. These popular actors will be seen in a sketch entitled "The Coming Man," written by Charles Giblyn especially for the minstrel show. Richard Vivian and Harry S. Duffield will assist Messrs. Stone and Beasley in the playlet.

The minstrel show will be in three principal parts. The first part will be full of popular and topical songs. Harry Girard, author of "The Alaskan," is the general musical director and has planned a programme of worth. The opening chorus, a medley of popular songs, should be one of the biggest hits of tne show.

There will be six end men, just as in old-fashioned minstrelsy. Messrs. Stone and Beasley will be the principal end men, Henry Stockbridge and Charles Ruggles will be the second end men, and Charles Giblyn and Frank Camp will be gagsters. David Hartford will be the interlocutor.

Harry Girard, Charles Farwell Edson, Edgar Temple, John Douglass Walker and others will render vocal selections. Mr. Beasley is on the programme for a comic song entitled "I Was a Hero, Too," and Mr. Stone will sing another entitled "You Never Can Tell From the Label."

In the olio the Players' Country Club Musical Five, composed of Victor Shertzsinger, Frank Camp, Harry Andrews, Frank Horne and Cnarles Ruggies will entertain with musical instrument and comedy act. The Plantation Sextette will do songs and dances, and James Swinnerton and George Herriman will conclude with some fast cartoon work.

The "grand afterpiece" is entitled "Bargain Day." It was written by Charles Alphin of the Olympic Theater and Charles Giblyn. The scenes are laid in a local department store. All characters will be assumed by men, although there are half a dozen feminine roles to be portrayed.

The players concerned assert solemnly that tne Players' Country Club minstrel show will be equal to anything offered by Primrose and West or Lew Dockstader.

The affair will be opened in proper style. Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons at 1 o'clock the minstrel men will parade the downtown streets, dressed in long frock coats and plug hats. Chiaffarelli's Venice band will furnish the music.

Beautiful Hair Comes With Dry Shampooing

(From Women's National Journal)

Dry shampooing always has been and always will be popular with the woman who takes pride in long, abundant and glossy hair. The dry shampoo does away with so much of the inconvenience and bother accompanying washing the hair—eliminates the long drying hours and abolishes the danger of catching cold—indeed, is so all-around satisfactory, that one wonders why soap and water, eggs, etc., can find any followers whatever.

Dry shampoos certainly stimulate the growth of hair. There can be no doubt as to that. Just mix four ounces of powdered orris root with four ounces of therox, sprinkle a tablespoonful of this mixture upon the head, brush the powder well through the hair; do this two or three times a week for a while and see the results for yourself. This will keep your hair light and fluffy, and beautifully lustrous. It corrects the conditions of the scalp that cause hair to become streaked, dull, colorless, coarse and brittle.

THE MARKETS.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

The week ended in a rather desultory fashion. There was a great amount of produce left in the hands of the commission and wholesale dealers when the noon hour came around, with little chance for moving any portion of it. Prices were down in a number of instances and some cuts were very deep in order to allow some of the dealers to get out without entire loss on their goods.

There has been considerable disagreement during the week owing to the prices quoted on butter. Retail dealers are complaining that the prices quoted are too low, that they cannot obtain butter at the figures which are made by the butter board. The men on this board, on the other hand, claim that the prices they are making at present are those of jobber to jobber, whereas they were formerly, and probably will be in a few days again, prices from jobber to retailer. This is an easy way of manipulating the market and befuddling the public generally as to the real status of the situation. Butter yesterday was quoted at 27 cents a pound. This quotation has existed throughout the week. The retail grocers claim that they cannot buy for less than 28 and 29 cents, and some have even stated that they must pay as high as 30 cents a pound. Receipts of the past week have been larger than usual, but are not out of the ordinary at this season of the year. They totaled 33,328 pounds yesterday.

Egg receipts were only 386 cases; but with the market accumulating a surplus and with the necessity of disposing of some of the eastern arrivals as fresh stock, the market declined 1 cent, making case count 25 cents, candled 27 and extra selects 29 cents, at which quotation there are very few eggs selling. The market is very slow in absorbing the eastern stock. The price is so high that dealers are afraid to buy, for the simple reason that they would have to get as high as 30 cents on storage eggs during the winter season and this has happened so seldom that it is not a good gamble.

Cheese receipts were 2982 pounds. The market was fairly good, with heavy offering of several of the eastern varieties and of Swiss imported, limburger and Edam. Buying was not heavy.

New potatoes were down to $1.25 per lug box, or approximately 4 cents a pound. They are moving fast at the high prices, going to the better hotels and restaurants of the city. The old potato market continues very weak. Receipts were 3232 sacks, which, with an already overstocked market, can only add to the general demoralization which exists in this commodity.

Bermuda onions dropped as low as $2.25, with an upward range to $2.35 per hundred. The call for the Bermudas is very fair. Other onions are running low in supply, and another two weeks will see the market bare of all stock with the exception of the Silverskins.

Northern rhubarb was down to $1 per box. Local sold for 75 cents. There were no changes in asparagus, which averaged $1 per crate, or about 3 cents a pound. Northern cabbage is selling well and receipts are registered daily. Prices are firm at 2¼ cents a pound on the beet. Cauliflower is selling up to $1.50 per crate, and celery is worth $3 at the lowest on average grades.

LOS ANGELES STOCK EXCHANGE.

Good Week's Business Is Rounded Out and Mexican Petroleum Does a Little Soaring.

The Stock Exchange rounded out a pretty good week's business yesterday morning. Although there had been something of a slump in some of the sensational performers, the value of the stocks that changed hands during the week measured up to the standard. Throughout the six days the trading in the big issues was exceptionally heavy.

Yesterday Mexican Petroleum Limited common did a little soaring, 170 shares going at 29.62½ and 80 shares at 29.75. California Midway made a recovery to 70 cents, and Oleum made a slight advance, closing at 11¾. Union remained firm at 105.00. Twenty shares of Edison Electric common sold at 65.00 and 100 shares at 64.50.

GOLDFIELD CONS. SUFFER.

Refinery Burns, Causing a Big Loss and Stock Is Leader in the Market.

[Special Service to The Times by B. F. Taylor No. 112 West Third street.]

SAN FRANCISCO, April 9.—Goldfield Consolidated was the market leader. The company suffered a severe loss last night in the burning of the refinery, causing a loss of from $250,000 to $300,000. The refinery was a total loss and reports say that one corner of the Consolidated mill proper was damaged and that it will be from sixty to ninety days before the complete plant will again be in operation. Three months ago the oil tanks of the Consolidated were destroyed by fire, causing a loss of about $60,000, but this did not interefere with the operation of the mill, as the tanks were located half a mile away.

The principal loss will be that of time, as without the mill for three months, there will be a loss in net earnings approximately of $2,250,000. There is nothing to prevent the company from shipping from the Hampton stope and Claremont shaft if it is so disposed, but it is too early at this time for the management to have decided what will be done. The treasury of the company is in splendid shape and after the payment of the dividend due the last of this month, there will still be $1,000,000 on hand.

Consolidated opened this morning 7.25 bid, sold down to 7.00 and closed 7.25@7.30. The demoralized condition of the Consolidated market was reflected in the balance of the Goldfields, Florence losing 5, Jumbo Exchange, 1; Fraction, 5; Booth, 2; Atlanta, 1; Kewanas, 1.

The Tonopahs were inclined to show weakness, Belmont losing 10; Tonopah Exchange, 1; Midway, 4 in the asked price.

There were no changes in the Bullfrogs. Round Mountain sold freely at 44; closed 43@45.

On the report of substantial discovery of ore in the lower workings of the Nevada Hills property, the stock closed 60@61. Fairview Eagle was also strong.

Rawhide Queen lost 3 points. Coalition, 1. The boom in the Rawhide which was worked up by telegraph from New York appears to be about over.

There were no important changes in the Comstocks, and the close was within a point or two from where they opened and there were no substantial changes from last night. Dividend No. 4 of 2½ cents a share will be paid May 2 to the stockholders of record of the MacNamara Company on April 19.

Speculative Sentiment Is Unsettled in Stock Market—Engagements of Gold for Wednesday's Shipment to London Cause no Halt in Rise of Foreign Exchange Rates.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, April 9.—The stock market today remained under the influence of much the same factors as on preceding days and reflected the unsettlement of speculative sentiment growing out of this situation. The wheat market was attentively considered for an appraisement of the conditions of the government crop report by actual dealers in wheat, but with the reserve due to the belief that in the existence of fictitious speculative conditions in the wheat market. The arrival in New York yesterday of a ship with a cargo of 10,900 bales of cotton from Liverpool was regarded as significant of the artificial conditions in the commodity markets. These consignments are designed for delivery against May contracts in New York and to break the threatened corner. The engagement for gold for next Wednesday's fast steamer began today and large additions to the engagements before sailing day were considered certain. The London discount market was firm and foreign exchange rates here rose again in spite of the gold engagements. The bank statement, while not as weak as it was feared it might be, showed nothing to indicate that the policy of the banks in the loan market would be changed. With next week's gold outgo already inaugurated, a further scaling down of loans by the banks seems likely. Bonds were irregular. Total sales, par value, $1,438,000. U. S. 2's have advanced 1-4 per cent. and the 4's reg. have declined 1-4 per cent. in the bid prices on call during the week.

MIDWAY UNIO

In the pre-listing offering of Midway Union we are aim give the general public an opportunity to assist in the bu and share in the maximum profits of an oil company.

This is not an unselfish plan on our part, as we our are moderately large stockholders, paying 12½ cents share for our stock, that being the price of original of Midway Union has been formed without a dollar of motion stock. We guarantee the correctness of this ment.

The big capital of five million dollars was made nece in order to sell a large number of shares at a low price, the same time secure enough cash to place the company sound operating basis. When this first offering of three lion shares has been subscribed and paid for, there will main in the treasury two million shares more, in which stockholder from the largest to the smallest has his pro interest.

The expenditure of the proceeds from the sale of the three million shares we expect will make the remain million shares worth a great deal of money.

Therefore, the big five million dollar capital is a instead of a detriment.

We make this explanation at this time to correct wrong impression the public may have. And to make to investors who have wished to purchase the shares have been prevented from doing so by misunderstandi big capitalization.

Another thing we wish the 1000 or more stockholde Midway Union to be able at all times to have a full for their shares whenever they may desire to part with holdings. With this in view, Midway Union is being tised all over the United States and also in Canada. cation will be made to list the shares not only on the Angeles Stock Exchange, but also on the San Francisco and Exchange Board and on the New York Curb.

We can quote many instances in the Los Angeles where for months together perfectly good securities are at ridiculous low prices and we have many times take vantage of this condition and made investments nett high as 20 per cent., and this without running a partic risk. The sole reason for such low prices being that the ing public had not been aware of these conditions.

For purposes of illustration we name below a few good securities listed on the Los Angeles Stock Exch which are even now selling below their intrinsic value because the buying public have not been posted and vinced.

New York Cotton Market.

[Special Service to The Times by E. F. Hutton & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange, 112 West Third street.]

NEW YORK, April 9.—Today's market was comparatively a narrow affair. Big bulls gave no support and selling of July and August was on a more liberal scale. Every time that May sold off a point or two, shorts were buyers. A prominent Liverpool newspaper is said to have published the statement that all the English mills are sold up for six months and that full time is to be resumed. Whether this is true or not, the mills of Great Britain took 54,048 bales this week compared with 30,421 same week last year, which would seem to indicate that European trade outlook is much improved.

The takings of Germany amounted to 78,777 against 54,367 a year ago. We believe that profits will be again taken on hard spots and further purchases confined to good breaks.

Logan & Bryan's letter says:

"The stereoptype statement that the steamship Canadian was bringing back 10,000 bales of cotton from Liverpool has been daily, in fact, almost hourly, used as bearish argument. Communication with the boat by wireless was made throughout its trip and at last the boat is here. Her cargo is a bagatelle compared with the volume of cotton that is necessary to bring to New York from some place, it matters not where, to liquidate the outstanding obligation to deliver on May and July options. There is more talk of spinners curtailing than actual curtailment. The spinner is simply in a waiting attitude, hoping the present level of prices are a bubble and hoping that some one will stick a pin in the bubble and burst it. The future of the summer months depends upon men, the future of the October, December and January options depends upon weather and has the added advantage of being the cheapest. It will require perfect weather to push them lower in the new crop and any imperfections of the plans in the nearer months would hurt their prices. Buy new crop on breaks."

[Furnished by Logan & Bryan, Members New York and Boston Stock Exchanges, Bradbury building.]

BOSTON, April 9.—The market opened with heavy liquidation all through the list. All stocks were under pressure and showed declines of from 1 to 3 points. The buying power, however, was very much better than yesterday, insiders apparently being willing to take care of their particular stocks around this level. The majority of traders are still bearish and with the political outlook as it is, and the metal steadily accumulating, we do not look for any consistent upward movement for some time. Following were closing quotations on the Boston Stock Exchange:

Kingstone Assays 100%

Kingstone Assays 100% Against Fire, 100% Against Water and 1000 Years Against Time

We are not trying to "Shoot at the Moon" in making the statement that the Discovery of KINGSTONE marks an Epoch in the Age of Modern Building Material.

By every known scientific and practical test, KINGSTONE demonstrates a Perfect Structural Stone, as imperishable as the old Roman cement, whose enduring properties it more than emphasizes.

Can you conceive of a building stone that is Absolutely Fireproof, Waterproof, Rustproof and Timeproof?

Have you ever heard of a raw material that is reconstructed and moulded into any shape and design, given any color and polish, and made to reproduce any of the natural building stones—without the process of firing or pressure? That hardens to a tremendous crushing strength, and is proof against all the elements.

Such a material is KINGSTONE—without a rival in price, beauty and durability.

The KINGSTONE QUARRY CO. Owns the Only Mine of its Kind Known to Geology, showing
1,000,000 TONS IN SIGHT ON THE SURFACE.
The raw product now brings $20.00 Per Ton, which means
A SURFACE PRODUCT ALONE WORTH $20,000,000.

The KINGSTONE QUARRY CO. is capitalized at only 1,000,000 shares, par value $1.00. There will be issued only 600,000 shares for developing purposes, such as building a railroad spur 2½ miles from the Santa Fe station to the mine, etc.

The KINGSTONE QUARRY CO. does not manufacture—it risks no money to establish plants, etc. It simply sells and ships the raw product to the manufacturers, giving them the sole right to manufacture and sell the finished product in their territory, under contract.

The Los Angeles factory alone uses enough KINGSTONE at present to pay interest on the entire issue of stock, with a continually increasing demand. What will ten, twenty, thirty or more such factories mean to the stockholders of KINGSTONE?

There is No Prospecting. The Product is There—in San Bernardino County—a Tangible Reality—to be seen by all. It does not have to be Looked For with Expensive Machinery and Large Outlays for Labor, with the heartbreaking suspense and disappointments that Prospecting brings.

The second allotment of stock is now selling at 60 CENTS PER SHARE.

Let us show you every phase of this investment without any obligation on your part. We will cheerfully facilitate any investigation you wish to pursue.

Extracts from the following article, which appeared in the Redlands Daily Review, hits the nail squarely on the head. The newspaper man has summed up the situation regarding apple raising completely. We believe that it will be of interest to readers of the Times.

"Bumper crop in the famous apple section adjoining Redlands. Did you realize that Redlands is approaching as an apple growing center its importance as an orange production section?

"Well, it is.

"Do you know that fruit grown in the apple orchards of Yucaipa, and Oak Glen, comprising the Redlands apple growing territory, equal in quantity that shipped out of the great Hood River district of Oregon this year?

"Well, it did.

"Did you ever, in your wildest flights of agricultural imagination suppose that two acres of Oak Glen apples would grow fifty tons of fine fruit?

"Well, they did.

"Did you suppose that apple orchards are this year pressing the valuable orange groves as to value, based on returns to the growers?

"Well, they are."

LATE OIL NEWS.

BIG INTERESTS GET TOGETHER.

J. M. M'LEOD ORGANIZES THE BARNODON OIL COMPANY.

Doheny, Canfield and Others of Los Angeles Join Hands With Big San Francisco Operators and Will Develop Large Territory in the Midway Field—Other News.

J. M. McLeod returned from San Francisco yesterday morning after having organized the Barnodon Oil Company. The company has a capital stock of 1,000,000 shares, par value one dollar, and is incorported under the laws of Nevada. It has taken over seven and one quarter sections of oil land in the heart of the Midway district, and already has one well down 800 feet on Section 24. It is the purpose of the company to drill twenty-nine wells as rapidly as possible.

The company will be operated as a close corporation, all the stock being held by the incorporators. The directors are: Capt. John Barneson, E. J. De Sabla Jr., T. C. Talbot and Mark Requa of San Francisco; C. A. Canfield, E. L. Doheny, T. A. O'Donnell and J. M. McLeod of Los Angeles. The headquarters of the Barnodon Company will be in San Francisco. Big interests are brought together in the formation of the company.

Mr. McLeod also has organized, and the same gentlemen are interested in, the East Midway Water Company which now has fifteen miles of pipe laid and will deliver water to the operators in the field. This water can be supplied at a cost of about seven cents a barrel, and is one of the pressing needs of the district. The water will be piped from Buena Vista Lake.

Return from the Field.

Messrs. A. G. Stearns, G. A. Whiteford and several of the stockholders of the Midway Basin Oil Company, whose holding is in the center of section 28 of the Midway district, returned Saturday morning from a visit of inspection to the property.

They report that drilling operations are in progress on all sides of the Midway Basin holding, and they were much pleased with the general outlook. The Midway Basin company will begin drilling within less than thirty days. The derrick is up, boilers are being installed, and the drilling machinery will arrive in a few days. A bunk-house and cook-house already have been completed.

LARGE TRACT TRANSFERRED.

Over Two Hundred Acres at Howard Summit Bought for Large Consideration.

Strong & Dickinson, heading a syndicate, have bought from C. W. Whittington 234 acres at Howard Summit. This land is adjacent to Howard townsite and Athens-on-the-Hill. The consideration is reported as approximating $130,000.

The tract has been subdivided into acre lots, and the streets have been graded and piped for water. The area will be placed on the market at once. The tract commands a splendid view of the district around.

ASSOCIATION ORGANIZED.

The Central Avenue Improvement Association was organized last Thursday evening at No. 4509 Central avenue for the purpose of boosting and improving the southeastern section of the city. Constitution and bylaws were adopted and the following officers elected: Capt. Moore, president; Isaac Smith, vice-president; C. C. Cornell, secretary, and J. V. Akey, treasurer. The various committees were appointed and work immediately started to boost a cross-town street car line, the disposal of storm water on Central avenue, larger water mains, more fire hydrants, more fire alarm boxes, more street lights, more parks and the opening of McKinley avenue between Fortieth and Forty-seventh streets. The regular meetings will be held on the first and third Thursdays of each month at the same place.

THE BURCK TRACTS.

The Lawrence B. Burck Company reports the following sales: Four lots in Burck's Golden Tract to Frank Stafford of Tarkio, two of which are 50x102 feet each, at $1800, and two 50x101 feet at $1700. Lot in Burck's Golden Tract, 40x128 feet, to Frederick O. Reed, consideration $900. Four lots in Burck's Normandie Avenue Tract, each 40x122 feet, to L. P. Schaefer, at $750 each.

PEPPER CHANGES HANDS.

Local Capitalist Buys Attractive Westlake Hostelry—To Build New Apartments.

Henry S. Patten has transferred to William W. Paden, through the Horace G. Hamilton Company and Charles D. Kimball, the Hotel Pepper at the southwest corner of Seventh and Burlington. The site has a frontage of 150 feet on the former thoroughfare and of 140 feet on the latter, while the building itself is 75x110 feet in ground area. The transfer is reported to have involved a consideration of $100,000, part of which was in cash and part in real estate.

Mr. Paden's plans call for a large outlay in improvements to the building and the erection immediately of an apartment-house of at least 100 rooms on the seventy-five feet adjoining the Pepper on the west.

The Pepper is one of the beautiful structures of the Westlake district and architecturally a credit to that section. It contains seventy-six rooms above the first floor, which is given over to stores. Its height is six stories. The interior is elaborately finished. Furniture valued at approximately $36,000 was included in the sale.

OUTSIDE BUILDING PERMITS.

Permits for new building in Southern California cities and towns outside of Los Angeles for a week are as follows:

At Pasadena, twelve permits, aggregate value, $39,961.

At South Pasadena, two permits, aggregate value, $7500.

At Long Beach, nine permits, aggregate value, $37,900.

At Glendale, four permits, aggregate value, $6400.

At Santa Ana, three permits, aggregate value, $11,100.

At Santa Monica, two permits, aggregate value, $4500.

At Redlands, three permits, aggregate value, $20,900.

At San Diego, fifteen permits, aggregate value, $22,100.

BIG HOTEL STARTED.

The excavation of the site for the seven-story reinforced concrete hotel building which F. C. Finkle will erect at the southwest corner of Sixth and Flower streets was begun last week. This important project was reported exclusively in last Sunday's Times. Through E. W. Cason & Co., hotel brokers, Seward R. Snow, present manager of the Pomona Tavern at Pomona, has closed a five years' lease on the big hostelry. The total rental will be $85,000. Mr. Snow is an old hotel man, having formerly been engaged in that business in Mankato, Minn. The "Hotel Finkle" will be absolutely fireproof and one of the most attractive in the city.

TWO WESTLAKE TRANSFERS.

Two important sales of residence property in the Westlake district are reported by the C. J. Heyler Company. One of these is the transfer of property at the southeast corner of Twelfth and Lake streets, 145 feet on the former and 180 on the latter, for $16,000. The purchaser, J. B. Cohn, will erect two handsome homes for himself and his family, to cost about $10,000 each. The other sale involved 65 feet on Lake street, just north of Twelfth, which was purchased for $5500 by Frances C. Maxon, who will build a $9000 residence on the lot. Both of these properties are in the district known as Palm Place.

RESIDENCE SALES.

E. Rabin and Company report the following sales: Lot 50x170 feet, improved with a nine-room house near West Sixteenth street on Wilton Place, to A. Mason, $7500; A. F. Smith to R. Wladyka, lot 36x135 feet, West Forty-first Drive, $1100; G. A. Vander Maulen from A. W. Georgeson, lot of the Sisters of Charity Tract, 60x50 feet, improved with stores and flats, $12,500; A. C. Barnard, lot 40x135 feet in the Arlington Fourth Avenue Tract, improved with a bungalow, $3300.

WILMINGTON SALE.

J. W. Weightman & Co. report the sale for J. B. Myers to R. W. Jamson of a lot 25x150 to a twenty-foot alley 1 Main street, Wilmington, near Ninth street, for a consideration of $1150.

FLORENCITA PARK.

D. A. Van Vranken & Co. report the sale from John B. Johnson to Susie M. Goldsberry of a lot in Florencita Park, just south of the city, on the Long Beach car line. The site is improved with a seven-room new cottage. The consideration was $3300.

Eagle Rock is being invaded by ditch-diggers who are laying fifteen miles of gas mains. The Eagle Rock Improvement League also has two propositions before it for the installation of electric light. The contract for the grading of the boulevard from Pasadena, through Eagle Rock to Glendale has been let.

APRIL AFTER RECORD.

With Half-Million in Permits Issued and Million and Half Filed, Month Forges Ahead.

The first six business days of April boast a record of building activity which promises to put the present month far in the lead over any other single month in the history of the city and to establish a new valuation total which will not only push Philadelphia for her ordinary rank of third in national building figures, but which will be hard for even Los Angeles to beat in the future. Up to the close of business on Friday, the chief inspector of buildings had issued 282 permits representing buildings to cost an aggregate of $446,073. Yesterday morning's business brought this total close to $500,000.

The average daily number of permits issued to date for the month has been forty-seven, while the average daily valuation has been $74,345. These figures do not include a single unusually large item. This average daily business, if continued throughout the month, would give a valuation total of nearly $2,000,000, representing ordinary routine business, and the total of permits would be in excess of 1200.

To the total for every-day business which is sure to be in excess of $1,500,000, will be added permits for the Alexandria Annex and the Los Angeles Trust and Savings Bank building, aggregating $1,425,000. A grand total of $3,000,000 would seem to be a conservative guess, and such a figure would crowd the monthly building record of any city in the country outside of New York.

The home builder, as usual, played a big part in the permit figures, permits for residences numbering 134 and valued at $274,871 having been issued from April 1 to April 8, inclusive.

Following is the city department's classified report:

	Permits.	Valuation.
Class A, reinforced concrete	1	$ 22,000
Class C	10	94,000
Class D, 1-story frame	102	164,960
Class D, 1½-story frame	15	40,826
Class D, 2-story frame	17	69,085
Sheds, barns (frame)	52	8,394
Brick alterations	14	13,462
Frame alterations	69	32,401
Demolitions	2	545
Total	282	$446,073

Comparisons with last year: From April 1 to April 8, inclusive, 224 permits; $383,829 valuation.

FIVE HOMES STARTED.

Five more houses were started last week in the Southwest Land Company's Vermont Square. The builders follow: Fred S. Wise, north side of Forty-eighth street, between Halldale and Denker; Mrs. Emma Mygrant, north side of Forty-eighth, between Harvard and Western; George W. Wright, south side of Forty-sixth, between Denker and Harvard; Morris M. Nelson, north side of Forty-seventh, between Halldale and Denker; T. J. Lacy, north side of Fifty-ninth street, between Halldale and Denker.

VALUABLE EXCHANGE.

The Trowbridge-Hollman Investment Company report the exchange of a forty-acre alfalfa and dairy ranch at Fullerton, owned by E. McGlothlen, for a two-story brick business block on Third street, Santa Monica, owned by H. E. Huston. The former property was held at $20,000; the latter, at $18,500. The difference was adjusted by mortgage.

THE ARCHITECTS.

Plans for a two-story and basement ice and cold storage plant, 97x90 feet, have been prepared by Architects Eisen & Son. The structure will be erected for the Merchants' Ice Company at Seaton and Palmetto streets. The building will be constructed strong enough to carry two additional stories. Other new building projects reported by the Southwest Contractor and Manufacturer include the following:

The rear of the lot on which the old Panorama stands is being cleared in preparation for a new theater auditorium. The lot is owned by Adolph Ramish, who states that plans for a reinforced concrete theater auditorium have been prepared in the offices of Edelman & Barnett.

A magnificent residence is to be erected at South Pasadena by C. W. Gates, who has had Architects Eisen & Son prepare plans for a three-story sixteen-room house to be finished in oak, mahogany and white enamel. The residence will stand on a slope and will have a frontage of seventy-eight feet, with depth of fifty feet. The same architects are preparing plans for a seven-room bungalow at South Pasadena for Mr. Anders, and an eleven-room residence at Whittier for J. J. Mills.

Bids are to be in at the office of Architects Young & Son next Wednesday for the Orpheum Theater and office building on South Broadway, and the construction work is to start as soon as contracts can be let.

Elaborate interior fixtures are planned by Edelman & Barnett for the Nordlinger store in the Co-Tenant building, now under construction.

Frederick J. Soper has prepared plans for a two-story seven-room residence on Oxford boulevard, north of Wilshire, for Bernal Dyas. The exterior is treated in brick, plaster and shakes.

J. S. Smith has completed plans for a two-story brick store and flat building on Western avenue, between Second and Third streets, for A. A. Curtis. It will be 50x65 feet.

E. E. Meinardus has drawn plans for a two-story sixteen-room frame hotel at Maricoff Station for H. F. Babcoele.

R. D. Farqurah has prepared designs for a fifteen-room residence for Dwight C. Lefferts at Redlands. It will be 125x37 feet, and of frame construction. The estimated cost is $20,000.

STRIDE OF PROGRESS.

SANTA BARBARA IS BUILDING NEW CITY.

Epoch of Public Improvement Instituted by Chamber of Commerce and Wealthy Residents Promise Remarkable Development.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SANTA BARBARA, April 9.—When the padres chose Santa Barbara as the site of the finest mission on the Coast and builded here one of the most beautiful buildings that has ever been erected in an undeveloped country, they showed a discrimination and a taste in which present and future generations will thoroughly coincide. Santa Barbara, with a few touches from the hand of man, is the City Beautiful. Within the next few years many of those finishing touches will be made.

Santa Barbara has been brought before the public eye recently as a city of enterprise by the action of the Chamber of Commerce in calling a convention of California cities to unite upon a location for the great Panama Exposition. This project has been carried through so successfully that another convention of Pacific Coast States will be held to enlarge the scope.

What the public-spirited residents of Santa Barbara are doing at home is equally worthy of attention. The city has a water project larger than has ever been undertaken by a community of the same size. The county is building a system of good roads that will make it the Mecca of motorists. Work on the new $300,000 Arlington Hotel, which is to be one of the finest tourist hotels on the Coast, has begun. The site for a Federal building has been donated and an appropriation of $110,000 for its erection secured. The famous Hope ranch of 2000 acres is being improved and subdivided on a scale that makes it one of the most magnificent real estate projects ever carried out.

The growth of Santa Barbara so far has been largely the chance cumulation of wealthy winter residents and the sporadic development of the tourist business. Now organization and system have taken hold and the indications of a more rapid and homogenous progress are apparent on every hand.

GOOD ROADS.

Good roads are perhaps the greatest of Santa Barbara's projects. They mean cohesion with the great development of the Pacific Coast, in place of isolation. Two big men have risen to the occasion in this matter. They are President E. P. Ripley of the Santa Fé and Samuel P. Calef. They have undertaken the project of building a Coast Highway at sea level from Montecito to the Ventura County line, where Ventura will take up the pick and shovel and complete the system to connect with the Los Angeles boulevard now being tunneled through the Newhall Pass.

The Santa Barbara road is to be built by private capital and operated as a toll road until the time comes when the county is able to purchase it and turn it into a public highway. In this way an important public work is hastened by several years and the tolls will be calculated to pay some interest upon the capital invested until the road becomes public property.

This route southward from the city has already been started by the construction of six miles of oiled macadam to Montecito. The thoroughfare to this beautiful suburb and the Santa Barbara Country Club grounds has added greatly to the attractions for motorists. To the west of the city $100,000 bonds have been voted for the paving of the Goleta road which connects with the beautiful system of drives on the Hope Ranch and completes the circle of the Cliff Drive. The Chamber of Commerce has already built and now maintains an approach to the Cliff Drive from the east. Bonds have been voted also for a main artery through the city to connect the Goleta and Montecito roads.

PARK SITE PURCHASED.

The city is reaching out beyond its present limits to take advantage of this great boulevard. The salt-water lake at Booth's Point has been purchased by the city and will be improved as a park. A system of asphalt roads there will extend the Montecito Drive.

BIG WATER PROJECT.

Anticipating a great influx of population when the county is thoroughly opened up it became incumbent upon the city to secure an increase in its water supply. Behind the high range of mountains towering above the old mission is the Santa Ynez River, with 207 square miles of watershed above it, where the annual rainfall is twenty-five inches. At the head of Mission Cañon a tunnel, 19,560 feet in length, is being driven and is now over half completed. It will be finished in about fifteen months. This was a public work of great expense for a city of 15,000 inhabitants but before the tunnel was half bored a sufficient amount of water had been developed in it to pay well for the work. The net revenue from this water last year paid the interest on the bonds and the sinking fund.

The aqueduct is expected to develop a permanent water supply of 1000 inches. It has a capacity of 5000 inches, and as the south portal is 1185 feet above sea level, there is a valuable power project. L. M. Hyde, chief engineer, estimates the available energy as 500 horse power.

HOPE RANCH.

The Hope ranch project stands as one of the most important and elaborate among the big schemes for developing the Pacific Coast. Behind it is the Pacific Improvement Company, the corporation which built the Southern Pacific Railroad. G. O. France represents the company in Santa Barbara. This ranch of 2000 acres is being laid out in a natural park with drives, lighting system, water system, and all improvements calculated to make it the ideal place for building luxurious homes. It will be sold in lots of from one to twenty acres. The ranch originally cost $300,000, and this sum will be more than doubled in the improvements to be made. A water system costing $125,000 has been put in and a permanent supply has been secured for all future needs. The good roads on the ranch alone will cost $70,000, and are laid out in winding detours adding to the picturesqueness of a natural park covered with live oaks. The Country Club, golf links and polo grounds, now in use by guests of the Potter Hotel, have cost $25,000.

The question of transportation alone remains to be solved and to meet this a novel system is planned. At present an automobile bus runs between the Potter and the Country Club. This will be replaced by a "Trackless Trolley," the first of its kind in America. The car resembles a large automobile, but the power is furnished from a trolley line beside the road. The electric power is already provided and the securing of the cars will take but a short time. The trolley wire instead of being strung overhead is carried along the roadside and the trolley consists of two wires which convey the power to the motors of the car.

NEW BUILDINGS.

Three new buildings will soon add greatly to the pride of Santa Barbara in its architecture. The rebuilding of the Arlington Hotel will, with the accommodations of the present Potter, give the city accommodations for an immense transient population. The new Arlington will rival in beauty of architecture, the Glenwood Inn of Riverside, which has become famous around the world.

The Federal building is to be near the Arlington, at State and Anapamu streets. This is another instance of what public enterprise and generosity has done for the city. The Chamber of Commerce secured the appropriation and the Catholic Corporation of the diocese of Monterey and Los Angeles, of which Bishop Conaty is the head, has given a site of nearly a quarter of a block of the most valuable land in the city.

The Chamber of Commerce also was instrumental in securing the State Sloyd Normal School, sending a delegation to the State Legislature and securing a free site on Arlington Heights. The building will be in close proximity to the Mission and the street car line will be extended to reach it.

The Edison Electric Company is promising to do its share in the development of the city. It has offered to spend $200,000 in rehabilitating its line if a fifty-year franchise is secured from the City Council. It has in contemplation a line to Montecito and will extend branches in other directions. It also offers to spend $300,000 in improving the gas and electric systems, provided a satisfactory understanding can be had as to the rates to be charged.

The Southern Pacific road, which recently contributed to the public improvements a handsome station in mission style will add to its facilities here by a new freight station, enlarged yards and a big reinforced concrete roundhouse.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE ACTIVE

The Chamber of Commerce in its activity illustrates the prevailing spirit of public enterprise in the city. It has a membership of 300, larger pro rata than that of the Chamber of Commerce of Los Angeles. It has built to the top of Mt. La Cumbre a bridle trail seven miles in length. It is promoting the bond issues for the various systems of good roads and taking a hand wherever there is a chance to promote the interests of the city and county through publicity. The officers at present are: Dr. C. S. Stoddard, president; Frank E. Kellogg, secretary; George W. Montgomery, vice-president; Alfred Edwards, treasurer; F. E. Kellogg, E. B. Hoover, J. D. Lowsley, George W. McCumber, Fred H. Schauer, W. W. Osborne, E. L. Peary, Dr. C. S. Stoddard, W. C. Day, C. S. Tomlinson, Lee M. Hyde, J. S. Lincoln, O. D. Payne, J. N. Pyster, directors.

So far Santa Barbara has held undisputed title of the smallest city with the biggest reputation in the country. At the present time it has started out to build up to its reputation. Given superlative natural resources and an unexcelled reputation, the filling in of detail is but a simple incident toward a career of assured success.

MORGAN STARTS A DISCUSSION

Architects, Like Doctors, Can Not Always Agree.

Article in "Times" of a Week Ago Opens Big Subject.

Debate Centers on Question of High Buildings.

An article by Octavius Morgan of the architectural firm of Morgan & Walls, in this section of the last Sunday's Times, has created a great deal of comment among the architects of the city. Mr. Morgan's expressions on the subject of permitting skyscrapers in the business center of Los Angeles are quite generally approved by the leading architects in so far as they deal with the undesirability of permitting Los Angeles to emulate New York City and Chicago in the construction of towering buildings, although the concurrence is not quite unanimous. The expressed desire of the city's pioneer architect to limit the height of reinforced structures to eight stories does not at all please some of the other architects.

A. L. Hale, architect of the ten-story Higgins building, and Harrison Albright, who has designed reinforced concrete buildings costing an aggregate of $5,000,000, are both emphatic in their stand for reinforced concrete as the logical material for Southern California buildings of all classes. Both declare that this local product is being discriminated against when local buildings constructed of it are not allowed to go to the same height allowed in steel construction.

Mr. Haley cites notable examples of concrete building in other cities, naming the ten-story Granada Hotel in San Francisco, the twelve-story Gloyd Block in Kansas City and the sixteen-story Ingalls building in Cincinnati as reinforced concrete structures which are meeting every test. It was at the instance of Haley that the limit for reinforced concrete buildings in Los Angeles was raised from 120 feet to 133 feet a short time ago. The City Council took the step in order to enable Thomas Higgins to continue the building at Second and Main bearing his name, from eight to ten stories. Haley now states that he is going after the city fathers for an ordinance permit-

MANY NEW HOMES.

Local Architects Kept Busy Drawing Plans for Homes in Every Part of City.

Among the residences for which plans have recently been drawn in the offices of Los Angeles architects, the following are notable: John C. Austin is preparing plans for a three-story fourteen-room house to be built by W. E. Allen in Alhambra. Dennis & Farwell are drawing designs for a ten-room plaster dwelling for A. T. Patterson of Hollywood. Other new houses follow:

Julius Krause, nine-room house to be built for J. H. Quinton on Green street, between Eighth and Ninth, to cost $4500. Train & Williams, two-story house for Ralph Rogers in Occidental Park, and eight-room house for Mrs. F. B. Mason in Oxford Heights. Dennis & Farwell, two-story house for J. W. Guyou of Hollywood. Walker & Vawter, ten-room residence for J. C. Robertson at Fifth street and Harvard boulevard. A. C. Martin, eleven-room house for J. A. Burton, Ardmore, near Wilshire.

F. M. Tyler, ten-room house for H. M. Bigelow on St. Andrew's boulevard, near Fifth, and two-story residence for H. Dillon on Crenshaw boulevard near Pico street.

LOOKING SEAWARD.

COMMERCE IS GROWING FAST.

SHIPMENTS FROM SAN PEDRO DEMAND MORE BOTTOMS.

Two New Lines of Steamships Operating on Regular Schedule to and from Harbor Are Projected for This Year—Full Cargoes Secured on Trial Trips.

Development of commerce through the harbor of Los Angeles promises to come so rapidly during the present year that merchants, jobbers and the public organizations most interested will be hard pressed to keep pace with it. The prospective opening of a regular steamship line to Mexican ports by the Pacific Tropical Fruit Company, announced in The Times three weeks ago, is now followed by the prospects of a steamship line with regular schedule between Hawaiin ports and San Pedro.

The sailing schooner Bessie is now loading, at San Pedro, with a complete cargo of miscellaneous merchandise for the islands. The Chamber of Commerce Committee on Commerce and the Associated Jobbers are assured by the owners that if this condition of trade is mantained for a few more trips, a steamship service will be opened.

The Bessie came across with a cargo of iron on the general chance of finding something to take back. A little posting of Los Angeles shippers on the situation soon collected a cargo which will make the run highly profitable. With this line opening up as a direct channel for trade with Honolulu, Los Angeles merchants will try to develop a new volume of business in that direction.

The establishing of a regular service to Mexican ports is now practically assured. T. F. Ryan who promised to put on the line and furnish the north-bound business annually from San he will get $75,000 worth of south-bound business annutlly from San Pedro. As a starter it is proposed to run an excursion to Mexican points on the Pacific Coast in the interest of Los Angeles as the logical distributing point for the Southwest. This excursion will serve two purposes as the steamship fares of such a party will all be credited to the guaranty fund and with the freight business in sight would approximately assure the first year's business.

The Santa Fé road is credited with being active in trying to secure this line for San Diego, but Mr. Ryan is inclined to favor Los Angeles and transactions have gone so far that the line will probably be operating on regular schedule within a few months.

Another important commercial situation which possibly may be solved this week is that of rates to San Joaquin Valley points. The hearing before the State Railroad Commission on Wednesday will be watched with great care by the Associated Jobbers. Witnesses have been subpoenaed from many points in the valley and there will be expert testimony, as to equalizing of rates, from men familiar with the tariff schedules. Several sensations are to be developed in this testimony which will show how the business of the valley has been thrown to San Francisco in spite of the efforts of business men there to deal with Los Angeles, as to the point nearer to a large part of the district.

Witnesses are put on the stand who will testify that the railroads two years ago agreed to equalize the rates and have admitted that they were deterred from carrying out the promise only by the interference of the San Francisco jobbers.

BUY CHOICE ACREAGE.

The Edwards & Wildey Company has purchased from F. D. Hollingsworth, Mrs. Jessie L. Nuss, W. J. McCarroll and William H. Nuss the old Hollingsworth ranch in the western portion of Eagle Rock. The property consists of fifty acres of choice foothill land, facing on the Eagle Rock-Glendale electric line, and also on the boulevard. It adjoins the Occidental Heights tract on the west. The new owners will at once subdivide the property and install a high class of improvements. The aggregate consideration for the fifty acres acquired was $55,000, or $1100 per acre.

NEW STORES PLANNED.

John C. Austin is preparing plans for a one-story brick store building to be erected by David McCartney on the south side of Third street, between Hill and Broadway. It will occupy a site 50x125 feet and will contain three storerooms.

Fred R. Dorn is drawing plans for a one-story brick building which will be built by W. M. Garland at the corner of Seventh street and Ceres avenue. It will be 60x100 feet in size and will be divided into six stores.

FOURTH AND BIXEL.

Mrs. Mary E. Richards and Mabel E. Williams have sold to J. F. Preusch the southwest corner of Bixel and Fourth streets. The lot front 100 feet on Bixel and 162 feet on Fourth. The improvements consist of a two-story frame flat building. The consideration involved was $25,000. The agents concerned in this deal were B. W. Bartells and R. J. Widney.

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA.

EL DORADO TO BUILD PLANT.

El Oro Heads an Important Merger Project.

Rainbow Reports a Strike of Rich Ore.

Hornet Has Precipitation Copper Plant.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, April 9.—The El Dorado Placer Gold Dredging Company, a corporation composed of Los Angeles capitalists, has commenced the construction of a Risdon dredge on the Middle Fork of the American River, twenty-two miles from Auburn, and near the old mining town of Forest Hill.

The Dredge will be installed at a point that in former years would have been considered practically inaccessible for dredging purposes.

The machinery for the big boat is received by a tramway, built at an angle of 45 degrees from the railroad cars and taken to the cañon 3200 feet below. Here it is received by a huge crane which lifts the machinery to another tramway which conveys it to the site selected.

The topography of the region renders is imperative that the dredge be located at the point designated. At a point on the river where the boat will be stationed, the solid cliff has been blasted out with dynamite.

The El Dorado Placer Company owns five miles of lands up and down the river, and has demonstrated the richness of the gravel deposits by comprehensive prospecting. Practically all of the land is virgin territory, the gravel having been washed down from the auriferous hills higher up by the flood waters of the river in many winters.

It is stated that tests indicate that this ground is some of the richest in California, and the company anticipates excellent profits from its enterprise.

The dredge will be provided with a swinging stacker, which will deposit the tailings on both banks of the river, thus avoiding objections on the part of the opponents of dredging in the Sacramento River. All the débris will be carefully prevented from escaping to the stream, the company controlling ample land for the storage of the rock piles.

In order to prevent the overbalancing of the dredge because of high water in the river or other causes, counterbalances will be provided. This is expected to eliminate all danger from this source. The company has expended a large amount of money in acquiring and prospecting its holdings and has already built one dredge, which was destroyed by high water. W. H. Brule is in charge of operations.

Important Merger Projected.

El Oro Mining Company, operating the Marcotte mine, in the Washington district, Nevada county, has secured options on the Ethel, Baltic, Starr and other groups, embracing a total of fifteen claims, and plans to merge the whole under one management and operate the entire group from one main tunnel.

This tunnel is located on the lower end of the Marcotte group and is being driven to cut the Marcotte vein. It is in eighty feet and is expected to reach its objective within a short time. By continuing the tunnel the Starr, Ethel and Baltic vein systems will be intersected. Five parallel veins have been demonstrated, all carrying good milling values.

The veins are large, often running ten to twenty feet wide, and all of the properties have produced well at times. Lack of sufficient finances has been the principal disadvantage confronting the owners.

Both the Marcotte and Ethel are equipped with small mills. The new tunnel at the Marcotte gives 700 feet of backs, and the other properties will be opened at correspondingly greater depths. Several raises are being extended in order to thoroughly open up the ore body in the older workings.

Rich Strike in Rainbow.

The famous Rainbow mine at Alleghany, which ranks as the premier producer of Sierra county, after the Sierra Buttes, is again in the limelight with one of the richest strikes in its history. Full details are lacking, but from the meager reports received it is estimated that the vein, which has been improving for several weeks, has entered the bonanza zone.

Reports from the mine are to the effect that ore running nearly half gold is being taken out, and that within a short time a shipment of the ore will be sent to Nevada City.

The management confirms the announcement of the strike, but states that sufficient work has not progressed to accurately determine its extent and value.

The Rainbow lies in the heart of the Alleghany district, being on the same belt as the Sixteen-to-One, Tightner and other famous producers. It is controlled under a bond by Colorado capitalists. The mine has been a steady producer for years and is equipped with a ten-stamp mill. The main adit is in over 2500 feet. L. P. Woodbury is manager.

Headlight Active.

The Northern Headlight Quartz Mining Company, which is operating the Headlight mine near Trinity center, is arranging for operations along largely augmented lines. The lower adit is being pushed ahead rapidly and is expected to develop large reserves of milling ore.

More men have been recently put to work and developments at several points are progressing along broad lines. The work of erecting the new forty-stamp mill will soon be in full blast.

The operations of the company are being closely watched by mining men throughout the country as it marks the first serious attempt to treat the low-grade ores of Trinity county on a large scale.

The Headlight mine is practically a mountain of ore, but the low-grade character of the ore and its distance from transportation has mitigated against its activity. Los Angeles capital is chiefly interested.

Precipitating Copper at Hornet.

The Mountain Copper Company has installed a copper precipitating device at the Hornet mine in order to recover copper sulphate in solution that is carried by the mine waters. The device comprises tin-plated sheet scraps which catches and precipitates the copper as the water flows over it.

A similar arrangement has been employed at the Iron Mountain mines of the company for several years, and a large revenue is yearly derived from this source. The yield of the mine waters is one of the chief assets of the company with copper at its present low level, as its production by this means is attended without cost, save for the occasional renewing of the tin-plated device.

The company has put more men to work at the Hornet and is opening new territory. Over 2,000,000 tons of ore are already in sight and the mine will be a heavy producer as soon as operations have been resumed at the Keswick smelter.

The low-grade character of the ore prevents its shipment to Martinez. Steady consignments of ore are being sent to this plant from the Iron Mountain mines of the company. The ore of this property carries high-grade copper ore, in addition to an excellent gold and silver percentage. It is reported that activities will be resumed at Keswick before the end of summer.

Mono Paying Dividends.

The Mono mine, about ten miles from Yreka, continues to be the leading gold producer of Siskiyou county. The mine is equipped with a ten-stamp mill and is treating approximately twenty tons of rich ore per day. The veins are small but the ore is very rich, often ranging from $100 to $10,000 per ton, according to latest advices from the scene of operations.

Dividends are being steadily disbursed and the company is understood to be considering extending its operations. Southern Californians are among the parties interested. T. M. Newcomb, one of the largest owners of the New Idria quicksilver mines, is president of the company.

California Notes.

The Herman mine near Auburn is again active with thirty men on the payroll. The vein averages about five feet wide and is being developed by north and south drifts on the eighty-foot level. Considerable work is being performed south of the shaft, a section of the property which has hitherto attracted but little attention. Sinking has been stopped until the drifts can be completed. The mill is running steadily.

The last dividend of the Kennedy, the premier producer of the Mother Lode, amounted to 30 cents per share, aggregating $30,000. Determined efforts recently made to secure stock around $6 and $7 per share failed to bring any offers. The company is developing the hanging-wall and foot-wall veins on the 3300 level with splendid results. Drifting for the veins from the 3500 level will soon be progressing from several points. The 100-stamp mill is operating steadily.

R. Fernault has filed on 5000 inches of water in Ash Creek, running from Ash Valley, Lassen county, to Big Valley, Modoc county, and will use the flow to generate electrical power for the mines of the Hayden Hill district. As previously stated in The Times, the Hayden Hill section is attracting great attention, particularly since the discovery of bonanza ore in the Hess and other properties on the edge of the district. The mines are six miles distant from the power site, and the electricity will replace the steam plant now in use at the Hayden Hill mines.

Angeleños Bond Oil Lands.

A syndicate of Southern Californians, including E. H. Depue, E. M. Clark and J. K. Depue, of Los Angeles, together with several Pittsburgh capitalists, have bonded a large section of territory west of the towns of Willows and Arbuckle, Colusa county, and are arranging to extensively prospect for oil. On the properties bonded several oil wells have been proven, the chief of which is producing at the rate of three barrels per day. The oil is of remarkably light gravity and it is stated by experts that it requires no refining. Most of these wells have only been sunk to limited depths, as the wells were generally sunk for water and work abandoned when oil was encountered.

According to local representatives, the new owners plan to sink several wells to considerable depth and expect to develop valuable properties. The indicated oil belt covers an extensive area and the advent of the experienced southerners has caused considerable excitement. It is understood that rigs will be in commission before the end of June.

Brings in a Well.

The South Kern Oil Company, of which ex-Judge Works of Los Angeles is president and Harry F. Brown, vice-president, has just brought in well No. 1 and, because of that fact, will proceed to finish will No. 2. It is the intention to drill twelve more wells as soon as possible.

MEXICO.

RAILROAD ACTIVITIES ACROSS THE BORDER AN AID TO MINING.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

MEXICO CITY, April 9.—Among the old mining regions of Mexico which are showing unmistakable signs of rejuvenation, responding to a marked improvement in business conditions generally, a notable example is Oaxaca, including tributary camps within a long radius.

Ore shipments, according to all reliable advices from this central depot, are heavier now than for many months past.

Extension of railway lines into the mineral territory is proving a stimulus to activity, and an impetus is also given the domain by the building of custom and company mills.

Before the end of April the Mexican Southern's Taviche branch will have been completed. Miners of Taviche will save $1.50 to $2.50, gold, per ton in ore haulage when the railroad spur is finished.

Now the grist goes to market by the native carts over rough roads, the system being both slow and uncertain.

A deal is on for the sale of three miles of railway by the Oaxaca Smelter Corporation to the National Railways of Mexico. This line extends from the smelter to a station on the Mexican Southern and is under lease to the National system.

Baltimore people, headed by Dr. Howard A. Kelley and locally represented by N. O. S. Ford, an engineer, are making exhaustive examinations with a view to determining the feasibility of building a big custom mill to handle the output of Taviche mines, Oaxaca. Three years ago the Oaxaca Milling Company, in which Dr. Kelley is interested, started erection of a custom plant. Work was interrupted and finally suspended on account of internal strife in the corporation, and it appears practically certain that it will now soon be resumed and hurried to completion.

Bank Failure Injures.

While work that had started on the 100-ton mill of the Tehuantepec Silver Mines Company has been necessarily suspended for a time on account of the failure of the United States Banking Company, the San Francisco mine, a property of that corporation, located in Taviche district, is producing more liberally than ever before.

Fortunes in the white metal were taken from the diggings years ago, when it belonged to W. O. Staples, of Mexico City; but a two years' campaign of strenuous exploitation has revealed the presence of ore reserves previously undreamed of and it is confidently predicted that the coming months of this year will break all records for output.

Before very long arrangements will be made for the resumption of construction of the mill, for which machinery had been ordered to the value of $30,000, gold.

Building of a big stamp mill is progressing rapidly upon the estates of the Soledad Mining Company, in Oaxaca district, 75 miles from the city of Oaxaca, where there will be 300 men on the pay roll in the near future. Great quantities of lumber are being laid in for the erection of stores, lodges and other buildings, and there is in process of building a wagon road from the mine to the Tatolapom river, to cost approximately $12,000.

At the Victoria-Tapada mine, one of the bonanzas of the Tatolapom district of Oaxaca, there is nearing completion a reduction plant of substantial capacity, intended both for the handling of that property's product and for custom service. Many mines in the vicinity are piling up high class milling truck against the day the plant will go into commission.

Excellent service is being rendered by the newly-installed cyanide mill at the possessions of the Natividad y Anexas Mining Company of Oaxaca. At the recently convened annual meeting of the company it was decided to sell some properties distant from the main workings.

Litigation Extended.

All Oaxaca was concerned in the outcome of the long-extended litigation between the San Juan Mining Company and John Baigts for title to the San Juan mine, resulting in a victory for the company. Baigts is ordered by the Supreme Court to surrender possession of the property at once to the San Juan Mining Company and to make a full accounting for all ore values taken from the diggings in the two years he has been in charge. Ever since last June, Judge L. R. Wilfley of St. Louis, well-known throughout the United States by reason of his prominence in the judiciary of the Philippines, has been in Mexico as attorney for the San Juan company.

Maurice Clark and Mrs. Gustavo Stein, respective owners of the Cubilete and the Chivo mines, in Taviche district of Oaxaca, have closed a deal for the sale of those promising possessions to operators of Houston, Tex., who own the Santa Isabel, one of the leading steady producers of that vicinity. For a year the Santa Isabel has been shipping high-grade continuously, at the same time piling up vast tonnages of dirt of lower grade for future milling reference. Much ore is blocked out in the newly-acquired diggings.

Boston Gets Lucia.

In Boston there is being organized a corporation to be controlled by local talent of that city, which has taken over the Lucia mine, Santa Catarina district, Oaxaca, a mile west of the famous Santa Sofia property and having the extension of the same ledge system. Work in development of the estate has already begun under the new régime.

First payment to apply upon the purchase of the San Fernando group, in Zimitlan district of Oaxaca, has been made by Albert Ennis and his associates, who have taken possession of the bonanza and started development. Shipments of rich ore have been made from the San Fernando and initial operations of the new management are confined to cleaning of the old workings, preparatory to a resumption of regular production.

The Oaxaca Exploration Company has suspended operations in Oaxaca. It was a corporation allied with the Oaxaca Smelting Company, and was organized to acquire and develop properties tributary to the smelter. Troubles of the smelter promoters disheartened the Exploration management, which has paid all obligations and quit, after having bought outright some prospects and secured options on others of unquestioned value.

Sinaloa Reports.

Low-grade gold ore, running lightly in silver, is being profitably mined and treated at the average rate of 250 tons a day at the Tajo mine, Rosario camp of the State of Sinaloa, where it is estimated that tailings to the value of $15,000,000 have been carried down the river and lost on account of imperfect reduction methods employed in the past. It is calculated that these tailings were even more valuable per ton than the ores now being handled.

The new gold discovery on the Cedros River, in the southwest corner of the State of Sinaloa, is developing into a veritable bonanza.

On La Junta mine, only nominally prospected to date, there have been exposed several lodes all going well in the yellow, one of them showing consistent values averaging $250 gold per ton to a depth of 100 feet. It is estimated that truck already blocked out and in sight is worth $500,000 gold. Shipments from the new strike are going forward to the El Paso smelter via Alamos. Sobia is the name of the camp which has attracted the attention of prospectors and miners from Arizona and California.

Torreon Active.

Transportation figures are a fair gauge by which to judge of increased activity at the mining headquarters of Torreon. December of last year and January and February of this year piled up records far in advance of any corresponding months in the camp's previous history.

In January there were received 4695 cars of freight, an increase of 722 cars over the tally of the January previous, and in February there was scored an increase of 84 per cent. in merchandise receipts, less carload shipments. That increase for January figures out 91 per cent.

About the same ratio of advance is noticeable in the records for all three months named in every class of railway business.

Coast Camps Report.

Business is booming in the camps of the Pacific Coast region. New bodies of rich ore have been tapped in the Metates mine, east of Mazatlan, which is cashing in an average of eight bars of gold-silver bullion per month. Much of the blocked-out product runs up to five ounces gold and 600 ounces silver per ton. Los Angeles people are working the property under lease.

Californians have secured through Robert J. Coleman a bond on a promising proposition forty miles east of Rosario, and its English owners will soon resume development of Las Uvas, northwest of La Noria.

PRESCOTT.

REPORTS ARE CONFLICTING.

PROPERTIES MAKE STRIKES, OTHERS SUSPEND.

J. B. Giroux Plans Railroad If Property Is Valuable—Old Hillside Mine Inactive—Monte Carlo and Leghorn Report Strikes—Octave Suspends All Operations.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PRESCOTT (Ariz.) April 9.—J. B. Giroux, formerly manager of the United Verde, but now a Nevada mining magnate, is at the head of the Arizona and Nevada Mining Company, which has an immense copper property about thirty miles west of Hillside station, on the Santa Fé, Prescott and Phoenix Railroad.

Seventy miners have been employed for about nine months on development work, with results said to be very satisfactory to the management. The ore is far from rich, running down to 3 per cent. copper, but there is a veritable mountain of it.

It is believed that the deposit will have to be worked after the methods adopted by the Ray Company in Pinal county. To do this would require a railroad and a large investment for machinery. This investment the company is well prepared to make, as soon as the size and value of the ore body has been determined.

Historic Mine Idle.

In the same locality is the old Hillside mine, owned by Lawlor and Wells of Prescott. Years ago they sold the mine to "Safe Cure" Warner of Rochester, who renamed it the "Seven Stars" and issued quantities of stock. The preferred variety he personally guaranteed to bring a 12 per cent. dividend a year. It cost $5 a share and the common cost only $1.

But Warner failed in business and with him disappeared the guarantee. The mine reverted to the sellers, Lawlor and Wells, who were the richer by a couple of hundred thousand cash and by a great quantity of development work.

They have done very little upon the mine of late years, occasionally shipping some rich gold and silver ore. The mine will have to have new and expensive machinery before much more can be done with it.

Leghorn Strike.

A streak of high-grade sulphide ore, eighteen inches in width, was cut at 510 feet on the hanging wall of the main ore body of the Leghorn mine, operated in Cherry Creek district by the Arizona Gold-Copper Mines Company.

Sinking has developed the fact that below the strike the carbonates are giving away to sulphides. The main shaft is to be continued down to 1000 feet of depth.

President of the company is R. H. Burmister, one of the pioneer merchants and capitalists of Prescott. On the ground is a large Lane mill, which is to be used in working the highly-oxidized ores of the upper levels, which run well in free gold.

Another One.

Wonderfully rich free gold ore has been found on the Monte Carlo claims of John Quelaco and partners on Humbug Creek in southern Yavapai county. The creek has long been renowned for its placers. Ore from the find has been brought into Prescott. It seems practically a nugget, but of wire gold. An assay of it would be ridiculous. The strike was made in a narrow seam that crosscuts the main thirty-foot ledge of the property. This cross-cutting seam can be traced for the length of three claims. The main ledge is said to average $4 a ton in free gold. The owners are now negotiating for a mill, by means of which they are sure a fortune can soon be realized.

Octave Idle.

Little is doing at the Octave, in the southern part of this county, and much less at the electric works at Wickenburg, which were built with the idea of cutting in half the cost of power for the Octave and other mines of the vicinity.

The electric plant is owned by the Central Arizona Power Company, mainly composed of Octave stockholders. Its failure to operate is the cause of much loss around Wickenburg to reduction plants that had prepared for propulsion by electricity.

The Arizona Reduction Company, which has a new mill at Wickenburg, has tired of waiting and will put in a steam plant at once.

CLIFTON REPORTS.

Arizona-Morenci Company Makes a Change of Importance in Operation.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

CLIFTON (Ariz.) April 9.—The deepest exploration of the Clifton-Morenci district is now being done by churn Keystone drills on the property of the newly organized Arizona-Morenci Copper Company.

One of the drill holes on the Celtic group has reached a depth of about 800 feet, which is 1400 feet below the apex of the highly mineralized Shannon hill and 800 feet below the deepest workings of the near-by Shannon mine. No data has been given out concerning the quality of the ores extracted, but it is told that the lowest depth is still in ore, something that would in itself serve to disprove the statement, so generally believed, that this district is a shallow one.

More drills are to be added to the two now at work and the holes are to average a depth of 1000 feet wherever practicable.

The Shannon railroad is being operated steadily and satisfactorily. Ore is delivered into new bins, 100 feet in length, equipped with a new crushing plant and with a belt conveyor.

Test runs are being made on the new briquetting plant of the Arizona Copper Company. The machine, which is of novel type, works well, and the only difficulty has been found in properly drying the bricks in the time of their brief passage on an endless belt through a hot chamber.

Dell Potter has returned to Clifton from Boston, where he went to attend the annual meeting of the New England Copper Company of Clifton. The meeting decided upon a plan of reorganization that will pay off all the company's debts and will provide a development fund.

Phoenix Notes.

Thirty claims, including the new gold strike east of Florence, have been consolidated into the Montezuma Gold Mining Company. A large amount of stock has been sold to provide money for development.

Fifty men are working on the London Mountain property near Winkelman, a mine lately acquired by Oscar A. Turner of New York. Roads are being built, in preparation for the development of the mine by means of churn drills.

—Is good because it is part of the city development. Houses, schools and stores surround it.

Thirty houses are built, or building, and families are living in them.

Lots are selling every day and the low prices are a matter of a short time

The tract is not, and cannot be a gamble.

There is nothing to wait for. The city with its gas, electricity and water is there; street cars are there; every improvement has been provided.

Burck's Normandie Avenue Tract is in the Southwest near the corner of 54th street and Normandie avenue. A Moneta avenue-54th street car will take you directly to it for 5 cents.

Get off at Normandie Avenue and 54th street and our agent, Mr. Devere Gustin, will drive you around.

There isn't an investment in California that offers so sure a profit for so little money as property in the Southwest. If you believe Los Angeles has ceased to grow, don't buy, but if you think with the rest of us that it has just begun to grow, you cannot make your choice and put your money into it any too quick.

This town is full of people who ought to have been rich if—well, they couldn't see it then, but you can see it now; if you can't you are blind to your interest and in five years you will belong with "The Might Have Beens."

You can buy lots now for $575 to $750. Terms, $75 cash and $15 per month.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) April 9.—Plans are gradually being worked out for the operation of the mines and works of the Ray Consolidated Company, which, by the end of the year, will be handling about twice as much ore a day as is now being mined at Bisbee.

Work has been started on what is to be the greatest working shaft in the United States with skips of twelve and one-half tons' capacity. This shaft will connect with a stupendous sort of level, over a mile in length, along which will be gathered all the ore to be hoisted.

The ore will be dropped into cars on this great tunnel, to be drawn by electric locomotives to the shaft. On the surface the ore will be automatically dumped into bins, from which will be loaded great standard-gauge steel cars, to be hauled to the 8000-ton concentrator at Hayden, near Winkelman.

Steel to the amount of 250 carloads has been ordered for the structural work of the concentrator, building and several trainloads have arrived already. The concrete foundation work is well along toward completion.

Two Star drills have been transferred from Ray to Hayden, to bore for water on the townsite. It is expected to pump the flood of water necessary at the concentrator from the near-by Gila Valley.

A trench has been dug, six feet wide, twelve feet deep and 500 feet long. From this, thirty-inch pipes will be sunk thirty feet deeper, to be pumped in series.

BOOMS DOS CABEZAS.

NO MEXICANS EMPLOYED.

DOUGLAS (Ariz.) April 9.—The Dos Cabezas mining region north of Douglas is experiencing a boom peculiarly American. Manager Ely of the Mascot Copper Company has put on sixty miners at the company's big plant and he has adhered to his policy not to hire a single Mexican for work either above or below ground.

The result is a boom at the camp and in the vicinity of Willcox.

The best machinery that can be purchased is installing at the mine, and already many hundreds of thousands of tons of copper ore have been blocked out.

The latest report from the camp is that the Mascot company will start the erection of a small smelter at the base of the mountain early in the fall. At present no shipments are made, as the camp is not directly connected either with the Southern Pacific system at Pearce or the El Paso and Southwestern at Courtland.

In addition to the mining activity at the Dos Cabezas and in the Dragoons, every day sees new families coming in over the Southern Pacific to take up government land in the vicinity of Willcox and Courtland. The three stores at Willcox, as a result, are receiving an average of three carloads of goods every day.

Guggenheims Buy.

It is claimed that the Guggenheims have bought the old Silver Queen mines at Superior, near the Lake Superior and Arizona Company's property, on which work lately was abandoned for some unknown reason.

The Queen mine once was rated a phenomenal silver producer, but has become a high-grade copper mine with depth.

An interesting feature of the news is that a pipe line is to be laid to the mines from Florence station, about twenty-five miles distant, for the pumping of crude oil fuel as a means of economy in operation.

The Superior Company has detailed plans for a railroad on the same route, as well as for a smelter on the Gila, opposite Florence.

TUCSON (Ariz.) April 9.—The class in mining engineering at the University of Arizona has just returned, after a ten days' trip through the mines of the Globe and Kelvin districts, under the guidance of Prof. Tolman.

Equipped with Geological Survey maps of the topography and with mine plans, several days were spent in and on the Old Dominion property at Globe, where everything was investigated from the geological strata to the manner in which copper was tapped at the furnaces.

Also covered in the same vicinity were the United Verde, Arizona Commercial and Superior and Boston mines.

Three days were spent around Miami, on the Miami, Inspiration, Cordova, Live Oak and Black Warrior properties. In the property last named was found an entirely new type of copper silicate, the ore varying greatly in character from that of the near-by mines.

Great interest was manifested in the construction work of the new Miami concentrator, each member of the party bringing back a copy of the plans for the plant.

On Friday the party walked across the upper end of the Pinal Mountains, twenty-five miles, taking dinner at the Gibson mine, one of the richest sulphide copper properties in the Southwest. The great copper camp of Ray was reached in the evening.

There a day was spent in studying the lay of the immense low-grade sulphide deposits, which are to be mined by underground caving of immense masses, so as to be dropped with a minimum labor cost into cars in a long, central ore collecting drift that leads to the main shaft.

EL TIGRE ACTIVE.

POWER PLANT PLANNED.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

DOUGLAS (Ariz.) April 9.—Announcement is made that the El Tigre Mining Company contemplates the erection of a great central power plant in Douglas, in which will be generated power not only to run the proposed new cyanide plant at the mines, but also for an electric line which will be built from this city to El Tigre.

Over this line the concentrates from the mine and the high-grade ore will be hauled to Douglas. The mine at present smelts its ore at El Paso.

Full details of the plans of the big company, which recently elected directors at a stockholders' meeting held in this city, will be decided upon at the directors' meeting in Kansas City, when officers for the new year will be chosen.

The electric line would be in position also to haul to Douglas the ores from the Roy, the North Tigre, the Antigua, the Fortuna, the South Tigre, the Cinco de Mayo and other notable mines in the Tigre district.

JEROME.

LITTLE DAISY IS BONA FIDE.

STRIKE NEAR UNITED VERDE IS PROVEN.

No Stock for Sale in Property and Mining in the District Improving as a Result of Rich Strike—New Company Enters the Field—Practical Miners Declare It Bonanza.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

JEROME (Ariz.) April 9.—After a season of rather pessimistic chronicling of reports of bonanzas that usually failed to "make good," it is refreshing to be able to state that the Little Daisy strike at Jerome is the real thing.

If it were not, there might be more stock for sale. Most of the stock is owned right at home, and little is to be had.

It is probable that the strike is not a United Verde for size, but it is big enough for the making of one of the greatest mines of the Southwest.

On the 800-foot level, the crosscut from the drift has passed through about fifty-five feet of solid ore, native copper and red oxide, which assays up to 65 per cent. copper and as high as $10 to the ton in gold.

When it is appreciated that some Arizona companies find large profit in 3 per cent. copper ore, the relative value of the find becomes apparent.

A winze from the working level now has reached a depth of 275 feet, from which point crosscutting has been begun, with the expectation of striking the ore on the lower level.

If ore is struck and of the same grade, it will demonstrate that the United Verde is not the only bonanza of the camp.

Practical miners who have examined the ore body now being penetrated declare that it is evidently a deposit of great size. When it is worked, it will effectually destroy the unenviable reputation of Jerome as a "one-mine camp."

The Little Daisy strike is stimulating mining around Jerome to a wonderful degree. About the first to start is the Jerome-Verde, a company mainly capitalized in Los Angeles, owning twenty-eight patented claims, one of which, the "Verde," was the first staked out in the district, the locator being Capt. John Boyd, in 1876, before he located the Eureka and other claims that now comprise the United Verde.

The Jerome-Verde lies north and east of the United Verde, and almost surrounds the five claims of the Little Daisy group. It is stated that the "north fault" of the United Verde passes through nine of the Jerome-Verde claims.

The main shaft is still in carbonate ore at the depth of 475 feet. Superintendent T. E. Campbell proposes to sink the main shaft much deeper and then to crosscut to a point below where ore is exposed on old surface workings. The mine has a good mechanical equipment.

FAIL TO BUY.

KELVIN WANTS A PRICE.

KELVIN (Ariz.) April 9.—Charles E. Finney's recent statement that there really is no surplus stock of refined copper, because the amount on hand is only a thirty-eight days' supply above the daily consumption, has been read with wide interest here.

A couple of men, supposed to be in the employ of the copper trust, have lately been in the valley offering ridiculously low prices for a number of copper holdings, and representing to the owners that the over production of the metal has had a steadily depressing influence on the value of copper mines.

They also claimed that there is nothing to be made in producing copper to sell at 13 cents.

Mr. Finney conclusively shows that many companies produce it at a cost of 7 cents, and that none of it costs more than 10 cents. The visitors, who gave their names as Henry F. Wilson and J. B. Mergenthal, were unable to purchase.

New Company Operates.

The Calumet and Copper Creek Mining Company, with capitalization of $5,000,000, has been organized to take over options secured by Frank J. Sibley and son from the Calumet and Arizona Mining Company.

The transfer includes thirty-six claims in Bunker Hill district of eastern Pinal county.

A statement made, that the Copper Creek property is included in the deal, is strongly denied. The latter company is very much alive, operating a 250-ton concentrator and preparing for the installation of a modern copper smelter. The company's concentrates are being piled up, awaiting operation of the furnace, which is expected to be within two months.

In the new Calumet and Copper Creek Company, Mr. Sibley is noted as president and general manager, with H. M. Hall as treasurer, and Atty.-Gen. John B. Wright as secretary.

The new Copper Creek smelter will include a seventy-five-ton reverberatory furnace, with crude oil as fuel, in which the mill concentrates will be treated, together with a 150-ton water jacket blast furnace, for the handling of the carbonate and oxide ores, and with one converter stand.

The mill has been running easily, handling about 100 tons of ore a day, about half-capacity. The concentrates average only about 15.2 per cent. copper.

In the same vicinity an electric hoist is being placed on the main shaft of the Minnesota-Arizona Company.

Eldorado Canyon.

E. M. Martin, a prominent mine operator of Searchlight, Nev., is registered at the Alexandria. He is here closing a deal for the development of several silver properties in Eldorado Cañon.

Good Sensible Talk

Every form of investment should be scrutinized with great care—it is of the utmost importance that every one should be careful in selecting investments. It is better for those who wish to save a portion of their earnings and savings to put it into an established business like "HOME BUILDERS," or other concerns that could be mentioned, than to put it into speculative enterprises that have not been tried out and proven successful. Of course the person who has money to invest—no matter whether the amount be large or small—must be the judge of what constitutes "a safe investment."

It should need no argument, however, to convince a careful and conservative person that a concern which has an established business, and which is now producing a satisfactory profit for its shareholders, offers a greater safety for the investment of capital. If an established business like "HOME BUILDERS" can also offer the investor an assured profit of from 8 per cent. to 12 per cent. on the investment, together with a steady increase in value—there is abundant reason why its claims, and statements made, should be carefully heeded.

"HOME BUILDERS" has an established business and is paying its shareholders a satisfactory profit—3½ per cent. in cash dividends every three months, and beginning May 1st will pay 4 per cent. in cash dividends every three months. This is at the rate of 16 per cent. per annum on the par value of its stock. "HOME BUILDERS" is an established fact—an organization with more than in assets and a surplus of undivided profits of more than $100,000. This belongs to the stockholders.

You can purchase "HOME BUILDERS" stock at $1.85 per share for all cash or on payment of 10 per cent. down and 5 per cent. monthly. 100 shares can be bought by paying $18.50 cash and $9.25 a month. The number of shares paid for at the end of each quarter—April 30th—July 31st—October 31st and January 31st of each year, will draw the full quarter's dividend. EVERY SHARE BOUGHT AND PAID FOR BEFORE APRIL 30TH WILL RECEIVE THE FULL 3½ PER CENT. DIVIDEND FOR FEBRUARY, MARCH AND APRIL.

The foundations for most of the comfortable competencies that men and women enjoy were laid in just this way. They began by saving a little and adding to it every week or month.

OPEN AN ACCOUNT WITH "HOME BUILDERS"

—You can commence with as low as $1.00 on a subscription of 5 shares. Before long you will have acquired the saving habit and be adding to your investment regularly every month. It will earn for you, commencing May 1st, 16 per cent. per annum on the par value and show a steady increase in value. Buy "HOME BUILDERS" stock now and get the full quarter's dividend—declared April 30th.

We quote from the report of the Auditing Committee — rendered on March 31st—and published in last Sunday's papers: . . .

"We find that the annual statement, as submitted by the officials of the company, was within the facts as to the condition of the company, and that, if anything, the condition of the company is even better than shown by the statement—due to the fact that the officials made larger allowances to cover contingencies than would seem absolutely necessary. PHELPS-DODGE; COPPER QUEEN.

NNUAL REPORT SHOWS HIGH MINING VALUES.

General Manager Expects no Lessening in Cost of Production and Sets Modest Value Upon the Mine Itself — Pays High Dividends. Farms Ore Reserve.

PECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

BISBEE (Ariz.) April 9.—The annual ports of the various Phelps-Dodge ompanies for the year past are now ing received, and among them that the Copper Queen is especially in- resting.

During the year at the Bisbee mines the corporation were produced and hipped 596,622 tons of ore. Of this uantity, 28,833 tons were shipped to melters other than at Douglas, main- purchased for flux, and 272 tons e credited to the precipitating plant elow the Czar shaft.

From a value standard, the ore con- ined 84,429,791 pounds of copper, 592,- ounces of silver and 8644 ounces of ld.

Additional income was secured by e shipment from claims worked by sers of seventy-three tons of cop- r ore and 638 tons of lead-silver ore. The smelter at Douglas is a sepa- te department. During the year, om all sources, it handled 735,490 s of ore, from which were separated ,542,964 pounds of copper, 2,579,810 unces of silver and 32,152 ounces of ld.

Within these figures, the Phelps- odge corporation at Nacozari, Sono- , the Moctezuma Copper Company, is edited with 112,542 tons of ore and ncentrates, containing 24,814,747 unds of copper, 421,687 ounces of sil- r and 1054 ounces of gold.

The customs ores treated aggregated ,286 tons, containing 7,858,812 pounds copper, 1,623,925 ounces of silver and ,160 ounces of gold.

The difference between the amount Copper Queen ores mined and ated represents the increase in sur- us stock on hand at the smelter.

During the year, the surplus stock s been increased by 26,520 tons, as insurance against stoppage of pro- ction at the mines for any cause accident on the railroad.

The smelting plant consists of ten st furnaces and eight converter nds. The plant was run at about ee-fourths capacity during the year. Much economy has been effected dur- the year by a central electric pow- plant and by the development of the ctric haulage system, started the evious year by General Manager alter Douglas, who discusses in the port the causes that render neces- ry the continuance of the square-set stem of mining, with its attendant h cost.

Concerning this, he writes: "As the occurs in irregular and eccentric posits in limestone, cheap methods mining, such as the caving and ing systems, cannot be adopted.

"The mining, therefore, must be done the square-set system, which per- ts of cleaner extraction and allows explorations by radial intermediate fts in any direction and on any or; but it is expensive, owing to the at amount of timber required, and necessity of careful and contin- us filling to prevent danger from the ving ground.

"No material reduction in the cost of ual mining can, therefore, be looked in the near future for the above son and considering the large pro- rtionate cost of exploration."

Concerning development work ahead stoping, Mr. Douglas says: "The me conditions which make mining pensive, prevent us from exposing ge reserves of ore. But I can say at there is as much ore in sight to- y as at any period during the past years, while I have been manager the property."

The assets of the corporation are ed at a total value of $15,047,646, in ich the mines are modestly valued $852,762, plant and real estate at $2,- ,580, and store and other equipment $105,592. Dividends paid in 1909 ounted to $4,026,000.

During March the Copper Queen intained its supremacy as a copper ducer by a smelter output of 10,- ,000 pounds, the largest the smelt- has ever known. The Calumet and zona smelter also raised its produc- a half million pounds, to 5,300,000 nds for the month.

INDS TUBE MILL FLINTS.

ROSPECTORS FIND PEBBLES ON COLORADO.

o More Importation of Norway ock Needed—New Industry As- red—Gold Roads and Tom Reed ake Heavy Shipments of Bullion. ining Notes.

ECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

KINGMAN (Ariz.) April 9.—Two ipments were brought in yesterday m the Gold Road and Tom Reed nes, which establish new records for se properties. The Gold Road out- , consisting of nearly 600 pounds of ecipitates, is valued at approximate- $25,000, and represents an eleven-day n, of the 200-ton mill. The Tom ed sent in 159 pounds of bullion rth about $27,000, and is the result a twelve-day run in a ten-stamp ll.

In both mines the average of the now being stoped is better than er, and the new ore bodies being de- loped are showing up larger and cher. Manager Phillips estimated the arch production of the Gold Road at out $55,000, and judging from yester- y's shipment this amount should ily be exceeded in April.

Flint pebbles, used for fine grinding tube mills, have been found prac- cally at the doors of the San Fran- sco district mines. The extreme hard- ess and wearing qualities necessary r such grinding have been found up this time only in pebbles coming om the coast of Norway, and the lat- r are used in tube mills throughout e mining world.

Some time ago Henry Lovin of ingman and Bob Zuver of Goldroad iscovered flint pebbles along the Colo- ado River, which is only nine miles om Gold Road, and induced the man- gements of the above mines to exper- ent with them.

In the last few weeks they have been oroughly tried out in both the Gold ad and Tom Reed tube mills and ave given excellent results.

Superintendent Dan Bosqui of the ormer expressed himself as very much leased with the new pebbles, and pro- ounced them superior to the Norwe- ian product.

Inasmuch as the latter have been shipped in at great expense, the discovery of suitable grinding pebbles so close at hand is going to materially cut down cost of milling.

Both of the above mines have let contracts for several hundred tons of the Colorado River pebbles, and as they are found nearly along its entire length in this county, the supply is sufficient for their general usage throughout the country and a new industry seems assured.

Mining Notes.

F. H. Hendrick of Denver is examining the Sunnyside and other properties in Oatman, in which he is interested. The Sunnyside shaft is down 160 feet and the bottom is in good ore. A. C. Werden is superintendent.

Last week's strike in the Gold Crown mine near Union Pass is holding up. Samples of the face of the tunnel for the last ten feet have averaged $20.80.

The suit of W. C. Fellows against the Tom Reed Company to quiet title to one of the most valuable of the latter's group of claims, was brought up at the present term of the District Court, but the case was adjourned to the 25th of this month.

LOCAL.

NEW COMPANY IS PLANNED.

H. P. BOYCE REPORTS FORMING OF ORGANIZATION.

Company Will Control Mexican and Canadian Patents—Local Testing Plant Proves Success of Anderson Method for Handling Copper Without Smelting.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

Following the demonstration of the local testing plant of the Electro-Chemical Metal Extraction Company on North Main street, local operators, have arranged for the incorporation of a company to control the Mexican and Canadian patents.

The former company controls the working of the Anderson patents in the United States, but the latter company will have the rights outside of this country.

This was made known by President H. P. Boyce yesterday afternoon. Mr. Boyce said: "The plant has been proven a success, and we have treated all the ore that has been sent to us. With the present testing plant we are capable of turning out about 125 pounds of pure copper per day, and this can easily be raised by the addition of tanks to 1000 pounds.

"We have two sets of moneyed men who are prepared to take over the Mexican-Canadian Company, and we simply will take the best offer. Both offers are valuable ones.

"The best thing about this process is that the parent company will not have to invest much capital. We simply test ores and guarantee a standard of production. The company which buys our patents builds the plant and pays us a royalty of a half cent per pound on the copper handled. We guarantee the cost of production and the operation of the plant.

"We have shown that the plant which we build can produce copper at less than half the cost of production through smelting methods."

IN THE EARTH.

RARE MINERALS, METALLURGY AND CHEMISTRY.

To Correspondents:

This Department is not conducted for pay. Its object is to convey reliable information of interest and value to the public, and it is not for the private benefit of any miner, collector, speculator or prospector. Correspondents are particularly cautioned to take careful note of the statements and injunctions contained in the paragraphs below:

(1.) Specimens must be small and bear a tag giving name and address of sender, and the general—not the exact—locality from whence the specimen was taken, also the name of it as nearly as the sender knows. Send, also, with the specimen a clearly-written letter briefly describing the find and what the finder wishes done with it. The letter must be properly dated and plainly signed.

Letter and specimen must be in one package, not in separate inclosure.

(2.) No attention will be paid to anonymous letters or to letters signed merely with initials.

(3.) No examinations of samples or specimens will be made in cases where The Times may decide that the specimen and inquiry are not of public interest. This office does not undertake to perform the work of an assay office.

(4.) Inquiries relative to matters of purely personal interest will not be answered.

(5.) When no response to an inquiry made or specimens sent appears in these columns, the inquirer will understand that his inquiry does not come within the purview of this department.

(6.) It is impossible to return specimens, as they must necessarily be destroyed or impaired in the process of analysis.

Address, invariably, The Times.

Ores of Copper.

LOS ANGELES, March 1.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Discovered near Kramer, borders of San Bernardino county and Kern. Yours truly,

J. J. C.

ANSWER: Five samples of fairly good ores of copper; silver present. Blue and green carbonates. One sample carries sulphides of iron and copper. Not tested for gold.

Almandite.

WILDOMAR, March 1.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I inclose you a sample of pellets of some kind of mineral; if you will test them for tin and publish your opinion in the "In the Earth" column of The Times you will greatly oblige a number of prospectors in this locality. The pellets come from a ledge four feet wide, and situated on Santa Rose ranch about four miles from Murietta, Riverside county. Thanking you in advance, Yours, etc., C. S.

ANSWER: Tin is not present in the impure, faulty garnet you submit. Material represented by the sample might, however, be utilized for abrasive purposes.

Crayon Material.

CORONA, March 2.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Inclosed sample is found near Corona. Will you kindly tell me what it is? There is quite a body of it. Has it any value?

Yours truly, W. K.

ANSWER: Sort of a lamp-black. Experiment on the substance is the only practical method to arrive at commercial values. Try it for crayon markers.

Fair Soil Only.

DELANO, March 3.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I send you a sample of earth, of which I find there are several acres near Delano, Kern county, Cal. I think it is sand with possibly some gypsum.

Please state in the "In the Earth" columns of what it is composed, and what will be the result if it is irrigated; in fact, will it produce? If so what? Yours respectfully,

M. L. B.

ANSWER: The sample carries quartz (sand,) some alkali, trace of gypsum, and a trace of lime carbonate; together with aluminum silicates and earthy matter. Pretty hard to "tell" what several acres of such earth would produce, if irrigated, with only 60 grains of the soil to experiment with. It is a maxim in California, that if anything be planted and watered everything will grow.

Diotyte and Tourmaline.

INDIO, March 3.—[To the Editor of The Times:] As I am interested in the earth, will ask you to bear with me while investigating the samples which come from Pinion district, twenty-five miles north of Indio.

No. 1, large black dyke, has texture of marble, and specks of metal in it. Some call it hornblende, I don't. Can you place it? No. 2, large mixed dyke, 20 feet wide. Name the main body? It is made up of bluish talc, hard quartz, heavy cubes, etc. No. 3, another reddish burnt-like and freckled soft. Name body? No. 4 is an immense dyke 50 odd feet, south side 20 feet of hard rock, and resembles Colorado porphyry. No. 5, middle and north sorth side is soft and freckled and seems to be talc, some iron oxide with a three-foot lead of soft, white talc, dissolves in water and has tiny metal specks. No. 6 comes in seven-foot vein of white quartz, has spots of glossy black, like stove polish, with some kind of oxidized streak of brown on upper side. No. 7, please name, is it porphyry?

"OLD EAGLE EYE."

ANSWER: A cowpuncher was once called upon to perform some remarkable stunts while trying to break a cayuse which was known as an outlaw. In short the cayuse broke the puncher's neck. Some of the deceased cowboy's friends got together and unanimously decided to place an epitaph on the headboard of the grave; the selection follows: ""He did his D—, angels could do no more."

Sample No. 1 is dioryte, the shining specks, under the microscope, prove to be quartz crystals. No. 2 (seven specimens,) the black is tourmaline, and probably the cube you refer to. Three samples are porphyritic rock, another is quartz, one other is quartz also, but carrying decomposed garnet, and the remaining sample is feldspar. To name the "main body" is no easy job, we will call it porphyritic, and let it go at that. No. 3 is quartzitic and calcareous rock, with "freckled," microscopical crystals of feldspar present, this can be referred to as porphyritic also; with various iron oxides in the samples. No. 4, all of this bunch is porphyritic, excepting the white talc specimen, the tiny metallic specks are iron sulphides. None of the samples dissolve in water. No. 5 is like No. 4. No. 6, "glossy specks," manganese dioxide. No. 7 is quartz with hematite coating. We must politely insist that but three samples from one correspondent, at one time, should be the limit.

Gypsum Present.

MARICOPA, March 3.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Will you kindly tell me what the inclosed specimen is and if it has commercial value? It was found out on the hills some distance from Maricopa, where a large body of this honey-comb stuff protruded from the earth. I cannot state any particulars about its composition, as I am ignorant concerning minerals. We take The Times daily, and noticing your answers to others, thought perhaps you would kindly answer mine. Thanking you in advance, I am yours respectfully,

M. E. W.

ANSWER: The sample is lava-like gypsum, stained pink with manganese carbonate (rhodochrosite,) and brown-black with manganese dioxide. Material represented by the sample is of very doubtful value.

Olivenite.

QUARTZITE (Ariz.) March 3.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Will you state in your "In the Earth" what kind of ore the enclosed sample represents? It has many prospectors on the "guess." It comes from a narrow gouge in a quartz lead about fourteen miles northeast of Quartzite.

I would be greatly obliged if you will name the ore, and give approximate values with a short description—space permitting.

Sincerely yours, A. P.

ANSWER: The sample is mineralogically named at the sub-heading. In composition it is hydrated arseniate of copper. The sample carries prismatic crystals attached to the matrix. Luster vitreous and resinous. Color olive green. Streak olive green. Hardness, slightly over 3. Specific gravity 4.2. An analysis by Kobell shows as follows: Oxide of copper, 56.43; arsenious acid, 36.71; phosphoric acid, 3.36; water, 3.50, which percentages equal 100. Soluble in aqueous ammonia and in nitric acid. Deflagrates before the blow pipe on charcoal, and at the same time evolves fumes of arsenic (garlic-like odor.) Do not confuse the sample with Olivine (anhydrous silicate of magnesia.)

Gypsum.

BURBANK, March 3, 1910.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I send you some samples of what? The material was sent to me by a ranchman of the Elizabeth Lake district, and we desire to know whether the sample is lime, marble or gypsum. Would you mind telling us how you tell the difference? Thanking you in advance.

Yours very truly, S. C. R.

ANSWER: The sample is massive gypsum. We should be ready to give information always; when in our power so to do. Lime is a product of the kilns, in which lime stone (carbonate of lime, marble, chalk, etc.,) is calcined, and carbonic acid driven off by heat. Limestone, marble, etc., is soluble in dilute acids with effervescence; gypsum (and many other sulphates,) does not effervesce in nitric acid. Before the blow-pipe gypsum loses its water below red heat; splits into layers and forms into a powder (Plaster of Paris.) With higher degree of heat bb., gypsum melts, and forms a button. Calcite (carbonate of lime,) b.b., is infusible, and "shines with intense brightness (on charcoal,) when the carbonic acid is expelled and becomes converted into quicklime."

Nodular Calciferous Manganese Ore.

LOS ANGELES, March 3, 1910.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Local. What it contains, whether or not of any commercial value? J. W. D.

Quartz.

LOS ANGELES, March 5, 1910.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Enclosed pleased find a couple of samples of rock taken from a claim in the Fortuna Mountains, Yuma county, Arizona. No. 1 is accompanied by a couple of pieces of quartz showing how it occurs; these nuggets are not attracted by the magnet and may perhaps embody some precious metal. Kindly state whether the black bright specimen submitted is commercially valuable. Specimen 2 contains a large percentage of mica and has a light green substance pretty thoroughly coursed throughout the rock. Will you also kindly state what this is, and whether or not it is of value? You will greatly oblige.

L. S. R.

ANSWER: The two quartz samples are somewhat alike, and no sample was tested for gold or silver. No. 1 is garnetiferous and carries hematite with traces of chrome. No. 2 is micaceous with trace of copper phosphate. Without a quantitative analysis no definite commercial values can be given; platinum is not present in any sample.

LEADER OF INS

"The Other Side"—Repre Conditions Which House Rules a

BY JA

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Weariness, but no tone of defeat was in his voice and words. "I have battled, battled, battled for everything I ever got," George William Norris had said, his eyes miles away on the misty oak forests of Maryland.

We had gone over his life, a slow tragedy of dull poverty and toil, and he was looking back, the first time in a long while, and was stumbling at the philosophy of his fate.

"The very least I have obtained," he went on to say, "my bread and butter with the rest, has come only after a hard and doubtful fight against circumstances leagued, it seemed to me, for my defeat. I am in Congress now for the fourth time, by the narrow margin of twenty-one votes. Had a single Republican in each of the eighteen counties of the district failed me, I would have lost my seat. I was twice elected judge, the first time by a plurality of two over the Democratic candidate. Then came a dragging trial of the case. With me, the simplest of human experiences becomes difficult and problematical. Sometimes I have wondered if a life such as mine is really worth the contest."

REWARD AT LAST.

At his side, while he talked, were reams of congratulatory letters and hundreds of complimentary telegrams from all over the United States. "Cannonism is dying at your brilliant and liberating thrust," was the spirit of all that had been written or sent. Bundles of unopened newspapers, eloquent with leaders and big heads, were in piles on the floor, along the walls. The knob of the locked office door was often turned by men burdened with praise that was to remain unsaid. Ceaseless calls of the telephone bell went unnoticed. Except for my almost forgotten presence, the insurgent chief—bold, tireless and fierce, cheered throughout the nation, a romantic and daring knight, in popular conception—was alone with himself. And at the memory of his early struggles, as child, youth and man, he was asking if the joys and triumphs of life are an offset to its tribulations and disappointments.

"Financially," he said, somewhat humorously, concluding his brief retrospect, "I have not been a success."

Whereat he opened a drawer of his desk, took a "stogy" from a round pasteboard box, and lighted it with a borrowed match.

Structurally, Judge Norris is a ong man, being deep-breasted, wide- uldered, and of the average and mpact stature which denotes power, ysically, and longevity. His head broad and well set upon his neck; his brown eyes are uncommonly wide apart; his chin is as square as a wedge, and there is considerable roar in his voice, both in the low notes and when pitched in emphasis. Altogether, his face is of an unusual type, d and mystic, as well as open and pleasant. A homespun man, in a short, rk coat, he is, if I may judge, en- irely without political, personal or intellectual vanity. His constituents re agriculturalists. No matter the ength of his stay in Washington, he ill always relish a dinner with any farmer friend of fried ham, boiled po- atoes, weak coffee, and pale apple pie, ather doughy on the bottom.

EARLY AN INSURGENT.

"When and why did you become an nsurgent?" I asked him.

"My change from orthodoxy to eterodoxy was gradual," he an- wered. "I entered the House of epresentatives six years ago last December. On February 21, following, ohn Sharpe Williams, the Democratic eader, moved that we adjourn over o the twenty-third as a mark of onor to George Washington's birth- ay. Sereno E. Payne, the Republican eader, opposed the motion. When the lerk began to call the roll I noticed hat the Republicans were voting sol- dly with Payne and the Democrats ere solidly voting with Williams. To e it seemed silly to draw party lines n such a trivial question. As a mat- er of sentiment, I sympathized with he motion of Williams, and voted ac- ordingly.

"'You have begun early to support he Democrats,' a party colleague said o me in the lobby. Other Repub- icans pleasantly censured me, but I aw that they meant it and under- tood that I had seriously offended, n the minds of narrow men. After- ard I closely watched the proceed- ngs of the House and observed that epublicans and Democrats invariably ollowed their leaders when the lead- rs, privately or publicly, let it be nown that they expected obedience. could readily see that on certain itally important political matters uch action might be necessary, but o carry leadership into petty details f no possible consequence one way r the other was manifestly ridiculous. Naturally, I revolted at such mental lavery, but I continued to keep step with my party.

PEAKER'S POWER TOO GREAT.

"The more I studied the rules, how- ver, the clearer became my convic- ion that the power of the House of epresentatives was centered in one erson, and that Speaker Cannon, with the coöperation of the Senate, was practically the lawmaker of the epublic. I was a member of the ommittee on Public Buildings. One y a fellow-member asked the chair- an if the committee would prepare bill authorizing the construction of ederal buildings in different parts of e country at that session of Con- ress. The chairman replied that he ould not answer the question at the ime.

"'Haven't you seen the Speaker et?' another inquired.

"'No, I have not,' the chairman aid, rather humbly.

"In other words," Judge Norris re- arked, "we should erect needed pub- ic buildings, or not erect them, at the rder of Joseph G. Cannon, member of Congress from the Danville district of llinois. Acute insurgency, in my case, egan right there. However, I didn't y over much. Still, I acted more and more independently, and more and more I lost the countenance of the egulars, as they were called. I ceased o be consulted or to be informed as o what was going on. I was even unished socially, or was thought to , which is just the same, whether I s or not. Mr. McCall of Massachu- tts, a singularly able and free-acting publican, introduced a bill compel- g publicity with respect to the ex- enses of national elections. LEADER OF INSURGENTS LET LOOSE.

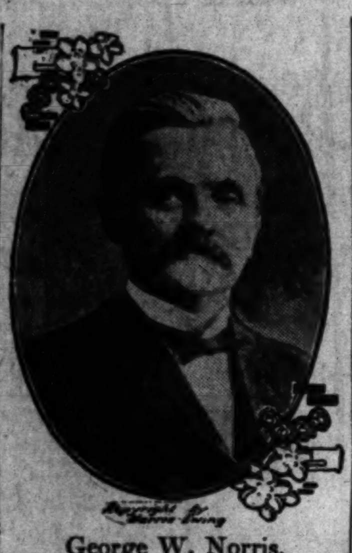
"The Other Side"—Representative Norris Explains Alleged Conditions Which Caused Him to Revolt at House Rules and Uncle Joe Cannon.

BY JAMES B. MORROW.



George W. Norris.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Weariness, but no tone of defeat was in his voice and words. "I have battled, battled, battled for everything I ever got," George William Norris had said, his eyes miles away on the misty oak forests of Maryland.

We had gone over his life, a slow tragedy of dull poverty and toil, and he was looking back, the first time in a long while, and was stumbling at the philosophy of his fate.

Structurally, Judge Norris is a big man, being deep-breasted, wide-shouldered, and of the average and compact stature which denotes power, physically, and longevity. His head is broad and well set upon his neck; his brown eyes are uncommonly wide apart; his chin is as square as a wedge, and there is considerable roar in his voice, both in the low notes and when pitched in emphasis. No matter the length of his stay in Washington, he will always relish a dinner with any farmer friend of fried ham, boiled potatoes, weak coffee, and pale apple pie, rather doughy on the bottom.

EARLY AN INSURGENT.

"When and why did you become an insurgent?" I asked him.

"My change from orthodoxy to heterodoxy was gradual," he answered. "I entered the House of Representatives six years ago last December. On February 21, following, John Sharpe Williams, the Democratic leader, moved that we adjourn over to the twenty-third as a mark of honor to George Washington's birthday. Sereno E. Payne, the Republican leader, opposed the motion. When the clerk began to call the roll I noticed that the Republicans were voting solidly with Payne and the Democrats were solidly voting with Williams. SPEAKER'S POWER TOO GREAT.

"The more I studied the rules, however, the clearer became my conviction that the power of the House of Representatives was centered in one person, and that Speaker Cannon, with the coöperation of the Senate, was practically the lawmaker of the republic. I was a member of the Committee on Public Buildings. One day a fellow-member asked the chairman if the committee would prepare a bill authorizing the construction of Federal buildings in different parts of the country at that session of Congress. The chairman replied that he could not answer the question at the time.

"'Haven't you seen the Speaker yet?' another inquired.

"'No, I have not,' the chairman said, rather humbly.

"In other words," Judge Norris remarked, "we should erect needed public buildings, or not erect them, at the order of Joseph G. Cannon, member of Congress from the Danville district of Illinois. Acute insurgency, in my case, began right there. However, I didn't say over much. Still, I acted more and more independently, and more and more I lost the countenance of the regulars, as they were called. I ceased to be consulted or to be informed as to what was going on. I was even punished socially, or was thought to be, which is just the same, whether I was or not. Mr. McCall of Massachusetts, a singularly able and free-acting Republican, introduced a bill compelling publicity with respect to the expenses of national elections. I reported the bill back from the Committee on the Revision of Laws with a recommendation that it be passed. Speaker Cannon was antagonistic to the measure—one man in nearly 400—and refused to permit its coming before the House.

DEPRIVED OF APPOINTMENTS.

"I went to him, as did others, and made a request that the bill be considered on its merits. He refused absolutely to recognize me if I stood on the floor for any such purpose, and so the bill died by the hand of the Speaker, and the liberty and intelligence of Congress, it appeared to me, were treated with arrogant discourtesy. So events moved in my case, I going from bad to worse, in view of the machine and its operators, although I never did anything that wasn't in harmony with sound Republican doctrine. I was deprived of good committee appointments, and Speaker Cannon looked the other way, or over my head, when I met him face to face in the streets of Washington or in the rooms or corridors of the Capitol building.

"However, I have no unfriendly feeling for him. I could have consistently and logically voted for the resolution declaring the office of the Speaker vacant, but I am not fighting any one personally. I am trying to destroy a legislative machine, and I think the insurgents have damaged it so badly that it will never again run very smoothly. All machines grow dangerous and corrupt with time, no matter how good they are at the start. But they are being broken, simultaneously, in every part of the country, on the theory that in the very nature of things, they are the secret confederates of monopolies and trusts."

BORN IN BUCKEYE STATE.

As a child, Judge Norris lived among eighty acres of stumps in Sandusky county, Ohio. His father died when he was 4 years old. A brother was killed in the Civil War. The mother was left with ten daughters and a son. She was an uneducated woman—being able to read, but finding it difficult to write her name. "My mother," Judge Norris said, "was good to her children, and sent every one of us to school. We attended to our business," he added, with visible satisfaction, "and as students beat any other family, large or small, in the community. All of us went out to work among our neighbors, and, in the course of time, most of us became teachers."

"When did you begin to earn wages?"

"At the age of 10, going to a farmer whom we knew and getting 50 cents a day and my board. I was a strong boy and when I was 12 years old could bind as much wheat as a man. I have never seen any one who could beat me in the harvest field or at husking corn. When I ran the first time for Congress, Ashton C. Shallenberger, now Governor of Nebraska, was my Democratic opponent. We had a joint debate in an agricultural settlement and he ridiculed my practical knowledge of farming. I challenged him on the spot, saying I would husk corn with him the next day, from 7 o'clock in the morning until 6 o'clock in the evening, and if the judges didn't decide that I was the better man, I would resign my place on the Republican ticket and let the election go by default. However, Shallenberger refused my offer. I was elected by a plurality of 181 votes, in a district composed of eighteen counties. While I have no definite information on the subject, I am inclined to think that my challenge to Shallenberger, getting out among the farmers, did me no harm.

WORKED WITH THRASHERS.

"The summer I was 12 years old I was paid $2 a day for helping to bind fifty acres of wheat. I remember that I received $11 in a lump, which was more money than I had ever seen before. Thus I worked until I was 15 years of age. For two seasons, I was with a thrashing machine, holding my own with the strongest of men. Meanwhile, of course, I had attended school three months every winter. My brother, previous to his enlistment in the army, had been a student at Baldwin University, some thirteen miles from the city of Cleveland. Accompanied by two of my sisters, I matriculated there when I was 15. I had saved some money and had sold a colt for $50. We rented three upstairs rooms and kept house. The following summer I returned to the wheat fields of Sandusky county.

"My nephew, the son of one of my sisters, lived in the country south of Toledo. He was an enthusiastic and bustling young fellow of my own age. Going to the directors of a school near his home, he said that he had an uncle who had been away to college and wanted to teach. So I was employed for the winter at $30 a month and my board. By and by the directors learned that the uncle who had been away to college was only 16 years old. They sent for me and I traveled fifty miles, a long and costly journey, as I thought, that they might inspect my person and inquire into my testimonials. O. P. Heller was the dominating director and did all the talking. His two colleagues wagged their heads and agreed.

"'We feel,' Heller said, 'that your nephew fooled us. We supposed we had hired a man, when he told us you were his uncle. Now we find that you are a boy, like himself, and are wholly without experience. Furthermore, the school you are to teach is more unruly than any other in the State of Ohio. The man we hired last year was driven away, as was the one we had the year before. But a contract is a contract and we want to act fairly. You wait here until we go into that bedroom and hold a conference.'

"When Heller and his two meek associates returned he said they had decided to put me on trial for a month. 'Understand,' he ordered me, 'you are to walk into the schoolhouse the first day with half a dozen gads under your arm. And you are to write out your rules and nail them on the door. Tell the scholars that the first one who disobeys the rules will be whipped within an inch of his life. Then make your threat good. Whip, and whip hard, and no matter how you whip we shall stand at your back.'

"I didn't carry any gads under my arm the first day," Judge Norris went on to say. "No rules were nailed against the door. But a minute after the bell rang, the school was in an uproar. Big girls were walking all over the room loudly talking and laughing. I got my eye on the ringleader and ordered her to sit down. She smiled at me and talked louder, and walked faster than ever. She was tall as myself. Then I did something over which I have always felt ashamed—I sent for a gad and whipped her. In five minutes, I whipped her again. I whipped her the third time, a little later. She was O. P. Heller's daughter.

"Next, I expelled the prettiest and most popular girl in the district because she wouldn't answer when her name was called. She had caused the school to be broken up the year before. The second day I heard of a conspiracy of two youths as big and strong as myself to give me a beating. I called one of them to my desk and wore out a thick gad on his legs and shoulders. The beating I was to suffer was indefinitely postponed. On Friday the directors came and sat down in front of the blackboard. My heart was in my mouth. I had flogged O. P. Heller's favorite daughter.

KEEP UP THE WHIPPING.

"'We were afraid,' Heller said, standing up to make a speech, 'that Mr. Norris, only a boy, like some of yourselves couldn't teach this school. We have changed our minds. He is satisfactory and the directors are behind him. By our order, he will whip you until there isn't an inch of whole skin on your bodies when you deserve it. If he kills any of you, it will be all right. He expelled a girl because she wouldn't answer at roll call, and we approve his action. Still she is known to us all and liked by us all, and we now think she should come back.'

"'She can return,' I said, arising and facing the directors—it was a risky thing to do, but I accepted the chance—'if she will take her seat in an orderly manner and answer "present" in the hearing of all the pupils. If she is unwilling publicly to conform to the rules, having broken them in that manner, she cannot come back so long as I am the teacher of this school.' Heller hung his head in deep thought for a moment and then said: 'Mr. Norris is right.' Nor did the girl return that winter.

"Inside of two weeks I was going to dances with my older pupils. While my mother was not a church member, she wouldn't let me dance, play cards, fiddle, or do anything else that was equally as sinful and foolish. So my big girls taught me to dance, and the big boys and I became comrades—before 8 o'clock in the morning and after school was dismissed for the evening. I drew $150 at the end of the term—I hadn't spent a cent all winter. While waiting for the grain to ripen, I split rails, chopped down trees and grubbed brush in a clearing. In the autumn I entered the Northern Indiana Normal School at Valparaiso, where I remained three years, boarding myself, going hungry at times, and studying science and law along with my regular course. I worked in the country during vacations.

AGAIN A TEACHER.

"After I was graduated in law, I returned to Ohio and taught school near Cleveland, that I might get money for a library of law books. My mother had heard that Washington Territory was a good farming region, and at her suggestion I went there to find her a suitable location and a town in which to practice my profession. I crossed the continent in an immigrant car that was attached to a freight train, living on crackers and cheese and sleeping on slats without a mattress, a pillow, or any bedclothes.

"On reaching Walla Walla, I had $32.50. I had spent $112 in getting there. Writing to my mother, I told her to keep her farm and remain in Ohio. I wore out my shoes in searching for employment. When my money was nearly gone, I called on the County Superintendent. There was a school at Bolles Junction, he said, but it was closed because no one would board the teacher. The old settlers, some of whom were worth $100,000 apiece, were hostile to newcomers. Bolles Junction was printed in black type on my map, and I thought it a place of some importance.

"I got there after dark on Sunday night. No building was in sight but a railroad station, and it was nailed up. A man named Lee, the boss of a number of Chinese laborers, took me in. I slept on the floor of his sitting-room. He had three rooms for himself, his wife and four children. The next day I vainly tramped the neighborhood for a boarding place. Lee would have accommodated me, but he had no bed. Well, I got a bedtick from Mr. Lee, filled it with straw, and slept in a shed that had been occupied by Chinese until they were transferred to better quarters. I was 20 years old, and times had gone so hard with me that I was almost discouraged. I taught seven pupils that winter, and the next spring I traveled to San Francisco in the hold of a vessel, and thence back to Ohio in an immigrant train.

IMPRESSED BY NEBRASKA.

"The State of Nebraska was fair to see, from the car window, and I concluded to return and make it my permanent home, a purpose I carried out later. A sister just outside the city of Cleveland, the wife of a farmer, had accumulated $300 by the sale of butter and eggs. She loaned me the money at [illegible] per cent. I gave her my note and hurried West. My practice as a lawyer began at Beatrice, in Southern Nebraska; that is, I was ready and willing to practice, but, as a matter of fact, no one gave me the chance. I spent my sister's money and she sent me $60 more that she had worked for and saved a little at a time.

"I looked and waited, but, believe it or not, I didn't earn a penny—not a solitary cent—and, weary at heart, moved six counties west, to Beaver City, just north of the Kansas line. I defended a man charged with assault and battery and received $5, and that was my first fee as an attorney and counselor-at-law. Inch by inch, battling day and night, I made some headway in my profession. But it was a long time before I could repay my sister. After I was elected to the bench I removed to McCook, to be more nearly in the center of the district."

"In what public question, aside from changing the rules of Congress," I asked, "are you the most interested?"

"Peace, the peace of the world, because, I dare say, I have had so little of it myself."

EDUCATIONAL DRIFT.

The success of the open-air school in Chicago has given an impetus to a similar change in educational methods in other cities. Some of the open-air schools already established have detachable roofs and sides for use in inclement weather. Some have tent-like roofs. One of the new school buildings now being erected in Washington will have arrangements for a school on its roof for the benefit of the weak children. If the statistics are correct, the Chicago young woman with the healthy looks took a class of thirty pallid, listless, half-hearted and weak-lunged kiddies and put an average of seven pounds each on the whole class in a month's time.

The average expense of an education at Princeton University is $3675. The average college man, according to President Nollen, at 25 earns $27 a week, or $1404 a year. That is, within four years after graduating, if he graduated at the average age, he is yearly earning nearly 40 per cent. of the cost of his education. Ten years later his income annually is over 60 per cent. on that investment. Education pays, and pays for itself in less than three years.

"The properly trained teacher, no matter what the subject is he imparts to his pupils, or in what department of a school he teaches, is an economic value to the community and State which is hardly realized or appreciated by the general public," says President Wright of the East Carolina Teachers' Training School of Greenville, N. C. "It is the trained teacher who saves time in preparing the boy for his life work, who exerts a powerful influence in the formation of character and who, in many cases, instills in the minds of his charges worthy ambition and becomes an unconscious guide to the pupil in his after life."

There is a growing appreciation of play as full of meaning. It is the language of children's emotion and thought. The Germans have grasped the idea by forming organizations for furthering folk and children's play; that is, organizations for promoting play, not mere playgrounds, but the art of playing anywhere and finding facilities. The German idea is to bring all the people together in their gaming, and to foster a love for all sorts of outdoor sports. The young and the old should go together, not only in excursions and tramps, but in playing the simpler games of the field, and skating in winter. Germany is promoting a curriculum of play games, and afternoons for compulsory or voluntary play are connected with the schools.

Drew Line on Umbrellas.

The late Duc de Sagan set many a fashion among French dandies, and among others that of wearing a single eyeglass with a very wide black ribbon—a practice followed for many years by Parisians who wished to look smart. In one respect, however, his most faithful admirers refused to follow the Duke. This was when he took to carrying an umbrella on horseback. He first indulged in this eccentricity at a race meeting. When a shower came down and the leader of fashion was seen to be holding an umbrella over himself and his horse, the sensation was immense. No one ventured to imitate him, however, and ultimately he abandoned the practice.—[London Chronicle.

To The Stockholders
Los Angeles Investment Co.

The officers of the company are desirous of increasing our small stockholders' Guarantee Fund to $100,000, and have inaugurated a system of calling on every stockholder who has received back his entire investment in the shape of dividends to donate one per cent. of all dividends thereafter received by him to the Guarantee Fund. This will, we believe, bring our Fund up to the desired $100,000. The Fund has increased in the past two and one-half years from $12,000 to over $35,000. Stock bought by this fund is sold at auction every week.

The creation of this Fund has been, in our opinion, one of the best moves ever made by this Company. It is a general understanding among the public that corporations squeeze out their small stockholders. This Company has always protected its small stockholders, and we hope always to be able to say in the future, as we can of the past, that no stockholder has ever lost a cent by investing in this company.

The value of small stockholders in furnishing us customers for homes, and advertising, is too great to be even estimated.

The Oil Industry in California.

LAND OF GUSHERS.

DEEPER SAND IN SUNSET FIELD.

Significant Strike That May Mean Much.

One Thousand New Rigs of Recent Construction.

Late News from the Kern County Oil Fields.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

BAKERSFIELD, April 9.—Although its importance has been largely overshadowed by the popular interest in the more spectacular gushers, one of the most significant developments of the past week was the discovery by the Pacific Sunset Oil Company of a deeper sand than had previously been known in the upper part of the Sunset field on the south half of the southeast quarter of section 34-12-24.

Previous wells in this vicinity were 500 to 600 feet deep. Below that point the early drillers found water, and did not venture farther. The Pacific Sunset has gone through the water sand and found the deeper oil at 1080 feet. The second sand was explored to a depth of 200 feet, when the gas pressure became so strong that work on the well was stopped in order to prepare for the reception of the oil in case a gusher is developed.

The immediate result of the strike has been to cause the Hanford-Sanger Oil Company to start deeper drilling on its twenty-acre tract in the northeast quarter of section 3-11-24, and on the southeast quarter of the same section. Other companies will drill on the west half of section 3, and on other land which lies above the outcroppings of the first oil sand and which accordingly had been counted as barren. A mile or two farther back in the hills are some traces of another outcrop, and it is now believed that this may be the upturned edge of the deep sand struck by the Pacific Sunset.

The Pacific Sunset's well is about a mile and three-quarters southwest from the Lakeview, and on section 35, which lies between, the Union Oil Company has gone into what is supposed to be the same strata underlying all three properties, and probably the whole of the Sunset field. The Lakeview struck the gusher sand at 2285 feet, or almost exactly 1000 feet deeper than the sand found by the Pacific Sunset. This would indicate a rather steep, but by no means improbable dip to the northwest. The depth at which the Union is reported to have found the sand agrees with the theory that the stratum is continuous.

Whether or not the sand which has been struck by the wells out on the Maricopa flat, but which it has been impossible to penetrate so far on account of gas pressure, is the same as the Lakeview sand, can only be tested by drilling in the intervening territory, but such is the general belief. Whether the deep sand crosses the deep gulch by Hazelton is another question to be demonstrated by the drill, but the fact that the shallow oil stratum is found on both sides is a good indication for those who have properties farther south and east.

ON MARICOPA FLAT.

Former Mayor Schmitz of San Francisco has started work with his new rotary drilling rig on the Lady Washington's well No. 2, on section 7, 11-23. Much difficulty has been experienced in the completion of wells with the standard rig out on the flat where the Lady Washington is located on account of the strong gas pressure. If Schmitz's rotary solves the problem it probably will result in the early completion of several wells which have been delayed exasperatingly in their latter stages.

The California King is building a derrick on the northeast quarter of section 7, 11-23.

Reports are again in circulation that the Santa Fé has a showing of oil in its well on section 24, 11-23, which is back in the hills southeast of old Sunset. The value of the indications has not yet been established, but the companies operating in that vicinity are hopeful of finding the deeper sand that was uncovered by the Pacific Sunset about a dozen miles to the northwest. In addition to the Santa Fé, which has a number of derricks up in the south part of 11-23, a number of the lessees of the Sunset Security Oil Company expect to be drilling within a few days.

Although the number of rigs actually at work is very small in the long strip of unproven territory extending from Old Sunset to Tejon Cañon, the number of new derricks erected continues to grow, and preparations to drill are going forward. At the east end of this strip the Visalia people who have taken over the Wheeler-Bancroft well are still at work pulling the ten-inch casing. They are meeting with success in this effort, and when it is finished they plan to sink the twelve-inch casing deeper. One other company has built a derrick not far from the Wheeler-Bancroft.

Utah and Toronto people, headed by A. W. Scott and James Morgan, have leased forty acres from the Midway Queen in section 22, 32-24, and have started development work. Barry Hamilton of Goldfield, Ross Clark and W. A. Clark are drilling on the northeast quarter of the southwest quarter of the same section, which lies across the flat from Maricopa, about half way between the Lakeview gusher and the Honolulu's famous well.

The Honolulu's well on section 4, 32-24, is down close to the big gas-bearing stratum which was uncovered in the celebrated well on section 10 at 1560 feet, and another sensational gusher or gasser is expected. The same company is down over 1000 feet on section 14 in the same township. Both wells are being drilled with rotaries. Sections 4, 10 and 14 lie in a row, diagonally, along the supposed line of the gas-bearing anticline of the Buena Vista hills. If the new wells repeat the performance of the first Honolulu gasser and the Standard's gasser farther to the northwest, they will go far to confirm the ambitious hopes of the locators in the Elk and Buena Vista hills district, and the present fever of development in that territory will add a few degrees of heat.

GETTING READY TO DRILL.

While there is no actual drilling farther north along the Buena Vista lake front of the Midway field than the Honolulu's well on section 4, active preparations are under way for many wells. Barlow & Hill have built bunkhouses on sections 3 and 4 in the Elk range and are preparing to lay a water line from Buena Vista Lake. Materials for four derricks have been ordered. Three other companies are laying water lines from the lake to their properties in the Elk and Buena Vista ranges. Some of these will be ten or twelve miles long.

new territory north of Midway is steadily growing. In all it is conservatively estimated that not fewer than 1000 derricks have been built in the unproven territory of the West Side fields from Coalinga to Sunset since the boom in development began, or since early last winter. While the Devil's Den comes in for a good number of these, the Midway-Sunset district can claim the larger portion. Had it not been for the difficulty of getting materials, the number of new rigs would have been much larger, and the rush of work seems certain to continue until all the territory, including possibly thirty townships, is proven or found not to be oil land.

The only thing that could check this development would be definite, conclusive action by Congress on the subject of the disposal of oil lands, and unless this action is taken at this session it appears now that the proving or disproving will be accomplished first.

Well No. 1 of the J. M. S. lease, on the Mt. Diablo's section 26, 32-23, has been finished with 200 feet of oil sand at 990 feet.

The Traders' Oil Company has brought in a 200-barrel well at 1400 feet on section 23, 32-23.

The United Oil Company is getting about 1000 barrels of oil from its wells Nos. 1 and 2 on section 6, 32-23. Trouble with the sand seems to be about over in these two wells, but No. 3 is still sanded up. It is expected that No. 4 will be completed within a few days. All these wells are in the North Midway gusher territory.

Hale, McLeod and Waite have taken leases to prove and patent for three-quarters of the land, sections 26, 28, 30 and 32, 31-24, in the Buena Vista hills.

The Eagle Creek Oil Company has shut off the water in its well No. 2 by driving its ten-inch casing into shell at 1400 feet. The 12½-inch casing will be drawn and the well drilled into the shale, which a small test hole shows is lying just below the shell. The Eagle Creek's well No. 1 is flowing 500 barrels per day.

LEASE GUSHER LAND.

The Octagon Oil Company, organized by E. A. Waltsee, J. M. Danziger, O. E. Monnette, Dr. W. A. France, R. P. Wellman, G. G. Gillette, John R. McKinnie, R. P. Davey and Sidney Smith has purchased the north half of fractional section 30, 12-23, from Parker Barrett, Julius Fried and J. M. Dunn. Materials have been ordered for a rig, and the tract, which contains about sixty acres, will be drilled at once. The land is just a mile east of the Lakeview gusher. All the men in the new company are experienced oil operators, and are connected with other producing companies.

The Consolidated Midway and a company of Los Angeles people represented by Mr. Hoffman are drilling on leases from rival locators on section 32 12-23. Both companies have erected rigs and the Consolidated Midway is drilling. The locations—at least one set of them—are held by local people, among whom is Harry Massena.

Another contest growing out of the extension of the Midway field, is between oil men who have filed locations on land in sections 28, 32 and 34, in township 32-25, south of Buena Vista lake. The land is so far out of the supposed oil belt that it is not shown on the oil maps. Some months ago homesteads were filed on the land by former Supervisor Frank Corsett, Thomas Foltz, Ivorly Banks, James Preston, Jule Preston, Lizzie Preston and others with the expectation, it is stated, of putting in pumping plants and making farms of it. A short time ago mining locations were filed on the land, and it is reported that an effort will be made to place derricks thereon. Mr. Corsett says he considers that the land is outside the mineral belt, and that he and the other homesteaders have the best and, so far, the only right to it. They propose to maintain possession until they are told to get off by the courts or some other legal authority.

Oil companies in the gusher belt of North Midway are devoting less thought just now to bringing in wells than to what to do with the oil when the way is opened for it to shoot out to the surface. The Mays, the California Midway and the Pioneer Midway are all letting their gushers lie idle and are hoping the bridges of sand in the casing will hold until arrangements for caring for the oil are completed, and the Santa Fé, which is down close to the oil sand in two wells, has stopped drilling, and is building big sump holes. Any or all of these wells could be started flowing at any time, but the waste of oil that has so frequently attended the bringing in of gushers has taught the wisdom of ample preparation before the subterranean forces are turned loose.

The American Oilfields Company has brought in a shallow well on section 36, 31-23, and is drilling six others on the same section. It is running three strings of tools on section 32, 32-22, the property recently purchased from the Monte Cristo.

The Coin Oil Company has struck brown shale with a good showing of oil on section 4, 31-22, at something over 2000 feet. The Mascot has brought in a 200-barrel producer in its twenty-fourth well on section 26, 32-23. The twenty-sixth well is spudded in. On the success of the Coin and other companies drilling in the vicinity will depend the decision of the Oleum Development Company's directors to drill on its lease on section 4, 31-22, on the North Midway front. The Union is down about 2500 feet on section 10, and is reported to have passed through several light strata of oil sand, from which it is estimated that a ten-barrel well might have been developed. Other companies drilling near by are the Midway Chief and Yancey and Barnsdale, but little has yet been proved concerning the territory except that the oil, if it is found, will be at a great depth. Some McKittrick oil men claim that there is a break in the formation which shows in the hills north of where the Union is drilling and that the oil sand may not be found there.

Pioneers on the South McKittrick front are reported to be meeting with very encouraging signs. The Lockhart went through a six-foot stratum of oil sand at 1070 feet and is going on after the deeper sands. C. F. Whittier is down about 1200 feet on section 13, 31-22. The Blue Grass, over the line in San Luis Obispo county, is starting a well on section 24, 31-21.

The Mahaska Oil Company, organized by A. P. Spencer, Joe Beeson, Iowa merchants, and other Iowa capitalists, is getting ready to develop the south half of the north half of section 36, 29-21. The land is about two and a half miles north of the main McKittrick development. The Mahaska's property is eleven miles north of the section where the Blue Grass is drilling, a fact that gives some idea of the recent extension of the McKittrick field.

The San Francisco-McKittrick Oil Oil Company, which had a production of about 45,000 barrels, has finished its sixteenth well and started its seventeenth.

The Reward Oil Company on section 11, 30-21, has two strings of tools running. It will build eight more derricks at once.

The Argue Oil Company, organized by H. H. Argue, Drew Pruitt and D. J. Gonyer, has leased the south half of the north half of the southeast quarter of section 36, 29-25, and forty acres in section 31, 29-20, Templor district. The land lies close to the Di-good wells have been brought in at 400 feet depth.

TO ORGANIZE OIL EXCHANGE.

J. A. Hayden, W. H. Hill and W. S. Boggs have issued a call for a meeting of oil men to be held at the Board or Trade rooms on Monday evening at 8 o'clock for the purpose of organizing the Bakersfield Oil Exchange. The call states that in the belief of those who have canvassed the situation Bakersfield, being in close proximity to several of the largest producing fields of the State, is the logical place for the center of the market for oil securities. It is stated that one of the purposes of the proposed board will be to encourage the listing of stocks of companies that may not yet be producing, but which are operating in proximity to proven territory, such stocks offering the best field for speculation. All companies filing listing applications will be required to furnish a statement of their financial condition, title to land, indebtedness, etc. The exchange will be limited to 200 members, and the initiation fee will be $50.

SANTA MARIA FIELD.

BROOKSHIRE GETS GUSHER.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SANTA MARIA, April 9.—Things are doing on the Stock Exchange these days, and local brokers are kept busy gathering in whatever loose stock is floating around. The cause of this present excitement is the coming of Brookshire No. 9 in the "oil field."

Oil was struck in this well way back in November, but the company decided upon deeper drilling, so the well was carried to a depth of 3666 feet, which point was reached on Tuesday. About 2 o'clock in the afternoon there was a sudden deafening noise, a terrific bubbling, then a column of water shot into the air. Over 3000 feet of this poured over the top of the derrick, then the "brown gold" began to spout. It is estimated that the well produced at the rate of over 10,000 barrels a day before it was got under control. The operators now have it in hand and it is gushing steadily at a rate estimated from 500 to 1000 barrels a day.

This bringing in of this well sets at rest all doubts concerning the value of properties in this section of the field, and enhances considerably the worth of adjoining properties such as the Radium and S. E. Hopkins tracts. It also puts a damper on the oft-repeated dictum that the "old field" is rapidly diminishing. It is a well-known fact that the vast Union holdings have scarcely been tapped, and now the smaller tracts in the region of Brookshire will, in all probability, be developed. This new well is situated very close to the famous Hartnell gusher. The gravity is about 27 deg. Baume.

During the past few days much Brookshire stock has changed hands, being bought at prices ranging from $1 to $1.45. Today the local broker was unable to gather in a single share at even $2.10. It is rumored that Brookshire stock sold today at $2.25 on the exchange in San Francisco.

There is but little doubt that May will see the Pinal company under new management. The directors of the company refuse to divulge their plans, but among oil men here it is pretty thoroughly understood that the sale is all but completed, the price being $2,000,000. It is probable that the sellers will retain possession of a certain amount of stock, as well as their holdings in other fields.

Reports on the Los Alamos Petroleum Company's recent producer are to the effect that trouble is being experienced with the pump, Manager Doherty, however, expects to have these difficulties remedied in a day or two.

Considerable activity is going on among promoters just now and changes in some holdings are contemplated. It is also rumored that new companies will soon be ushered in.

Palmer No. 2 is on the pump and reported doing 200 barrels.

SHOE-STRING STRIP.

COMPANY IS ORGANIZED.

The "Shoe-string Strip of Midway" would be a good name for one of the latest properties to be opened up in that oil district. A company known as the Midway Divide Oil Company has just been formed to develop the property, which is 6 miles long, 600 feet wide at the South end and 170 feet wide at the north. It is what is known as an "excess," lying along the west side of township 31 south, range 24 east, bordering on sections 6, 7, 18, 19, 30 and 31, and contains 135 acres.

The following are the directors of the company: George D. Roberts, locator of the property, and vice-president of the company, a veteran oil man who has been drilling in that district for many years, and owner of section 28 in Coalinga; F. M. Benedict, a mining man from Salt Lake and Goldfield, now residing here; F. J. J. Sloat, formerly interested in the inter-urban railways of Ohio, and one of the principal owners of the Mountaineer Mines Consolidated of Virginia City; Oscar W. Roberts, a wealthy rancher and cattle man from Arizona, and C. J. Hevler the local real estate operator. O. E. Wern is the secretary.

The company has a complete rig ready for "spudding in" and will begin operations at once. There is a great deal of development work going on in the immediate neighborhood.

Discovery of Oil.

Oil has been found in the lands northwest of the Whittier Mountains, on a part of the old Garvey Ranch, eight miles from Los Angeles, on the lands of John Reifer and E. B. Dykhuizen on San Gebriel boulevard, two blocks south of the Covina line. An expert has pronounced all conditions favorable. Oil prospectors are examining the ground with the intention of developing it.

INDUSTRIAL PROGRESS.

American steel manufacturers have proved themselves abreast of the times in the use of alloys, and it is said that laboratory tests prove that American steel alloys have a tensile strength equal to, if not in excess of, the best foreign product.

Expert metallurgists of the American Locomotive and other large plants have demonstrated this beyond peradventure, and the result will be an elevated standard of material in the 1911 models unattainable heretofore, and existing in lesser degree with models of past seasons. This fact brings the efficiency of running gear to the highest point ever known, diminishing prospective cost of repairs materially and placing the American automobile industry on an even competitive basis with the world.

Although millions of bales of cotton are grown in the South and more than one-half of the crop annually exported for the use of European mills, some of the southern mills have been making recent tests of cotton grown in India. About 7000 or 8000 bales of Indian cotton have been imported and distributed in small trial lots to various southern mills. It is explained that this importation is undoubtedly due to the high prices and small crop of American cotton, and the extra large supply of good Indian cotton.

Indian cotton is used for coarse yarns because of its short staple, 5-8 to 3-4 of an inch, and is good and clean. In the rough it is mixed with American cotton and used for blankets.

are not as close set as those used in other countries, hence outside of India Indian cotton finds better market in Europe and Japan than in America.

Peach growing in Georgia has become an enormous industry, the number of trees in the State exceeding 12,000,000. Individual orchards range in the number of trees from 10,000 to 250,000, and in some of them continued and unbroken rows of trees extend from a mile and a half to two miles. One of the orchards covers an area of 3000 acres and contains about 225,000 trees of different varieties, while another covers an area three miles long and one-half mile wide. In 1908 the crop of peaches amounted to 6000 carloads.

The United States Steel Corporation has become the biggest corporation in the world, according to the New York Commercial, and has more employés than any other. Also it has the biggest pay roll. The average number of men employed by it last year was 195,500, but business was much better at the end of the year than at the beginning, and on December 31 there were on the pay rolls 223,377 employés. The aggregate amount disbursed in wages last year was $151,663,394.

The Steel Corporation, almost alone, of all the companies in the same trade, maintained its wage schedule during and after the panic. Most of the others made cuts of about 10 per cent. a year or so after the panic or when the trade war and open market were declared. The only saving in the wage account in the hard times was in the reduction of the number of the employés. In addition to this exceptional treatment employés have benefited from the company's bonus system, from participating in sales of stock at easy terms and from a pension system.

Such is the demand for tin plate in this country at the present time that the Jones & Laughlin Steel Company, which has been erecting twelve new hot sheet mills at Pittsburgh, has felt compelled to start up the mills as fast as any of them are in condition for action. Already advance orders are on hand to keep the new plant engaged for the rest of the year. A second series of twelve mills will soon be begun, and when completed, an additional twelve will be started.

With the production of automobiles increasing by leaps and bounds, the manufacturers are becoming anxious about the supply of hickory for the wheels. About 130,000,000 board feet are used every year for spokes, rims, axles, vehicle woods and other kindred uses, and about 200,000,000 feet are manufactured into lumber. Hickory comprises only 2 to 5 per cent. of the total standing timber in the hardwood forests of the United States. The total mill value of the hickory used in a year in the United States is $12,000,000.

Snowbank Blew Up.

At Bradford, Pa., a train of natural gas that escaped in one dwelling seeped through a snowbank to a neighboring structure, so that when it became ignited the flames followed it up and wrecked the house from which it escaped. The wrecked dwelling was that of Arthur Burns, whose family was away.

A neighbor lighted a match in his own home; there was a flash, the flames shot under the snow and instantly the report followed. When he stepped outside he found the Burns home a wreck, and where had been a snowbank between the dwellings the snow had been blown asunder and was melted, marking a well-defined path.

Investigation proved that a gas jet had been left burning in the Burns home, which is said to have blown out. The snow was four feet deep and was heavily incrusted on the surface. The loss to the Burns home is $3000.

Union Has Tanked 500,000 Barrels Worth $300,000 in 23 Days—500,000 Barrels More in Reservoirs

MARICOPA, April 6.—There is no change in the Lakeview well, which continues to flow as at first after twenty-three strenuous days. An army of men, numbering 200, has been working day and night, digging reservoirs and laying pipe lines for two miles down the line of flowing oil. Because of danger from fire, all drilling operations nearby have been stopped since the well came in, March 15, and for this reason attempts have been made to get the stream of oil under control. A hood of heavy plank was constructed and slid over the stream, but within a short time the force ripped the plank into splinters.

In consequence of the production of the big well, operations are under way on a number of leases out on the flat to the east, and unusual efforts are being made to secure lumber and supplies for drilling.

PROPERTY

We have a leasehold of 30 acres in Section 5-32-23. We are in line between the St. Lawrence and La Belle on one side, and the Santa Fe, United 1, 2 and 3, Mays, California Midway and Pioneer Midway on the other. All around us wells are being drilled, derricks are going up and capital is going in. It's the busiest spot in the oil fields of California.

The only reason why we are offering stock for subscription at all and at such price as 25 cents a share, is this: We have lately taken lease on adjoining 10 acres, increasing our holdings thereby to 30 acres, and we must get a second string of tools at work within 90 days.

As soon as our announcement of intention to put down a second well was made we found oil drillers, operators, business men and busy men anxious to secure a stock interest in our company. Accordingly, we reopened the books at 25 cents a share. At this price, you buy into an active, going oil company, having brilliant prospects, with a perfected organization, with a rig up on its property and ready to spud in, with Sam Lamb (none better in Midway) as our superintendent, and with every fiber of our united energies strained to make haste in bringing in a gusher on our ground.

Don't let this opportunity slip. Send your order in today. Get the benefits of advances in price of stock as well as of dividends from our net earnings. Hesitate, and you gain nothing. Wait and you lose. Get in and you WIN.

PILGRIMAGE OF IRISHMEN BACK TO THE EMERALD ISLE.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, April 3.—"I believe," Francis J. Kilkenny, originator of the idea of a pilgrimage of Irish-Americans to their native land, and president of the Irish Home-Going Association, said today, "that the number of visitors to the old sod during the coming summer will be such as to surprise two nations. I am in a position to keep my finger pretty well on the pulse of the public which would make such a pilgrimage and I am assured that the migration is to be a bigger thing than even the most sanguine have thought. You see, the Irish have prospered greatly in America. They have the money with which to travel and they all have in their breasts the desire to see their old homes and their relatives again. They have needed but a little impetus to start them galloping homeward. The organization of the Home-Going Association has given them the occasion and they are off.

"Yes, I think the pilgrimage will mean more to both the visitors and to Ireland than merely a pleasant vacation, and a renewal of old ties. The idea of the association is to do a permanent good to the native land. Ireland is greatly in need of capitalization and the injection of certain elements of industrial activity. There is a world of resource in the island but the people have always been without money to develop it. There is a vast quantity of most effective and intelligent labor to be had very cheap but there are few factories or other forms of industry to employ it.

"My idea has been from the first to induce prosperous Irish-Americans to go back, look over the field, and where opportunity offers, to invest certain amounts of capital. There is a great chance for such investments to be made to yield good returns. If a sufficient number of them are made it will mean prosperity to all Ireland. The people will be given an opportunity to earn wages, to save up some little money, to improve their homes, to purchase the necessary tools with which to work their farms to advantage. It will mean the opening up of a new life to them.

"The purpose of the Home-Going Association is to encourage Irish-Americans to go back with just this idea in mind. Of course the mere presence of many tourists in the island would bring a great deal of money there to be spent. But the chance of establishing American industry there is vastly more important. It may seem visionary to some, but I maintain that there is a possibility of the coming migration bringing to Ireland such prosperity as it has never known before. There is a possibility of its marking a turning point in its history among the most important it has ever known.

"It is the purpose of the organization to arrange, as far as possible, for the transportation of the crusaders and for their entertainment on the other side. We are compiling information and broadcasting it as far as we possibly can. The expense of this is being borne through a membership fee that is being paid in joining the association. This amounts to but one dollar and entitles the member to a place on the mailing list, to all the information we have and to instructions as to how to get the best rates from the transportation companies.

"Ireland itself is all agog with the prospect. We receive letters daily telling of the preparations that are going foreward. The papers are full of it, public men speak of little else and priests discuss it from the altar. Village bands are practicing the native airs and fairs and games are being scheduled throughout the country. The visitors are promised the time of their lives.

A Near-Scandal.

What came near being a scandal was narrowly and happily averted. A couple in Nashville about to celebrate a wedding anniversary, sent a small son over to a neighbor's house with an invitation. The boy was not right plain in describing the affair. Said he:

"Mrs. Blank, ma says if she gets married again, will you come to the wedding?"

Mrs. Blank, utterly at sea, looked up horrified; her neighbor had one husband already, and certain indisputable proofs of it in the matter of a houseful of children.

"No," said she. "I most certainly will not."

Yet, the curious invitation, like an unruly ghost, refused to be laid. It haunted the whole family, until finally a member of the Blank household, meeting the boy who brought the invitation, said to him:

"Is your mother really going to marry again, Jim?"

"Yes, ma'am," replied the boy; "she is going to marry next Tuesday night."

"Sure enough marry again? Isn't it just a joke?"

"No, ma'am, it isn't a joke. She is going to marry again, but it's"—the boy found himself at sea with his explanation, having never heard of a silver wedding—"she is going to marry again, all right," said he, "but it's the same man, you know."—[Nashville Banner.

ON GUSHER GROUND 5c FIRST BLOCK OF STOCK

The MIDWAY-MARICOPA CRUDE OIL COMPANY holds a 20-year lease on an 80-acre piece of ground which is splendidly located for a giant gusher.

Our property is in section 34-12-23 of the Maricopa-Sunset field. It may be more particularly described as the northern half of the southeast quarter section of 34. The Palmer Oil Company adjoins us on the north.

We are in line with all the Maricopa and Midway gushers, several of which are in our immediate vicinity.

Directly west of us can be seen the spouting torrent of the Lakeview gusher, the Daddy of them all, which for 25 days flowed an average of 40,000 barrels a day, and which has now broken all records and become the GREATEST OIL WELL EVER RECORDED IN HISTORY.

The Lakeview is on fractional section 25-12-23. This is on the dividing line between the Maricopa-Sunset field and what is known as the Midway field. It proves both fields to be practically one and inseparable. In the Maricopa field on section 36-12-23, south of the Lakeview and a little to the east, are the Wellman group of wells, including a gusher, and the Ethel D. gusher. The K. T. & O. gusher is on section 7, over the line.

In the Midway field, on section 30-32-24, northwest of the Lakeview, are the two Standard gushers, the second of which was brought in this week. On section 10-32-24 is the famous Honolulu gusher, which was the surprise of its hour because it proved the existence of oil in prodigious quantities in a district lying to the northeast, ont on the flats, far beyond the line of previous discoveries.

This proves the existence of producing oil territory to be much more ample than had been supposed. It has stimulated great activity in all the region. Derricks are springing up in all directions, and wells are being drilled to prove up sections 20, 28 and 34 in township 32, range 24, and also on the intervening sections between us and the Lakeview.

Our Chances Are Great

Geologiss tell us that we have a singularly favorable site for a giant gusher ourselves. They state that the formations dip toward our 80-acre plat on three sides. So we are actually in a basin of petroleum richness. We should find an immense flow and an abundant quantity of oil, insuring long lived production and a big income earner.

We were exceedingly fortunate in securing this ground. It was coveted by others. Since we became possessed of this valuable lease the best posted oil operators in California have approved our choice.

We propose with the funds subscribed already to put lumber on the ground, set up a rig, install a standard drilling equipment and start work without an instant's unnecessary delay. Arrangements have been made for building the rig, which gives us a distinct advantage, as rig builders are scarce in this region, where so many new companies are trying to begin operations. A fine crew of drillers has been engaged.

We have the men, we have the means, we have the gusher ground. When we have drilled 2000 feet our gusher should be found.

The International Investment Company offers a block of treasury stock in the Midway-Maricopa Crude Oil Co. for public subscription, in such amounts and at such terms and prices that every one can afford to take up some of it.

Most of the Midway Oil companies hold their stock at very high prices, and the purchase of them at that valuation gives the buyer very little chance—almost no chance at all—to make BIG profits.

Your Chance is With Us

When a man is a millionaire he can afford to take small profits. Six per cent. is a good deal on a million. But the small investor—the man working on a salary or a wage—who has only a hundred or two laid by, what does 6 per cent. benefit him? He wants a chance to get in on the "ground floor" somewhere or somehow, in a money-making proposition, where he will get a good run for his money, and be assured a square deal for his ante, and when he wins out he will have a fair start toward a competence.

Many poor men have made fortunes by shrewd investments in oil. We have helped some to make money fast in California oil stocks who have followed our tip, and bought stocks when they were low, and now have doubled or quadrupled their money.

We advise you to make an investment in oil, and to do it right away without waiting too long. Don't come in after everybody else is in! Don't hesitate now, at the psychological moment, to make a big profit for yourself. Set aside what you can safely spare and MAKE YOUR FIRST INVESTMENT IN OIL.

We urge the purchase of MIDWAY-MARICOPA CRUDE OIL STOCK for reasons as follows:

The property is good.
The management is honest.
The time is opportune, and
The price will never be less, and soon will be more.

Unless you can afford to buy your own land and put down your own well the best thing to do is to pool your pile with others, and all go in to operate a good property for mutual benefit. The BIG money is to be made NOW. The little profits will come to those who follow you.

Don't wait to see what the next price will be. Don't wait until we have drilled our first well. Don't wait to see how many thousand barrels our gusher may spout. Waiting will not get you anything. ACTION WILL. If you don't take this chance others will.

THOSE "GOO-GOOS."

HERE'S ANOTHER "REFORMER"; GAYLORD WILSHIRE ACCUSED.

"One by One" They Are Shown Up—Suit by South American Gold Company Stockholders—Much Litigation Over the British Guiana Project Which the Socialist Editor Fathered—Mandamus Asked to Open Books.

[From the New York Sun.]

GAYLORD WILSHIRE, formerly a Los Angeles "reformer" (of the C. D. "Billboard" gang,) who once posed for his picture atop a mountain of gold at Bishop Creek, in Inyo county, Cal., and who has many times posed for his socialist friends as a promoter of mining stock on the real principles of fraternity and equality, is not selling any more shares in his South American Gold Company, at least a socialist brother in the office of Wilshire's Magazine said this much yesterday.

This socialist brother spoke in the absence of Gaylord Wilshire, who is at present in British Guiana. His absence and the fact that he is not selling any more shares in the South American Gold Company may or may not have significant relation to some complicated litigation at present being threshed out in three courts of New York. The withdrawal of the shares of the South American Gold Company from the market of the socialist community must have been done suddenly, for until very recent time much that was exhilarating to read about the red gold of British Guiana was to be found in circulars distributed from the office of Wilshire's Magazine at No. 200 William street.

Yesterday before Justice FitzGerald in the Supreme Court one small echo of the litigation about the affairs of Gaylord Wilshire and the South American Gold Company made itself heard. It was when John J. O'Connell, representing the minority holders of the mining stock, appeared in court to press his plea for the issuance of the peremptory writ of mandamus against William H. Leffingwell, the secretary of the South American Gold Company, ordering him to permit certain stockholders to examine the stock book of the company and to take memoranda therefrom. On February 5 this demand had been made upon Leffingwell, who is also secretary and treasurer of Wilshire's Magazine, at the office of the magazine and Leffingwell, while allowing a view of the stock book, refused to permit any memoranda to be made from its pages. Persisting in this refusal, Lindley Vinton, a stockholder in Wilshire's South American mine, brought the matter in court.

But behind this latest move against the real principles of fraternity and equality upon which Gaylord Wilshire does mining business stretches a long trail of litigation, the end of which is not yet in sight. The story of this South American venture of the socialist editor differs in important details from that of the Bishop Creek bonanza; the chief point of difference is that both Wilshire and those who are fighting him believe that this time he really has a valuable mining property.

Three years and more ago Wilshire ran across Lindley Vinton, a practical mining man, who had discovered and obtained the purchase rights to a gold deposit in British Guiana, which could be worked by hydraulicking. Wilshire agreed to finance the venture in return for two-thirds of the stock, and an Arizona corporation called the British Guiana Gold Company was organized in April, 1907. Wilshire issued bonds payable in two years and aggregating $35,000. He issued them in the name of the company and took them up himself. Because there was some doubt as to the legality of a foreign company working mines in the colony of British Guiana, an operating company, known as the Tassawini Company, was organized under the laws of the colony, and the stock of this South American corporation became the sole assets of the British Guiana Gold Company of Arizona.

Since it had been understood by all the stockholders in Wilshire's mine that no dividends were to be paid until all of the outstanding bonds had been taken up, no plaint was made by any of the holders of shares outside of Wilshire's two-thirds block when the output of the mine—and even those who are at outs with Wilshire now agree that there is an output—continued without the declaration of a dividend.

Until May of last year all went smoothly in the financial camp of brotherly love; then something dropped. Lindley Vinton and other minority shareholders did not hear it drop right off, and therein lay one of the causes for the present thunders in and out of court.

On May 3 an action was brought in the Supreme Court of Westchester county against the British Guiana Gold Company in the name of Henry L. Hunter to recover $15,957.23 on eight promissory notes executed by the company and alleged to have been indorsed by Wilshire and by him to have been indorsed in turn to Hunter. One of the notes was for $15,052 and bore the date of April 22, 1909.

Hunter is the father of Fred C. Hunter, attorney and member of the law firm of the McReynolds & Hunter, which does the legal work for Wilshire and during the life of that company for the British Guiana Gold Company as well. Though Fred C. Hunter's father thus appeared against him as plaintiff, the suit was undefended by the mining company and judgment went to Henry Hunter by default.

A transcript of that judgment was not docketed in the office of the County Clerk of New York until August 3. When the Sheriff went out to execute thereon he found the sole assets of the British Guiana Gold Company to be the stock of the Tassawini Company, and these he seized. They were sold at public auction in the Courthouse on August 17. Henry Hunter was their purchaser, and he paid $500 for the lot.

Three days later Gaylord Wilshire sent circulars to the stockholders in the British Guiana Gold Company, telling of the organization of a new company. This was the South American Gold Company, said Wilshire's circulars; the new company possessed all the property of the old British Guiana Gold Company, which was earning $100,000 a year. The new stocks would pay one-half of 1 per cent. a month, read the Wilshire prospectus, and the first installment would be payable on November 30 of the same year.

It was not until this glowing promise came to the hands of the minority stockholders of the old British Guiana Gold Company that they knew what had happened in the Westchester court and at the Sheriff's sale in New York. They immediately began to look out for their interests.

On September 7 an action was brought against Wilshire and the officers of the old mining company, all of whom held some portion of Wilshire's original controlling two-thirds interest. The action was brought in the Supreme Court by Josephine C. Vinton, who held 169,600 shares of the old stock. The complaint made some plain charges against the fraternity and equality of Wilshire's business dealings with his brother socialists. One of these was "that the note for $15,052, alleged to have been delivered to the said Wilshire on April 22, 1909, was not made and delivered to him on or about that day because the said Wilshire was then on the high seas between South America and New York and did not reach New York until May 3; that the said note was given without any legal or valid consideration and was a fraud upon the British Guiana Gold Company and its stockholders."

The complaint continued to say that all the officers of the mining company knew that Wilshire's purpose in indorsing all these notes outstanding against the mining company to Hunter, the father of the mining company's counsel, "was to obtain a snap judgment against the corporation in a county in which it was not domiciled; that the failure to file the transcript in New York county for almost two months after rendition of judgment was to let the matter go until the middle of summer, when everybody was out of town." There had been conspiracy and fraud to freeze out the minority stockholders, the complaint declared finally.

After this suit had been filed Wilshire made a compromise with the plaintiffs by giving them share for share of their old stock out of the stock of the South American Gold Company. But that was not the end of the trouble. November 30 came and passed, but the minority stockholders at least saw no signs of the promised dividend. Their lawyers said that Wilshire had told him that to people who bought stock directly from him he guaranteed payment of dividend; as for the rest, well—

When those dividends to people who had not bought directly from the promoting socialist were not forthcoming another suit was instituted in the Supreme Court, this was one to recover dividends. That action is still pending.

In his latest literature on the subject of the South American Gold Company—and no more of these were to be had, it was said at the office of Wilshire's Magazine — the statement was made that between September 1, 1909, and January 1, 1910, between $50,000 and $55,000 had been taken out of the company's mines in British Guiana. Yet no accounting for the disposition of this money was made to the minority stockholders. It was the demand for such an accounting that raised the case to its present status before Justice FitzGerald.

In seeking the writ the lawyer for the Vintons set forth that the offices of the South American Gold Company were at No. 200 William street in this city. That is where Wilshire's Magazine is published and whence comes all the literature about the red gold of British Guiana. But Leffingwell, the secretary of the mining company, took the stand yesterday to deny that the company's offices were there or any other place in New York, or that they ever had been.

The offices of the South American Gold Company are located in the home of William H. Leffingwell, William H. Leffingwell said, and that is in Arlington, N. J.

So if Justice FitzGerald, who took the matter of issuing a writ under advisement, cannot see his way clear to issuing a peremptory writ because of Leffingwell's statement, Lawyer O'Connel for the Vintons will bring the question of the location of those elusive offices before a jury. He has already brought action against Leffingwell in the Fifth District Municipal Court, under a law which imposes a penalty of $250 on any secretary of a corporation who refuses to show a stock book of that corporation to a stockholder upon demand. O'Connell has brought a separate suit against the South American Gold Company in the same court and under the same statute.

A smoke-consuming device was recently tried on a heavy train of cars at Chicago, and during a run of twenty-eight miles, there was no display of smoke or gas, while the firing was greatly lessened, the saving in fuel consumption being from 35 to 60 per cent. A test of the same device will soon be made on one of the big industrial stacks at Chicago to see if there will be the same successful abatement of the smoke nuisance.

ting concrete buildings to go the full 150 feet of straight elevation allowed steel frame structures, with a like privilege of adding thirty feet in the form of a mansard or sloping roof treatment such as will be used in the Alexandria Annex.

"This question of the height of buildings is of the utmose importance," said Haley to a representative of The Times. "When Los Angeles grows to a population of 1,000,000 the floor space devoted to business must be three times what it is at present. The question should be settled now and for all time. It is my conviction that the ordinances discriminate needlessly against reinforced concrete, entailing thereby hardship upon builders.

"In the twelve-story concrete Gloyd building just finished in Kansas City, which has no interior columns, there is a clear span of forty-eight feet. In Los Angeles the Higgins building has only eighteen spans, which is typical of other concrete buildings here. In Kansas City a pressured in reinforced concrete buildings of 750 pounds to the square inch is allowed as against 500 pounds here. It is absolutely ridiculous to forbid this class of buildings to go the full 150 feet allowed to steel frame buildings in this city, when other cities are permitting higher construction, and that with fewer restrictions as to spans and pressure.

"I have nothing to say against steel, but I object to the senseless discrimination against concrete. The hills of Southern California contain an inexhaustible supply of cement and rocks and the best sand in the country is to be found in our river beds. Los Angeles mills are making the best of steel rods for reinforcement. The builder in steel pays a tribute to the steel trust and neglects a home product.

FAVORS CONCRETE.

"I have long had the feeling that extremely high buildings, such as are being built in New York, are a mistake," said Architect Albright. "The New York sky-line resembles nothing so much as a ragged comb with teeth broken off or knocked out here and there. If it were possible to make the buildings of Los Angeles conform for all time to a certain height limit, this could be made the most beautiful city in the country. It can be put down as almost axiomatic, too, that if such restrictions be made to hold, the increase of property values will be over a much larger area than if skyscrapers abound, and the city generally will become much more interesting to those desiring to make investments.

"I approve of the action of the Council in setting the limit for steel frame buildings just where it is, but I firmly believe that reinforced concrete is being unfairly discriminated against, when it is not permitted to go to the same height as steel. It is my conviction that reinforced concrete buildings, properly constructed, are the only type that do not deteriorate with age and the only kind that will successfully resist severe earthquake shocks.

"The aqueduct which supplied water to ancient Carthage was of concrete construction and some of the 100-foot arches which carried that marvel of engineering across ravines are still in a perfect state of preservation. The concrete roof of the Parthenon at Rome has stood the test of centuries and it must be remembered that this dome, which is 142 feet in diameter, is in an earthquake country. The only building at Stanford University which stood through the earthquake was of reinforced concrete construction.

"Reinforced concrete has fire-resisting qualities which commend it to all builders. In the big fires of Baltimore, Boston and Rochester it was the concrete buildings which best withstood the flames. General reinforced concrete building would mean a lessening of fire department expenses and of fire insurance premiums. It is the logical material for this section and I am willing to be quoted as prophesying that the cement mills of Southern California will furnish the building material of the future in almost every class of construction."

Architect A. F. Rosenheim, president of the Los Angeles Architectural Club and of the Architectural League of the Pacific Coast, has this to say: "New York City is the only place in the country where there is any excuse for the skyscraper. The area of Manhattan Island is so limited that buildings practically have no other way to go than upward. Boston has a limit of 125 feet and to her credit it may be said that this limit is rigidly adhered to. On beautiful Copley Square the height limit is ninety feet and even the width of cornices is regulated. The result is an area of which any city in the world might be proud.

"I am opposed," said Mr. Rosenheim, "to building steel buildings over 150 feet in height and do not approve of either the raising of the steel frame limit by means of the mansard roof to 180 feet or of the recent change permitting reinforced concrete buildings to go 133 feet. The old limits of 150 feet for steel and 120 feet for concrete were all right. They were established only after the most careful consideration by competent committees and had the approval of notable architects all over the country. The recent changes were made without that kind of consultation."

John P. Krempel, secretary of the Architectural League of the Pacific Coast, gave Mr. Rosenheim's opinions entire sanction. John Parkinson, senior member of the firm of Parkinson & Bergstrom, who have probably designed more big business blocks than any other one firm in the city, stated that he was entirely satisfied with the building ordinances as they stand today. The provision for a thirty-foot mansard roof above the old 150-foot limit on steel buildings was introduced to the Council by Mr. Parkinson. "This sloping roof," said Mr. Parkinson, "does not interfere with the street light and at the same time it enables builders to get what, in my opinion, is the fairest return for money invested in tall offices or hotel building. No, I do not think we should go any higher. I also think that 133 feet is high enough for reinforced concrete buildings, when everything is considered. I would not go higher than that myself.

John C. Austin was with John Parkinson, Mayor McAleer and J. W. Morrow of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, a member of the commission which established the old height limits in the city building ordinances. Mr. Austin personally was the author of the idea of establishing a limit at all. He stands pat on the original limits of 150 feet for steel, Class A buildings, and of 120 feet for reinforced concrete.

R. B. Young of R. B. Young & Son holds that the laws are fair as they stand. Frank Hudson of Hudson & Munsell, architects of the new County Hall of Records, gives it as his opinion that 140 feet is the proper limit for reinforced concrete buildings. He does not believe that any limit should be put upon steel frame construction. "Los Angeles is going to be as big as any of them," declared Mr. Hudson. "If any man has enough faith in the future of the city to erect a mammoth skyscraper let him, by all means, do it."

"I believe that our streets are wide enough to warrant a height limit of sixteen stories at least," said W. H. Dennis. "This height I would allow only to steel frame structures. For reinforced concrete construction 120 feet is high enough. I doubt the ability of concrete to withstand a serious fire and do not think a builder is warranted in putting in columns as big as are necessary in successful concrete construction above the 120-foot limit."

RAILROAD INTERESTS.

Railroad ties are a simple thing, and their expensiveness is hardly considered by the average individual. In 1907, however, the railroads of the United States paid nearly $100,000,000 for the 144,000,000 ties that were needed for the year's consumption. As the cost of railroad ties increases with the growing scarcity of the forests of the country, it is estimated that by 1920 the annual expense for these elements of railroad operation will amount to $200,000,000. The average life of railroad ties is about seven years, and the railroad companies are alive to the question of the use of preservatives that will enable the ties to have their period of service extended. The satisfactory solution of this question will have much to do in the future with the size of dividends that may be paid to the owners of the railroads.

While the year ending June 30, 1908, embraced the panic period, it did not show much of a decrease in the wages paid employés. The amount paid to labor for the year was $1,035,437,582, a decrease of only 3.44 per cent. from the high record of 1907, and an increase of 9.5 per cent. over 1906. Gross operating revenue decreased $195,299,589, or 7.54 per cent. from 1907. The relatively small decrease in the amount paid to employés is due to the fact that the rate of wages on the railroads was not cut after the 1907 panic.

The amount paid to enginemen in the year ended June 30, 1908, was $84,517,730, a decrease of 3.4 per cent. from 1907, and an increase of 11.75 per cent. over 1906; to firemen $50,747,825, a decrease of 3.29 per cent. from 1907 and an increase of 12.8 per cent. over 1906; to conductors $55,419,055, a decrease of .066 per cent. from 1907, and an increase of 14.53 per cent. over 1906; to other trainmen $97,456,690, a decrease of 2.52 per cent. from 1907, and an increase of 16 per cent. over 1906.

Steam railways of the United States carry a large number of passengers each year, but the railways of New York City carry 66 per cent. more than all of them combined. During the last year these lines carried 1,300,000,000 passengers.

Railroad construction has been so active in Canada that that country has a greater railroad mileage per head of population than any other country in the world. The railway mileage in the Dominion today is a little over 30,000 miles. Six countries in the world—the United States, Russia, Germany, Austria-Hungary, France and British India—have a larger mileage than Canada, but none of these countries, except the United States, with its 229,000 miles, exceeds that of Canada by any very large amount. Canada is building railways at a more rapid rate than any other country, with the exception of the United States, and will some day soon, at the present rate of construction, be the second country in the world in point of mileage. According to the last report of the department of railways here, Canada has invested $1,250,000,000 in railways.

OIL

"Staple, Rather Than Spectacular."

In an article upon the Oil Enterprises in Ventura County, Cal., recently published, the author, Mr. Allen G. Nichols, editor of The Oil Industry, makes the following statements:

"In the Sespe fields great activity is being shown. Here, too, as in all other places, the early drilling was done along the line of seepages, near which the sand outcropped, but a better knowledge of formations and drilling conditions has led the operators to drill further back on the formation where oil could be encountered at greater depths, thus assuring a larger yield and a lighter gravity. Since this has been done, many of the companies are already paying large dividends, and the outlook for the future is of the very best.

"The transportation problem in Ventura county is solved. Several of the companies interested have their private pipe lines. . . . Oil will gravitate either to the pipe lines or to the railroad from any field in Ventura County, and in most cases ocean transportation is not more than 20 miles away.

"With the development that has already been done, WHICH AMOUNTS TO NOTHING MORE THAN PROVING UP OF LARGE TRACTS OF LIGHT OIL PRODUCING TERRITORY, and especially with the assurance that THE VENTURA COUNTY FIELDS ARE EXCEPTIONALLY LONG-LIVED, make investments here STAPLE RATHER THAN SPECTACULAR and certainty as regards prices for the product, which in all cases is more valuable than that produced from the fields further north."

The Rock Island Oil Company is now operating on its 160-acre lease in the Big Sespe field.

We shall sink our first well back from the floor of the canyon, on the Coldwater anti-cline.

We expect to put our well down 600 or 800 feet to the oil sands and to bring in a 100-barrel well.

A pipe line crosses our property, with which we will make connections.

Production of light gravity oil will be worth about $1.00 a barrel. A 100-barrel well is worth $100,000.

We offer a sterling and staple investment, removed from the sphere of the sensational and spectacular.

The ROCK ISLAND OIL COMPANY is capitalized for only $500,000. Our officers are W. H. Wise, president; J. C. Dresser, vice-president; L. Ashmun, secretary. We offer for public subscription a small block of Treasury Stock at 15 cents a share. We make no misrepresentations as to what we have. We invite investors to take a day's trip to our camp and see for themselves. We make no absurd promises. We do assure a square deal and quick action. Soon we shall be drilling. Until then our offer of stock will stand at 15 cents. $150 buys 1000 shares. You may pay in 5 monthly installments if you like.

The Property

In Ventura

Consists of 320 acres held by 40-year lease, one-eighth royalty with option to purchase. Four transportation pipe lines pass the property. Abundance of flowing water for camp and drilling purposes. Shallow drilling territory and a high gravity, high priced oil.

In Midway

The property here consists of 100 acres, being a portion of Section 5-32-25, located in the vicinity of the great Lake View and Honolulu gushers. Our nearest drilling neighbors are on Section 22-32-24, a portion of which recently sold for $1250 per acre. We have this ground under a 20-year lease, 1-8 royalty, with option to purchase within 12 months at $500 per acre. Note the strong point—1-8 ROYALTY, WITH OPTION TO BUY THE LAND. Many companies are to pay double the royalty and cannot buy the land at any price.

The Management

The affairs of the Crown Oil Co. are in the hands of practical oil men and experienced business men who are devoting their time and talents to the success of the company. With a conservative business management backed by ability on one side and on the other EXCELLENT PROPERTY, WELL LOCATED—420 acres in all—every investor who puts his money into CROWN OIL stock has a good reason to expect big returns.

The Development

IN VENTURA we have erected two substantial buildings for our drillers and their families, constructed a road to the location of well No. 1, installed a complete standard drilling equipment and the well itself drilled to a depth of over 700 feet. This well should be a producer within 20 days. We are preparing the site for Ventura well No. 2.

IN MIDWAY two carloads of lumber have been delivered to the property. Workmen have been employed to build the rig, and the machinery will be shipped as soon as the order can be filled from the supply houses of this city. We propose to drill our Midway well No. 1 as quickly as possible. We expect to develop a gusher at about 2300 feet.

LIGHT SPREADING.

Ours is an enlightened age, in which powers of darkness try in vain to exercise their influence for any great length of time. The contention of labor unions that they are the only toilers in the world who have a right to earn a living, that it is their right to fix hours of labor, wages for labor and add other conditions under which labor shall be done, denying all right to any influence in settling these questions to the employers of labor, and finally that if their claims are denied then they have a right to interfere with other laborers who would fill the places they have left when they go on strike, and that this right of interference goes far enough to justify them in the destruction of property, in committing assaults upon persons and even taking human life, all belong to the kingdom of darkness and have no fitting place this side of the darkest of all dark ages. The light is breaking on the industrial world and is sure in long time or short time to blaze out into perfect day which will sweep away all these influences of darkness from the life of wage-earning people.

The latest ray of light, a broad and brilliant one, covers the Dominion of Canada. The authorities under that government are taking up earnestly the question of excluding from the Dominion the heads and representatives, the walking delegates and the presidents of labor unions, who go over from the United States to stir up agitation and to make industrial trouble in the Dominion. They say there are two results of these continual visits from the United States into Canada, one the breeding of trouble, the other the blackmailing of honest laborers of large sums of money which are taken back across the border into the United States to support idle men who will not work and who are too often engaged in breaches of the peace and all kinds of illegal acts in their own country. The Canadian authorities assert that it is very injurious to their affairs to have this thing go on and that it is entirely competent for them to exclude these agitators from the Dominion.

We have no doubt of the correctness of the position taken by the Canadians. We claim the right in this country of excluding from our shores vicious agitators intent upon violating the laws and encouraging others to do the same thing. The walking delegate and the representative of Samuel Gompers is an embryo anarchist to say the least and very often his development toward maturity has proceeded a long way on the road. If we have a right to exclude one class of law-breakers and peace-disturbers it would seem perfectly proper for the Canadian government to take measures to prevent breaches of the peace in their dominions and to protect their people from this species of vicious blackmail.

The contention for the open shop at Portland, Or., is not settled yet, but is in a fair way to be, and in the cause of justice and fair play and according to the spirit of the Declaration of Independence, which gives all men an equal standing before the law, an equal right to earn a living, in other words the right to enjoy life and pursue happiness in each person's own way according to his own judgment, simply not infringing upon the rights of others to do the same thing. The Chamber of Commerce of Portland, with a membership of 1000 of the leading business men of the city, numbering undoubtedly the greatest part of the employers of labor there, has taken the contention up and declares a determination never to yield to the unjust demands of the labor-union people, which is that no person shall be allowed to perform any labor or earn any wages or gain a livelihood in any way in Portland unless he has joined the union, surrendered his rights as an American citizen and his very manhood into the keeping of people who are not marked either for discretion, wisdom or righteous dealings with their fellowmen. With a backing like this in the Chamber of Commerce at Portland there will be no trouble whatever in maintaining the equality of all laboring people before the laws. The contention of the Portland employers is in no sense against the unions. They concede the right of laboring people to join any peaceful organization they please and to do everything possible within the law for their own benefit, improvement and advancement, but they will not be made accessories before the crime to any conspiracy which would deprive an American of his rights or put a man in bondage to his fellowmen to be dictated to how long he shall work, how he shall work and all the other conditions involved in membership in the labor unions, unless he voluntarily enter into the agreement.

There is light, too, breaking through the dark clouds of strife that have been afflicting the city of Philadelphia for a long time past. We referred in a recent article to the vicious interference of a noted politician in this contention in Philadelphia. It seems that Senator Penrose's attempt to bully the traction railroad managers was only half successful after all. The railroad people will not discharge the men who were loyal to them during the worst weeks of the trouble, and they will only agree to restore the rebellious 173 operatives whose discharge caused the strike pending an investigation in a fair way into the trouble between these recalcitrants and their employers. The unions are still standing out with their usual obstinate unfairness for the unquestioned, unquestionable restoration to their places of the 173 rebels, but, so far, they have failed in this as they failed in demanding that only members of their unions should find employment on the cars and that the loyal employees who had refused to join in the vicious strike should be peremptorily discharged. The impression is gaining ground among employers of labor and among non-union laborers every day that a stand must be made finally and forever against the claims of the laborites to be given all the work there is to do in the world, to be put in a position to coerce other men to join their organizations whether they are willing or not, and in case any of their demands are refused at any time in any way by any person that they shall be at liberty to break the laws, destroying property, assaulting persons and even committing murder in order to force their views upon the community.

The cause of freedom depends ultimately upon the free American workingmen. They see better than even the employer the danger of the unions getting absolute control of all the labor in the country. The coal strike now in force in this country sheds light upon the minds of all unprejudiced wage-earners. We have these coal miners, already paid higher wages than men in similar employment outside of the United States, on strike for still higher wages and standing to lose for the whole membership out on strike a matter of $90,000,000. There are many homes of miners, where the head of the family is out on this strike, suffering bitterly every day that passes for the common necessities of life. There are anxious mothers and hungry children, there are bitter tears, sorrow and suffering to no end among the coal miners of the country. If American coal miners were in bad plight one's sympathy would naturally go out to them, but when we realize that they are making 300 or 400 per cent. more than men doing the same kind of work in Europe, however ardently one might wish that they should receive not only an advance of 10 per cent. but of 100 per cent., if that were possible, yet common reason forces us to realize that there must somewhere come a stop to the demands of the coal miners.

But that is not the question we are discussing. If they are dissatisfied with their wages it is their own business whether they shall strike or not. But if they strike we contend that they shall thereupon abstain from all violation of the law, that they shall not interfere with other men who may be willing to work, nor destroy the property of the employers, and above all that they shall not be guilty of personal assaults on their fellow-men, often sometimes to the extent of taking human life. We have only one other contention, and that is that it be left to the laborers themselves whether they go into the unions or not, and that those who are in the unions, whether at work or on strike, shall all obey the law. There never will be the full broad light of the justice of a fair day in America until these two questions are settled beyond all controversy.

CHAPTER I.

REVOLT OF THE HOD CARRIERS.

The Hod Carriers' Union and Mortar Mixers' Protective Association of San Francisco, at a regular meeting held in February, 1911, adopted a resolution to demand an increase in the wages of its members from Four Dollars a day to Five Dollars a day. They further resolved to admit no new members for a period of one year, and not to work on any job where non-union men were employed, or where materials were used which had been made by non-union workers.

The immediate cause of these resolutions was the letting by certain capitalists of contracts for the construction of several blocks of buildings on Market street, including the new Customhouse.

Mr. Phelim Rafferty, who flaunted the prefix of "Honorable," on account of his once having been a constable, in proposing the resolution, said:

"The owners and the conthractors, Mr. Prisident and brethren, are min of large fortunes, sor, yet they now pay us, the sons of honest toil, widout whose brawny arms they could not build at all, only a beggarly four dollars a day. Why, the professors in the public schools, who taich our boys in mathematics and our gurls the pianny, resave nearly as much as that. Now, sor, if we pass this resolution, we put our wages to five dollars a day and hould them there. We have the mortal cinch on the conthractors, sor, for if any mimber of our union works for less than five dollars a day we'll expel him and our bylaws will kape min from the East away, and kape the mimbership of our union in San Francisco small, and we'll be sure of our jobs.

"We've won ivery fight we have thus far made, sor. Do yese rimimber when we compliled builders to tear down the elevators they had erected to hoist bricks and mortar by machinery, and to hire honest laboring min to do the work wid hods? Faith, the bosses will have to be mighty civil to us to git us to work at all, sor. And if they thry to put to work min who are not mimbers of the union their buildings will never rise above the ground, sor, for the other trades will stand by us, sor."

Mr. Lorin French, the millionaire contractor and principal owner of the great San Francisco Iron Works, read in the Call the next morning an account of the action taken by the Hod Carriers' Union, and he smiled a grim smile. That day he sent invitations to a number of capitalists and contractors to attend a meeting at his office, and the result of the conference was the formation of a manufacturers' and builders' league, of which Mr. Lorin French was chosen permanent president.

The daily papers the next morning contained the following advertisement:

WANTED—ON THE FIRST DAY OF NEXT month, hod carriers and mortar mixers to work on the foundations of the new postoffice building. Wages $5 a day. No distinction will be made between members and non-members of Labor Unions. All men employed will be amply protected against interference with their labors. LORIN FRENCH, 2900 Market street.

This base attempt of capital to coerce or bribe the worker into allowing another worker an equal chance of obtaining employment was denounced by Rafferty the next night in a ringing speech at a special meeting of the Hod Carriers' Union, which meeting resulted in a convention of the Federated Trades being ordered.

At this convention it was resolved by a three-fourths majority, after a hot debate, that no member of any trade organization would, on penalty of expulsion, be permitted to work in or upon or in aid of the construction of any building or in any shop, mill, foundry or factory for the manufacture of building material where any person not a member of some trade organization was employed.

"My frent from the Plumbers' Association speaks of this resolution, Mr. President, as a poomerang," said Gustave Blather, a labor lecturer, who EQUAL RIGHTS.

AN ENDLESS CONTROVERSY.

UNION CONDITIONS WILL ALWAYS BE RESISTED.

Employers Have the Same Right to Say What Wages They Can Afford to Pay That Workmen Have to Say for What They Will Work—Case at Porland Is Example.

[Portland Oregonian:] There always will be a conflict between wage-earners and wage-payers. It is a conflict whose roots lie in the basis of human nature. Somewhere, in this endless conflict justice resides. Justice, as to this conflict, depends on practical conditions. Wage-earners ought to have all the pay that reason can demand, no more. The question, then, is, what is reason in any particular case, for all cases are dissimilar. The working people and wage-earners have a term which they keep in constant use. They say those who do not agree to their requirements as to wages and the hours which they demand, are "unfair." But the term "unfair" cannot be defined with strictness, with certainty, with justice, by either side or party in interest. There must be compromise between them.

At Portland just now there is controversy between employers and employed, in many lines of industry. The controversy is as to wages and hours; and moreover as to "closed shop." The wage-workers desire to force acceptance of "the union," not only on all employers of labor, but on all who seek or expect employment for wages. It is resisted by many classes of employers, on the ground that they cannot afford it, that their business will not justify the concessions necessary to meet the several demands.

Now it is clear that this is an insoluble problem. It is clear, too, that it is subject to so many conditions of time and place and circumstance, and subject, moreover, to the element of human nature always present in it, that there can be no solution of it that will stand for any length of time. Again, what will do for one part of our country will not do for another. The struggle between employers and employed has its seat almost wholly in our Northern States. In the States of our great southern section it rarely is manifest. That is, there is greater variety of activity and industry in the North than in the South. There are few controversies of wages and hours of labor south of the Potomac and the Ohio. This means that there will be rapid transference of industry to the southern section. It is going on now. Lines of least resistance are always followed. It means, too, that our Southern States, in the coming political era, will be less disturbed by these labor conflicts than our North and West. It means, further, very radical changes in politics, and in significance of party designations.

Labor, in special lines, will be able to enforce "closed shop." In general lines, never. The reason lies in the very basis and nature of human life. Labor organization seeks to include or embrace all sorts of workers, without regard to their capacity or efficiency, without regard to superiority or inferiority. It strives to make the man the unit, whether he can perform first-rate service or not. Now this is an economic mistake. All men, in any calling, are not worth the same reward, though in the higher callings, which require special skill and intelligence, htre is less difficulty. Again, the ablest men do not fall in with the uniform system. They are restive under it; they break away from it; they can do better. The closed shop, as it is called, never, therefore, will be fully or generally possible. On one side men cannot come up to a high general or even average standard. On the other are men who will be restive under its rules and go beyond it, and these last are the independent men, to whom the progress of industrial society is mainly due.

The contest, therefore, never will cease. With progress of individual human capacity on one side, and of general society on the other, it will be constantly accentuated. The result will be the steady elimination of the less efficient members. This may be called a hard doctrine. So it is. But it is the only method of human progress.

Yet the principle that individuals have the right to earn a living, whether they are below the average of efficiency or above it—whether they belong to a union or not—cannot be eliminated; nor can the idea or principle as to personal choice of occupation, or willingness to work, or even necessity to work for obtainable wages. Employers, in general, must have the right to decide what wages they can afford to pay. It is an equal right of wage-workers to decide for themselves whether they will accept the wages or not. There always will be ground for difference and controversy here. The problem can be worked out only through experience and the general progress of society. Therefore, it never will be worked out to a settled conclusion.

Silk Manufacture in California.

THE PIONEER ESTABLISHMENT NEAR LOS ANGELES RECEIVES HIGHEST AWARD FOR ITS PRODUCT.

(SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.)

LAST year 23,333,750 pounds of raw silk were imported into the United States valued at approximately $80,000,000. Nearly 18,000,000 pounds of this, or almost four-fifths, reached America by way of the ports of the Pacific Coast, coming from China and Japan. One might suppose that this condition would mean that the Pacific Coast must inevitably possess numerous great silk manufacturing industries; so that it will be a surprise to many to be told that every bale of raw silk that comes from the Orient to San Francisco, Seattle or Portland is loaded up on a special train—the Silk Special—and hurried across the continent as fast as steam can carry it to New York City, which now ranks second only to Shanghai in importance among the world's raw silk markets.

Logically, California ought to lead the Union in silk manufacture. Its proximity to the centers of raw silk production and its ideal climate are advantages from which the industrial centers of the East are barred from sharing. So it is encouraging to know that the Los Angeles district has at least made a beginning. This beginning, as yet, is small, but it has passed the experimental stage, and the success of the pioneer venture augurs great things for the future.

The pioneer silk manufacturing establishment of California, and for that matter, the pioneer broadsilk mill of the West, is located at Graham station, on the Long Beach line of the Pacific Electric Railway, not far from Watts. It is known as the Los Angeles Silk Works, and was established about five years ago by D. I. Newton, who learned every detail of the industry in Paterson, the silk city of America. Starting on a small scale, he found it necessary to seek a trade outlet by dealing directly with the consumers, and in that way he has built up a business that draws patronage from every section of the Southwest, and even invades the silk-weaving centers of the East. That Los Angeles silks have no superiors is sufficiently proven by the fact that Mr. Newton's exhibit at the Alaska-Pacific-Yukon Exposition was awarded the grand prize highest award for exhibits of its class.

On a recent visit to this establishment, a few things were learned about silk that dispel much of the mystery that surrounds it, explaining why it is high priced, and why one piece of silk will last forever, while another will fall to pieces wtihout apparent reason.

The raw silk of commerce reaches the United States in bales, consisting of hanks or twists of the filament as reeled from the cocoons of the silkworm. This raw silk absorbs moisture readily, so that 30 per cent. of the weight of a bale may consist of water, without anything in its appearance to indicate an abnormal proportion of moisture. It is evident that this is a considerations that the purchaser of a commodity worth from $3.50 to $5 a pound cannot afford to disregard. For this reason the process known as "conditioning" is a necessary preliminary to negotiations for a sale of the product.

Sample skeins are taken from different parts of every bale, and weighed with great exactness. Then the samples are placed in conditioning ovens, having a temperature of 284 deg., Fahr., and desiccated until absolutely devoid of moisture. They are then weighed again, and the difference before and afetr desiccation shows the percentage of moisture in the material, and gives a basis for the calculation of the absolute weight of the silk filament in each bale. To this absolute weight 11 per cent. is added, as an allowance for the normal amount of moisture in raw silk. Other tests are made to determine the fineness of the threads, their elasticity, tenacity and twisting qualities; and all data are then at hand necessary to enable buyers and sellers to get together on the important question of price.

The first step in the manufacture of silk is known as throwing. The skeins are inclosed in light cotton bags and soaked for several hours in warm, soapy water. Then they are dried in a hydro-extractor, and stretched upon "swifts," or skeleton reels adjusted to hold the skeins tightly. Then the filaments are wound upon bobbins and cleaned by being passed from one bobbin to another through the cleaner, which consists of two parallel plates so adjusted that there is just room for the thread to pass through. Single silk (from which pongees are woven) is not doubled or twisted, but is ready for the scourer and dyer just as it comes from the cleaning process. Tram silk is made by twisting two or more singles together, and then doubling and twisting again. It is used for the woof thread in weaving. Organzine is made by the union of two or more single threads, twisted separately in the same direction, and then doubled and twisted in the opposite direction. It is used chiefly for warp threads.

The thrown silk is then scoured, to remove some of the natural gum, so that it will have greater luster and take the dyes better. Shaking, glossing and lustring are processes for which special machinery has been devised, designed to develop the luster of the silk. Then it is ready for the dyer.

If properly handled, silk is the strongest, most elastic and most durable of all textile fabrics; but the various processes of manufacture, removing the natural gum, causes it to lose so much of its weight that unscrupulous manufacturers resort to loading, dipping the thrown silk into a solution of bichloride of tin. It makes the threads weigh more, and, of course, sell for more money; but it destroys the durability of the fabric. Stretching the threads to their elastic limit so that a given weight will weave a greater number of yards, and steaming to give the threads an unnatural luster, are other processes that prove profitable to the manufacturers that practice them, but costly to the consumers; and cause many people to regard silk as an uncertain and treacherous fabric, with an inexplicable tendency to split, crack and fall apart, even though packed away in drawers or hanging up in a closet. The use of cheap, inferior and destructive dyes is another practice equally injurious, and perhaps still more common; so that the purchase of silk goods is ordinarily a good deal of a gamble. It is because only perfect materials are used, and approved methods of manufacture employed, that Los Angeles silks are free from the defects of bargain-counter fabrics.

There are in the United States a few great establishments in which all processes of throwing, dyeing and weaving are performed; but as a rule these are conducted as entirely separate industries.

In any woven fabric there are two systems of threads, the warp or chain, running lengthwise of the cloth; and the woof, or filling, crossing the former at right angles. The dyed silks reach the factories in the form of skeins. Threads intended for the filling are wound from the skeins upon spools or bobbins, and thence upon smaller spools, called quills, that fit into the shuttles. Threads for the warp or chain are wound from the skeins upon bobbins, and these are placed upon an upright frame. Then the threads are passed through the lease reed, for the purpose of crossing them as they are placed on the warping mill, so that each thread will always be kept in its proper place. From the lease reed the threads pass through the front reed, and from this over the warping mill, a huge creel eight yards in circumference, fitted with a measuring apparatus so that the warp can be cut off at any length desired. The front reed adjusts the width, controlling the number of threads per inch, varying from about 100 in light summer silks to 448 in heavy goods. The warp is placed upon the creel in sections, and then all wound off together upon the beam placed in the rear. When complete, this beam is removed and placed in position at the rear of the loom. If there are different weaves in the same warp (as, for example, satin and taffeta,) each must be placed upon a different beam, as one weave will take up more than the other, and it is essential that all threads be held taut.

A description of any mechanical operation is necessarily vague and difficult of comprehension, unless the printed or spoken word can be supplemented by the eye as an aid to the understanding. No detailed description of the operation of a modern power loom will be attempted, but mention will be made of some of its essential features.

It consists of a strong iron frame, at the back of which is the horizontal beam or roller from which the warp unwinds, while at the front is the roller on which the web is wound as

J. P. MORGAN, UNTHRONED MONARCH OF FINANCE.

Railroads, Banks and Corporations; Mergers, Combines and Nations Are His Toys; Presidents, Kings, Dukes and Kaisers His Chessmen: His Wife and Daughter Now in Pasadena.

BY WILLIAM H. KNIGHT.

John Pierpont Morgan,

four portraits showing the great financier in varying moods and attitudes. Mrs. Morgan appears in one of the pictures.

THE PRESENT generation has been favored with a good many surprises resulting from the power of organization in business. The man who possesses the genius for organization commands the masters of transportation, the captains of industry, the chiefs of finance, the rulers of State—in fact, he has the key to universal dominance. Such was Rockefeller in oil, Rogers in copper, Carnegie in iron, Baer in coal, Stillman in banking and Harriman in transportation.

To unify these leaders, masters and chiefs—that was the task which John Pierpont Morgan set himself to accomplish, and recent events in the world of commerce, industry and finance demonstrate his lordship over all the elements that enter into our complex civilization and are factors in its development.

When it was suggested the other day that three great banks with deposits running into hundreds of millions, and three trust companies handling the largest estates in New York, might be advantageously consolidated, why did the wary heads of other powerful banks and the keen magnates of Wall street at once assume that Morgan was behind the scheme, and that therefore it was already an accomplished fact?

These banks are the depositaries of vast sums—the daily transactions of steam railroads, electric traction, industrial establishments, and wholesale mercantile houses. When great institutions act independently, they are apt to deal with the public at cross purposes; there is a tendency to compete for business and so diminish profits. Concert of action has been introduced in the management of transportation, into industrial enterprises, into mercantile operations, why not into the banking business?

When the Central Bank, of nationwide scope, to be invested with government functions and to have a capital of $150,000,000, was proposed by Senator Aldrich, why was the public mind, in the metropolis and throughout the country, united in placing this inevitable financier at its head? When gigantic copper mergers are talked of, and colossal telephone trusts are hinted at, and mammoth automobile combines are projected, why is this same omnipresent Morgan assumed to be the originator and executive spirit of the embryo enterprise?

ON A THRONE.

The fact is that John Pierpont Morgan, whose wife and daughter arrived in Pasadena last Wednesday, is the most potent personality on the globe today. He sits on a financial throne and wields a scepter whose power is felt in the business marts of every commercial country on this green footstool. How did he acquire this wonderful power? What are the elements and factors which have produced his dominant personality in the realm of finance, which touches and affects every other realm of human affairs?

The answer is axiomatic. He who controls the finances of the world wields greater power than the Presidents of American republics, the monarchs of Europe, or the despots of Asia. The financier dictates to all of these. The heads of governments in all ages have been obliged to defer to the minister of finance whose skill consists in keeping the treasury equal to the demands of the State. Louis XIV but voiced the sentiments of all monarchs when he said, "I am the State." Yet he relied on his Prime Minister to extract from the populace the funds needed for his lavish expenditures. And Richelieu acquired a lasting fame in the performance of that service.

But Pierpont Morgan is not a minister of finance, he is not a chancellor of the exchequer, he is not custodian of the public funds of any country. He occupies no official position, actual or nominal. He is a plain citizen of the United States, or, rather, an adopted citizen of the world, for he is as much at home in England where he has a great banking establishment and a palatial residence filled with the most famous products of art, and in France, where he has another banking house, and holds grave conferences with the President of the Republic, and in Germany, where his name has magic power, and he at times hobnobs with the Kaiser, and in Italy, where he is on terms of cordiality with the King and with the Pope—he is as much at home in those foreign lands as he is in his native country, where for two decades he has been the central figure in the most stupendous aggregations of capital the world has ever known.

SUPREME OCCASIONS.

On one supreme occasion, when the financial crisis of 1907 had reached a crucial stage, he summoned the Treasurer of the United States to an interview in his private office, where the gravity of the situation was discussed and heroic measures insisted upon. It is noteworthy that in a few days United States securities to the amount of $150,000,000 were transferred to the banks of panic-stricken Wall street, to their instantaneous relief and to the relief of the country at large. In this transaction he but manifested the tremendous influence of an untitled citizen in a crisis which seemed for a little time to threaten the stability of the nation's financial bulwarks.

When, in 1905, negotiations for peace were pending between Russia and Japan, J. P. Morgan informed President Roosevelt that he would guarantee to sell in America $250,000,000 of Russian bonds if peace were promptly declared. The Rothschilds were ready to supplement the American offer by advancing a similar sum from European sources. Undoubtedly these offers hastened the conclusion of peace. On the other hand, the withholding of financial assistance by the great money kings on both sides of the Atlantic made it impracticable to continue the conflict. The President got great credit for the success of peace negotiations, but the monarchs of finance knew where the credit was due.

THE FINANCIAL PANIC OF 1907.

It may be worth while to rehearse in fuller detail the events of that critical period in the country's financial history. In the midst of the gloom which pervaded Wall street in the late autumn of 1907, the president of the Stock Exchange called on Mr. Morgan and asked him if there was no possibility of averting the storm which was gathering in the financial world and about to break with consequences too disastrous and widespread to contemplate. The visit to Mr. Morgan had been postponed till the last ray of hope from other sources had expired. After exacting certain conditions from his guest the financier promised relief. He knew that this appeal would be made and he was prepared for it. He had previously conferred with the Treasurer of the United States and secured the coöperation of the government, provided the great banks of New York would unlock their vaults and come to the relief of Wall street and the general public.

That relief Mr. Morgan promised, for he was dictator, not suppliant, in his financial realm. When the situation was ripe, when the storm clouds were blackest in the financial sky, when dire and irretrievable ruin stared many of the New York magnates in the face, this man of iron called a conference of bank presidents, not in a body, but singly, and informed them what it was necessary for them to do.

He had his intimates in each of the great institutions, and taking them into his confidence outlined the course it was necessary for them to pursue. There were idle funds amounting to many millions of dollars closely guarded in their huge vaults. They had called in every available asset. They had even refused to pay it out on the checks of their depositors, and gave scrip instead. This unheard-of proceeding dumbfounded their most exacting and persistent creditors. Every one was afraid to insist on his demands lest he should precipitate the storm which would overwhelm himself as well as the bank in a common devastation.

Morgan said to the managing head of each of the great banking institutions, "You must release that hoard and put it into circulation. It is imperative that I should raise an investing fund of $25,000,000 and your assessment is $.........." in other words, so many million dollars. "But the risk is enormous," pleaded the bankers, "we have obligations that will be jeopardized if we invade our reserve." "Gentlemen, the risk will be much greater, will be fatal, if you do not do it," was the comfortless reply.

To further calm their fears he confidentially informed them that he had already arranged with the government to come to their assistance and weather the breaking storm. With this assurance, on which they placed implicit reliance, light dawned and the entire $25,000,000 was raised as if by magic. He well knew the dire extremities of the banks and of Wall street, and anticipated and provided for complete relief.

RIFT IN THE FINANCIAL CLOUDS.

It was a case of wonderful prescience and one of the most brilliant strokes of genius ever made in the annals of finance. There was a rift in the clouds and gleams of sunshine were discerned by the magnates before the people whose fortunes were held in escrow had any intimation of clearing skies.

And then what happened? Stocks and other securities were at the lowest ebb they had reached for many years. The moment responsible parties began investing in them they were certain to rebound. And they did. Enormous fortunes were made by those who got in early. But the market was kept well under control: it was not the right time to let the people rush headlong into the financial whirl.

Accordingly, well-manipulated little flurries kept the timid ones from plunging wildly into the tide of the rising flood. This enabled large inside investors to fill their orders without exciting the mob, and at moderate figures. It was a great game, played on a gigantic scale, and it was completely successful. The hoarded money got into circulation, and soon the banks began to redeem their scrip, and the financial situation throughout the country became normal.

To aver that one man accomplished this Herculean task of clearing the financial skies, is not stating the case too strong; and yet, one man could not have performed this brilliant feat unaided. When Gen. Grant gained his magnificent victories during the Civil War, we readily gave full credit to his genius and called him master of the situation. But Grant disclaimed all the honors and gave his lieutenants unstinted credit for the results achieved. The people, however, saw through the modest fiction and insisted that the commanding general knew how to select and use the best available material for his purpose. And it is a fact, illustrated in every historic crisis, that this masterful quality is the secret of the success of all great leaders, whether on the battlefield of military strife, or in the political, industrial or financial arena. Gaged by these tests, to John Pierpont Morgan was due the credit of weathering the blackest financial storm which ever hovered over the business affairs of this country.

On other occasions the feudal lords of Great Britain, and even their punctilious sovereign, have been seen in confidential converse with this plain, unobtrusive, but powerful arbiter of finance. Wherein lies the secret of this private citizen's wonderful power, this man who sits for a few hours each day in the dim light of a back office in Wall street, amid the old-fashioned, dark mahogany furniture inherited from a previous generation?

HIS AUTOCRATIC POWER.

The dominance of the Morgan syndicate was shown in a press dispatch of January 6th, which read:

"It has been proved with a reasonable certainty that J. P. Morgan & Co. has been selling steel for the last ten days. It is useless to discuss values under the circumstances. All Wall street is terrorized by one group of operators." Immediately after the publication of this dispatch there was active buying of Steel and the market was saved from demoralization. Close observers discern the connection between cause and effect. They also recognize the shadow of a colossal figure stalking behind the scenes.

About the middle of last December the Reading Railroad, the most prosperous of the coal roads, increased its stock dividend from 4 per cent. to 6 per cent. Its annual report showed a favorable surplus, and the business was normal, that is, the season required large and steady shipments of one of the imperative necessities of domestic and business life—coal. Holders of large blocks of stock, and small holders, too, thought the company should yield some of these tokens of prosperity to its investors. Wall street began to grumble at the conservative 4 per cent. rate and J. P. Morgan heard the undertone. He reflected that United States Steel would be sympathetically affected by the rise or fall in a security so steady and unwavering as the Reading. Morgan sent an emissary to President Baer—the man divinely placed in charge of that coal road's interests, and forthwith the new 6 per cent. rate was declared. Other stocks, and especially Steel, were temporarily strengthened.

"A little later various causes, either actual or imagined, had exerted a depressing influence on the stock quotations of the great copper companies. Formerly iron entered into so many uses and avenues of industries that the rise or fall of this staple in the market was an index of the country's prosperity. But at the present time copper is coming into such universal use that its upward or downward movement is taken as an index of the signs of the times. Its tendencies are therefore closely watched, and its downward trend at that time was regarded with apprehension.

"It is singular that there began just then a series of outgivings to the effect that gigantic copper mergers were afoot. A billion-dollar corporation, equal in scope and capitalization to the United States Steel, which now gives tone to the market, was shaped up in the mining and financial journals, and much was made of it in the commercial columns of the great dailies. Of course, it was assumed that Morgan was at the bottom of the movement and the market was again saved for the time being."

PERSONAL CHARACTERISTICS.

As to Mr. Morgan's personal wealth, it would be idle to speculate, yet the inquisitive mind is so constituted that it cannot help indulging in speculation on any subject in which it is interested. The result so far as Mr. Morgan is concerned is something like this: Ten years ago he was rated at $30,000,000; three years later, at $50,000,000; in 1906, at $80,000,000, and today at anywhere from $300,000,000 to $500,000,000.

But Mr. Morgan is not a mere money-getter, or today he would be worth more than J. D. Rockefeller. With him the acquisition of wealth is incidental. He wants to do certain things with his gains and is, in fact, a good deal of a spendthrift in the indulgence of certain fads on which he has set his heart. When he steps off the stage of life it will be found that the world, both in Europe and America, will be greatly enriched by his unparalleled art collections, libraries of rare books, and manuscripts and documents which cannot be duplicated.

He has magnificent galleries in New York and London, where the old masters and the best of the modern schools are fully represented. They are now accessible to the art-loving public, and will ultimately become educators of the large, uncultured classes.

Among his rare manuscripts are the originals of Milton's "Paradise Lost;" Pope's "Essay on Man;" Thackeray's "Vanity Fair;" Bulwer Lytton's "Last Days of Pompeii;" Ruskin's "Stones of Venice;" George Sand's "La Ville Noire;" Macauley's "History of England," and others of Dean Swift, Samuel Johnson, Charlotte Bronte, Chaldean and Babylonian inscrip- pre-historic tablets bearing Assyrian, Chaldean and Babylonian inscriptions. To enumerate all of his literary treasures would fill a volume.

Mr. Morgan is a well-known connoisseur of art. His gallery occupies a separate building adjoining his residence. It is a white marble structure of the Italian Renaissance style. The entrance hall is adorned by four large Cipolina marble columns which once belonged to an ancient Roman temple and are worth a fabulous price. One of the rooms represents the signs of the zodiac with intervening spandrils representing the arts and sciences. Very costly works of art—painting, sculpture, etc.—will occupy the walls and niches of the various beautiful decorated rooms. Many works of art of priceless value, now in his London mansions, will eventually be placed in this unique art temple, the only private collection housed in a separate building in this country.

It is said that Morgan once promised his wife that when he had amassed a fortune of a certain amount he would retire from business and devote himself to a life of leisure. But when the time came, he begged off. "What shall I do?" he said. "I am ashamed to be idle." And he kept on at work. He did not regard the accumulation of art treasures as an occupation, though he devoted a good deal of time to that penchant of his.

Mr. Morgan's benefactions are very large, but they are so unostentatious that the public knows very little about them. He is one of the most open-handed dispensers of charity among all the multi-millionaires in the country. His confidential secretary, C. W. King, is entrusted with a half-million fund anually, and exercises discretion in its distribution.

Among his gifts are $1,000,000 to Harvard University; $1,000,000 to the Lying-in Hospital; $500,000 to the New York Trade School; $500,000 to the Loomis Hospital; $500,000 for the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, and some millions in smaller donations including those dispensed by his wife.

WHO WILL BE HIS SUCCESSOR?

Notwithstanding his perfect health and vigor of intellect, yet, on account of advancing years (he is now 73,) it is assumed that there will soon come a time when the cares and especially the details of Mr. Morgan's great interests and undertakings must be transferred to other hands and brains. Upon whom will his mantle fall? Various names among the Wall-street magnates have been canvassed and the consensus of opinion has centered upon his son, John Pierpont Morgan, Jr., who, besides inheriting his father's name, has exhibited remarkable astuteness of character, and is now regarded as capable of assuming his father's heavy responsibilities.

The younger Morgan, after graduating at Harvard in 1889, was put through a thorough course of business training, first in a Boston banking house where his mettle was fully tested, then in his father's New York office, where he was shown no favor, and later for a number of years in the London establishment where he became a partner and familiarized himself with all the complicated operations of world financing in every phase of a busines which penetrated to every corner of the globe. Here he was brought into contact, and sometimes into conflict, with some of the keenest intellects that struggle for mastery in that great maelstrom of concentrated wealth.

He is now back in his father's office and has taken charge of important departments of the enormous business centering in and radiating from the New York house. He has taken the place of E. H. Harriman, deceased, as director in the National City Bank, of D. S. Lamont, deceased, in the Northern Pacific Railroad, and of H. H. Rogers, deceased, as member of the Finance Committee of the large board of directors in the U. S. Steel Corporation. He is director in the boards of several other banks, railways and fiscal institutions, and gives them all his careful and earnest attention. That he is destined to become a large figure in the financial worlds of both Europe and America there, is now very little doubt.

He has a model wife and family of four children, and is building a home which will cost $150,000, on an island which he owns in Hempstead harbor on the north shore of Long Island, within easy reach of his business office. Morgan, Jr., is in the prime of life, 43 years of age, of sturdy build, six feet tall and well proportioned, and something of an athlete.

IN PASADENA.

Mr. Morgan is a devoted family man and his domestic relations have always been happy. His wife was the accomplished Miss Frances L. Tracy, whom he married in 1865. They have

LA SIERRA HEIGHTS

AT RIVERSIDE, CAL.

Planting 1000 Acre

The Horticultural Department of the Riverside Groves and Water Company is busily engaged in planting 1000 acres of Sierra Heights to orange and lemons, for its own use and benefit, and expects to do more. This show what the company thinks of its own property.

The Riverside Groves and Water Company did not acquire these thousand acres of the soil that made Riverside oranges famous, with unlimited water supply, merely to sell it to others. It wishes to enjoy itself some of the big profits to be made from the citrus fruit industry under such ideal conditions.

The Horticultural department will also care for the groves of non-residents, if desired, charging a moderate fee.

Several purchasers of acreage are also planting their groves. Development and completion of the immense irrigation system is in progress. There is something doing in La Sierra Heights all the time.

Prices are reasonable and terms are easy.

Investors and homeseekers should not miss the opportunity to investigate La Sierra Heights. We conduct tri-weekly excursions, Los Angeles to Riverside and return, passing through the finest orange groves in Riverside, and including a careful inspection of the immense enterprise of the Riverside Groves and Water Company. Round trip fare only $2. It is necessary to make reservations in advance.

SILK IN CALIFORNIA.

woven. Between the two is the harness, which is a series of frames with eyelets, one for every thread or set of threads of the warp. In plain weaving the harness frames are in two sets, of three frames each, one set of which is up while the other is down. The number can be increased to several frames, all acting independently, for complicated patterns; and in the Jacquard loom the harness becomes a set of threads, instead of a frame, so that every thread of the warp can be raised or lowered separately. Between the harness and the take-up roller is the "lay," in which is the reed, and a smooth projecting under portion along which the shuttles run. The warp threads, crossed as described in the lease reed preliminary to going on the warping mill, are held in position by the lease rods, then pass through the eyelets of the harness, and next through the reed. As the harness lifts one set of threads, the shuttle flies across the warp through the opening made by such lifting, and the batten (constituted by the reed and lay frame,) beats the thread close in to its predecessor. The next motion of the harness lifts another set of threads, and the shuttle flies back through the opening, adding another thread. It is a process slow of description, but so rapid in practice that the eye can hardly follow the motion of the shuttles back and forth.

For weaving figured patterns the Jacquard loom is used, or any loom fitted with the Jacquard attachment, named from its inventor, Joseph Maria Jacquard. The pattern is regulated by an endless chain of heavy pasteboard cards, which pass over a square prism, called the cylinder. The cylinder is perforated with rows of holes to correspond with horizontal "needles" that control the warp threads. The pattern cards are so perforated that for all warp threads that are to be raised above the filling in the woven fabric holes are cut for the needles, allowing them to pass through, and thus raising the threads. Where a hole is not cut through the pattern card, the unperforated cardboard stops the needle, and the warp threads are not raised.

The making of these pattern cards is of itself an important subdivision of the silk industry. The designs are hand-painted by skilled artists and designers, on paper ruled so that there is a square for every crossing of the threads of the warp and woof. Then every square that is painted in (indicating a raised thread in the fabric,) must be punched out in the cardboard, to permit the passing of the needle controlling the warp thread, so that the design may be carried out.

Of course as many colors as desired can be introduced into the warp; and by the use of a tier of shuttles, each carrying a different color, a considerable variety can be woven in the filling.

The woven fabric is next placed on a frame, and every square inch carefully examined, for the removal of dirt, knots, stains and other imperfections. Finally it is taken to the finishing department, where the treatment depends somewhat upon the nature of the goods, and to a large extent upon the preferences or inventiveness of the management of the establishment. In some cases the goods are singed, for the removal of any rough nap. The fabric is then sprinkled and sponged with a preparation of wax and gelatine (the exact nature and composition of the preparation used in the Los Angeles silk works being a carefully guarded trade secret.) The final gloss is imparted by calendering, in which the fabric is run between a series of superimposed steel rolls, ironing it out smoothly and giving it the characteristic glossy finish.

The silkworm is known to entomologists as the larva of the Bombyx mori, a species of moth. The eggs are very small, about 100 weighing one grain. They are hatched by artificial means, and the caterpillars reared in rooms where they may have an abundance of light and air, with little variation in temperature. They are voracious feeders, and are kept liberally supplied with freshly-gathered leaves of the mulberry tree. They grow rapidly, and (as a rule,) moult about the sixth, tenth, fifteenth and twenty-third days after hatching. In from thirty-five to forty days, having increased 10,000 times in weight, and grown to a length of about three inches, they climb upon twigs and small branches that have been supplied for them, and begin spinning their cocoons. In this process the caterpillar ejects through the spinnaret (under its mouth,) two lines of viscid, semi-fluid filament, secreted in two convoluted glands along the sides of its body. The two filaments are laid side by side, and coalesce into one as they harden. In from three to five days the cocoon is complete, and the industrious caterpillar, having lost fully half of its former weight and shrunken to half its former size, is metamorphosed into a chrysalis, housed in a oviform cocoon from an inch to an inch and a-half in length, and from half inch to an inch in diameter.

Left to the processes of nature, in due time the chrysalis will break the filaments of the cocoon, and come out into the open, a full-fledged, but unattractive moth, which many centuries of domestication have almost deprived of the power of flight. The moth lays from 300 to 400 eggs, and then dies, its life-mission of reproduction accomplished.

But in breaking the fibers to permit its emergence, the moth sadly depreciates the value of the cocoon. So only enough of these to serve as seed are permitted to complete the life cycle, and all other cocoons are placed in steam heaters to kill the occupants.

The cocoon consists of an exterior portion of straggling filaments (by means of which it was fastened to the twigs and branches that supported it,) and a closely cemented sheath around the body of the chrysalis. The threads of this sheath are so tightly glued together that they cannot be unwound until after the cocoon has been thoroughly soaked in water. The exterior portion is removed, being known as floss, or waste, and is spun with the material of broken or defective cocoons, by methods similar to those used with cotton fibers. The filaments of the perfect cocoons are caught up on a fine brush, four, five or six of them passed through an eyelet to a reel, and wound upon this in a continuous thread from 800 to 1600 yards in length. From these reels the silk is taken in skeins, constituting in this form the raw silk of commerce.

From this brief sketch of the long and devious journey of a silk thread from the spinnret of a silkworm to a condition fitting it for the adornment of a butterfly of fashion, the reason is plain why silk is the most costly of textiles. In every stage of every process of nature, art and machinery, from the feeding of the caterpillars to the finishing touches of a fashionable dressmaker, silk is prodigal of labor, requiring skilled hands or watchful eyes to assist or supervise every operation. It is said that more time is required for the construction of a silk dress from the mulberry leaves than is necessary for the building of a locomotive from the ores as they exist in nature; and possibly the coöperation of a greater number of people contributes to the ballroom gown than to the mogul engine. The only wonder, then, is that silk is not so costly as to place it beyond the reach of all but the very wealthy. That its price is within the reach even of the girls that watch the flying shuttles in the silk mills is due to the fact that the silkworms are fed and cared for, and the filaments reeled from the cocoons by the cheapest labor in the world—by the women and children of the Orient, the Levant and the South of Europe and the additional fact that the various processes of manufacture are performed by the most perfect machinery that human ingenuity has ever devised.

Numerous and persistent attempts, extending over a period of nearly two centuries, have been made to introduce sericulture into the United States as a paying industry; but these were foredoomed to failure by the impossibility of competing with the cheap labor of the older silk-producing countries. It is, in fact, difficult to understand why any one should desire to introduce sericulture, knowing that it would be possible only by the employment of child labor, at pitifully inadequate wages.

If the United States has failed in the production of raw silk, it has achieved a notable success in all branches of silk manufacture, excepting in the weaving of certain fabrics in which hand labor is largely necessary. This success is due largely to American ingenuity in bringing silk throwing and weaving machinery to its highest perfection. Mechanical power is applied to the various processes of manufacture to a greater extent in America than in any other country.

The beginning of silk manufacturing in America dates from 1810, when the first silk mill on the western hemisphere was set up at Mansfield, Ct. In 1815 a silk trimming factory was established at Philadelphia; a ribbon factory in Baltimore in 1829; a dress-trimming factory in Boston, in 1834, and sewing silk factories in Florence and Dedham, Mass., in 1835. In 1838 the first power loom was introduced into America, and small manufacturing plants were multiplied until by 1860 New York had forty-four little establishments, Pennsylvania thirty-five, Connecticut twenty-three, Massachusetts twenty, and New Jersey nine, employing a total of 5352 persons. Yet the relatively small importance of these is shown by the fact that in 1860 the United States manufactured only 13 per cent. of the silk goods consumed in the country.

In 1860, by the operation of the Cobden treaties, England admitted silks of foreign manufacture free of duty, and many English throwers and weavers were forced out of their own markets. A number of these came to America, bringing with them their machinery and workmen. They settled in Paterson, N. J., making that city preëminent as the silk manufacturing center of America.

From 1860 the industry enjoyed steady growth, but that this for a time was slow is shown by the fact that in 1870 only 22 per cent. of the silk goods consumed in America were of domestic manufacture. By 1880 the percentage was 38; in 1890, 55, and in 1898, 85. In 1868 the importations of raw silk were only 512,449 pounds. The next year they amounted to 726,695 pounds; in 1879, to 1,893,311 pounds; in 1889, to 5,329,646 pounds; in 1899, to 9,691,145 pounds, and in 1909, to the astonishing total of 23,333,750 pounds.

These figures tell an inspiring story of industrial achievement. Last year's importations of raw silk amounted to two-fifths of the world's total production. American silk mills represent an investment of more than $100,000,000 of capital, and give direct employment to more than 75,000 persons. The benefits to capital and labor as represented by manufacturers of machinery, dyestuffs, transportation interests, jobbers, retailers, dressmakers, milliners and scores of cognate interests, cannot in any way be estimated.

Strange, is it not, that human intelligence and ingenuity have been able to develop the secretion of an ugly, crawling caterpillar into an article of such vast importance to international trade, to the worlds of finance, industry, transportation and merchandising, and to devotees of fashion and all lovers of the beautiful.

Mr. Rider Haggard's Warning.

H. Rider Haggard uttered a warning to the nation when he spoke at Loddon, Norfolk, yesterday at a meeting held for the purpose of forming a local branch of the British Red Cross League.

"I do not say that invasion of England is probable," he said, "but I feel there is a 20 to 30 per cent. risk of it being attempted within the next score of years, and a 6 to 8 per cent. risk of its being successful. If this happens, it will mean the death of the British Empire in a month."—[London Express.

"THE BLOODY STRIKE."

on this occasion represented the Dishwashers' Lagerbund. "I don't know as such languitch is quite broper coming from him, for a goot many people have their doubts whether plumbing is really a trade or only a larceny. But, my fellow-pret-winners, if the resolution is a poomerang, it is one that will knock the arrogance out of the ploated wealth-owners, and teach them that in this republic, established by the plott of our fathers—[Blather's great-grandfather was a Hessian soldier in the British army and returned to Darmstadt after the surrender of Cornwallis]—in this republic the time is close at hand when suppliant wealth will be compelt to enture the colt and hunger it has gifen to labor for many years." And, amid a storm of applause, Blather sank to his seat.

The Customhouse block was begun on the day appointed, with a force of men at work on its stone foundations all of whom were members of the trade organizations, and the work progressed steadily for a week. At the Saturday night meetings of the several trade organizations the members congratulated themselves that "old French" had concluded not to carry out his programme, and in several lodges it was proposed to signalize the magnificent victory of labor over capital by demanding a general advance of 20 per cent. in the wages of all mechanics; but some of the wiser heads discouraged the movement as premature, and one pessimistic house carpenter observed, amid expressions of dissent from his colleagues, that if all the mechanics followed the example of the hod-carriers, it would "bust wide open every builder and contractor in 'Frisco, or else put a stop to all building."

On the next Monday morning there appeared on the scene ten men clad in blouses and overalls. Three of them worked at mixing mortar, three of them carried hods, three of them commenced laying brick, while the tenth man directed the labors of the other nine. Each had buckled about his waist in plain sight a cartridge belt from which hung a dragoon revolver.

As soon as their presence and labors became known, word was sent to labor headquarters, and Delegate Brown was deputed to interview the strangers and ascertain the situation.

Pap Brown was a journeyman stone cutter on the other side of the sixties, who did not often work at his trade. The salary he received from the trade unions was sufficient for his support, and he fully earned his salary. He was shrewd, suave, and persistent, and his fatherly way with "the boys" and deferential manner to employers, often secured to the former favorable adjustments of contests that would have been denied to the "silver-tongued" Raffertys and Blathers.

Pap Brown approached one of the men who was engaged in mixing mortar and asked him the name of his employer. The man addressed made no reply, but signaled the foreman, who came forward and curtly answered:

"We are all working for Mr. Lorin French."

"What wages do you get?" asked Brown.

"Well," replied the foreman, after a pause, "strictly speaking, I don't know as that concerns you, but I have no objection to telling you. The mortar mixers and hod carriers get $5 a day, the bricklayers get $7 and I get $10."

"Them's union wages," said Brown, approvingly. "You are strangers in 'Frisco, I jedge?"

"We arrived last Friday night from Milwaukee," replied the foreman.

"Have you got your cards as members of the union?" said Brown.

"No," replied the party addressed. "We belong to no union."

"Hum, I suppose you are calkilatin' to join the unions here?" inquired Brown in a persuasive accent.

"I am told," replied the foreman, "that so far as the Hod Carriers' Union is concerned, we cannot join if we wish to; that they have resolved to admit no new members."

Pap Brown slowly revolved his tobacco quid in his mouth, and rapidly revolved the situation in his wise, old brain. "Hum," said he, at length, "I reckon that can be arranged fer ye so that ye can all jine."

"Well," replied the man from Milwaukee, "I may as well tell ye that we don't calkilate to jine anyhow. We don't much believe in unions nohow—too many fellers a settin' around drinkin' beer, which the fellers that work have to pay for."

"Mebbe you don't know," said Pap Brown, "that only union men will be allowed to work here."

"Who will stop us?" said the stranger.

"There are a good many thousand of the brotherhood in this city," said Delegate Brown, still persuasively, "and there are only ten of you."

"Well, we ten are fixed to stay," said the foreman, glancing significantly at his cartridge belt.

"Hum!" remarked Pa Brown, as he walked away.

That night there was a conference at the labor headquarters of the Executive Committee of the Federated Trades, and Delegate Brown was called upon to report.

"I find," said he, "that these ten men have all worked at their trades somewhere, and our watchers say that they are good workmen; but clearly they have been hired more as fighters than as hod carriers or masons. I jedge, from what I hear, that there is an organized force behind them. They sleep and take their meals in old French's building on Market street, and don't go out to the saloons, and we can't very well get at them. Old French is as cunning as Satan, and he has fixed up the job on us, and put these men to work to bring things to a point. There is a big force of Pinkerton's men in the city, all ready to be sworn in as deputy sheriffs in case of a row, and I reckon it is put up to call in the soldiers at the Presidio and from Alcatraz in case of trouble, for the Customhouse building, where the men are working, is government property."

"What action do you suggest we should take, Mr. Brown?" said the chairman.

Pap Brown rolled his quid from one cheek to the other, and then solemnly deposited it in the cuspidor.

"It won't do," he replied, "to monkey with Uncle Sam; my jedgment is to jest let them ten men alone."

"But," interposed a member of the committee, "old French will never stop there. Those ten men are merely the small end of a wedge with which he intends to split our labor unions to pieces. He will not give us the sympathy of the people by lowering wages, but he will put on scabs, a dozen at a time, until the city is filled with new workmen, the unions broken up, and we can all emigrate to Massachusetts or China."

"I shouldn't wonder," said Pap Brown, "but violence to them ten men would simply be playing into old French's hand. He has figgered for a fight, but we musn't give it to him."

"We will carry out," said the chairman, "in a peaceful way, the resolution adopted by the Congress of Federated Trades," and order a strike of all workmen following housebuilding trades, and all workmen in establishments engaged in the making of house-building materials.

"That," said Pap Brown," means a general strike and an all-around tie up; that's what it means, just at the beginnin' of the buildin' season, with our union treasuries mostly empty, and our brethren East in no fix to help us, for the car strike in Philadelphia, and the coal strike in the West, and the strike in the steel works last year have dreened them all. I was agin that last action of the Council of Federated Trades at the time, and I'm mighty doubtful about it's working any good to us now. It was well enough for a bluff, but if we are called down we haven't got a thing in our hands, that's a fact."

"Well, what can we do, Mr. Brown?" inquired the chairman.

"I believe," answered Brown, "that the best thing to do would be to give in to old French now, repeal that fool resolution and wait for a better time to strike."

"What, surrender without a blow? That, Mr. Brown, we can never do. But we will first appoint a committee to wait on Mr. French, and apprise him of our intention to order a general strike of the Building Trade Unions, unless he discharges those non-union workmen," said the president.

"I don't believe," rejoined Pap Brown, "that French will weaken, and I reckon we've got a long siege ahead."

(To Be Continued Next Sunday.)

Msr. Sarah Brandon of Pike Creek, O., recently celebrated her 109th anniversary. When her husband died in 1856, she was left with twenty-three children, sixteen of whom were boys. When the Civil War broke out all of the sons enlisted, fourteen of the brothers going with the Union army and two with the Confederates. In one battle, that of Bull Run, the two brothers on the Confederate side were pitted against five of their Union brothers. Hiram Brandon, the oldest son, is now past 89 years of age and is a resident of Bellaire, O. The youngest, aged 72, is a resident of Belmont county and exhibits seventeen bullet wounds, having taken part in seventy-two battles, skirmishes or scouting expeditions under Gen. Sherman.

The New and Scientific Treatment of Diseases based upon the cellular pathology of Prof. Virchow, the greatest scientist of modern times.

The complex human body can be reduced to very simple elements—cells and intercellular substances to which they give origin; these two elements make up every tissue of the body. It is now universally accepted that the cell is the seat of nutrition and function. Health and diseases must be considered as terms referring, not to the body as a whole, but to the cells of which it is composed. The complete healthy life of a cell consists in the perfect performance of all of its functions, failure in any one of these will cause disease.

We should have abandoned long ago the theory that disease is due to a disorder of the blood. The blood is itself a product of the cells of the body, and its condition does not determine their health or disease, but is an index of their condition. We must examine and direct our treatment to the cells if we ever expect to cure diseases.

Food is taken into the body, digested and absorbed; the blood carries the prepared foodstuff to the cells, where they are taken up and become part of the substance of the cell, replacing some older material which has been broken down.

Our New System supplies the cells with that which is necessary to remove the disease and quickly restore the patient to health. This in the last analysis is the only scientific method of curing diseases.

This simple statement of facts has never before been given to the public. These facts cannot fail to impress deeply the minds of all intelligent persons. Please call at our offices or write for further information.

MORGAN.

one son, named for his father, and three daughters. Of the latter, Miss Anne Morgan is of an independent nature and has never taken a life partner. Neither European princes nor American sovereigns have touched the soft place in her heart. It is reported that the Marquis Narbonne-Lara, of proud French lineage, solicited her hand but was politely and firmly refused.

Father, mother and daughter, who are now in Pasadena, are attendants at the fashionable St. Bartholomew Church, where Mr. Morgan is not above passing the plate on occasion, and at such times the financial secretary finds a goodly number of greenbacks of denominations ranging from $5 to $100. It's wonderful how their liberality is stimulated when the great financier is watching the plate.

Like some other daughters of wealthy and titled families in America and England, Miss Morgan has been making a study of sociological questions, and as she is eminently practical, she has not hesitated to step right into an arena where she could make her talents and influence available. Having been appointed chairman of the woman's department of the National Civic Association, she joined Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, Mrs. Raymond Robins, a lecturer; Miss Tarbell, the Standard Oil historian, and other notable women, in an endeavor to ameliorate the condition of the striking shirt waist makers. She did not assume an attitude of condescension, but mingled with the young women in the most friendly and winning manner. When she became a mediator between the shirt manufacturers and the 9000 striking girls, she soon brought about a satisfactory end of the strike without compelling the working girls to sacrifice their union.

She helped the cause she espoused in a practical way, not by distributing ostentatious charities, though her ample purse has always been open when occasion called for it, but by encouraging them to help themselves and by wise counsels. Among the donors to the working girls' fund were Mrs. C. P. Huntington, who gave $1000, and Frank A. Munsey, the publisher, who contributed $200. Parents and friends look with approval upon her choice of engaging in a work of wise and judicious philanthropy, rather than following an empty and frivolous career of fashion.

REVIEW OF THE WEEK—Lots, Lands and Building Developme

STEADY MARKET.

QUIET FOLLOWS TOURIST EXIT.

Crown City Subdivisions Meet With Ready Market.

April Building Starts With a Promising Total.

Continued Activity in All the Country Towns.

PASADENA, April 9.—Real estate sales during the past week have been much slower than expected. Several small deals were put through, but anticipated big ones did not materialize. The exodus of winter visitors to the East has been heavy, which, in a way, accounts for the dullness.

The old James Nimick estate in Altadena was sold by Willis Eason to an eastern investor, whose name has been withheld. The consideration is understood to be $40,000.

Col. G. G. Green sold a piece of land consisting of twelve acres on the west side of Altadena, for $15,000. The name of the buyer is withheld, but it is understood the tract of land will be improved into a costly country home.

The Frank G. Platt Investment Company has done a good business in disposing of the Platt's Los Robles Heights Tract on Howard avenue, north of Washington street. Two lots were sold to Carl T. Snow, at $875 each. The buyer will build a home on one lot and hold the other as an investment. Another lot was sold to the Rev. J. W. Mather, at the same price. Mary A. Leach and E. Abby Leach paid $775 for a lot, and Mary Leason bought a site for $925.

The same company sold a lot in El Molino Terrace Tract to S. W. Sullivan for $1000. Sullivan expects to build a home on the ground. Leo Williams, formerly of St. Joseph, Mo., now living in Pasadena, bought from the Platt Company ten acres of fruit land in Rialto, the consideration being $3900. The same company sold for S. W. Craig of Rialto twenty-five acres in Rialto, to A. J. Baird, the price being $3000. Baird will improve the land by setting it out to grapefruit and oranges.

The Platt company also sold for Mrs. Bolinger a five-room bungalow at No. 250 Kensington Place to Thomas Glynn, the consideration being $2500.

Mrs. H. F. Kretchman of Altadena sold a tract of ten acres off her estate in Altadena to G. C. Van Sant, president of the Van Sant Piano Company of Indianapolis. The price was $7000. Mr. Van Sant has stated that he will improve the property with a beautiful country home.

The building permits for the first seven days of April totaled $36,476, which indicates a big month. Some of the permits follow: B. O. Kendall Company, six-room bungalow, No. 635 South Mentor avenue, $3000; Pasadena Realty Company, one-story brick building, No. 145 West Colorado street, $1000; W. A. Waldock, six-room bungalow, No. 166 North Bonnie avenue, $1800; W. W. Ogier, six-room bungalow, No. 678 South Los Robles avenue, $2800; J. W. Greenfield, four-room bungalow, No. 909 Boylston avenue, $1250; J. H. Gamble, six-room bungalow, No. 223 South Catalina avenue, $2000; J. M. Hamford, seven-room bungalow, No. 514 South El Molino avenue, $3000; Grant Sherman, seven-room bungalow, No. 352 Rosemont avenue, $2000; T. Dunlap, eight-room bungalow, No. 304 Oakland avenue, $5000; R. H. Burr, ten-room residence, No. 1111 North Los Robles avenue, $4800; Pasadena Transfer Company, two-story reinforced concrete warehouse, $8000.

LUMBER YARDS BUSY.

GLENDALE BUILDING LIVELY.

GLENDALE, April 9.—The local lumber yards are being kept busy. During the week several carloads of lumber were received and the equivalent of these carloads was distributed throughout the valley to home builders. A dozen houses are under way in a subdivision lying between Remington street and Park, west of the Glendale Steam Laundry, where about twenty-five others are to be started soon. A report has been made public that twenty houses are to be started soon on the Kelley Tract near North Glendale. Ground was broken this week for a residence for Mr. Canfield, recently of New York, on Brand boulevard near Burchett street. Both the McIntyre block on Fourth near Glendale avenue, and the Parker block on Brand near Third street, are nearly finished.

The following buildings were started this week: M. L. Weaver, residence on Kenwood street near Third, $2500; Mr. Romick of Los Angeles, home at Hawthorn and Pacific, $1500; Mrs. Wolfe, home on Ivy street, $1500; F. W. Fairchild, home on Mary street, between Fourth and Fifth, $1500; K. C. Sipple, home on Louise street, between Fourth and Fifth, $1200; Annie Lovelock, home at Orange Grove avenue and Everett street, $1500; A. McDonald of Los Angeles, home on Louise street, between Second and Third, $1800.

Tupper & Co. report the following sales during the week: Business lot on Fourth street, from E. S. Comstock to J. B. Richardson of Pasadena, who will build to suit tenant, $1500; lot on Louise street, north of Doran, to N. J. Thomas, who will build at once, $600; ten acres in the valley, north of this place, to J. B. Pierce, $1200; one acre and small house on Sixth street, from Henry Johnson to Walter M. Ross, $2100.

K. A. Blackburn reports the sale of one lot in the Orange Grove Tract to Mrs. Loveland of Los Angeles, who is laying foundation for $1600 home, and of two lots on Sixth street near Everett to Miss Ada M. Bisbee of Los Angeles, as an investment.

NEW SUBDIVISIONS.

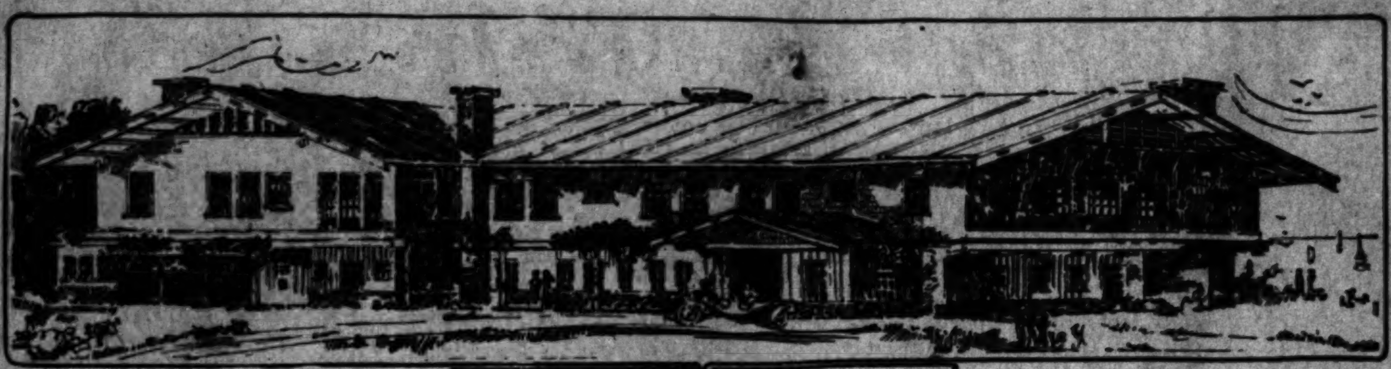
GREAT PLANTING ACTIVITY.

HEMET, April 9.—The Hemet Land Company has sold to Frederick Nelson ten acres on Whittier avenue, midway between Meridian and Hemet. This land is being planted to walnuts. The land company has also sold to J. H. Scales ten acres on the northeast corner of Columbia and Florida. Mr. Scales will build a house and plant orange trees.

N. H. Leonard has sold to G. A. Payne and R. I. Farris ten acres on Hemet street, between Florida and Lincoln. The ten acres on the corner of Florida and Santa Fé recently purchased by L. B. Turner will be subdivided and sold in lots. Mr. Kingham has sold for W. M. Kimberlin to C. E. Carson six and a half acres at the corner of Lake street and Mayberry. There is a house and barn and one and a half acres in peaches. The purchaser will put the rest of the place to oranges. W. S. Henry also sold to Messrs. Twinkle and Hopson, through Kingham, ten acres on the corner of Stanford and Thornton.

E. E. Creighton has sold to S. H. Dowsett, through the same agent, two and a half acres on the corner of Chambers avenue and Hemet street.

Mr. Kingham is grading his ten acres on the corner of Cornell and Florida, formerly a eucalyptus grove, and will put it to Valencia oranges. O. Sassaman is subdividing his ten acres on Oakland and Santa Fé, and beautifying the streets with palms, peppers and eucalyptus.



Picturesque "Wayside Inn" to Overlook Sea at Ventura.

Delightful hostelry designed especially to meet the needs of automobile tourists. Mrs. J. E. P. Ginn is the builder. Hunt, Eager & Burns are the architects.

"WAYSIDE INN."

AUTOISTS DREAM A REALITY.

VENTURA, April 9.—A large and attractive hotel designed especially to meet the demands of automobile tourists will be erected at once by Mrs. J. E. P. Ginn at Ventura. The hostelry, which will be known as the Wayside Inn, will be of rustic exterior and 50x100 feet in size. Plans have been prepared by Architects Hunt, Eager & Burns, of Los Angeles.

It is the purpose of Mrs. Ginn, who is the owner and proprietor of the Overlook cottages in the Ojai Valley, to build a homelike and roomy inn which will be a delight to tired autoists. The structure will be situated on a tongue of land running down to the sea, just south of Thompson boulevard and near the railroad station.

The first story exterior will be of rough redwood and brick, while the second story will be covered with shakes. The roof beams will be of heavy timber effect. The main floor will contain a large general lobby, ladies' reception-room, dining-room, private dining-rooms, and an enclosed south porch, overlooking the sea. The second floor will be given over entirely to bedrooms, nearly all en suite with baths. The ceilings downstairs will be heavily beamed and the main rooms will contain large open fireplaces.

MARKET QUIET.

BUILDING FORGING AHEAD.

SAN DIEGO, April 9.—The week's realty market practically was dormant. Sales of any consequence failed to materialize. Numerous deals said to involve fair considerations are hanging in the balance, promoters being content with waiting on the prospective investors to put up the money.

While property is not changing hands with regularity, building operations are forging ahead at a tremendous pace. It is announced that 350 carpenters are regularly employed, and this in the face of a demand for higher wages, which has been met by a majority of the master builders.

During the week contracts were let for several brick business blocks. Among these is a one-story and basement brick and steel building to occupy 100x100 feet at the southwest corner of Sixth and B streets, for J. Jessop & Sons. Excavating was begun Monday. Later, this structure is to be raised to four stories.

Leighton McMurtrie has awarded to John Campbell a contract to erect a row of one-story frame and plaster buildings to front 100x100 feet on Third and B streets. Excavation was begun Thursday.

W. A. Minear has served notice on tenants of frame buildings occupying a frontage of 100x100 feet at the southeast corner of Fourth and F streets, to vacate by May 1. He will erect a two-story brick block to take the place of the frames. Plans are yet to be drawn.

Architect Irving J. Gill has completed plans and has awarded a contract for the erection of a two-story frame and plaster residence to be erected for Mrs. Fannie McKoon at the northwest corner of Albatross and Ivy streets, to cost about $6000.

Symmes & Bent have bought four lots at the corner of Tenth and Robinson streets, University Heights, where they will build four houses to be occupied by homeseekers. Each house will cost in the neighborhood of $1500.

W. L. Hubbard of the Chicago Tribune has bought a lot at Grossmont Park, where he will build a winter home.

W. J. Wadhams of Los Angeles has sold, through Newkirk & Potter, three lots on University Heights. The purchaser will build several houses.

DEMAND ACTIVE.

DEALERS REPORT ANIMATION.

GLENDORA, April 9.—The demand for inside and outside properties continues active, with values showing an upward trend.

The Glendora Realty Company reports sales as follows: A. Foster, a seven-acre tract, improved with a six-room residence, to J. F. and Miss Adde Pittenger of Pomona; stated price, $10,500. J. B. Metzley, administrator for the S. Snyder estate, sold a five-acre tract to H. Whistler, the consideration being $9500. J. D. Walker has sold a ten-acre tract, two miles northeast of town, for $8000.

E. L. Eyer has sold a five-acre tract, improved with a five-room house, to G. M. McDonald of Whittier. Joseph Delot has sold a six-room house, fronting Vista Bonita avenue, to M. Johnson for $1750. W. S. Taylor has sold a business lot at the corner of Michigan and Nuda avenues, 75x165 feet, to T. Nichols for $6500. An eight-room residence at the corner of Sierra Madre and Vista Bonita avenues was taken as part payment.

MANY EASTERN BUYERS.

LOTS SOLD FOR IMPROVEMENTS.

PASADENA, April 9.—A number of good real estate deals were made during the past week, and there are quite a number of eastern buyers in the field who are looking for residence property. A great many lots have been sold during the past season, and in nearly every case homes will be built upon the sites during the summer.

Packer & Co. report the following recent sales: Joseph Rhoades to F. E. Anderson and wife, lot 50x150 feet on Mission street, between Elm and Garfield avenues, consideration $1000. Vermont Squar

FIRST advance selections of lots were made in Vermont Square (the new part) one year ago, April 13, 1909. We have since sold 357 lots—more than one for each working day of the year—for an aggregate of $321,000.

During this time 117 new houses have been built or are in course of construction in the new tract, an average of more than two new homes a week, BUILT WHOLLY BY INDIVIDUAL OWNERS.

Gas was piped to every lot in the tract in advance of building; electric lighting companies fought to be first to get their poles installed.

A second electric railway was found necessary and was built into the tract.

Telephone companies have appreciated the great growth of this section and installed complete conduit and exchange systems on this property.

THESE ACHIEVEMENTS FORM THE WORLD'S RECORD FOR THE INSTALLATION OF PUBLIC UTILITIES BEFORE OCCUPANCY OF A TRACT.

Total number of lots sold in entire tract (including Vermont Avenue Square, the old part) 1064, aggregating about $2,000,000 in value.

Total number of houses in entire tract, 612.

Over 38 miles of cement walks and curbs, with graded, oiled and tamped streets, have been constructed in the whole tract, at a total cost of $210,000.

Lot purchasers have realized from 12½ to 25 per cent. on their investments.

THIS IS THE WAY IMPROVEMENTS, POPULATION AND VALUES HAVE GROWN IN VERMONT SQUARE, THE LARGEST TRACT EVER PLACED ON THE MARKET WITHIN THE INCORPORATED BOUNDARIES OF LOS ANGELES, COMPRISING 52 CITY BLOCKS AND 1300 LOTS. A SMALL CITY IN ITSELF. THIS YEAR WILL BRING A GREATER RECORD OF RESULTS.

ROBERTSON IN SIMPLEX BEATS BRAGG IN FIAT AND FORD WITH BIG HANDICAP DEFEATS KNOX.

BARNEY OLDFIELD almost equaled the one-mile Motordrome record yesterday while trying to smash the five-mile mark. He drove two miles, the first in 36.55s., and the second in 36.84s. The track record, held by himself, is 36.22s. Oldfield says he will do 100 miles an hour on the track. That would mean a mile in 36s flat.

George Robertson won the ten-mile race yesterday from Caleb Bragg in the Fiat and Ben Kerscher in the Darracq, who took second and third places, respectively. Both the Fiat and the Darracq finished with flat tires.

Ralph De Palma failed to meet Oldfield at the last minute yesterday, in the stock car event, and was excused by the referee. A broken piston on the Fiat was given as a reason.

Oldfield has made a hit with the crowds each day by being on hand to start his car in every race in which he has been entered. No matter how severe the handicap, Barney has started. Even when he had practically no chance to win, he has been willing to leave the tape.

Ralph De Palma was criticized yesterday for his failure to start. He has four cars at the track. He has named the cars he will drive in the five miles and under events, and in the longer races.

The crowd has not shown favoritism thus far. Oldfield is better known here and has been generously cheered. De Palma is well liked and thousands who attend the Motordrome races are anxious to see what he can do in the stock events against Oldfield. He may be ready to meet Barney today.

RALPH DE PALMA, JUST AFTER SMASHING ANOTHER WORLD RECORD!

Some of the speedy ones caught on the quiet at the Pie Pan.

George Robertson in the Simplex won the ten-mile free-for-all in the automobile races on the Motordrome yesterday and broke the world record for the distance. His time of 6m. 35.62s. lowers all previous marks for the distance in competition.

On a flying start the Simplex and the Fiat "ninety," the car with which Ralph De Palma broke the five-mile record, went away together with Bragg jockeying for the pole which he won a half mile from the start. Robertson refused to give way and drove the upper circle of the track, keeping on even terms with the fast Fiat. For seven miles the two men flew on at the world record breaking pace.

Ben Kerscher, in the Darracq, the car which twice won the Vanderbilt Cup race, was third, just behind the Fiat. It was the prettiest and closest race of the day. The three cars were each being driven faster than cars in their class had ever moved on any track.

In the eighth mile a tire on the rear wheel of the Fiat flew to pieces and Bragg was forced to give Robertson the pole. Almost at the same instant the rear tire on the Darracq exploded. The two machines bumped around behind the Simplex, which won in fast time.

The Fiat took second place as Bragg refused to quit though the car was bumping and swerving dangerously. Kerscher kept on and took third place. Ralph De Palma in the Fiat "sixty" was left far behind in the opening miles of the race and had no chance to catch up.

SCORERS ERR.

One of the best races of the day was called off because of an error on the part of the scorers. The race was supposed to be a ten mile handicap with most of the big machines entered and several of the smaller fry. This race had been postponed from the day before.

Frank Lescault, in the Palmer-Singer was given a handicap that sent him away well in the lead which he held to the end of the tenth mile, when the race was called off. The six-cylinder Palmer was tearing off fast miles and Lescault was in line for his first victory when the flag fell and he stopped.

Believing the race was a five mile event, Starter Wagner was about to call the Palmer at the end of the fifth mile. The drivers entered the event with the understanding that it was a five mile race. The men could not understand why the flag was not dropped and kept on driving. This race is to be run again. Oldfield was given a handicap that he could not expect to overcome.

L. J. Hampton on a Ford racer took first place in the ten-mile free-for-all handicap. The Ford was given a handicap of 2m. 10s. and Hampton went away at a mile-a-minute clip. The car has done miles in 57s. and Hamtpon did his best yesterday because Barney Oldfield on the Knox was behind him.

CHEERED HIM ON.

The crowd entered heartily into the spirit of this race as Hampton is driving for the first time on any race track. Unterrified as the big fellows thundered along in his rear Hampton kept on maintaining his lead to the finish. The standing start for the Ford was 9m. 59.04s.

The Buick and Apperson started on scratch in this race.

The Cole was given a handicap of 2m. but Endicott could not catch the Ford. The Stoddard-Dayton, with a handicap of 20s., proved one of the fast cars in this race and took second place, having only the little Ford ahead on the last mile.

Barney Oldfield, starting on scratch, caught every car on the track, including the Apperson, Buick, Isotta and Cole, but could not overcome the lead of the Stoddard, which finished just ahead of the speed champion, who was coming like a mill race as the Ford and Stoddard finished.

The Buick and Cole had another duel

AMERICA GETS AVIATION MEET.

WRIGHT COMPANY AND AERO CLUB GET TOGETHER.

Brother Wilbur Refuses to State the Amount of Royalty to Be Paid Him, But Examines Blue Prints of the Proposed Grounds—New York May Get Show.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, April 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] It was determined today that the international aviation meet of 1910 will be held in this country. This was made possible through an agreement between the Wright Company and the Aëro Club of America, under whose auspices the event will be conducted. After a two days' conference the club acceded to the Wrights' demands and agreed to recognize the priority of their patents and to approve only of such contests as may be licensed by the Ohio inventors.

At the conference Wilbur Wright and Andrew Freedman represented the Wright Company and Philip T. Dodge, William W. Miller, L. L. Gillespie, William Page and Cortlandt Bishop, the Aëro Club.

The Aëro Club will confine its interests in the event to the sporting side, while the general management will be in other hands. It is possible that the Aëro Corporation recently organized, may be authorized to take charge of the affair, and it is also probable that the Wright Company or a group of business men may look after the commercial side of it.

Mr. Wright said just what royalty will be asked has not been settled, and it was a matter that would not come up for consideration until the plans had further matured.

In the afternoon Mr. Wright visited the Aëro Club and examined blue prints showing the proposed plans for the meet on a four-mile track between Garden City and Mineola, L. I.

Tomorrow, with members of the club, he will go over the grounds and consider their suitability. The probability is that New York will get the tournament.

SHUT OUT THE STARS.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, April 9.—Capt. Scott, '10, and H. L. Horton, '10, who are among the best athletes in the Stanford track squad, will be ineligible to compete in the western conference meet at Chicago, in June, according to a telegram received here today. The rules under which the conference meet is held provide that no participant shall have competed in intercollegiate athletics more than three years. This rule is due to the fact that in the conference freshmen are not permitted to take part in intercollegiate meets. It is believed that Scott at least will be able to compete, as the local athletic authorities intend to appeal from the ruling on the ground that the eligibility rules in force at Stanford are different than those in the Middle West.

OLD PUGS LUCKY.

CHICAGO, April 9.—Joe Choynski, the veteran prize fighter, whose record includes a twenty-round draw with Jeffries and a three-round knockout administered years ago to Jack Johnson, telegraphed Jeffries today that he would act as his sparring partner. Choynski will leave for the West next week.

Isotta had the pole, but Apperson shot into the lead and finished the first lap twenty yards ahead of the Knox, but was passed in the second mile by the Knox, which led by two lengths, the Isotta being twenty yards away. This order obtained to the finish, the Knox increasing its lead to seventy-five yards, the Isotta pulling up to within ten yards of the Apperson. Scratches: Fiat Cyclone, Stoddard-Dayton, Great Western.

SECOND RACE—Ten miles, free-for-all, class D. Prizes: First, $100; second, $50.

Start, rolling, excellent. Simplex got away second and trailed the Bragg Fiat until the third mile, when, by a great drive, Robertson shot his car into the lead, which he held for two miles. Bragg then shoved his nose into the lead for two miles, as he had the advantage of the pole for six miles. In the seventh Bragg developed tire trouble and was forced to slow down, being a quarter of a mile in the lead to the finish. The Darracq was within ten yards of the leader until the seventh, when the tire blew out, and he finished with a flat tire. The Fiat Cyclone was outclassed in horse-power.

Start, standing. Ford, with a handicap of 2m. 10s., won by a time margain of 20 seconds over the Stoddard, which finished 18 85-100s. ahead of the Knox. Four cars were distanced, owning to the difficulty of Handicapper McMurtrie in estimating the speed of the cars on the Motordrome track. The scorers failed to record the positions of these cars in the race. Oldfield passed car after car, and was going fast at the finish.

Time—52m. 49 50-100s. Off—3:55.

Start, rolling, good. Cole was driven side by side with Buick at the pole for forty miles, then showed more speed and beat Buick at finish by 1 32-100s. Ford was third for ten miles, twenty-five yards ahead of Warren Detroit, then blew out a spark plug and retired to the pits in the sixteenth mile and lost five laps, finishing four laps behind the Warren Detroit. Firestone early developed engine trouble and was lapped four times by the leaders, and quit the race in the forty-first mile.

The figures given on the piston displacement yesterday were taken from the 1909 edition of the A. A. A. The figures given today are taken from the 1910 edition, and should be correct.

HERE'S A NEW ONE.

AUTO SELLING RACES NEXT ON PROGRAMME.

SELLING races for automobiles may be inaugurated at the Motordrome after this first big meet, and if successful in the beginning should prove a big factor both in the racing game and in the disposal of cars.

In horse racing the "selling plater" is classical, and two-thirds of the races are of the "selling" kind. All horses entered in the race are given a certain selling value. If a horse wins he is put up at auction and the bids must start at the entry price. If the owner desires to retain the animal, he overbids every one else and must pay into the association the difference between his bid price and the entry price. Often horses are sold at a good figure in this way; they are also kept in their own classes.

To apply this system to auto racing is easy, according to those who have studied the automobile game. Nine-tenths of the auto races are for "stock" cars; that is, cars that have been turned out to be sold at the regular listed retail price, and which have not been especially built for racing.

Persons who have been evolving a plan to buy each other's cars. In an auto selling race the owners would enter their cars to be sold at a price to suit themselves. If the selling price is below the list price or equal to it, a winner is almost sure to be sold on the spot; if the price is above the list figures, the public can assure itself that the car is especially built as a racer; if the owner bids in the car at a higher figure than the public will bid, it may show his affection for the racer, and he will have to pay the difference into the association or the purse of the race, to be distributed to the other drivers.

There has been a great deal of discussion on the reliability of the stock car races, and many charge that the majority of the cars are especially prepared for racing. A stock car may be "tuned" without losing its stock qualities, but when parts are reinforced or replaced and new features added, a car loses its stock qualities and becomes a racing car.

In order faithfully to race nothing but stock cars in such events, dealers and manufacturers could gain the confidence of the public by making selling races of their stock cars. If bidders run over the entry price, the dealers would be the gainers; if "wash" sales

PRACTICE.

PASADENA POLO STILL THE RAGE.

FAST EXHIBITION GAME BY SKILLFUL PLAYERS.

Southwest Players and Members of New Crown City Organization Show Spectators Fine Points of Mounted Game—Another Contest Next Week.

A hard exhibition game of polo was played at Tournament Park yesterday afternoon, by teams picked from the Southwest Club and the newly-organized Pasadena Polo Club. The team composed of McVitty, Pattee, and Roberts, of the Pasadena Club, with Harry Weiss of the Southwest Club, defeated Bernie, Reggie, and Tom Weiss, Jr., of the Southwest Club with Savage of Pasadena, by 3 goals to 2.

Polo is still all the rage at Pasadena, and the new club is starting in most auspiciously. A good crowd turned out to watch yesterday's game, and found it exciting from start to finish.

Two members of the new club showed up brilliantly—Savage and McVitty.

McVitty is an old polo player and a member of the Riverside team, but he was one of the charter members of Pasadena and yesterday he played as a member of the Pasadena club.

Savage was the raw recruit but he made good. It was his first game of polo, but he went into the thick of battle like a veteran and made many sensational plays. His mounts were Capt. Besley's well-trained ponies, which helped him out.

It was announced the game would be played between the Southwest Polo Club and a mixed team of Riverside and Pasadena, but when the players got onto the field it was feared the Weiss boys with their well-trained ponies would make all the goals, so it was decided to mix things up a bit. The players were divided and the opposing teams went by the name of the "Yellows" and the "Whites."

The game was divided into four periods of twelve minutes each and resulted in a score of 3 to 2 in favor of the Whites. Superintendent Schwartz acted as umpire and Tom Weiss, Sr., time keeper.

The entire game was characterized by good swift playing. At no time was there any rough work and there were no accidents. The playing was mostly open work with but few close scrimmages.

The first period opened with the Yellows taking the south goal. They secured the ball in the second play and ran it close to the Whites goal and in three minutes Reggie Weiss made a goal after a sensational long drive, followed by two short punts. In the last half of the period the Whites carried the ball to the Yellow's goal and Roberts missed a score with a side stroke. The Yellows got hold of the ball and made a good play clear across the field. When near the goal line time was called but before the play stopped Reggie Weiss made another goal which, according to the rules adopted, did not count.

The second period was more open and was characterized by harder riding. Harry Weiss started the ball toward the Yellows's goal and after several successive strokes missed goal by only a trifle. The Yellows carried the ball back to mid-field again, but in an unguarded moment Roberts stopped the play and started back towards goal. McVitty did some excellent guarding, riding Tom and Reggie Weiss off the field two times. Rob-

MOTORDROME RACES.

Yesterday is the fifty-mile race which was fought out stubbornly to the last mile when "Bill" Endicott outdrove Joe Nikrent, took the pole away from the Buick man, by a clever piece of jockeying and won the race by five lengths.

HIS HEADY WORK.

Though the Buick had as much speed apparently as the Cole, Endicott waited until Nikrent pocketed himself behind the Warren-Detroit, third car in the race, and the little Ford. Then Bill shot into the lead, took the pole and finished a winner. He won $200 by his heady work.

The Warren-Detroit, driven by Arthur Miller, was a contender to the finish, the car taking third place in a race that broke the world stock car record for the class. The time of 43m. 49.59s. lowers the previous world stock car record of 50m. 2s. held by Ray Harroun in a Marmon.

Caleb Bragg tried to lower the Motordrome track record yesterday with his Fiat "ninety." His best time was 39.22s. for the mile.

Ben Kerscher also tried to crack the mark now held by Barney Oldfield. His best time was 39.58s. Kerscher drove the Darracq, one of the fastest cars at the track.

Barney Oldfield drove his Benz five miles at a terrific clip and took desperate chances. A front tire was ripped to ribbons and when the car swerved on the back stretch many believed Oldfield would be killed and his car wrecked.

WOMEN SHRIEK.

There was a shriek of horror from the women in the automobiles as the big Benz began to climb toward the top rail of the fence. Oldfield was trying for the five-mile record now held by Ralph De Palma, and had the mark well in hand when the tire flew to pieces. He was forced to shut off the motor and coast to the repair pits.

Drivers and Officials Taking Part in the Races at the Motordrome and a View of the Automobile Row Along the Fence.

Above are the officials—Walter Hemple, track manager; W. E. Bush, one of the judges; S. B. Stevens, referee; S. M. Butler, honorary referee; Fred Wagner, starter; F. E. Moskovics, general manager; Alvin McMurtrie, handicaper; Frank Garbutt, president of company. In the middle are the drivers. Top row, Frank Free, Joe Nickrent, Louis Nickrent, Barney Oldfield, Frank Lescault, J. Gander, Bruno Siebel. Below are Bill Endecott, Mac Purcell, Ray Harroun, Frank Siefert, J. B. Marquis.

The two miles were made at almost track record speed. The first circuit was done in 36.88s and the second in 36.84s. This would have brought the track mark down to a notch that would have been hard to equal. Oldfield is almost certain to get this record before the meet closes.

In another attempt, tire trouble forced him to slow up. He made the five miles in 3m. 16.71s. The five-mile record is 3m. 16.62s.

The races thus far on the Motordrome have demonstrated that long events tire the crowd. The attendance yesterday was larger than on the opening day and the races were better and more exciting. The handicap feature of the meet is one of the hardest to handle.

Alvan McMurtrie, technical expert for the A.A.A., sent the cars away yesterday, according to the showing they had made on the track. He made one mistake, when the Great Western was started with a ten-second handicap over Barney Oldfield. Oldfield could make almost two miles to the Great Western's one. The car is one of the slowest on the track and was outclassed with such a handicap.

START IN THE DIRT.

The cars are all started on the dirt just below the boards. The drivers are obliged to shoot to the pigpan side and the excitement comes during the getaway. The throngs in the automobiles can see this start.

One of the best places to watch the races at the Motordrome is in the bleachers, although the wind blows hard through the seats. All the thrills, swerves and jockeying of drivers can be watched, and the cars can be seen for every minute of the race. The bleacher seats afford a view that cannot be had in the oval.

Arrangements were made yesterday for those in the cars who wish to take seats in the grandstand and bleachers. The subway can be used to reach the seats above the track where the drivers can be seen during the race and everything that goes on can be watched.

There is plenty of excitement in the repair pits. Cars are being rushed in and out again for repairs. Mechanicians are working at top speed to make tire changes or fill bubbling radiators. There is plenty of fun and much of interest where the world's best men are handling their cars.

Each driver handles his car differently. Robertson always helps to change his own tires. Ralph De Palma, perhaps because of his injured leg, is willing to let the mechanicians do the tugging and hauling. Barney Oldfield superintends.

ARMY OF HELPERS.

There is a small army of men for every driver. The Fiat camp is the for his Simplex car. Lescault has help for his fast Palmer-Singer. Barney Oldfield has three cars and about twice as many men.

While world records are being smashed these men sit in the paddock and talk of what is being done and boost for their respective drivers. There is keen rivalry between the attendants of each star.

The keenest rivalry is between the Oldfield and De Palma camps. As Oldfield drives his followers watch the big Benz or fast Knox with "I-told-you-so" expressions. Oldfield always seems to win. His followers are confident.

De Palma has not yet met Barney in a match race. He is working hard to get his big 190 Fiat into trim for the match race. De Palma has been excused from every stock race in which Oldfield has appeared.

AUTO CLUB ACTS.

VANDERBILT IS HONORED.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, April 9.—An announcement issued today by W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., president of the Motor Cups Holding Company, reveals the fact that the Automobile Club of America has turned over the running of its international grand prize race to the former sponsor of the Vanderbilt cup race.

The contest, which is for a $5000 gold challenge cup, is to be run on Long Island over a distance of 278.08 miles on a circuit requiring twenty-two laps. The date set is October 15, 1910, but Mr. Vanderbilt reserves the right to declare the race off if less than fifteen entires are received by August 1.

In addition to the gold cup, cash prizes to drivers will be offered as follows: $4000 to first, $2000 to second, $1000 to third.

RAMBLER RAMBLES SOME.

Cowan Sells Same Car Three Times and Makes Trio of Autoists More Than Pleased.

W. K. Cowan holds a record for selling cars. He disposed of a Rambler to three different people. Cowan, who is agent for the Rambler line, has been doing a rushing business and has been embarrassed to make deliveries on time. Recently he sold a thirty-four horse power car to L. A. Myers.

When the big forty-five horse power cars came in Myers decided he would get a larger car and sold his thirty-four back to the Rambler man. He bought a forty-five horse power car and was more than pleased. Cowan sold the thirty-four horse power car to Peter Orban.

Orban had no sooner learned to operate the thirty-four horse power car than he desired to get a bigger machine. He made overtures to Cowan, sold the thirty-four horse power, and took a brand new forty-five horse pow-seen Myers and Orban get their cars and was anxious. He arrived just as Orban was turning in the thirty-four horse power car for the bigger machine. He never let his eyes off the car until he had taken full possession and Cowan had his check. Mathie has the car and intends to keep it, he says.

UNITED STATES MOTOR COMPANY

With the formation of the United States Motor Company, the new $16,000,000 corporation which has been formed as the selling organization for the Maxwell and Columbia companies, and any other concern that may be admitted, a new departure has been made in the consolidation of the purchasing departments now under the general supervision of A. R. Gormully. This places Gormully at the head of all purchasing agents in the motor car industry.

For the past four years Gormully has been purchasing agent for the Maxwell-Briscoe Motor Company and he is conceded by steel and parts makers to be one of the most efficient buyers in this country. Speaking of the enormous strides of the motor car industry Benjamn Briscoe, president of the United States Motor Company says:

"When one looks backward to twelve years ago, when the motor car business was in its infancy, and compares it to the gigantic industry of today, one is fairly staggered with the comparison. Now cars are being made by the hundred thousand and the automobile business is ranking as one of ou greatest industries."

NEW SANTA FE TRAIL.

Auto Endurance Run from Hutchinson, Kan., to Pueblo, Colo., Over New Boulevard.

An automobile endurance run is to be held over the new Santa Fé trail in Kansas and Colorado. This road, now being built through the twelve Kansas counties and six Colorado counties, will be a 452 mile course over which the cars will start from Hutchinson, Kan., and travel to Pueblo, Colo.

R. H. Faxon, secretary of the board of control of the Eighteenth National Irrigation Congress, and editor of the Garden City, Kan. paper, is president of the new Santa Fé Trial Association. He is pressing the matter of the endurance run vigorously and is arranging the details.

The run is to be one of the greatest road-making tours ever held in this country. Pueblo, the terminus, is to be boosted and the motor cars are to be used to give the route plenty of publicity. Newspaper men will be carried on the trip.

The tour is to be started at an elevation of 1800 feet, up a grade to Pueblo, which is 5000 feet high. The cars will

MORE FREIGHT CARS.

Santa Fe Places Order for Five Hundred Additional Cars in Effort to Move Autos Faster.

The Santa Fé Railway Company has placed an order for 500 more freight cars for carrying automobiles, according to J. A. Elmslie, commercial agent for the Santa Fé. The increasing freight business has made necessary the building of the large number of extra cars as the railroad is forced to use cattle and refrigerator cars for moving automobiles.

This order comes on the heels of a half-thousand order made and completed less than six months ago. Since that time the automobile business has increased greatly in volume and dealers and agents all over the country have been clamoring for cars.

Automobiles shipped to Los Angeles have been held up for weeks because the railway has not enough cars to supply the factories. An addition of 500 more cars for automobiles exclusively, it is believed, will relieve the conditions. This means that auto freight cars are to be given the right of way as far as possible.

Many cars are being shipped by express. Here again, the railway people are facing a problem. Cars shipped by express are no longer a novelty. Many dealers and a number of factories are resorting to this means of getting cars through in fast time.

BIG DAY SUNDAY.

THE TIMES HANDICAP ON THE MOTORDR

GEORGE ROBERTSON is to try for the mile mark now held by Barney Oldfield. The record of the Benz, 36.22s., seems to be almost the limit of speed for the track. Oldfield and Ralph De Palma are both to try for the track marks.

FIRST RACE.

Fifteen-mile stock chassis, class division, 1-160 cu. in.

Fiat (De Palma) 18-H.P.: should win. Is fast for its class and has one of the best drivers on the track.

Isotta (Marquis) 20-H.P.: second choice in this race and a strong contender. If Marquis can get the pole he may be able to hold his lead.

Hupmobile (Kelly) 20 H.P.: seems to be outclassed in this race and cannot hope for better than third place.

SECOND RACE.

Five-mile stock chassis class C, division 2:

Cole (Endicott) 30 H.P.: has beaten the Buick every time the two cars have met. Endicott is a better driver than Nikrent. The Cole has done miles in 58s. and is able to keep up the clip.

Buick (Nikrent) 30-H.P.: second choice from the performances of the cars in the races already held. Nikrent does not seem to be able to get the speed out of the car to beat Endicott, who has trimmed him twice in close races. The Buick has done miles in 58s., however, but the race is too short and if the Cole gets the pole it is sure to be all day with the Buick.

Ford (Hampton) 20-H.P.: outclassed in horse power but seems to have plenty of speed. Not quite fast enough to win this race. Ford has done miles in 51s. and yesterday won the handicap event in which big cars were entered.

Warren-Detroit (Miller.) 30-H. P.: Made a consistent showing in the fifty-mile race yesterday when a world record was broken. Has a chance as the car can do miles in better than a minute.

Firestone-Columbus (Linthwaite) 20-H. P.: Has not the speed to win in so short a race.

THIRD RACE.

Five-mile stock chassis, class C division 2, 231-300 cubic inches:

Marmon (Harroun.) 40-H. P.: Should win on past performance. Won the century race with Harroun at the wheel.

Dorris (Siefert.) 30-H. P.: Is a second slower to the mile than the Marmon.

FOURTH RACE.

Five-mile free-for-all, class D.

Simplex (Robertson.) 90-H. P.: Only one car on the track, the Fiat ninety, seems to be as fast as the Simplex. Robertson should win, judging from his form in yesterday's race with the BIG DAY SUNDAY.

THE TIMES HANDICAP DOPE ON THE MOTORDROME RACES.

GEORGE ROBERTSON is to try for the mile mark now held by Barney Oldfield. The record of the Benz, 36.22s., seems to be almost the limit of speed for the track. Oldfield and Ralph De Palma are both to try for the track marks.

FIRST RACE.

Fifteen-mile stock chassis, class [illegible] division, 1-160 cu. in.

Fiat (De Palma) 15-H.P.: should win. Is fast for its class and has one of the best drivers on the track.

Isotta (Marquis) 20-H.P.: second choice in this race and a strong contender. If Marquis can get the pole he may be able to hold his lead.

Hupmobile (Kelly) 20 H.P.: seems to be outclassed in this race and cannot hope for better than third place.

SECOND RACE.

Five-mile stock chassis class C, division 2:

Cole (Endicott) 30 H.P.: has beaten the Buick every time the two cars have met. Endicott is a better driver than Nikrent. The Cole has done miles in 58s, and is able to keep up the clip.

Buick (Nikrent) 30-H.P.: second choice from the performances of the cars in the races already held. Nikrent does not seem to be able to get the speed out of the car to beat Endicott, who has trimmed him twice in close races. The Buick has done miles in 58s., however, but the race is too short and if the Cole gets the pole it is sure to be all day with the Buick.

Ford (Hampton) 20-H.P.: outclassed in horse power but seems to have plenty of speed. Not quite fast enough to win this race. Ford has done miles in 57s. and yesterday won the handicap event in which big cars were entered.

Warren-Detroit (Miller,) 30-H. P.: Made a consistent showing in the fifty-mile race yesterday when a world record was broken. Has a chance as the car can do miles in better than a minute.

Firestone-Columbus (Linthwaite) 20-H. P.: Has not the speed to win in so short a race.

THIRD RACE.

Five-mile stock chassis, class C division 3, 231-300 cubic inches:

Marmon (Harroun,) 40-H. P.: Should win on past performance. Won the century race with Harroun at the wheel.

[illegible] (Siefert,) 30-H. P.: Is a second slower to the mile than the Marmon.

FOURTH RACE.

Five-mile free-for-all, class D.

[illegible] (Robertson,) 90-H. P.: Only [illegible] the track, the Fiat ninety, [illegible] as fast as the Simplex. [illegible] should win, judging from [illegible] yesterday's race with the of speed out of his car, and at the same time save his tires.

Darracq (Kerscher,) 100-H. P.: One of the fastest cars on track, but Kerscher is an erratic driver. He has won a race, but gets excited when he thinks of passing the big guns. May be good for third.

Fiat (De Palma,) 60-H. P.: Seems to be outclassed in speed by the above three machines. He is the best driver in the race, and may be able to place in spite of his handicap in horsepower.

FIFTH RACE.

Ten mile free-for-all handicap, class D.

Knox (Oldfield) 60-H. P.: Oldfield should have a cinch in this event, as he can play with the other cars and win. Much depends on the start, however. The Knox is good for miles in 44s.

Simplex (Robertson,) 90-H. P.: Second choice. Fast and a consistent performer. Has as much speed as the Knox but Oldfield should be able to win from any driver in his class judging from his work in the other events.

Darracq (Kerscher,) 100-H. P.: Here is the chance that Kerscher has wanted and he may be able to win. He has never defeated Oldfield, however, and there seems no valid reason for him to defeat the speed king in this event.

Isotta (Marquis,) 45-H.P.: Has been doing better every day and yesterday was in shape for miles in 47s. Marquis is in line for a victory but he hardly seems able to get a first place in this event.

Stoddard-Dayton (Livingston,) 60-H. P.: One of the fastest cars in its class and has a chance to place in this race. With Oldfield and Robertson ahead of him, however, Livingston's chances for victory are slim indeed.

Palmer-Singer (Lescault,) 60-H. P.: Should have won the handicap event

20-H. P.; the Reo Bird (Siebel,) 40-H. P.; the Marmon with Harroun and the Marmon thirty with Wade driving seem to have small chance to place in this race.

SIXTH RACE.

One hundred mile stock chassis, class C, division 5, 451-600 cubic inches displacement.

Knox (Oldfield,) 60-H. P.: Almost certain to win and is a good bet at odds of two to one. The Knox against the field in this race seems about right as Barney should walk away with the bacon.

Fiat (De Palma,) 60-H. P.: Was not in working order yesterday, but if the car is in trim today should give Oldfield a race. It is hardly likely that the Fiat will start.

Apperson (Hanshue:) Probable chance for third place.

Stoddard-Dayton (Livingston,) 60-H. P.: Has a chance for third place.

Isotta (Marquis): Fast enough to beat the Stoddard, but has been trimmed in short races by Livingston's car.

Great Western (Deseran,) 45-H. P.: Seems to be outclassed.

COPY.

February 3, 1910.

MR. CHARLES G. ROBERTS,
351 E. 18th St., East Orange, N. J.

Dear Mr. Roberts: Confirming our conversation at Madison Square Garden, during the Automobile Show, when I met you for the purpose of assisting you in the selection of a car, I wish to call your attention again to the "MERCER." You will remember that we went over the different cars quite thoroughly and that my choice was the "MERCER." The rear construction, transmission, engine and frame of this car cannot be found in any other for anywhere near the price. As an expert, these parts are the only ones that I am ever called upon to examine, the equipment is a matter of choice. Since seeing you I have had the pleasure of driving a "MERCER" for several hours, and this experience has confirmed my opinion of the car.

The above named combination of parts that comprise the chassis of the "MERCER," I find superior to many cars that sell for $2750.00.

I have recommended the "MERCER" to several of our directors and stockholders, who have one or more of our five and six thousand dollar cars, and who have asked my opinion on small cars. I find them giving satisfaction in every way and the owners well pleased. Yours very truly,

TRACK TEAMS EVEN MATCH.

Stanford and California to Hold Annual Meet.

Cardinal Has Best Record in Recent Years.

Comparisons of Athletes in This Season's Squads.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, April 8.—The seventeenth annual track and field meet between Stanford and the University of California is to be held on the Stanford oval next Saturday afternoon. The teams apparently are as evenly matched as they have been in the last five contests and the meet promises to furnish thrills in nearly every event. Both universities are equally confident of victory.

It was not until 1903 that Stanford scored a victory over the Californians in a track meet. Nine defeats were suffered in preceding years and the contest in 1896 resulted in a tie. Since 1903 the Cardinal has been returned the victor four times and has been beaten twice. No meet was held in 1906 on account of the earthquake.

In nearly every event the struggle for first honors promises to be heart-breaking. California's fine array of hurdlers probably will clean up all the points in both stick events, but Stanford seems to have an equal advantage in the sprints as in Reed, Coleman and Smitherum, the Cardinal has a trio that has performed better than any of the short distance men across the bay.

Stanford is counting on Wyman again to capture first in the quarter-mile dash. Butler of California has run the distance as fast as Wyman this year, but the Cardinal man is capable of covering the course in 50s. if pressed, and Stanford men do not believe that Butler will be able to maintain such a fast clip. Stols of Redlands and Carter and Taylor of Los Angeles are good for 52s. or better, and Stanford intends to make a strong bid for all the places. Millsap, formerly of Pasadena High School, is a dangerous man in this event.

THE HALF-MILERS.

The half-mile race promises to be one of the most closely contested races of the meet. Dowd and Dozier of California will meet a worthy rival in Johnston of Stanford, who will make his opponents cover the distance in less than two minutes in order to beat him. The men are very evenly matched and any one is likely to win.

Smith of California and Porter of Stanford have been covering the mile in about the same time throughout the season. Porter is easily good for less than 4m. 35s., and as he always "comes through" at the right time, he is expected to beat his rival. Freshman Price of Stanford, who won first in the mile in the freshman meet, has been finishing close to Porter and is likely to take third place.

In the two-mile grind Stanford will enter three men who are able to register 10m. 20s., or better. Newman of San Diego, the intercollegiate champion, is in excellent condition and J. E. Shelton, '10, and E. C. Templeton, '10, have been finishing close to him in recent meets.

California has no pole vaulters who have equalled the performances of Capt. Scott and Bellah of Stanford, both of whom are good for 12ft. or better. First and second places in this event seem easy for the Cardinal. Freshman Horine should take first in the high jump with a leap considerably over 6ft. Argabrite of Ventura should be a safe second if he is in condition, as he is good for 6ft. He has been handicapped by a weak ankle for nearly two months, but probably will be in fine trim before next Saturday. Poor, '10, who won third place last year, is clearing 5ft. 9in.

TO ACCEPT SECOND.

Stanford is not counting on first place in the broad jump as Vilas of California has been outjumping the local men. However, with Stolz capable of reaching 22ft., Tallant of Santa Barbara touching 21ft. 6in., and Bellah going only three inches less, the chances are good for the Cardinal jumpers taking second and third places.

In the weight events, Stanford's prospects are bright. Horton has been putting the shot 44ft., which is better than any of the Blue and Gold weight men have made. Woolley is tossing the hammer over 140ft. The California men will have a hard time bettering this mark.

The relay race, the outcome of which will probably determine the winner of the meet, will be a great race. The Cardinal team probably will be picked from Wyman, Stols, Coleman, Carter, Taylor and Millsap. Stanford has never had a fleeter quartette of relay runners than the first four. Reed has not been engaging in track meets as he is a member of the baseball team but he is in good condition for cinder-path work.

Stanford will enter five or six athletes in nearly every event. Some of these men are likely to spring a surprise by upsetting the dope. Unexpected results have characterized the meets of recent years.

The California track team practiced on the local oval this afternoon for the purpose of becoming used to the track and especially the straightaway. The furlong sprinters and hurdlers at California are accustomed to performing on a curved track. The Blue and Gold men will visit here again before the meet.

The eligibility list submitted by California contained the names of 101 athletes who may compete. The Stanford list contained only sixty-five names. Each university is permitted to enter six men in each event, which makes it possible for 226 men to participate in the contest.

ALTERATIONS.

MANY CHANGES IN BALL RULES.

HOW TRICKS OF GAME MADE PLAY DIFFERENT.

Important Additions to Diamond Code Resulted from Players Following Unwritten Law of Sport—Bunting Has Played Big Part in Perfecting Baseball.

Many of the important changes made in the baseball playing rules during the last twenty years were brought about by players taking advantage of the unwritten law of the game.

The late Mike Kelly tried to kill the bunt when attempted with no one on bases, by leaving his position just before the pitcher let the ball go to the batsman. Kelly would start with the pitch, and be in position close to the third base line, ready for a ball bunted in that direction, thus allowing the third baseman to play back.

This style of ball playing delayed the game and made it unpleasant for the umpires when working back of the plate. The rules were then changed, forcing the catcher to remain in prescribed lines drawn around his position.

Early in the game John McMullen, Ross Barnes and a few others made remarkable batting records by hitting the ball into the ground in such a way that it caromed off to foul ground and at times clean into the bleachers, the players being allowed all they could make on the hit. The rules were then changed so that any balls passing the foul ground before reaching first or third base were simply fouls and a waste of time, practically killing the chances of several clever batsmen from making good records.

twenty years and one month in the

FOUL STRIKE ORIGIN.

In 1894 Hugh Duffy secured the best batting average ever made by a National League player, .438. Duffy was a remarkable all-round batsman, who could hit with the best men of the profession. Knowing his ability to drive the ball through the infield, the third baseman generally played back to the base line. Duffy would bunt the ball tenderly close to the third-base line, seldom over one-third of the way to third base. He has laid down as high as seven perfect bunts, to see the ball roll off on the foul ground, finally get one fair and be on first base. This style of batting delayed the game, and the rulemakers made a law allowing a strike on the batsman each time the ball went foul, and Duffy was forced to change his style while looking for base hits.

One clever play that was worked to advantage by Joe Hornung while with the Boston Club in the early eighties was discovered by a mere accident. In 1875 Cherokee Fisher, now a Chicago fireman, was playing right field for the Philadelphia Club. He was one of the regular pitchers of the team and a weak man on a fly ball, but was forced into the game. With a man on third Fisher went after a long fly, the ball hit his hands and bounded several feet into the air, coming down into the player's hands for the out.

The runner on third left his base just as the ball reached the fielder's hands, but was declared out on the return of the ball to third, the umpire claiming that he left the base before the ball was momentarily held by a fielder. It was several years before the rule was changed, as it stands today, and, at that, the rules are still mystifying on this point.

PITCHERS RESTRAINED.

With the pitching distance but forty-five feet and the men allowed to take both feet off the ground, often stepping over the front line a foot or two, it was no great trick for a clever boxman to strike out fifteen men to a game. The only wonder was that players could meet the ball for a safe hit. This great advantage to the pitcher was nullified by forcing the boxman to keep one foot on the ground from the time he started his preliminary motion until after he had delivered the ball to the batsman.

At first this seemed to be a great hardship on the pitchers, but they soon overcame the handicap, and, to give the batsman an equal chance, the boxmen were placed sixty feet from the plate.

Balking by the pitchers has ever been a drawback to the game. Years ago a pitcher could make a bluff throw to first and then turn and deliver the ball, practically killing off base stealing.

During the nineties players became so proficient that they could foul off the good balls and work a base on balls against the most accurate pitchers. This handicap to the game was killed off by the rule calling all fouls strikes, until the batsman had but one chance, and was forced to hit at the good balls.

GAME BENEFITED.

All of these changes brought out a vigorous protest at the time from those clubs and players who had imwas benefited in every case, as time has proved.

There was just one objectionable feature of the game that the rulemakers never considered until this year. That is the worn-out trick of hiding the ball, and President Ban Johnson must be congratulated for at least making a stand against this unprofessional play.

One bright magnate says that it will show up the bonehead in baseball. Many a clever, bright inside player has been humiliated by falling into the trap, while, on the other hand, many bonehead players pull off the trick.

The spectators never enjoy the play, for the reason they have no way of knowing when it may be pulled off. The player caught holding out the ball who fails to get his man looks cheap. Holding out a ball has the same effect as holding out an ace. It may seem funny to those in on the play, but how about the other fellow?

It will be a fine thing for the game when the rules are so worded that everybody can interpret them alike. Up to this year, every president of a league was forced to give his staff of umpires special orders as to the way they were to enforce the playing code. The major leagues differed on playing rules, and this should never be the case where joint committees are supposed to fully agree before handing the matter over to the guide books.

HUSTLING STODDARDS.

OVERPRODUCTION SCARE BUGABOO SAYS CHURCH.

FIFTY carloads of Stoddard-Dayton cars have been received over the Santa Fé since the beginning of Septembre, 1909. Twenty-eight carloads of Stoddards have been shipped to the Coast over other lines since August 1. This is the high water mark for Norman W. Church, Coast representative for the Stoddard-Dayton Motor Car Company.

Nine carloads of Stoddards were sent to Seattle by Church last month. Six carloads went to Portland, three to Tacoma. Eleven carloads were sent to San Francisco, five to Spokane, three to Salt Lake, one to Boise and one to Phoenix.

"This is the greatest year in the history of the Stoddard car on the Pacific Coast," said Church yesterday. "We have sold more machines than we ever did before up to this time. In spite of the fact that we were late in receiving our shipments we have broken all records.

"Never before in the selling season have we been so rushed for cars. It has been impossible to make deliveries on certain lines of Stoddards. Our sales force has been on the jump and there is no immediate prospect of a let-up. I don't know where it is going to end because I can see only hard work ahead for us for at least three months.

"This talk of overproduction has proved a bugaboo thus far. We would like to see a little of it at the local Stoddard headquarters. A carload a day has not been sufficient. This does not look much like a surplus. Our factory is working a large force night and day in order to keep abreast of the demands of the agents all over the country.

"What looks to me to be the healthiest condition which has ever existed in the motor car industry is now being enjoyed by the Stoddard factory. This same condition exists throughout the East. Every other factory is working to its fullest capacity. It means that more motor cars than ever are to be made this year.

"With every wheel in every factory buzzing, and the public demanding more cars, this year is to be a record breaker as even the enormous output of 1909 is to be exceeded. The market is to be found to a large extent this side of the Rocky Mountains. The East is bound to pay more attention to the West than it ever did before.

"Manufacturers are turning toward Los Angeles for hints as to the trend of the industry. This city already has become one of the most important distributing points of the West. A glance at the Stoddard railroad contracts shows what is being done. Others also are doing an immense business."

OVER THE DESERT.

GOLD PRIZE FOR LOS ANGELES-PHOENIX ROAD RACE THIS YEAR.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) April 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Los Angeles-Phoenix road race is to be run again this year, in Territorial Fair time, it is probable, and the prize is to be a purse of $2000, half of it to come from the fair management. Sixty-five per cent. will go to the first car, 25 per cent. to the second and 10 per cent. to the third. This is the suggestion of Leon T. Shettler of Los Angeles, who is arranging already for the entrance of a car in the stiff desert run.

Few contests ever scheduled have shown the staying qualities of the automobiles engaged and the nature of the country, to such an extent that the race is not necessarily the prize of the highest-powered or most expensive car. It is believed the record of the Buick can be lowered.

The Fair Commission, in the hope of getting the best possible auto attractions, has authorized an offer of a $1000 purse for a track race of twenty-five miles between Barney Oldfield and Ralph DePalma. An additional $800 was voted for other track events on automobile day during Fair Week.

Two silver cups were arranged for, to be competed for by members of the Globe and Prescott automobile clubs, in races to Phoenix from their respective cities. The way from Globe is mainly over the far-famed Roosevelt road, the best thoroughfare in the Southwest, but the run from Prescott would be over the worst of roads, with at least one stiff mountain climb.

President George P. Bullard of the Maricopa Automobile Club, has been asked to take charge of the contests scheduled for November.

Telegraphic advices have been received that the Contest Board of the American Automobile Association has decided in favor of the Columbia, in the protest made against the Pennsylvania car, after a track race at the fair grounds last fall. It was then charged that the Pennsylvania crew had changed the wheels on their machine, thus altering the gear ratio, something forbidden by the race agreement, which was that the cars should go on the track with the same gears used in the Los Angeles-Phoenix desert run.

As soon as official notice has been received, President Bullard will send the cup over to Columbia headquarters in Los Angeles.

ADOPT SOCCER FOOTBALL.

Schedule of Games Prepared by Stanford Kickers, Which May Result in Intercollegiate Matches.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, April 8.—Soccer football has been added to the sports fostered by the student body. At a meeting of the Executive Committee last night it was decided to support the teams and to encourage the playing of the game in the future on account of its affording excellent training for Rugby football.

The formal recognition of the game by the student body may lead to an attempt to install soccer as an intercollegiate sport. Two months ago the game was taken up as an experiment by the gymnasium classes. Much promising Rugby material has been unearthed and the teams have made a splendid showing in outside games.

Two principal teams, the Reds and Grays, are to play the following schedule during the remainder of the school year: April 23, Reds and Argonauts at San Francisco, Grays and Thistles at Presidio; April 30, Reds and Reliance Club at Presidio, Grays and Barbarians at Stanford.

Early in May a game between an all-California team picked from the California League and an all-star Stanford eleven is to be played here. This match is expected to be the best exhibition of the game in the north this year.

Many Rugby men who are not engaging in other branches of intercollegiate sports are playing soccer. It is believed that the playing of the game will result in the turning out of stronger Rugby fifteens than otherwise could be formed.

Physical Instructor Maloney, formerly of Pasadena Y.M.C.A., inaugurated soccer and is coaching the teams.

NEW MAN FOR PACKARD.

Macauley of Detroit Appointed to Important Position in High-Priced Car Factory.

Alvan Macauley of Detroit has been appointed general manager for the Packard Motor Car Company. He was formerly general manager of the Burroughs Adding Machine Company. He succeeds S. D. Waldon, who has been elected vice-president of the Packard company.

The steady growth of the Packard plant has made necessary an extra force from the official department to the working staff in the big factory.

ing of the large number of cars necessitates.

The selection of Macauley to the important position of manager seems peculiarly fitting, owing to the fact that he has been instrumental in building up a business which is almost parallel to that of the Packard. Macauley has been connected with the Burroughs people for eight years. He was one of the men, who, with Joseph Boyer, was directly responsible for taking the plant to Detroit.

BASKETBALL SQUABBLE.

Stockton Y.M.C.A. Claims State Championship on Ground That Spartan's Title is no Good.

As winners of the Southern California basketball championship, the Spartans of the Los Angeles Y.M.C.A. have challenged the Stockton Y.M.C.A., winners of the Northern California championship, for a series of games to decide the premier honors of the State.

A hitch in the programme has been caused by the fact that the Stockton team refuses to recognize the Spartans as Southern California champions on the ground that the team has not won the title by playing through any organized A.A.U. league.

The Spartans have claimed the title by virtue of winning all games played, since in their schedule they have defeated all fives appearing to be within range of championship honors. There has been no organized league or knockout tournament.

On account of this technicality the Stockton team advertised the final game on its northern schedule against the Berkeley Y.M.C.A. as a "State championship" game.

When Physical Director Reynolds of the Los Angeles association saw one of the posters of the game, he immediately wrote to Stockton claiming a game with the northerners as Southern California victors. The Stockton management replied first that they could pay only partial expenses of a match game; later that they would not be able to meet any of the expenses of such a match, and finally that they would not consider the Spartan challenge unless the Los Angeles team won its title by winning through to the top of an A.A.U. Southern California league.

There the matter now stands, but Reynolds is still keeping at the northerners for a game.

ELECTRIC AUTOMOBILE FACTS

Are what you are looking for if you are IN THE MARKET FOR AN ELECTRIC CAR.

The popular question has been: CHAIN DRIVE OR SHAFT DRIVE? WHICH? This question has been answered by a larger majority in favor of the shaft drive on the GASOLINE CAR, where the question of EFFICIENCY means only the consumption of more gasoline and some loss in speed;—

BUT this loss in efficiency in the ELECTRIC CAR means EVERYTHING;—it is the one prominent issue with Electric Car Manufacturers today. Any well informed and truthful engineer will tell you that there is a loss of ten to fifteen per cent. in efficiency in a shaft drive when compared with the chain drive. This fact is well illustrated when you note that the majority of Gasoline Racing Cars are equipped with the DOUBLE Chain Drive. (Note—it is DOUBLE not single.)

Do A Little Figuring For Yourself In Regard To This Loss of Efficiency.

In a year's time how many miles have you wasted and how many dollars thrown away.

Some manufacturers try to overcome this loss in efficiency by increasing the number of cells in the battery, and for these extra cells they charge you a hundred or two hundred dollars more. (This is where the difference in price comes in.) The result is an overload on tires and extra expense for washing or renewal of battery.

WE APPEAL TO YOUR OWN GOOD JUDGMENT as to whether you would prefer to buy a car built by an UP-TO-DATE, WIDE-AWAKE manufacturer, or by one who claims to be the OLDEST—by one who is the largest manufacturer of electric vehicles today, or by one who CLAIMS (we ask you to look this up) to be larger than all the other electric vehicle manufacturers combined. "IGNORANCE IS BLISS," they say, but it is no excuse.

We wish to emphasize the fact that we are: DEALERS IN ELECTRIC VEHICLES EXCLUSIVELY. THIS IS OUR SOLE AND ONLY BUSINESS.

Our Two Garages are second to none as the finest and most complete in America. All of our garage departments are managed by men of years of experience in the electric vehicle business. All of this means much to the purchaser of an electric car and we most cordially invite you to make a personal investigation in regard to these facts and also inspect our very complete line of DETROIT AND COLUMBUS ELECTRICS and THE NEW EDISON BATTERY (the battery about which you have read so much.)

ALL 1910 DETROIT ELECTRICS are made to accommodate this new battery, which is bulkier than the regular lead battery. AGAIN, THE DETROIT IS A YEAR AHEAD. Note: We have no '09 Electrics to palm off on the public at reduced prices; the manufacturers of the Detroit sold their entire output during the season of 1909.

OUR LINE CONSISTS OF COUPES in five different Models, $2200, $2600. VICTORIAS in five Models, $1800, $2025. RUNABOUTS from $1800 up.

Replying to your Letter of recent date would say. We have used 4 Cars including the present one in the last 2½ years. There is 2 of us driving this car continually and we keep it going almost night and day and we dont use more than a third of the oil and gasoline we did on our other Cars. We have been looking for just such a car and we are more than satisfied. Country Trips are a pleasure in an E.M.F. Thirty. We can cheerfully recommend this Car to any one. It is a $2000.00 Car for $1400.00

Mr. Harry E. Lord,
Manager Lord Motor Car Co.,

Dear Sir:--

Six months ago I purchased my first E. M. F. car, and have been using it almost every day. For two years previous I had much unpleasant experience with another make-having expensive repair bills and waste of much valuable time in trouble on the road. In six months my repair bills upon the E. M. F, have amounted to less than $15.00, and the quantity of oil used, ten gallons. There is no more economical, quiet and comfortable riding car, and not once during a number of long trips over bad roads has there happened an unpleasant feature.

In my opinion, what must prove to be one of your most valuable assets is the courteous treatment received by your patrons whenever they require your services for repairs, or advice in trouble.

Yours very truly,

Gentlemen:-

Replying to yours of the 28th it affords me pleasure to be able to say to you that I consider the E. M. F. the best value for the money to be had in Automobiles. I have owned two other machines, of different makes, and they were in no wise comparable to this car. I having been driving an E. M. F. since the first of July, and have driven over 6000 miles. During this time the only expense I have ever been put to on the road was tightening the fan-belt, which cost [illegible]. I have demonstrated to my own satisfaction that the car has power, speed and durability, and am perfectly satisfied with it.

Very truly yours,

Gentlemen:-

Relative to the amount of gasoline consumed per mile by the E.M. F. car, will say, we made the run from Second and Broadway, Los Angeles, Saturday February 12th, leaving at 11 A.M. and arrived in Riverside garage two hours and 55 minutes later with an actual consumtion of three gallons of gasoliene and my speedometer registered 62 miles. There were five passengers with a total weight of 1013 pounds, besides guns, traveling bags and all the other articles incidental to a hunting trip.

Those in the party were Messrs. F.R.Strong, Ralph Watson, Alfred E. Gwynn, S.A. Selover and the writer.

This proves conclusively that these cars will run easily twenty miles to a gallon of gasoline.

Yours very truly,

Gentlemen

Referring to your letter of recent date, will say that my action in buying another E.M.F. 30 after having run one about 12000 miles, is probably of more significance than anything I might say.

The consumption of Lubricating oil is small and I have always been able to get 17 or 18 miles to the gallon out of the gasoline.

I have never been "stuck" out on the road for any reason with either E.M.F. I have owned.

I consider it the best car for any money up to $2000.00 made.

Dear Mr Lord:

Just a few lines to let you know that the little car reached Tucson in splendid shape.

In fact, with the exception of my mesquite limb accident; I had nothing more serious than loose pan and fender bolts.

I firmly believe that the E. M. F. can climb trees, I know it can swim, because I have tried it!

I never had to use a pump on any of the tires between Los Angeles and Tucson.

After leaving Yuma I found that the Gila River was quite impassable at Antelope Hill, on the regular crossing; and so I crossed at Dome and headed due North to Quartsite, on the Ehrenberg - Phoenix road; I followed this road on into Phoenix, and from there on through Tempe, Mesa, and Florence to Tucson. I had to ford the Salt River at Tempe, and got hauled through the deep water of the Gila again at Florence.

We are starting down into Sonora in a few days, and have ordered from you by cable, a fairly complete outfit of transmission material; so as to be ready for any emergency.

My battery went out of commission soon after leaving Los Angeles, but I came through on the magneto without any trouble whatever.

Gentlemen:

Replying to your inquiry as to service I am obtaining from EMF car, I beg to state that this is, as you know, the second EMF I have had. I consider absolutely that this car gives me more value for the money than any other car in the market that I am familiar with. I have had five cars before the EMF's, and some experience in the last six years. The EMF will take me anywhere that any automobile should go and this last car, in service some 8,000 miles, has given me no trouble worthy of mention. I am averaging about fifteen miles per gallon of Gasoline and, as near as I can determine, my lubricating oil expence total is about [illegible] per hundred miles. I have driven the car over all kinds of roads in and through the mountains and know that it will go anywhere that I care to go with an automobile.

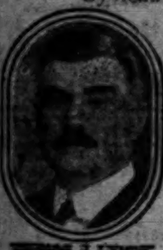
NEW RECORD MAY BE MADE IN THE NATIONAL

There's a Chance This Season to Prevent a Championship Team from Succeeding Itself.

VERDICT HAS BEEN CONTINUOUS FOR 18 YEARS

Should Pittsburg Fail to Capture Pennant a Second Time History Will Be Changed.

By John B. Foster.



[illegible]

First of all to be introduced to an interesting and somewhat extraordinary fact in connection with the championship of the National League. Since 1890, the year of the Brotherhood war, there always has been a "repeater" for the title. The explanation of that phrase is that a winning team has won the championship at least two years in succession.

This is the record. In 1891, 1892 and 1893 Boston won the championship. In 1894, 1895 and 1896 it was captured by Baltimore. In 1897 and 1898 Boston again won. In 1899 and in 1900 Brooklyn earned the pennant. In 1901, 1902 and 1903 Pittsburg was the successful club. In 1904 and 1905 the Giants busied themselves and won. In 1906, 1907 and 1908 the much coveted five yards or so of bunting was captured by Chicago.

In 1909 Pittsburg won. Now the question before the National League and some twenty millions or more of baseball "fans" is whether Pittsburg can do it again.

Is the precedent of eighteen years to be continued, or are the clubs of the National League other than Pittsburg smart enough this season to bring about another result?

There was not such a long period of "championships repeated" prior to the victory of the Brooklyn team in 1890. In 1888 and in 1889 the New York club "had the habit," but Detroit earned a single pennant in 1887, after Chicago had been the championship organization in 1885 and 1886.

Prior to Chicago Providence had the championship for a year in 1884, and Boston won it the year before—1883. In 1880, 1881 and 1882 Chicago captured the flag. The Chicagos were the first team in the National League to win three years in succession, and to date have been the last team to win three years in succession. They tried hard enough to make it four years in 1909, but Pittsburg was too much for them.

Providence won the championship in 1879 and Boston was the first team to start the habit of winning two years in succession when the pennant was captured by the nine from the "Hub" in 1877 and 1878. The very first winner of a championship of the organization was Chicago, in 1876.

A Look at Pittsburg.

Having established that much of National League history which happens to be of interest at this particular moment, it is not out of place to look into the prospects of the Pittsburgs as probable double pennant winners.

Pittsburg is not a club this year which makes its second campaign for the highest honor of its league with an unchanged championship organization. Fred Clarke is a daring captain. He is willing to tempt fate with an infield differing from that of 1909 and is sanguine enough to release a pitcher on his team, who did such good work in 1909 that he won twenty-two out of the thirty-three games for which he receives credit on the records.

Clarke has permitted his first baseman to go. Abstein, who held the position last year, will play this year for the St. Louis Americans. He has also transferred the release of Willis to the St. Louis National club. It isn't every captain who would make either change, to say nothing of making both.

More than that, Clarke has not secured a first baseman of major league experience to play for him, but is to begin the campaign with a minor leaguer—probably Flynn—of whom he feels so confident that he is taking a chance of building up an infield which shall work as well as or perhaps better than that of last year. So far as his pitchers go he is so thoroughly satisfied with the showing which was made by the younger men on the nine last season that he feels able to dispense with the services of Willis.

Whether he is taking too great a chance remains to be seen. Anyhow, he is establishing a new order of things. Many managers think not only twice, but three times before they can be induced to break up the combination which won a championship for them a year before.

There are two ways of looking at it. Either Abstein was below the standard which Clarke has established in his own mind for a championship infielder, or Flynn—and he seems to be the coming first baseman for Pittsburg—is much more of a ball player than all first year candidates from a minor league are presumed to be.

Much the Same.

Except for these changes pretty much the same players will be found with the champions as played with them last season. The infield, except the new first baseman, will be composed of Miller at second, Wagner at short, and Byrne at third. It doesn't need to be emphasized that it is a pretty "fetching" infield, both in batting and fielding. It is the kind of an infield which talks for itself. Collectively it may be no stronger than other infields in the National League, for possibly there are better third basemen than Byrne, and there may be one or two second basemen who are the equal of Miller, and it may be proved that there are first basemen who are superior to Flynn, but there is no shortstop who is superior to Wagner, or his equal in all around baseball, and conjointly the four players dovetail like a master workman's cabinet, and Wagner is half an infield by himself.

No changes are likely to be made in the outfield. Clarke, Leach and Wilson are a trio who stand for the best in baseball. Behind the bat there is Gibson to shoulder the bulk of the work. To-day he is a seasoned and expert performer.

In the box Pittsburg has a coterie of pitchers whose records have established their worth. There are youngsters, who will be added to the team this year, who are reputed to be as good as some of those who served so competently in 1909.

It is impossible to look upon the Chicago club without admiration for the success which it has enjoyed in the past. Likened time and again to a machine, the comparison is well made. So long has it is likely to happen. A certain play arises in a certain part of the field and the man who is first to handle the ball, without hesitation directs it to a certain spot because he is certain that the second man in the play will be there to receive it. One can conceive of no greater astonishment on the part of a Chicago player than to find that, with a double play possible, second base is unguarded, or Chance has been caught in a stupor off first. Such an incident would probably do more to disconcert the team than all the actual blunders of fielding which might be recorded.

Yet all machines are made and have their day. The mighty locomotive, which draws the fastest express train of the world at an average speed of fifty miles an hour, some day in its history fails and is relegated to the slower trains, and the time comes when it is only a mess of scrap iron in the yards of the company. So the greatest ball team in the world must succumb to the toll which time insists must be paid, and while its purpose to conquer may be as brave and as determined as it was in the past, the execution is just that trifle of a second slower which increases the possible advantage of its opponents.

Chance at first base, Evers at second, Tinker at short stop and Steinfeldt at third constitute the probable combination which will try to win back the laurels that were lost to Pittsburg last year. Schulte, Hofman and Sheckard seem the probable outfielders. Archer behind the bat, assisted by Moran, is looked upon as the catcher who is apt to bear the brunt of the work.

There were not a few in 1909 who affected to note that they had discovered a gradual diminution of speed on the part of the Chicago players. Some went so far as to pick out individuals who were less aggressive and agile than they had been in the past. Occasionally a falling off in their work might have been in evidence, but the failing of a single individual would not work so disastrously to the club in general as inability on the part of more than one to play with the speed which characterized the Chicago club in its brightest days.

Without the responsibility of carrying the championship on their shoulders which they carried in 1909, and which they tried with such zeal to defend, and with Chance and Evers both in condition and ready to play from the first game of the season, they may play with more freedom and greater vim than they did last year. And that is about as far as one can go in making a prediction as to their probabilities.

The New York club enters the campaign of 1910 a mixture of young blood and old, as was the case last year. It will not do to underrate the strength of the club and it will not be likely to be overestimated.

Some are inclined to settle upon Mathewson as its greatest asset. It is true that he is a wonderful pitcher. But Mathewson is not the greatest asset of the team.

Its strength lies in its run getting ability. It was in existence last year. With pitching which was not always of the standard which had prevailed in New York, the players batted and ran well enough to pull games out of the fire which had been lost with less determination at the bat.

VETERAN CLUBS SHOW EVIDENCES OF HARD WEAR

CINCINNATI IS EXPECTED TO DO MUCH BETTER

New Managers for Philadelphia, Brooklyn and Boston May Meet with Greater Success.

More uncertainty attaches to the team in the pitcher's box than anywhere on the field. Mathewson can be set down as a certain winner, unless injured. Wiltse may be accepted as a fixed factor for success in the majority of games in which he takes part. Raymond should be one of the best pitchers in the league, and Ames, while winning more games, as a rule, than he loses, varies in form like his wide curves. There are a host of young pitchers in sight, one or two or three of whom may prove to be successful. If they do the team has overcome its most evident weakness.

Cincinnati Improving.

Cincinnati is an improving club. That's one of the best qualifications to be attached to any baseball team. It was an improving club all of last year. Though it played some games in wretched form it played some others with an intelligence which showed a far deeper insight into baseball than had been possessed by some Cincinnati clubs of the past.

The younger players of the Cincinnati club are helping to make it. Hoblitzel at first base has steadied a position which needed class. Egan has proved a far better second baseman than was expected. Downey at short and Lobert at third, while perhaps not the greatest combination playing on that side of the diamond, are a [illegible] pair of fielders than experiments used by Cincinnati in the past.

The pitching staff is not over strong. In its members, however, there are four willing workers who can stand abundance of effort. Should Spade prove to be a better man than he was last year Cincinnati will profit by having one more pitcher who is likely to be able to take a regular turn in the box. Of the younger pitchers there is a story to be told similar to that of every other club in major league baseball—they may be great and they may be released before the summer is out.

"Phillies" and Their Weakness.

The ailments of the Philadelphia club in 1909 were a little of everything. It is scarcely worth while to enter into a diagnosis of them, for it is not what ailed Philadelphia so much as what Philadelphia may do this year which bears on the case.

Unless radical changes are made in the team the Philadelphias will place on the infield the same players who made up the infield of 1909. Bransfield first base, Knabe second base, Doolan shortstop and Grant third base will hold the fort for the Quakers. It is an active, hard working infield, but not one of acute perception. Even Dooin, with all of his sprightliness, will find it as hard to get the players to interest themselves in the tactics of their opponents as Murray did.

Philadelphia can bat and can field. The team should be able to make runs and to teach the players how to make them is the task before Dooin. It is identical to that with which Murray contended. There are not a few who believe that more than a change of managers will eventually be demanded in Philadelphia.

Not a Championship Team.

Brooklyn also begins the season with a new manager and with no claim of championship aspirations. William Dahlen is to handle the team. "If I can make the players play ball well it will be as much as I shall hope to do in the first year," said Dahlen. "I think that they should make a better showing than they have made in the past. I don't know that Brooklyn will even get into the first division, and I am not pretending that I think the team is strong enough to do so, but I do think that the players should win more games than they have in the past, and that is to be my aim throughout the summer—to put more winning games to our credit than we have had in three seasons."

The greatest strength which has been added to the Brooklyn team, except in the batteries, is Wheat. He is a fine young player of much promise. Behind the bat Erwin gave such a good account of himself for Rochester last year that he is expected to be able to hold his own in a National League city.

Changes at St Louis.

The St. Louis club, by judicious trades and systematic rearrangement, is a better looking nine than it was in the middle of the winter. It is experimental because Bresnahan is still at the task of trying to reconstruct a team which had been fairly well shattered when he undertook to handle it.

His infield should be better in 1910 than it was last year. Konetchy, now acknowledged to be a superior baseman, will play first. Huggins, formerly of Cincinnati, will be at second. That will steady the infield for him. Hulswitt seems to have got back to something like his form of four years ago, and will play short stop, while Barbeau seems to be the coming third baseman, although Bresnahan may use another.

Evans, O'Hara, Oakes and Ellis are four fast and clever outfielders. They are not sluggers, but they bat intelligently, and there is not one of them with the possible exception of Oakes, but is an effective outfielder.

Except Willis, Corridon, Lush and Sallee, the St. Louis pitching staff is experimental. Whether Willis and Corridon will prove to be so effective with St. Louis is another question to be taken into consideration. Frequently these veteran pitchers, who are transferred to teams in which younger blood predominates, lose some of their ambition when they go through a series of contests and win only occasionally.

Hard Work for Boston.

The Boston club is absolutely in a condition of experiment. "Fred" Lake, who managed the Boston Americans in 1909, is in charge of the players. His problem is to build up an organization from almost nothing.

There are three or four very good young players with the club. For instance, there is Shean, who improved wonderfully when he left Philadelphia for Boston last year to play second base. Becker is a good outfielder. Sweeney and Getz are two promising infielders.

Behind the bat Smith and Graham are both hard workers and the latter can bat some. In the box there are some pitchers who are as hard to beat as any when they have a good day. As a whole, the team lacks batting strength and it lacks the stability which could be expected from players who had been longer associated.

Boston may not get better than last place. It doesn't seem strong enough to Mathewson, Brown, Camnitz, Adams, Willis and Others Top Heavy with Success in 1909 Must Bear the Brunt of Work in 1910.

By JOHN B. FOSTER.

Some pitchers who were successful in 1909 in the National League were topheavy with success. The question among baseball enthusiasts is whether they are likely to be able to repeat this season their good work.

Owing to the decisive manned in which the Pittsburg club won the championship the results of 1909, far as the champions were concerned, were a queer motley of young blood triumph woven with a plentitiful mixture of old blood merit. Every victory for Pittsburg, in which one of the younger pitchers figured, was another credit mark to two men who contributed prominently to the success of the championship club. They were Camnitz and Adams. Last year was their best year. In the case of Adams it was the year which made him fame. If he can repeat his success this year, and if Camnitz can do as well as he did for the champions, Pittsburg begins the season with two known quantities.

It is true that the world's championship series gave Adams his greatest reputation, owing to the important place in which he was thrust to hold the honor of a world's victory for his team, but it must not be forgotten that what work he did for the Pittsburg club during the regular season of the National League was excellent.

In 1909 Camnitz, Adams, Leifield and Willis pitched ninety-six games for the Pittsburg club. These constituted two-thirds of the total number of games which were scheduled for the team. Of this number they won sixty-eight and lost twenty-eight. Their percentage of victories was about seventy of the total in which they engaged. It is evident that a quartet of pitchers which can work well enough to assist in winning seventy per cent of the total number of games in which they take part constitute a force to be reckoned with seriously by opposing managers.

In the season now at hand Willis must be eliminated as a factor in the success of the Pittsburg club, since his services have been transferred to St. Louis. More of the work of the year to come must, therefore, devolve on the younger pitchers of the Pittsburg team.

Camnitz took part in thirty-one games last season, which is probably about all that can be expected from a pitcher of his style during the year. Leifield worked in twenty-seven games, a fair average for a left hander. Adams was the principal in but fifteen games and only assisted in some of those. Indications for this season point to the fact that the Pittsburg management is so confident of his general ability that he will become the leader in more contests in 1910 than he was in 1909.

The one most striking fact in regard to the Pittsburg pitchers in 1910 is that the club thinks it can afford to go on without Willis, who had twenty-two victories to his credit in 1909, against eleven defeats.

Some may believe that the Pittsburg management is rushing into an experiment which may prove disastrous rather than helpful, but the facts have been given as they stand and the reader is at liberty to draw his own conclusions as to the possibilities for the year to come.

In the Chicago club there is a known pitching force, with Mordecai Brown at the head. His principal assistants are Overall and Reulbach. The expression "known pitching force" is used from the understood. The most important fact to be taken into consideration so far as they are concerned is that which is to be reckoned with all veterans—their ability to stand another season of gruelling contests for a championship, as there is no likelihood that the race for the championship this year will be easier than that of oter years.

Pfiester, the left hand pitcher, may also as well be included in this list.

These pitchers were capable of more service than their four contemporaries in Pittsburg. They took part in 119 games last year. Of these they won eighty-three and lost thirty-six. Their percentage of victories was just a shade lower than seventy. As compared with the Pittsburg quartet their work should be considered on a par with the four mentioned of the champions, for they took part in more games and their greater availability makes them a valuable asset for a baseball club to own. Hence the known pitching strength of the Pittsburg and Chicago clubs may be said to be not far from equal.

Brown, of course, in the Chicago club, stands forth as one of the great pitchers of the national game. It is immaterial whether he leads the league or happens to be third or fourth in the league. He is a pitcher of such reliability that confidence is felt in his work when he is in the box, and of so much useful experience that nothing short of a calamity to his arm can render him anything but a valuable assistant to the Chicago Club in 1910.

Were Reulbach gifted with the art of controlling the ball and with the cool judgment of his brother pitcher, he might be one of the wonders of the game, for nature granted him an arm which is made of sterling strength, and his speed and curves are two known quantities which are envied of all pitchers.

Overall is a steady, strong, stalwart worker. He is not always so even in the box as he might be, but his endurance makes him a valuable man, for he is able to pitch frequently if called upon to do so, and is seldom bothered by lack of effectiveness because his strength fails him.

For the past ten years there has been no pitcher in the National League so steadily expert as Mathewson. If he is not compelled to retire before his time by reason of physical disability the indications are good that his record will make him the king of pitchers. Personally the writer is of opinion that he is the best pitcher in baseball to-day, and the best who ever lived, all things being taken into consideration, but like all personal opinions it is merely one man's judgment, to which exceptions may be made by those who feel so inclined.

When it is remembered that in 1909 he never hit a batter with a pitched ball, and gave but thirty-six bases on balls in thirty-one games, some idea may be had of the marvellous control which he exercised as a professional baseball pitcher.

The four hard workers on the New York pitching staff in 1909, who combined a measure of success with their work, were Mathewson, Ames, Raymond and Wiltse. Together they pitched 117 games. Of these they lost thirty-nine and won seventy-eight. Their percentage of victories was sixty-six and enough more to make it in round numbers sixty-seven for the season.

Mathewson, of course, with a record of twenty-five victories in thirty-one games, bore the lion's share of the work. Wiltse was second, with twenty victories and eleven defeats, not so good for him as some other years, and in part due to the fact that he was ill a greater part of the summer, although he stuck to the game to the last.

The New York club has taken no chances, but has made a wholesale haul through the minor leagues, selecting about a dozen candidates for the pitcher's position for the team of 1910. If from this number there should be developed one or two who are of National League calibre, the New Yorks, with their seasoned men to reckon upon, may be able to put a force into the field this year which shall largely increase the chances of the Giants against their rivals.

Marquard, the pitcher, who was secured from the Indianapolis club in 1908 by the expenditure of the sum of $11,000, failed to make anything like the success in the National League that he did in the American Association, and yet the New York manager is by no means despondent of his ultimate perfection as a major league pitcher.

Second Division Clubs, Capitally Equipped with Pitchers, May Surprise Some of Their Contemporaries by Addition of Batting Strength.

Cincinnati's best pitcher in 1909 was Gaspar. It was his initiative year as a steady worker in the box for a major league club. He did not attain such perfection as men like Camnitz, Mathewson or Brown, but he was willing enough to work, for he pitched in thirty games during the season, of which he won nineteen. His next best team mate in the box was Fromme, a pitcher who had been secured from St. Louis. Fromme pitched even more games—thirty-two—and won nineteen of those. After them came Ewing, who took part in twenty-three games, and Rowan, who pitched the same number. Thus it is apparent that four men shouldered the responsibility in more than one hundred games for Cincinnati last year and did the bulk of the work.

None of these four was what may be called a pitching star and all four were men of such physique that they were ready to go in the box about as often as they could be assigned.

Ewing is not to be looked upon as a part of the Cincinnati pitching force this season, for he has been transferred to the Philadelphia club. To take his place in part comes Beebe, another willing worker who was with St. Louis last year. Hope is entertained by Cincinnati that Spade will be a successful man this season, and, like other nines, Griffith has his younger talent to try.

As useful as the Cincinnati pitchers may be there is an impression that the team generally would be more reliant and more confident if it had one pitcher of the type which is good enough to win two-thirds of his games. The pitching force can hardly be said to rank with that of some other teams of the National League.

Philadelphia has a corps of pitchers who are not to be reckoned with on results alone. It was more than weak pitching which made Philadelphia a losing factor in the last race.

On records the team's best man was Corridon, who has been secured by the St. Louis man. So he is out of the question as one of the standard pitchers for the Phillies this year. Closely at his heels is Moore. Here is a pitcher who has been tried in a major league and sent back to a minor, not so much because he could not pitch good ball as for reasons which had to do with his deportment.

In addition to Moore the Phillies have Moren and McQuillan, two right hand pitchers, who have given great promise at times, but who seem to be fated never quite to meet anticipations. Perhaps Moren is not strong enough for too much work, and McQuillan certainly was ill much of the summer of 1909, and it took him time to recover. Indeed he never thoroughly recovered until too late.

The Phillies in 1909 counted greatly on Coveleskie, a left hand pitcher of much exaggerated ability. He failed them. He has been sent to Cincinnati for the season to come, and very few are sanguine that he will prove to be the success anticipated. Griffith, a shrewd handler of pitchers and one who knows the art of pitching thoroughly, may be able to do more with him than his predecessors. All through, the pitching staff of the Philadelphias, again barring what may be developed from the younger players and making allowance for the fact that Ewing, who was with Cincinnati until this season, may do better work with a change of scene, does not seem to be as consistent as that of other National League nines.

In Brooklyn one may return to the old saw about pitchers not being able to make a nine, when batters sometimes may. Brooklyn has a capital corps of average pitchers. They will not be found to rate very high in pitching records, and that is largely due to inherent weakness in the team in other positions than that of pitcher.

Brooklyn is a team which has not been developed for two seasons as it should have been in run getting ability. With pitchers whose defensive work was so good that other teams could be kept to small scores, Brooklyn repeatedly would be beaten owing to its inability to get a single run around the bases.

Rucker is a high class left hand pitcher. McIntyre is good, but streaky. Bell is a hard worker of the Overall type. Wilhelm is a pitcher who cannot be used too often, but who is excellent when at his best. Properly handled, the Brooklyn pitchers will do their share toward the success of the team, and so they are best left in a group labelled competent and the lack of success of the team must be placed elsewhere.

St. Louis, except for the fact that both Willis and Corridon have been secured, could have been placed in the list of wholly experimental this year, for there is none left with the team who may be called a veteran unless Lush is the man.

With Willis and Corridon, however, there are other things to be considered. If both of these pitchers should work as well as they did last year, and if they should be supported in a handsome manner, St. Louis may be a harder problem to solve from the pitching standpoint than it was a year ago.

There are promising young pitchers with the team of whom Harmon on his last year's showing seems to be the best. In the main St. Louis will be more interesting to observe as to the future than to reckon with too strongly in the present.

Boston, with a confessedly weak team, has two or three pitchers who are by no means ordinary, and as the team will take plenty of strengthening the pitchers cannot be counted upon to do too much. Mattern is a good, hard working left-hander. Curtis has proved that he can pitch well when he is at his best. Richie, who was secured from Philadelphia, figured in some good games in 1909, in spite of the fact that he was inclined to be wild. White at times indicated that he was strong enough for the major league. All of these young men will have a hard task this season, for they will have plenty of work to do and not always will they be assisted

ROCHESTER CHAMPIONS WILL BE HARD PRESSED TO HOLD THEIR TITLE THIS SUMMER

Vicissitudes in the races of the Eastern League are many. Alterations in form are great. The Baltimore club wins the championship in one year and tumbles quite to the bottom of the ladder in the next. The Eastern has been a circuit of violent fluctuations almost since its inception. Clubs have won the championship in one year only to be rudely dropped from the rear end of the band wagon in the next.

Changes which have been made in the clubs of the circuit for the season to come may bring greater changes to the outcome of the pennant race in 1910. Hugh Duffy, who has been a good adviser for the Providence club, has gone to Chicago, where he will have charge of the Chicago Americans. John Dunn, formerly manager of missing at Montreal, while William Smith will be a new manager for the Buffalo club.

Once the Rochester club forced its way to the front in 1909 it stayed there. Ganzel did not spare much money to win his championship and he expended it in securing players of the highest quality. With the salary limit removed in the organization this year it is very probable that clubs other than Rochester will be inclined to put out a larger amount of funds to secure good players, and Rochester, for that reason, will have a harder row to hoe than was the case in 1909.

Toronto, with its fine new grounds and stand, will be very desirous of making a fine showing in the Eastern League this year and Toronto is progressive and enterprising. It is hoped that better results will come out of Montreal, where a shift in evidence right now. Jersey City was somewhat cut to pieces by the draft and by releases of players, but it is believed that the "Skeeters" have been promised enough good men to give them a better team than they had in 1909, in spite of the fact that they have lost some of their very best infielders.

With Baltimore making changes which should increase the batting power of the team, and also help out an infield that had become a little rusty, it looks as if the second division of the Eastern League, for part of the year at least, will keep the other four clubs so busy that they will have little time to make experiments or to do anything but put their strongest combinations in the field.

It is predicted that the close of the race in the Eastern League this year will be

TO BEGIN PRACTICE.

Y.M.C.A. BASEBALL TEAM.

Baseball practice at the Y.M.C.A. is expected to start some time this week providing satisfactory arrangements are made to secure a field on which to practice.

A large number of candidates is expected to turn out to take part in the initial practice. Physical Director Reynolds expects to have a team this year that will sweep everything before it. To make as strong a nine as possible, a league will be formed of Y.M.C.A. men and the teams will battle for supremacy. The nine making first place will be the one to represent the institution.

Games will be arranged with as many independent, high school and college teams as possible. If the nine shows up well, it may go after the Southern California amateur championship.

Medicos Beat Monrovia.

MONROVIA, April 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The High School baseball team this afternoon was defeated by the U.S.C. Medicos, 13 to 5. The local nine had a bad attack of stage fright during the first four innings and allowed the visitors to roll up the tallies. The preps then settled down to business and blanked the medicos to the end of the game but could only knock out five runs for themselves. Errors were numerous but plenty of stick work made the game more interesting to the fans than many a one better played. Both pitchers were batted freely.

HILL-TOP TENNIS.

Los Angeles High School Players Have no Difficulty in Beating Harvard School.

The Los Angeles High School tennis team defeated the Harvard School representatives on the hilltop courts yesterday afternoon, 15 points to 8, in the first dual match of the year. The High School players showed good form, and seem assured of a string of victories during the season.

Although defeated on points, the Harvard men put upon a good fight, taking three out of the four singles matches, but in doubles the High School men won easily.

Clarke and Dodge did some pretty playing in doubles for the High School, giving about the best exhibition of the day. Dickson, the only one of the High School players to win his match in singles, played steady, consistent tennis.

By the system of scoring used, the first doubles match counts seven points, and the second doubles, 5; first singles count 5, second 3, third 2, and fourth 1. Four men compose a team, the same players taking part in both doubles and singles.

The Los Angeles High School will probably have three entries in the Ojai tournament in Ward Dawson, Sheldon, and Dickson. Scores:

First doubles: L. A. High, 6-1, 6-4.
Second doubles: L. A. High, 6-1, 4-6, 6-4.
First singles: Harvard, 4-6, 6-4, 6-1.
Second singles: L. A. High, 6-1, 6-4.
Third singles: Harvard, 6-3, 6-1.
Fourth singles: Harvard, 6-2, 2-6, 6-4.

Gentlemen:—The Oakland No. 40 touring car purchased through your Denver agency is giving me absolute satisfaction. For simplicity and efficiency the Oakland No. 40 is, in my opinion, unrivaled among all four-cylinder types and for hill climbing and general road ability a purchaser will have to go higher than the $3000.00 mark before its equal can be found.

The quietness of the car, its smooth running and attractive appearance are salient points to be considered, and my Oakland car possesses them all.

I have given my car some very severe tests and it has never failed me yet; steep hills, deep mud and sandy roads have all been negotiated with ease and no apparent effort. It is my intention to tour the mountain roads very extensively this summer, my itinerary covering altitudes of 10,500 feet, and I entertain no doubt as to the ability of my Oakland to overcome all grades, no matter how steep. I have owned three different makes and types of cars—but my Oakland I believe will meet my every requirement in beauty and outline, power, speed and general efficiency.

Yours very truly, HENRY J. STEPHENS.

Let us make a demonstration for you.

YELLOWNESS.

MANY BUNGLES FEATURE GAME.

Fierce Exhibition Given by Vernon and Portland.

Young Pitcher Krapp Always Has the Edge.

Ryan Pleases Fans by Much Fine Fielding.

Portland, 8; Vernon, 2.

With Vernon making nine errors and Portland four, you do not need many guesses to be able to understand why the Beavers got away with another game from Happy Hogan. It was a gum-shoe struggle from the tap of the first gong and the Vernons had no trouble in beating the Beavers to everything but runs and hits.

Krapp did the heaving for the visitors and that meant that there would have to be some real ball playing to beat him and instead of doing their best, the locals did the worst. The Beavers made four runs in the second with but one hit and these were all that were needed.

Ort opened the inning with a grounder to Kit Brashear, but Kit heaved the ball over to the west bleachers and Ort got to second. Then Brackenridge, who pitched the first six innings for Vernon, passed Ryan, and Gus Fisher followed with a grounder to Roy Brashear who booted the ball. In between all this Brackenridge made a wild pitch that allowed Ort and Ryan to score. Speas fanned and Rapps knocked a grounder to Kit Brashear, who tried to catch Gus Fisher at the plate, but made a wild throw to Hogan. Krapp fanned and Netzel slapped the ball to right for a single that scored Rapps.

Three more runs came in the fifth, on two passes, two singles and a double, and the final run of the game was due to a pass, an out, Stovall's wild throw past second base and Kit Brashear's error in allowing Carlisle's throw from center to get away from him at third base.

Vernon got its two runs from a lucky single, a two bagger to right and Martinke's Texas leaguer to right field. Ryan's running catches in center field were the notable features in the fielding line, but Kit Brashear and Brackenridge made fine one-handed stops of hot drives. The score:

ANGELS CAPTURE ANOTHER.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SACRAMENTO, April 9.—Los Angeles captured a 1 to 0 game this afternoon in which Graham was sent from the field for quarreling with Umpire Finney and Pitcher Whalen fined $5 for striking Finney in the face. Finney called Perry out at first base in the sixth inning after Bernard had dropped the throw. Graham threatened to hit Finney and was ordered off the field. In the seventh inning Finney called Bernard safe at third base, when the latter slid in low under Darringer.

This aroused the ire of Whalen, who rushed at Finney and hit him on the jaw. Capt. Dillon of Los Angeles went to Finney's assistance and held Whalen, while the remainder of the Los Angeles team surrounded Finney. The police and deputy sheriffs rushed on the field and quieted the disturbance.

Finney will file a complaint against Whalen with the Coast League officials. Whalen and Nagle both pitched good ball and the game was interesting. Score:

WESTCOTT

40 H.P., $2150, F.O.B. L.A.

You'll find it a criterion for other cars of its price, and you'll find, also, that it will do work that other machines of higher price are unable to perform.

And the secret of its remarkable power is Engineering Skill, an unerring knowledge on the part of its designers and manufacturers, that makes for correct construction.

Unlike many cars which have big Power Plants, its comfortable-riding qualities have not been sacrificed in the least. There is foot room to spare in the big tonneau, and you'll find no car at any cost that will give you less trouble on rough, rutty roads.

So, we say, see the Westcott first. Use it as the high standard by which to judge other machines.

This fairly sums up an intelligent expert's opinion of Jeffries. Another sport who returned today spoke of Jeffries's preoccupation. He said:

"Jeffries paces up and down a good deal alone, 'walks ship,' as sailors say. He is thinking, and no one knows what he is thinking about. That was the thing that killed off Corbett when he was training to fight Fitzsimmons. He was always thinking about the fight, and it wore him down."

WATCHING JOHNSON.

PROMOTERS ANXIOUS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, April 9.—The course of big things pugilistic took its way rapidly westward today with Jack Gleason, one of the Jeffries-Johnson fight promoters, en route to San Francisco, and John McKeon, who has been representing the Gleason-Rickard interests here, on his way to Chicago.

McKeon will stay in Chicago until next Friday, and, the fight followers say, will not make his way further west except in Jack Johnson's company.

Uneasiness on Tex Rickard's part regarding Johnson's plans is responsible for McKeon's trip to the far west with Johnson in tow. The New York agent has been instructed not to leave Chicago for the coast without being sure that Johnson is on the same train.

Gleason, before leaving, expressed himself as confident on this point.

"There is no occasion for worry over Johnson," assured Gleason. "Rickard has only conducted one big fight, the Gans-Nelson battle at Goldfield, and he may be a trifle restless. Johnson has assured me that he will begin training near San Francisco before May 1, and I believe him."

BARRY'S CHANCES GOOD.

Vernon seem brighter every day, if the opinions of the fight bugs count for anything. Ten days ago none of the local sports thought Barry had more than a "fighting" chance, but he appears to be in such good condition now and is working so well, that his stock has taken a big bound upward.

Every ring follower thinks that Barry has a better chance to beat Langford than any other man in the second division, for he has fought the black enough to know his style and has a punch that has put Sam to the floor four or five times. Barry is such a husky fellow that he is a very dangerous man for any fighter other than Jeffries or Johnson, for he is liable to win with any punch, and the fact that he fought big Kaufman for thirty-nine rounds here and then had to stop on account of broken hands, shows that he is game enough.

Barry has been doing more than the usual amount of work for the coming fight for if he can beat Langford his rep is made, for few men in the country have been able to work out this puzzling game of solitaire. Jim was in good shape for the fight with Jack Burns and after a few days rest started right in again to get into better condition, if possible, for Langford. He should have no excuses if the black succeeds in toppling him over for Jim thinks himself in the best kind of shape.

Langford is not overlooking anything that will get him ready, for he knows what Barry is, and that Jim has a chance to beat anyone. Sam went through his usual stunts yesterday, boxing with Byers, Collins and Andrews, while Barry worked with Jim Tremble, Bill Rose and Young Solomon.

TO HIRE A SPECIAL.

BOUND TO SEE FIGHT.

A record-breaking special train, known as the "Wall Street Special," is to be run from New York to San Francisco, to the Jeffries-Johnson fight on July 4. The train is under the management of the Motor Contest Association of New York City.

In most respects the special will be a duplicate of the train that was run by the association to the Savannah Grand Prix automobile championship two years ago. In a few points it will be superior to even that flyer.

The train will be made up of eight cars including four stateroom sleeping cars, one of the latest observation cars, a dining car, a baggage car, and also one buffet-library smoking car. The dining car will be carried right through the entire round trip.

The running time of the train will be four days each way and it is quite possible that a record will be made, as the fastest locomotives, in relays, will be attached to the train from the time it leaves New York until it returns. The sleeping cars will be of the stateroom order, equipped with two berths and of the latest and up-to-date conveniences. The train will leave New York at 7 p.m. (eastern time) and four days later is to arrive at Oakland, Cal. There it will be side-tracked at the waterside and telephone and telegraph instruments will be installed for the use of newspaper men and others.

The battle ground will be only two or three miles away and it is quite possible that automobiles will be used to carry the train passengers to and from the contest.

TROUT SEASON IS TOO EARLY.

Spawning Still in Progress in Larger Streams.

Difficulty in Hooking Only Steelhead Variety.

Fish Are Sluggish on Most Southern Waters.

Clear water is now reported in nearly all the good trout haunts of Southern California, and during the latter part of last week many anglers have been out trying their luck.

Owing partly to the low water and probably in part to the increasing disinclination of many sportsmen to mix in the steelhead-rainbow confusion, the catches of the first days of April have not, however, come up to those of a year ago.

About the best fishing at present in this vicinity seems to be in the Sespe, which is clear throughout its course. On the upper reaches of the Santa Ynez, the water has cleared, and the fish seem to be fairly plentiful, but the lower portions of the stream are still more or less muddy and few good catches have yet been made there. The San Gabriel is clear, but neither fish nor fishermen in great numbers seem to be frequenting its course. The Ventura had cleared almost entirely before the middle of the week.

The water is low everywhere. In most of the streams marks are uncovered that were under water until late in May last year. The fact that the winter's rainfall has been several inches less than that of the year before, with the additional circumstances that the heaviest falls of the season were bunched so that the bulk of the water was lost in floods that caused washouts instead of seeping into the hills, has resulted in a general low-water mark now.

CHANGE OF DATES.

That April is hardly the time for any trout season to open, either steelhead or rainbow, is shown by the fact that even in the clear stretches the fish are not biting very well. They are more interested in the processes of spawning than in striking at bait or rising for flies.

Deputy Game Commissioner I. W. Pritchard, who spent several days at the end of last week on the San Gabriel, found that the fish there were sluggish and would not take the hook. In the clear water he could see only a few trout, as they kept close to the rocks and hiding places.

In five days, from Friday until Tuesday last, Pritchard encountered only two fishermen on the San Gabriel. He says that he intends to enforce the rainbow-steelhead law to the letter. The anglers must have seen him coming.

A strong argument for changing the present ridiculous ruling that permits the taking of no rainbow trout in April while permitting the catching of steelhead, can be found in the reports from all returning fishermen who have been trout gathering.

All are unanimous in disparaging the present law, as it is impossible to discriminate between the two varieties. All admit that a far greater number of rainbow trout than steelhead can be found in Southern California streams. Of course their catches—their own particular catches—were all steelheads; but any other angler would find little except rainbow.

The best chance to find steelhead and steer clear of the rainbow is of course near tide water—where the water clears last of all.

UNIFORM RULES.

But while the fishermen think that the rule should be made uniform, they agree for the most part that the whole trout season should begin on the first of April; the saner plan, however, would keep the waters closed until at least May 1 for all trout, as the spawning, which the law seeks to protect, is in full swing in April. In most of the Eastern States the trout season does not open until midsummer, July 1 being the most commonly accepted date, while some States keep the waters close until August 1, and only a few take the law off on June 1.

If any Los Angeles anglers are looking for really good trout fishing this spring, they can get it by going beyond the nearer and for the most part too-thoroughly fished streams in this vicinity. Such a place as Bear Lake, in Big Bear Valley, in the mountains behind Redlands, offers opportunities for full creels. Such places are just sufficiently inaccessible to keep the fishing good year after year.

From Redlands, Bear Lake is reached

INVASION BY MACE.

HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMPIONS OF AMERICAN PRIZE RING.

NO. IX.

[Copyright, 1910, by S. J. Kelly.]

JEM MACE, champion (ix.) 1870 to 1873, weight, 165 pounds; height, five feet nine inches.

Living near London, at the age of 79, is one of the champions of the English ring, when Tom Sayers, the Tipton Slasher, and Tom King were in their glory.

Known and celebrated in every land where pugilism flourished, from England to the Antipodes, the name of Jem Mace has figured in all the annals of the prize ring.

Jem Mace was not a gypsy. Born at Beeston, Norfolk, England, Jem was a lineal descendant of tenants of the Windham estates, who had been settled there for over 100 years. Jem Mace did not begin his career in the prize ring at an early age, being 24 years old when he first consented to sport the buff in the regular roped arena.

SCRAPED A FIDDLE.

Mace was a good performer on the violin, and the skilled arm which afterward leveled the giant Sam Hearst, knocked Tom King, Joe Goss and a host of others out of time, could draw entrancing strains from the instrument of Ole Bull, or amuse the British yokels with the sharp taps, dodges, feints and blows of the boxing exhibitor.

Jem's first battle in the ring took place in October, 1855, when he fought a local boxer named Slack and defeated him in nine rounds in nineteen minutes.

He next fought Bill Thorpe, February 17, 1857, for $250 a side, Mace winning in eighteen rounds. Mace was matched to fight Bob Brettle and the two men met September 21, 1858, when in some unaccountable manner young Jem received a blow which caused him to seek his corner, a position from which he could not be driven.

Although the renowned Jack McDonald, who seconded Mace, bit his ear and resorted to all the practices known to seconds to revive his principal, Jem clung to Jack's neck with both arms and feigned unconscious, and the decision was given to Brettle in two rounds. By this performance young Jem dashed his reputation in the London ring to a pretty low ebb, although there were many among the fancy who had picked him as a rising champion. He was at length matched to fight Posh Price, and January 25, 1859, defeated him handily in eleven rounds for $250 a side.

During 1859 he secured a match with Bob Travers, celebrated as "Langham's Black." They fought February 21, 1860, for $500 a side and Mace was awarded the decision after fifty-seven rounds, he having all the best of the battle.

REGAINS REPUTATION.

Mace's reputation had now picked up again and he was rematched with Bob Brettle, whom he easily defeated in eleven rounds, September 19, 1860, stakes, $1000. Tom Sayers, having now retired, Mace was matched with Sam Hearst, "the Staley-Bridge Infant," for the championship of England and $1000 a side. Hearst was a Lancashire wrestler, standing 6 feet 2½ inches, and weighing 210 pounds. This battle was won by Mace in eight rounds. Mace weighed in this fight about 158 pounds.

Mace was now champion of England and the belt for which Tom Sayers and Heenan fought was given into his keeping.

Mace and Tom King were matched and fought January 28, 1862, for the championship belt and $1000 a side. Mace administered a masterly defeat to the skillful and dauntless King in forty-three rounds.

Tom King having many friends who were eager to again place their money on King's chances of defeating Mace, these two pugilists were again matched for the English championship belt, and fought November 26, 1862.

Mace again had almost leveled his gallant opponent and had brought him down to his own weight, when King suddenly rushed at Mace in the opening of one of the last rounds and struck him a blow that overwhelmed and crushed the Norwich champion. Mace responded to the call of time for two or three rounds after this, but the fight was all knocked out of him, and the battle went to King in twenty-one rounds, of 38 minutes' duration. King now publicly declared his retirement from the ring, and Mace resumed the title of champion.

Jem fought Joe Goss, who was regarded as a coming man, September 1, 1863, knocking poor Joe out of time in nineteen rounds, in one hour and 55 minutes. Mace finished this battle by a blow that completely eclipsed all of Goss's idea of daylight and time.

May 24, 1866, witnessed a huge train swindle arranged by Mace and Joe Goss.

The men were to fight for $1000 and the English belt. Mace and Goss entered the ring, but it was a complete fiasco. Not a blow was struck. For 74 minutes, strung through one imbroglio, they dodged, feinted and backed away into their respective corners, although repeatedly ordered by the referee to fight. This official at length in amazement called the bout a draw.

HAD HIS EXCUSES.

Mace gave it as an excuse to the spectators that he was not fit to fight; nobody knows what was the matter with Goss.

August 6, 1866, Mace and Goss again met, this time by prearrangement in a 16-foot ring. This time Mace again handled Goss in the most superior fashion, thrashing the burly Joe in twenty-one rounds, occupying 31 minutes; stakes $1000 a side.

Most of these principals, seconds, etc., of the English ring having already taken passage for the green shores of "Amerikay," the scene shifted to this country, and Mace arrived here in 1869, when he toured the principal cities of the United States with John C. Heenan as a sparring partner. He received a bombastic challenge from another Britisher, Tom Allen, to fight for the American title. They met at Kennerville, La., May 10, 1870, and Mace won in ten rounds.

Joe Coburn undertook to pick up the gauntlet, and these two old antagonists of airy record soon got to loggerheads. A full account of their different journeys and eventual meetings will be found in the sketch of Coburn.

In 1876 Mace again arrived in America, but finding pugilism a shallow occupation at this period, hied himself on a long journey to the colonies of Australia. Here it was supposed that he had settled down to enjoy a comparatively green old age at Melbourne.

SULLIVAN'S DEBUT.

But lo, in 1883, John L. Sullivan having inaugurated his famous knockouts in New York City, it was rumored that the once champion of England was coming to America, accompanied by one Herbert Slade, a giant Maori.

Slade came with the intention of taking Sullivan's championship scalp, and bearing the same home in easy glory to the antipodes.

Accordingly Mace and his huge fistic pupil did arrive, and with great beating of tomtoms made their way from San Francisco to New York, giving frequent exhibitions of the Maori's shifty and undoubted skill with the gloves.

How Slade secured a match with Sullivan and was defeated will be found in the events pertaining to Sullivan's career.

Mace eventually returned to England, where he still resides, the sole living relict of a period of the ring long gone by, but still glorious in the memory of those who can recount the deeds of Bendigo, Caunt, The Slasher and other champions now classic.

A strong statement, and a broad one, but one that investigation proves beyond all doubt. For from the tiniest bolts on the engine, to the outside coat of varnish, there is maintained a degree of care in construction that is rare in a car at any price, and that is almost unheard of in a $1650 machine. But that care saves care to the owner, it saves expense, and it means long life and utter dependability in the car.

FIFTY CARS AVERAGE CENT A MO

The fifty owners in Dayton, O., territory drive aggregate of total cost for repairs of $5.70, averaging 3371 miles and 12 cents each for repairs.

Statistics were recently published in New York showing that 75 Cadillac "Thirty" owners had driven their cars 398,884 miles at the amazingly low repair cost of $53.21.

It was said at the time that they constituted the most remarkable record of the kind in the history of transportation.

Hard on the heels of the New York achievement comes the claim of a second city, showing a still lower cost of upkeep than has ever been recorded.

The 75 Cadillac owners in New York City expended an average for the year of 71 cents per car, while the 50 owners in Dayton, Ohio, and vicinity show a total cost for repairs of $5.70, or the insignificant average per car of 12 cents for the entire year, or 1 cent per month per car.

The 75 New York owners were not aware that their travels and expenses were to be made a matter of record, and the 50 Dayton owners were likewise unconscious of the fact that they were rolling up a world-breaking record.

In both instances the cars were simply driven at the will of the owners—anywhere and everywhere. There was no particular striving for economy, no more than any user would naturally give his car.

Of the 75 Cadillac owners in New York, 46 had no repairs at all—and Dayton shows a more remarkable achievement than this.

Of the 50 Cadillac owners in Dayton territory, 45 had no repairs and only five had any expense whatever.

Of these five the highest expenditure was that of A. G. Rundle of Piqua, O., whose car cost him $2.60 during the year, and was driven a distance of 20,000 miles. The next highest expenditure was that of C. F. Kettering of Dayton, who spent $1.50; the next was that of W. H. Nye or Ironton, O., who spent 75 cents; the next, G. W. Rahn of Greenville, O., who spent 50 cents, and the fifth and last was Matt Marr of Miamisburg, O., whose car cost the enormous expen tire season of 35 cents.

The New York cars approximate to 16 trips and the 50 Dayton Ca distance equivalent to the globe.

the score. The last half of the period was played all the way around the field two times and time was called as the ball was near the goal for the Whites.

The third period was better, as the players were more used to each other. Savage got a better pony and made several excellent plays, scoring a goal about the middle of the period. Tom Weiss made several fine stops, and by his over-hand playing sent the ball in the opposite direction.

The fourth period was the best of the game. The ball passed the goal at both sides two different times and missed only by accidental side strokes. In the first half of the period Roberts made goal. Again the ball was put in action and the Whites carried it across the field again and McVitty made goal just before the whistle blew for time.

The game yesterday was more of an exhibition game than anything else and preparatory to the match game next Saturday between the Southwest team and the regular Riverside team. The Weiss players will have the same team on the field next Saturday and for Riverside, Roberts, Pattee and Roberts will probably play.

Col. W. J. Hogan has offered a handsome silver cup for the winner of next Saturday's game.

THE Seeley System has revolutionized the entire ignition field, and has placed American ingenuity and invention to the fore. CLEAN SWEEP.

STANFORD CREWS WIN 'VARSITY AND FRESHMAN ANNUAL RACES.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

OAKLAND, April 9.—Stanford University this morning won both the freshman and 'varsity races in the eighth annual regatta held with the University of California on the Oakland estuary.

The Stanford crews in both races led from the start, showing better form than the California oarsmen and in the two-mile 'varsity race, for eight oars, the Cardinals led all the way by three lengths, finishing in 9m. flat.

The Stanford freshmen won the mile race, four-oared, by four lengths. The official time in the latter race was not taken.

The two teams were recruited from the boating clubs of the universities, rowing no longer being an official college sport in either institution, but despite this fact, a large number of collegians from both institutions attended the race, about 600 spectators lining the banks of the estuary.

Four members of the California 'varsity eight were veterans of former races, while on the Stanford crew Huston alone, had represented the Cardinal in a former regatta.

Following are the crews:

University of California 'varsity: Colt, Blake, Markwart, Hardy, Ashley, Ball, Davidson, Malatesta and McSpaden (coxswain.)

Freshmen: Wilson, Young, Craig, Eaton and Angleo (coxswain.)

Stanford University 'varsity: Halls, Hofer, Seward, Schaupp, Gilmore, Dietterle, Huston, Partridge, Roberts (coxswain.)

Freshmen: Olmstead, Grepe, Duryea, Beal and Marks (coxswain.)

FOOTBALL.

AMERICAN GAME SATISFIES OXY.

PRESBYTERIANS WILL STICK TO INTERCOLLEGIATE.

President Baer Announces That Revisions Are Satisfactory to Him. Other Conference Schools Will Probably Swing Into Line—Future of Game Still Uncertain.

The radical changes which the Rules Committee has made in American football will probably save the game for Southern California colleges.

Had no important revisions been attempted, there would have been a good chance for the introduction of Rugby in the conference colleges for the 1910 schedule, as many members of the faculties of all three of the leading Southern California institutions were known to be in favor of trying out Rugby.

President Baer of Occidental is the first to come forward and take a stand for the old game, under the new revisions. There seems to be little doubt but that his action will keep the other conference institutions in line, since the stand at Pomona and U.S.C. is so uncertain that a single firm conviction could swing them either way.

In commenting on the revisions that the Rules Committee is reported to have already adopted, President Baer said:

"The old game was too good a game to be abolished. I believe that the old game under the new rules will have the enthusiastic backing of Occidental College.

"I think that still further changes will be proposed. But enough has already been done. The game will now be less of a battle and more of a genuine sport. Put me down as favoring it.

"While some time ago I was determined that every bit of influence that I could summon should prevent the present games being played at Occidental College, under the old rules, I now feel equally interested in giving the old game, under the proposed revisions, an opportunity to live."

While it seems unlikely that other Southern California college authorities will go as far in their commendations as does President Baer, they will probably be willing enough to give the old game another chance—just as they have been doing every year for the last half dozen.

One argument which the conference faculties have had against the American game in Southern California remains unchanged, however, and may yet militate against the game here. The local colleges are losing students to Stanford and the University of California, because the prep schools have, with few exception, adopted the Rugby game played in the north. Los Angeles athletes who in the natural course of events would have gone to U.S.C. or Occidental have in many instances been swung to the big universities by the chance to go on with the game to which they have become accustomed.

The same is true of Pomona High School boys, who have stepped clear around Pomona College in order to get into Berkeley, where they can have more of Rugby.

It is not necessarily because they like the Rugby game any better than the American style of play—but they are used to it. As prep heroes they want more of the same.

At Occidental "Ink" Wieman has been engaged as football coach for 1910, and judging from present indications will fall heir to all the difficulties which beset even a veteran coach in attempting to turn out a winning team from scant material.

At Pomona, Coach Stanton, and at U.S.C. Coach Cromwell will have to tackle much the same situation—how to get a good team from a small squad. Too many Rugby players have in the American game will do all that is anticipated will be shown before next Thanksgiving. If the game as remodeled is satisfactory, a single year will put it on its feet, and 1911 will see it again strong in the conference colleges.

If the revisions do not accomplish their purpose, as has been the case with many previous revisions, only less sweeping than 1910, it will be hard to keep out the Rugby game from the conference quartette, provided the northern universities stick to the English game.

Athlete Reaches Goal.

SYRACUSE (N. Y.) April 9.—John Waller, for many years a prominent figure in intercollegiate athletics, is dead at his home here. He was 26 years old. Waller played on the Princeton football teams of 1905, 1906 and 1907.

THE WIDOW WISE

1—One day the Widow Wise declared she'd quite made up her mind
That she might search forever and a mate she'd never find.
"The men, alas! are all alike. I cast them off," said she;
"Henceforth my life and fortune I'll devote to charity!"

2—In searching for a worthy "cause" she visited one day
An orphan school and stopped to see the little orphans play.
"What object more deserving!" thought the Widow, with a smile.
"I'll just invite a lot of them to visit me awhile!"

3—So home she took eleven tots (from four to eight they ranged);
She had her maids comb out their braids, their clothes throughout she changed.
She served them all with cakes and cream, and smiled to see their joy.
"At last," she cried. "I've found a way my riches to employ!"

4—That very day came up the bay young Richard Robert Snow;
He'd been an old-time suitor of our heroine, you know.
But on the day she wedded Wise poor Dicky Snow had fled
Across the sea, and as he went "I'll ne'er come back," he said.

5—He wandered over foreign lands, his sweetheart to forget,
And only for an accident he might be roving yet;
But, when one day he chanced to hear that Wise had gone above,
The slumb'ring flame blazed up again; back came the old time love.

6—At once, back home across the foam came Richard Robert Snow,
Resolved to woo the Widow Wise as in the long ago.
The moment that the steamer docked he nimbly leaped ashore,
And jumping in a taxi to the Widow's house he tore.

7—He reached the house, he rang the bell, the great door open flew;
And there she stood, ten times as fair, her eyes ten times as blue!
"My own!" he cried; and then he gasped, for there came rushing out
The whole eleven orphans, and they met him with a shout!

8—His senses reeled, he murmured "Gee!" and then he turned and fled.
The Widow saw as through a haze, and then she bowed her head.
When she looked up both tears and smiles were glist'ning in her eyes
"I wonder who the joke was on?" exclaimed the Widow Wise.

'En they gotted some bacon an'—well, we catched 'bout forty 'leven Rat Ogres in each trap, an' 'ey was orful savageriferous an' mad—mad as hops! An' I sed, "Now, Moon Peoples, you can keep 'em in those traps an' have 'em for a show, an'—an' get some lots o' moneys wif 'em." 'En the Moon Peoples was orful 'lighted, but the Ogre Rats wasn't not.

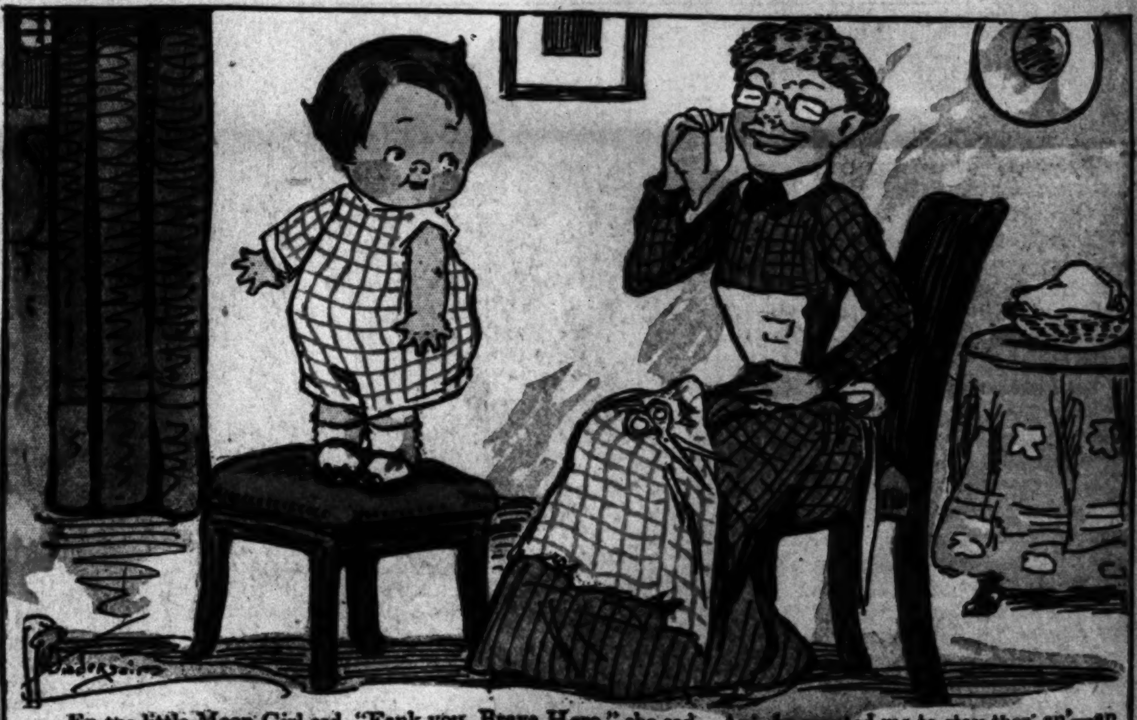
Suddently the fierces' horribliferouses' Ogre Rat xcaped from the trap an' catched a de-e-ar cute little Moon Girl by her pigtail. An' she was scared an' she screeched, an'—an' ever'buddy runned orf but Me. An' I catched the Ogre Rat by his—by his—ears, an' I—er—I putted him back in the trap 'gen, 'en I mended it up wif some iron bars—an'—an'—ropes what I—er—what I had in mine pocket.



En the little Moon Girl sed, "Fank you, Brave Hero," she sed. An' she wanted me to stay ther' an'—an' marry her, but I sed, "No, dee-ar child," I sed, "I mus' be goin' home, 'cause Miss Belinda, the dressmaker lady, is makin' me some new spring rompers." An' 'er—well—Miss Belinda was tryin' on my new rompers, an' I telled her 'bout those Moon Peoples, an' me capshurin' the savageriferous Rat Ogres, an' she jus' putted the scissors down an' laffed an' sed, "Oh, you Kiddo!"

The dark overdress gives a long, broad line at the back, secured by folds of the chiffon and weighted at the end by a huge jet ornament. This is artfully contrived to hold the filmy tunic in place over the no less soft figured chiffon.

When draped over foulard, the chiffon is particularly attractive. Again the kimono sleeve is in evidence, and the touch of black velvet is used on the chiffon as a reflection of decoration on the undersleeves. A panier effect is secured by the soft folds below the hip.

The apron form is just one more change of which the chiffon overdress is capable. Bound at the pointed top and the armholes with silk of the same tone, it is crossed over the front and is fastened under the arm. The straight section at the back falls from the waist in full folds that suggest the gathered skirt that is the accepted note on many new gowns.

There is art in the fashioning of the overdress, and wise is she who from these tangible evidences of this idea selects the general scheme and adds to it any points that will insure a becoming whole.

EXALTATION OF WOMAN.

WHEN former President Roosevelt was at Luxor, speaking of the mission work being done in Africa, he said: "You cannot raise one part of umanity while neglecting the other. It is idle to raise an unless woman is raised at the same time. No ission work is worth calling such where the same ffort is not made for the woman as for the man."

Col. Roosevelt did not touch upon the fact in his talk, ut all the same he was enunciating one of the distincive principles of the religion the missionaries are in frica to teach. Christianity was the first and indeed e only system of morals that ever recognized woman in any way equal to man, as worthy of the same ffort as man, and which saw that the uplifting of man ithout the uplifting of woman was impossible in all ays.

It may not have been seen from the beginning that the fountain head of its origin the Christian religion herently provided for the uplifting of woman. Christianity is the religion of Christ, and Christ is worshiped a god by the vastly great majority of those who proes to follow Him, and is revered as the wisest and rest teacher the human race ever knew by those who op short at paying Him divine worship. If the immaculate Christ was miraculously born of a woman it as inevitable that His mother should share some of e exaltation He enjoyed and partake with Him of a rge portion of the veneration paid to Him. Indeed, so ue is this that by a natural evolution of thought the eat majority of the Christian people of our own day y a kind of divine worship to the mother of Jesus.

Under other ethical systems woman was degraded ther to a condition of a slave or to the no less degraded condition of a toy for the gratification of man's nsual passions. She was his slave as much in the e case as in the other. Where Mr. Roosevelt was eaking, the savage tribes of Africa have no veneration for woman, and woman's status among these savages is a very unhappy one and necessarily full of degradation. Under the highest development of Roman law a husband had the power of life and death over his wife, and under such conditions her elevation was absolutely impossible. Christianity derived part of its conception of womanhood from the Jewish system of ethics, but it sublimated and exalted these ideas in a very notable way.

All history is full of examples of the paramount influence of the mother over her offspring. The mother of Moses was a woman of determination and courage. She dared to hide her child in the bulrushes when the laws of Egypt commanded her to deliver the infant to death. Moses displayed a good many of the qualities the Hebrew mother must have possessed. Hannah lived almost in the temple on Mount Zion, and Samuel was a fitting child to spring from a woman so true and devoted. Bathsheba was a willing wanton, and her long-haired, perfumed darling, Absalom, was a fit son to spring from loins like hers. Wherever we can trace the birth and bringing up of the great man of the world, whether notable for their fine traits of character, their nobility and goodness, or for their degraded traits of character, their vices and crimes, we shall find in every instance where our information is at all exact the mother reflected in the child. It was so in the case of Washington, so in the case of Lincoln, and so with nearly all the greatest men in American history as in that of other nations.

In the very nature of things it must be so. The child's life comes almost entirely from the mother. Her blood pulsates through every artery of his frame, and it is from her that he draws his life before and after birth. As he grows up he is with her nearly all the hours of the day. It is she who teaches his tottering footsteps to make their first trials in walking. It is the mother who soothes the child's sorrows and sympathizes in his joys. She stimulates his ambition, checks his erratic impulses, and until he is ready to guide himself more or less it is she who leads him by the hand, and this hand that teaches him to walk is an emblem of the mind that teaches him to think.

The hope of the whole heathen world lies in the influence of Christianity upon the women of those races. In China the female infant may be drowned, and often that is its fate. In that kingdom marked for its age-old civilization, woman is among the lower ranks a mere slave, and among the higher ranks a mere toy. Among the coolies her fate is on a par with that of the Indian squaw who carries the burden, tills the little patch where the corn grows, dresses as well as cooks all the food, builds the tent, and does everything but hunt and fight. In the higher spheres of society in China the woman is on an exact par with her position in the days of Rome when delicacy was at its highest point of development and estheticism was in flower. It was the same with the higher castes at Corinth, among the Philistines and the ancient Egyptians.

Wherever the Christian missionary goes, whether it is into China or into Africa, he carries with him the ethical system of Jesus of Nazareth, and the reverence and worship paid to the Savior is in a way reflected upon His mother. As Christian principles are spread through Africa, the savage women of the continent will cease to be slaves, to be beasts of burden, to be chattels subject to barter and sale, to be victims to the cruelty of the male population, and will take their place in the new civilization that is to bless that dark continent side by side with their fathers and brothers. As Christian principles are spreading in China the bandaged feet of the Chinese women are being given freedom. The bowstring is spared to the infant female. Among the higher classes she will cease to be a toy for the gratification of man's baser passions and will become what the first woman of the race is fabled to be in the earliest Hebrew writings, a helpmeet for her husband, a companion for her brothers, a guide for her sons, and in Africa, Asia and all the other dark places of the earth so full of the habitations of cruelty we shall find the new civilization measured exactly by the exaltation of the women of those races.

Womankind, the Gospels tell us, was the last at the cross and the first at the sepulcher on Easter morning. It ought to be so, for whatever humanity owes to the Christian system of philosophy or religion, it is not equally divided by any means. The feminine portion of the race owes many hundred per cent. more to Christian influences than the male portion.

Col. Roosevelt might have gone much farther in his discourse before the missionaries at Luxor. As it was from the beginning, so it will be in Africa. The most devoted followers of the Christian religion will be women. They will feel the exaltation that the Christian system of ethics brings to them. Their hearts, naturally tender and full of affection, will be touched, and they will be the most ardent advocates of the spread of the new system of religion.

The Primal Blessing

By Wilbur D. Nesbit

In the sweat of thy face thou shalt eat bread.—[Genesis iii, 19.

This first curse on the head of man,
  This first blow from the hand of fate,
Hid from him the eternal plan
  Which works its purpose soon or late.
With aching back and blistered hands
  Man paused, his fruitless wrath to nurse—
But now, at last he understands
  The blessing hidden in the curse.

Fair highways leading up and down
  Where once no foot could find a trail,
Each city rising from a town,
  Each wire that brings a distant hail,
Brave ships that trace the sea roads out
  And fetch us wealth of merchandise,
And walls that shield us roundabout
  Show that man's punishment was wise.

Work puts behind the things that fret,
  The woes that goad the weary heart,
And helps the sad ones to forget
  The bitter lot and grievous smart;
Work leads from darkness into light,
  It changes midnight into dawn
And thrills the sons of men with might
  That sends them ever on and on.

iWthout the counterpoint of pain
  No chord with vibrant pleasure rings;
The world and man would never gain
  By lessons taught by pleasant things—
And so this curse of Eden's day
  Concealed a blessing absolute:
It set man on the higher way
  Above the level of the brute.

Pity the Poets.

Why is it that there is something in the very idea of a poet that seems to most people so supremely ridiculous?

The poet who the other day enthusiastically attempted to establish a salon in which poetry would be nourished met with the quiet but determined irony of the newspapers.

A woman would marry anybody rather than a poet.

An institution would allow a poet to starve more gladly than anybody else.

A politician pooh-poohs a poet and calls him dangerous.

Even the poet regards himself as a product of weakened vitality. He sadly and rather proudly recognizes that the world is against him. He heralds his weakness and glories in his insufficiencies.

And yet poets traditionally and in our universities are held in high honor. In the actual world they are hooted at. The world treats them as the small street boy treats any unfamiliar, queer and helpless person who wanders aimlessly along the highways—with tin horns, hoots, jeers and stones.

Why is this? An attempt to solve this riddle may fill a half-hour with ribald thoughts and inextinguishable laughter.—[New York Press.

Improving Americans.

"Nothing is fixed but the certainty of change," said Goethe, and we know that the future American will represent a change. He may be taller, or shorter, or thinner, or fatter than the American of today, but there is nothing in the existing state of society—and we use society in its broad sense—to indicate that he will not be better in many ways. Confidence in this is based largely on the evident determination of the American of today to leave our institutions and our ideals better than he found them. Every American—native or foreign born—wants his children to have a better education than it was possible for him to secure. He wants to have his children live in a community of higher standards and ideals than he has; he wants betterment in local, state and national conditions; and the result of the want will be improvement and a demand by his children for still greater improvement.—[St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Didn't Exactly Mean It.

The Girl: Isn't this play tiresome?

The Young Man: It's an awful bore. But there is no use, Miss Pinkie, of your trying to conceal a yawn with that fairy little hand of yours; it can't half cover—er—I mean—that is——."—[Chicago Tribune.

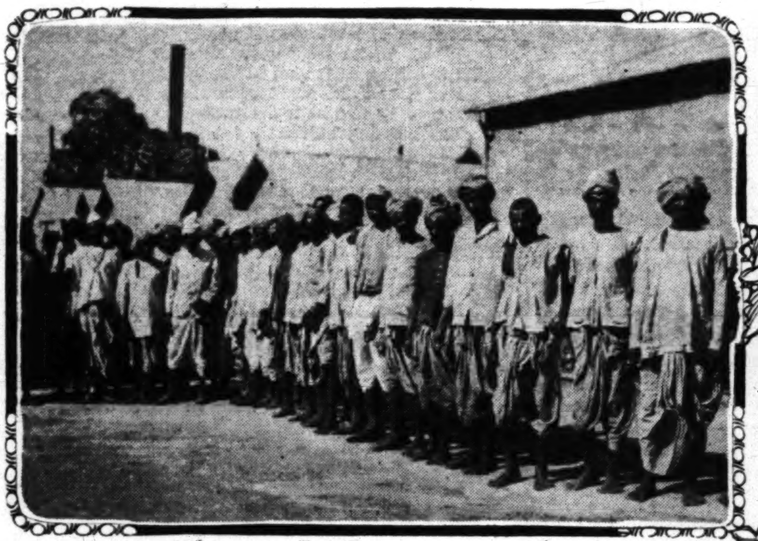
Where Rice Is King. By Frank G. Carpenter.

BURMA'S GOOD FOOD CROP.

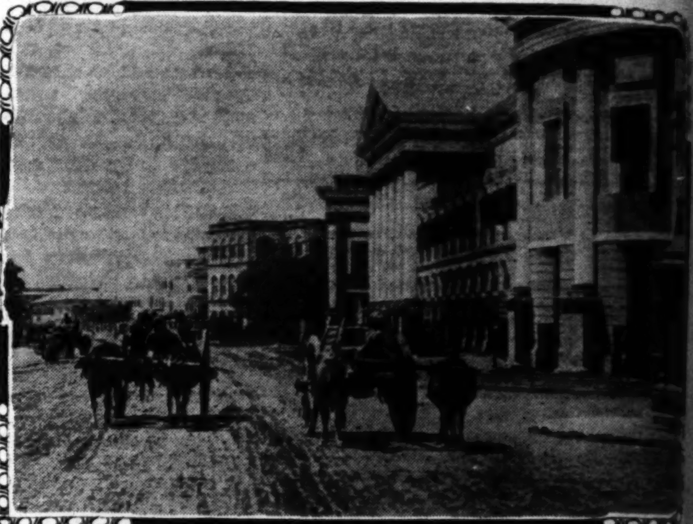
ITS RICE FIELDS COULD GIVE ONE FEED TO ALL MANKIND.

From Our Own Correspondent.

POOZOONDOUNG.—I have just visited the greatest rice mill of the world. It lies here at Poozoondoung, on the Irrawaddy River, below the port of Rangoon. It belongs to the Bullock brothers, who own other large mills and export thousands of tons of rice every year. Burma is about the best rice patch on the bosom of old Mother Earth. The lower part of it is a garden devoted to the cultivation of the crop, and upper Burma is more than half rice. The country has altogether rice areas equal to the State of Ohio, and its annual exports of this grain are more than 2,000,000,000 pounds. This is enough to give every human being on earth all the rice he could eat in one day, and still leave enough over to make a pudding for every man, woman, and child, as well as sprinkle all the brides and grooms of one year. Rice is the money crop of Burma. It takes the place of wheat, corn and cotton with us. The exports sell for millions, and the people are rich or poor as the rice grows well or ill.



East Indian coolies.



Rangoon show the banks.

Increasing the Rice Crop.

The British government appreciates how much the prosperity of the country depends upon rice, and it is doing wonders in increasing the crop. It has an agricultural department whose efforts in this regard correspond with those of our department at home. It is studying seed selection, increasing the irrigated territories and making forecasts showing the possible yield. It has its agents in every part of the country, and their reports upon rice are more accurately made than our reports upon cotton. During the past five years, in which a total of 13,000,000 tons was raised for export, the government forecasts were only 3000 tons out of the way. The estimates came largely from the local officials. Burma is a land of villages. Most of the people live in little settlements of thatched huts raised upon poles; and they go outside to work. Every village has its head man, who reports to the government the number of acres his people will plant. His figures are sent to the county officials, and they send their estimate for their district on to officials of the province, the last calculations being made at Rangoon.

I do not know what Uncle Sam is doing in this line in the Philippines, but I venture he could learn much from the British in Burma.

Burma's Big Rice Mills.

But come with me and go through this rice mill at Poozoondoung. The grain is harvested as paddy. In the field it looks not unlike wheat or oats, but every kernel has a husk on it and this sticks to it as though it were glued. When the grain is ready for shipment to the mills it looks much like our wheat grains unthrashed, save that the rice husks have neither heads nor beards, and they stick tight to the kernels. It takes quite as much work to get them off as to grind the thrashed wheat into flour. This is the work of these rice mills.

The Poozoondoung mill covers as much ground as any of our large flour-grinding establishments. It has buildings of five stories, with single rooms as big as a good-sized garden patch. I entered one on the ground floor which was packed to the ceiling with rice paddy in bags. It held more than 2,000,000 pounds, and other rooms of equal size adjoining it were filled with the cleaned rice awaiting shipment.

Unloading the Paddy.

Rice paddy is brought here from all over Burma. It is floated down the streams to the Irrawaddy River and towed to Rangoon by steamers in flatboats and barges. The unloading is done by East Indian coolies, many of whom are quite pretty young girls. They are black, lusty and buxom, bare-armed and bare-necked, and often with legs bare to the knees. Not a few of them wear gold buttons in their noses and rings in their ears. They have armlets and anklets, and I saw three with rings on their toes.

These girls carry the rice from the boats to the mills in baskets of fifty pounds each. They lift the grain to their heads or shoulders, and carry it up and down the banks of the river over a plank roadway. Their hours are from daylight to dark, and their average pay is less than 2 cents an hour. I am told they are quite as strong as the men, and that they do better work although their wages are lower.

And still they save money at 2 cents an hour, and most of them make savings banks of their persons.

Girls unloading rice

Burmese school boys

Nearly every one I saw had more or less jewelry upon her. I remember a girl of 18 with silver bracelets covering her arm from wrist to elbow, and heavy anklets of silver on each of her legs. The lobes and rims of her ears were pierced with gold rivets, and the gold ring in her nose was as big around as a saucer and as thick as a knitting needle. This ring hung down around her mouth, and when she ate lunch she stuffed in the rice through the ring. She was a Kling from Southern India, and her husband, a straight black man in a white cotton waist cloth, worked with her.

Harvard Athletes vs. Hindoo Coolies.

In another room I saw the men handling the finished product. The white rice is bagged up in sacks of 226 pounds. These are carried by East Indian coolies into the warehouses and are piled up in stacks. Each lifts one of these bags to his shoulders and runs up an inclined roadway. It looks easy, and three Harvard University athletes, who visited the mill the other day, rather sneered at the strength of the Hindoos, saying that any good man could carry such a load up a plank. Thereupon the manager asked one of them to try it. He did so, getting the bag on his back without very much trouble. He was able to make his way across the room, but when he tried to go up the incline the weight pulled him over and he fell with the rice to the floor.

This same college crowd tried to pick out the broken rice grains in competition with the Hindoo girls, thinking they could work quite as fast, but had to give up in despair. The rice is of various grades, accor the broken grains in it, and every shipment has tested by counting the number of whole grains fixed quantity. It takes keen eyes to distingu imperfect kernels, and the Harvard boys failed test.

Polished Like Silver Spoons.

It seems strange to think of polishing rice like best silver spoons. But that is what I saw them as I went through this mill. The machinery is the known to the trade. The paddy of rice in the is first winnowed and then carried to the top where it is passed through grinding stones so car set that they pare off the husk without breaking rice. The stones are of a composition harder than and they have to be roughened every week by Hindoos who understand how to fix them. After process the rice is again winnowed. It goes thr countless fans and shaking sieves, being again to the top of the mill and descending by gravity floor to floor, shaken, grated and cleaned at every After the husk is off, the kernels are polished. done with chamois skin, the grains being thrown and forth against a roller covered with this mat The chamois cylinder goes around at the rate of revolutions a minute, and when the rice flows out it it is as clean and white as the first tooth of baby.

It now falls through a chute into bags and is up by Indian girls, when it is ready for ship abroad. Much of the export is to England, France, many and Holland, but a great deal goes to India, and other parts of the Far East. The Burmese much better than that of Hindustan, and it brings high prices that the natives ship their own abroad and eat the cheaper imported rice which is in the markets.

The Hindoo Invasion.

Speaking of the coolies in this mill brings me Hindoo invasion of Burma. The East Indian coolies being brought here by the shipload. They are across the Bay of Bengal, a distance of 1000 mile more, for less than a dollar, and by the mail stea y can come here from Calcutta for about 64 cents. er words the passage costs them about one-twe t a mile, at which rate one could go from New Y Washington for less than a quarter and from the antic to the Mississippi for about a dollar.

The Burman does not like to work. He despi money; and when he gets a little ahead he acqui merit by giving it out in charity, establishing a dri ng fountain or putting a plate of gold on some B dhist shrine. The Hindoos, who work for almost n ing at home, can earn as much as $5 a month here, the land seems an El Dorado to them. As it is n more than half of the population of Rangoon is East dian, and there are thousands of Hindoos in every la town.

ast Indian Money Sharks.

The invasion is not confined to the laboring clas There are many Indian merchants and Chitties, or dian bankers. The latter do about all the loaning the individual farmers. They lend at from 25 to 40 cent. a year to the Burmese, taking mortgages on th crops. The laws here are such that the Hindoos can own land; but the crops can be mortgaged, and Chitty puts his agent on the farms to see that he g his loan out of the sales.

These Chitties are the queerest bankers imaginab Our ideal of that profession is a fat, sleek, well-dress man who looks prosperous and has the finest house the town. The ordinary dress of the Hindoo bank would not cost an American dollar, and he lives in hovel. His black skin is bare, with the exception of rag of thin cotton around the loins, and a calico jack which ends at the waist. His shaved black head is oft free of turban or cap, although he may have ash smeared over parts of it to show his caste or religio The Chitties come from near Madras. Burma's Foreign Trade.

The trade here is almost altogether in the hands o Great Britain. The officials protect the British merchants and favor them where possible, although th Germans, Japanese, Belgians and French try to compete.

As to our trade, it is small, usually amounting to les than a million dollars a year, and consisting mostly o machines, canned goods and kerosene oil. Within the past year or so we have established a consulate at Rangoon, and the man in charge, E. A. Wakefield, is doing much to push American trade. He thinks we should have a direct steamship line from here to New York and also better banking connections, as well as a wholesale depot which should keep our leading exports stock. The total imports of the country now amount something like $36,000,000 per annum, of which Great Britain supplies more than 55 per cent.

Among the American goods sold are tools, pipe fittings, axes, typewriters and sewing machines. The Burmese of the better classes wear some American shoes, and they are beginning to eat canned goods and condensed milk. They are fond of milk, but their own cows are used chiefly as draft animals. They are importing butter, and not a few spread the condensed milk on bread in its place.

Our American Missionaries.

America should have a good trade in Burma. Our missionaries have done more for the people in the way of education and civilization than have those of any other country. About the first Christian work done was that of the American Baptists, who sent the Rev. Adoniram Judson here in 1813. Judson made the first Burmese dictionary and grammar and he translated the Bible into the vernacular. He remained here when all other foreigners fled at the time of the first troubles with England, and later, during the British-Burmese war, was thrown into prison and almost starved. The story of his sufferings is one of the most affecting in missionary history. He kept at the work, however, and did much after the British took possession of lower Burma, dying in 1850 while on a sea voyage home for his health.

Since then the Baptist mission here has steadily increased. That branch of American Protestantism seems to have chosen Burma as its special field, and it is now spending almost a quarter of a million dollars per annum upon it. It has a large number of missionaries, over 800 native churches, and about 60,000 communicants. It is carrying on a number of girls' and boys' schools, and the Baptist College at Rangoon, which has more than 1200 students, is about the most advanced educational institution in the country. It is recognized by the British government, and is affiliated with the University of Calcutta. Nearly all of the students are native Burmese, and many are Christians. The institution is largely self-supporting. The students pay for their board and tuition, and not a few work their way through. Recently a manual training school has been can come here from Calcutta for about 64 cents. In r words the passage costs them about one-twelfth t a mile, at which rate one could go from New York Washington for less than a quarter and from the Atlantic to the Mississippi for about a dollar.

The Burman does not like to work. He despises money; and when he gets a little ahead he acquires merit by giving it out in charity, establishing a drinking fountain or putting a plate of gold on some Buddhist shrine. The Hindoos, who work for almost nothing at home, can earn as much as $5 a month here, and the land seems an El Dorado to them. As it is now, more than half of the population of Rangoon is East Indian, and there are thousands of Hindoos in every large town.

East Indian Money Sharks.

The invasion is not confined to the laboring classes. There are many Indian merchants and Chitties, or Indian bankers. The latter do about all the loaning to the individual farmers. They lend at from 25 to 40 per cent. a year to the Burmese, taking mortgages on their crops. The laws here are such that the Hindoos cannot own land; but the crops can be mortgaged, and the Chitty puts his agent on the farms to see that he gets his loan out of the sales.

These Chitties are the queerest bankers imaginable. Our ideal of that profession is a fat, sleek, well-dressed man who looks prosperous and has the finest house in the town. The ordinary dress of the Hindoo banker would not cost an American dollar, and he lives in a hovel. His black skin is bare, with the exception of a rag of thin cotton around the loins, and a calico jacket which ends at the waist. His shaved black head is often free of turban or cap, although he may have ashes smeared over parts of it to show his caste or religion. The Chitties come from near Madras. Their only idea is to make money breed, and they save every cent. Some of them are quite wealthy, all are said to be honest, and their word is accepted by the banks for large sums. Some start in Rangoon as clerks at $12 a month. They will live on one-third that amount and loan the rest out at interest. When they have accumulated 10,000 rupees or so they go back home and live economically on the interest of their holdings thereafter.

The American Methodists have a mission here, which was established about thirty years ago. They are doing considerable work in lower Burma and have numerous schools. The American Baptist Mission Press is one of the largest and most flourishing of its kind. It publishes Bibles, tracts, religious newspapers and many educational works.

Schools in Burma.

The British government is doing much to educate the Burmese. It is establishing schools of all kinds from kindergartens to colleges, and it has now more than 6000 public schools with about a quarter of a million pupils on the rolls. In addition, there are almost as many pupils in other schools, over 16,000 of the schools being carried on outside the government.

The public schools have about the same studies as our schools at home and their hours are somewhat similar. The students are interested in athletics and the boys drill and play football and cricket.

In addition there are thousands of classes taught by the monks. Every village has its monastic school, and such boys as do not go to the other schools attend it. The girls dare not come near the monasteries, for the priest who would touch or talk with a woman would be defiled. It is a part of the duty of the monks to teach, and they charge no tuition. The boys are taught to read and write, and they learn elementary arithmetic. They study out loud and commit to memory the prayers and hymns of Lord Buddha. They are supposed to pray night and morning, one of their morning prayers reading as follows:

"How great a favor has the Lord Buddha bestowed upon me in showing me his law, by the keeping of which I may escape hell and secure my salvation."

At the close of their schooling many of the boys go into the monasteries for a time and some stay there all their lives. Others remain for a while and then come out and go into business. They all learn to read and write in the schools, and Burma, for this reason, in the point of the literacy of the men, is far in advance of any country of Asia.

Penacarte.

MEXICAN INDIAN CHIEF CORRECTS THE GEOLOGISTS.

By a Special Contributor.

SOUTH of the Mexican-United States boundary line stands an extinct volcano called Penacarte. It is about thirty-five miles from the village of Sonoita in a westerly direction.

A few years ago it was visited by Mr. Hornaday and some officials of the Carnegie Institution. Mr. Hornaday gave a very interesting description of the mountain and surrounding deserts in his book, "Lava and Desert."

This mountain, according to geologists, was in full blast during the uplift of the coast range of California when its brother volcanoes from British Columbia south were all in active business.

Señor Aguilera, chief of the Mexican geological bureau, affirms this theory, and that all this happened some millions of years ago, during the Tertiary Age.

Señor Aguilera is talking through his sombrero and the scientists don't know a thing about it. Here are the facts in the case, as told me by a man who did know, because, his forebears were present at the time it happened. My informant is Coyote, head chief (Gobernador) of the Quitovac branch of the Papago tribe of Indians.

When the Moctezuma kings reigned over all the nations, their residence being at Casa Grande (near the Gila River,) one of them thought he would build a watch tower from which he could see all over his dominions; so he went southeast to near the center of the then known world and built his observatory near Arivaca. Its ruins stand to this day, and can be seen from Tucson and from the hills in the vicinity of the Gulf of California. It is called Baboquivari Mountain. Baboquivari means high, slender peak. It is about 8000 feet above sea level.

Now, about this time, of course, there were giants in the land, or these mountains never could have been built. There were also giants in the animal world; among them was Penacarte. A Penacarte in our degenerate days is only about an inch long, being a black beetle who still follows the custom of his ancestors, his chief business in life being making balls of dirt and rolling them around.

Now, this old Penacarte was one day rolling a ball of mud, about as big as a modern skyscraper, along the shores of the gulf, when he met a cimarron (mountain sheep) who told him of Moctezuma's project.

"So," said he, "old Moc is going to see all that goes on all over the world from his tower; watch me; I am going to build one that will make his tower look like thirty sea shells."

So he went to work rolling up balls of mud from the gulf until he had his tower 10,000 feet high.

Moctezuma, looking from Baboquivari saw the tremendous mass rising and rising higher, and his men told him of Penacarte's boast. After deep thinking, he formed his plans.

He sent his swiftest runners to all the nations; to the Cahuillas, who live on the Yuma deserts, to the Piute of Chucawalla, to the Yaquis and Opatas of Sonora and all his relatives, Pimas, Papagoes, and even Apaches, to meet him near Quitovac.

They came in such numbers that they covered the face of the land. He ordered them to cut down and carry all the wood they could load on their squaws and encircle the Penacarte's building to its summit with the driest mesquite and palofierro.

They obeyed orders. When it was well covered, he ordered to set fire to it all around. This being done, in a very short time Penacarte's castle was melted down until nothing remained but the balls of melted stuff which remain until this day, some of the stuff actually running off like melted metal for miles and miles around, leaving a ruin only 4000 feet high, which we call Penacarte.

If this is doubted, any one can see for himself the proofs; Baboquivari can be seen from the steps of the Arizona University in Tucson, and the balls of melted material have been testified to by Mr. Hornaday as lying all over and around Penacarte. But Mr. Hornaday, being deceived by the scientists, called them volcanic scorial.

This Moctezuma must not be confounded with the Moctezuma who reigned in Mexico when Cortez landed, and who was the hero of Bernal Diaz's story, on which was founded Prescott's beautiful historical romance, "The Conquest of Mexico."

Moctezuma comes from two Otomi words (the Papagoes, Pimas, etc., call themselves Otomi,) moc, head or chief, tzuma, people or nations. Therefore, it simply means emperor or head chief of all the tribes or nations.

This same Moctezuma or perhaps one of his successors, was a sort of Hercules or St. Patrick. He rid Quitovac of a monster that terrorized the whole country.

At that time Quitovac Lake was quite extensive, extending for ten or eleven miles each way; now it is a little pond thirty or forty feet across.

The Papagoes at that time lived at Chujubabi on the east end of the lake, but their hunter used to kill various kinds of game on the edge of the lagoon. Every now and then one of them would be devoured by a monstrous brute that lived in the lake.

He became so bold at last that he used to enter the village and walk off with women and papooses. A special messenger was sent to Casa Grande to inform Moctezuma and imploring his aid to destroy the monster.

Moctezuma got a new obsidian knife and came on to Quitovac. Next morning, after drinking an olla of tiswin, he went toward the monster's lair. On the edge of the lake he saw the fearful beast with wide-open jaws come out. Moctezuma ran to meet him armed only with his great knife. The monster came on bellowing, his mouth large as the door of a tepi wide open. Moctezuma, nothing daunted, jumped right down the throat of the brute and, cutting his way out through the monster's stomach, left him dead on the lake's banks.

The monster's bones lie there today, and I have one of his teeth. Several other teeth are scattered around the bones. Some of them weigh fourteen pounds, and geologists maintain that they are the remains of a gigantic elephant of long-gone quaternary days; but, as I said before, they don't know a thing about it. They never saw the animal. Coyote's ancestors did, and Coyote, being a simple Papago, cannot lie, like the white man—though sometimes he tries hard to do so.

For this reason he thinks the Americans a depraved lot of embusteros (liars,) as it was only the other day one of them told him that he often spoke to other people who were a hundred miles off and the other fellows heard him and answered back.

Dreams.

A fisherman dreamed he was rich in gold,
  And owned many a castle over the lea,
Which were decked with jewels and tapestries old.
  Alas! he awoke to find that he Owned only a fishing-boat, out on the sea.

Again he dreamed, and before him, low
  Bowed many a prophet of high degree.
They kissed his robe, due homage to show.
  And then he awoke, to find that he Had lost even his fishing-boat, out on the sea.

A third time he dreamed, and no riches were his,
  Excepting the riches of love.
No man kissed his robe, or praised his good works,
  Excepting the Master above.

But when he awoke, his face shone with light,
  He hardly knew what to do;
For of all the three dreams he dreamed in that night,
  This last and best dream was true.

The Band on the Silk Hat.

Lecturing on "Clothes" before the Selborne Society last night Wilfred Mark Webb said the band on the silk hat had originated from the habit of tying a band round a shawl placed over the head, while the bow at the side could be traced to remote ages, and was in its transitory stage on Scotch bonnets and children's sailor hats.

All ornaments on men's hats were on the left side, due to the fact that in olden times, when it was frequently necessary to use the sword, it was obviously desirable that such decorations should not impede a cut with the weapon.—[Westminster Gazette.

Looking Ahead.

Josephine, aged 10, has a decided lisp. She is also very fond of attending the matinée. The other day, says the Woman's Companion, she was giving a spirited story of the play to Marion, who was aged 9.

"My mamma says it isn't good for little girls to go to the theater," said Marion with an air of self-righteousness. "I'm not ever goin' till I'm 18."

"Humph," retorted Josephine without any hesitation, "th'pose you die when you are theventeen, then you'll be thtung!"

Fighting the Bug Armies.

MEN WHO MAINTAIN WAR AGAINST FARMERS' FOES.

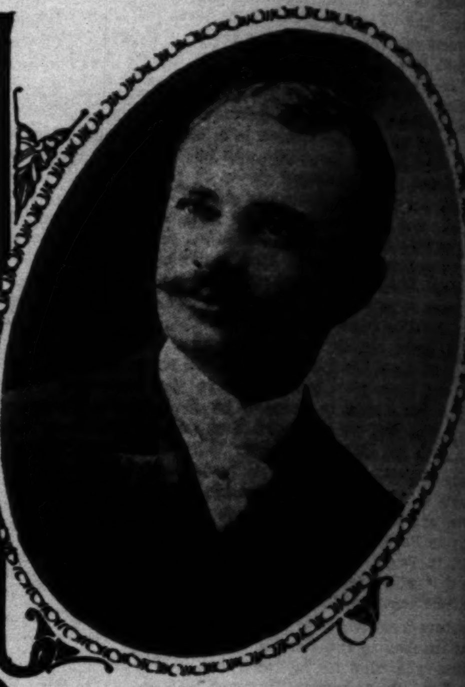
ENORMOUS RECENT EXPANSION OF THE BUREAU OF ENTOMOLOGY — ALL THE RESOURCES OF SCIENCE USED IN DEFENDING THE CROPS AGAINST A MULTITUDE OF INSECT PESTS.

By a Special Contributor.

WHEN it is considered that twelve species of insects do $350,000,000 worth of damage to our crops in a single year, and that these are only a few out of thousands of injurious species, it will be seen that no small burden of responsibility rests upon the men who are employed by the government to fight a never-ending war against such pests.

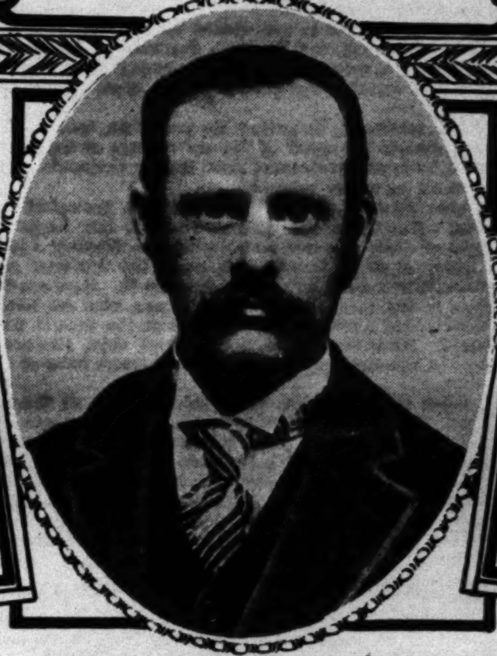
F. M. Webster. who deals with enemies of food crops.

Prof. L. O. Howard. chief of Bureau of Entomology



Dr Harrison G Dyar expert in moths

Prof. A. L. Quaintance. who handles fruit foes



Nathan Banks, who specializes in ticks and fleas

R. P. Currie, expert in dragon-flies.

In order to conduct the fight on an adequate scale, it has been necessary, within the last few years, to expand the little old Division of Entomology into one of the greatest and most important of the government bureaus. When Dr. L. O. Howard was put in charge of the work, in 1894, it employed the services of just five experts. Today its staff numbers about 500 men, more than 100 of whom are scientifically trained.

Dr. Howard himself is a New York man. A graduate of Cornell, he came direct from that university, in 1878, to engage in entomological work in the Department of Agriculture. He has since earned world-wide reputation as an original investigator in his chosen branch of science, and his studies of disease-carrying insects, especially the malaria mosquito and the house fly, have greatly developed human knowledge in that line of research. It is he who has given to the house fly the appropriate name of "typhoid fly," and he has done more than any other living man to make known the importance of exterminating this particular plague, as well as the means whereby such an end may be accomplished.

Even more remarkable, perhaps, is the work which Dr. Howard is carrying on with parasites of destructive insects. The worst of such pests in this country, like the dreaded gipsy moth and brown-tail moth, are immigrants from abroad, accidentally imported. As a rule, they are not serious plagues in regions whence they came, because their numbers are kept down by natural enemies; but in the United States their foes are not on hand to attack them, and so they multiply unchecked. The larva of the gipsy moth, for example, is a common caterpillar in Europe, but does comparatively little damage, for the reason that other insects prey upon it.

The best remedy for the mischief seems to be to import these enemies, and give them a chance to get in their deadly work on this side of the water, at the expense of the injurious insects. Thus thousands of boxes of parasitized caterpillars, chrysalids, and egg masses of the gipsy moth have been fetched from Southern France, as well as from other parts of the world, including Russia and Japan, with a view to hatching out these little friends of ours, and turning them loose. This sort of work, as well as the breeding of fierce beetles (likewise imported,) which devour the caterpillars, is being carried on by Dr. Howard, in coöperation with the State authorities of Massachusetts, at a laboratory, established for the purpose, at Melrose Highlands, not far from Boston.

Meanwhile, Dr. F. H. Chittenden (a long-time colleague of Dr. Howard,) is engaged in making some most useful investigations in regard to insects that attack stored food products. One of the worst of these is the so-called Mediterranean flour moth, which is the most destructive mill pest in the world. First recognized in this country in 1892, it now infests nearly all of our milling districts. The damage it does is very great, the female moth laying her eggs in flour, which the caterpillars, on being hatched out, proceed to ruin by spinning webs in it and felting it together in lumps. No way to get rid of the plague has been found so effective as to fumigate the milling establishment with hydrocyanic-acid gas.

Dr. Chittenden also makes a study of insects th[illegible] sail garden truck. In coöperation with the Virgi[illegible] Truck Experiment Station, he is working out plans [illegible] the destruction of potato bugs, the spinach and cabba[illegible] plant lice, the striped cucumber beetle, the pea aphi[illegible] and the cabbage web worm. But the most interestin[illegible] of his recent discoveries was that of a small fly whi[illegible] lays its eggs in the eggs of the asparagus beetle, in Ne[illegible] England. On one farm this parasite was so successfu[illegible] utilized as to render artificial remedies, such as insect[illegible] cides, unnecessary. Further investigation of the sub[illegible] ject is now being made, with a view to introducing th[illegible] friendly fly into other localities where its services [illegible] needed.

A very unusual and serious state of affairs has [illegible] cently been found to exist in Northeastern New Me[illegible] where the caterpillar of a large moth has been [illegible] ing the grass and cattle ranges in increasing [illegible] and over continually-widening areas. Hundreds of [illegible] were ravaged last year, leaving the ground as [illegible] if it had been burned over. In October and early [illegible] vember the moths swarmed over the country, flying [illegible] distances, and depositing their eggs in millions. [illegible] pest bids fair to render a great extent of territory [illegible] lutely worthless for grazing unless something [illegible] done to fight it.

This particular work is under the charge of [illegible] Webster—an entomologist of high reputation, w[illegible] formerly connected with the Agricultural Exp[illegible] Station in Ohio. His division of the bureau att[illegible] the business of fighting insects which attack fo[illegible] and forage crops—such, for instance, as the Hessi[illegible] the wheat-straw worm, and the much-feared "[illegible] bug" of the Southwest.

Another fact of importance which the bureau [illegible] learned is that the natural enemies of the cotton [illegible] weevil may be greatly helped by certain [illegible] matters of planting and cultivating the cotton [illegible] This dreaded insect destroyed something like [illegible] bales ofthe cotton crop of 1909, representing [illegible] of at least $20,000,000. It is a plague most [illegible] deal with, but great hopes are entertained of a plan that [illegible] being carried out for introducing its parasites [illegible] where they are plentiful into other regions [illegible] they are scarce.

Prof. A. L. Quaintance was formerly an instructor in the Florida Agricultural College. He became a member of the staff of the bureau in 1903, after being attached for several years to the experiment stations in three Southern States. His line of work relates especially to insects that assail fruits, such as the pear and apple. A long and hopeful fight is being carried on by him against the abominable "codling moth," whose offspring is the common apple worm. Thanks to the efforts of his division, a practical solution, through spraying and certain methods of cultivation, has been found for the problem of the "thrips"—a small and wicked fly which threatened to wipe out the pear orchards of California, and possibly to spread disastrously over fruit-growing regions in other parts of the country.

In charge of matters relating to injurious insects of the forests is Dr. A. D. Hopkins, who came to the bureau from the West Virginia Experiment Station. He has devoted special attention recently to a pest of the white pine tree, which causes what is known as "twig blight" in New Hampshire and Maine; and likewise to the "Black Hills beetle," which does enormous damage to pine timber in the central Rocky Mountain region. In his belief, it will be possible in future, through the adoption of newly-discovered means, to prevent to a great extent the destruction of storm-felled timber in the forests by boring insects. The great storms of 1906, 1907, and 1908, in the four States of Mississippi, Louisiana, Alabama and Arkansas, blew down trees representing over 2,000,000,000 feet of lumber, board measure, which was reduced in value 25 per cent. by such borers.

Not only is Dr. Howard importing friendly insects from various parts of the world, but he is sending abroad a number of species which are expected to prove useful elsewhere. Not long ago he sent to the district of Vanzago, in Italy, a parasite to fight a scale insect which attacks the mulberry in Southern Europe. Already it has wiped out the scale locally, and within two years it is expected to clear all Italy of the pest. In like manner, lady-bird beetles have been shipped from Southern California to Spain, to prey upon a certain mealy bug. Parasites of a scale enemy of the cotton plant were sent recently to Peru; and a new tick parasite, found on a dog tick in Texas, has been forwarded to South Africa, to see if it will infest and destroy certain other ticks, of the same genus, which are carriers of disease.

The above-mentioned, of course, are only a few of the experts attached to the Bureau of Entomology. Mr. R. P. Currie, who edits its publications, is a specialist in dragon flies. By no means the least important member of the staff is Dr. E. F. Phillips, who is the Bee Man. He has been engaged recently in an elaborate study of the bodily structure and development of the honey bee; and, incidentally to other work, he has begun to collect samples of beeswax from all parts of the United States, for analysis, and for tests of their bleaching properties and relative commercial values.

The man who has done the great work in fighting the cotton-boll weevil is W. D. Hunter—the bureau's specialist in insects that attack Southern field crops, such as cotton, tobacco, and rice. Nathan Banks is a first-class all-around entomologist, with a particular taste for ticks and fleas. The moth expert is Dr. Harrison G. Dyar, who is also an authority on mosquitoes. He says, by the way, that city sewer traps in the summer time are favorite breeding-places for the malaria-carrying 'skeet. From these sources are the most desirable residence districts commonly supplied with the dangerous pests—a hint suggesting the desirability of regularly treating such traps with petroleum, to put a stop to the mischief.

Dr. Howard's principal assistant is C. L. Marlatt, who has been connected with the bureau for a good many years. He comes from Kansas, and his first studies of things entomological were made in the Agricultural College of that State. Much attention was excited by his admirable drawings of insects, and his exceptional skill in this art had much to do with his original employment by the Department of Agriculture. Later on, however, he made himself so valuable as an investigator that his attention was taken up with other and more important matters. At the present time he is chiefly occupied in the fight against insects that attack tropical and sub-tropical fruits—such, for instance, as the "white fly," which is working much injury to the citrus fruits in Florida.

Electricity from Wind.

The machinery of a modern windmill is just as far advanced over the crude machinery of the windmill of fifty years ago as is the works of a fine watch over the works of a dollar alarm clock. One type of wind turbine, for instance, consists of a wheel about sixteen feet in diameter mounted upon a steel tower fifty feet in height.

The entire wind wheel is of galvanized steel and all its moving parts run on ball bearings. Its transmission gear works in an oil bath and, according to Popular Mechanics, the best methods known to engineering have been adopted in order to eliminate friction and enable the wheel to make the best of light winds.

The result is that even in a wind having a velocity of no higher than six miles an hour the turbine generates electricity. Such a windmill as this is provided with an electric generator and switchboard and a fifty-five-cell storage battery as its electrical apparatus. The wheel is always in running position, ready to make use of every puff that comes, and it steadily makes and stores current except in times of absolutely still weather.

The Supreme Court.

A HARD-WORKING BODY OF ABLE AND CONSCIENTIOUS JURISTS.

By a Special Contributor.

THE passing of Associate Justice David J. Brewer deprived the ablest judicial body of America of one of its ablest members.

In the beginning, when the government of the United States was an experiment, when the Senators and Representatives considered themselves the whole concrete function, with the President as a public servant, the Supreme Court was looked down upon as a sort of fifth wheel to the governmental wagon.

John Marshall jolted the statesmen severely with his decisions, and awakened them to a realization of the fact that the framers of the Constitution had given to the Supreme Court supreme power over the legislative branch, in one particular. It was discovered to be the function of the Supreme Court to prevent the legislative branch of the government from proceeding to the enactment of legislation contrary to the letter and spirit of the Constitution. It was Chief Justice John Marshall who lifted the Supreme Court from the obscurity to which the politicians had consigned it, and compelled respect to its decisions, its dignity and its power.

The Supreme Court never takes a vacation, and yet, paradoxical as it may seem, the court adjourns in May or June of each year, ostensibly for an annual vacation. As a matter of fact, the Chief Justice and all of the associate justices are hard at work every day in the year, whether the court is in regular session or not. The court is always composed of a body of lawyers who are tireless workers—men, in fact, who have achieved eminence because they were blessed with the genius of labor.

Every ambitious lawyer hopes that some time he may become a judge, and they who attain judicial positions aspire to the position of Chief Justice or Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. Young lawyers who entertain and cherish ambitions should understand and realize that the Chief Justice and each associate justice, takes with him on adjournment of the court for the summer a number of cases upon which time and talent must be expended in order that such cases may be properly analyzed, comprehended, and decided, and upon each case the individual members of the court will make comprehensive reports covering the law and facts, and warranting the conclusions reached, so that the said conclusions may meet with the approval of the court, as a body, when it shall reconvene.

During the regular winter sessions of the court, the daily sessions begin at noon, and continue practically all of each afternoon. Then on Saturdays the Chief Justice and the associate justices assemble in a room set apart for that purpose, and they consult with each other freely upon pending cases. This consultation chamber is called the holy of holies, for into it no layman shall ever enter. What occurs within those walls is ever and always secret, locked within the breasts of the members themselves.

Those meetings are like the Cabinet meetings at the White House, or like the executive sessions of the Senate, never to be revealed. It is the prevailing impression, however, and generally accepted as a matter of fact, that opinions are freely exchanged concerning the more important cases pending; that a majoritey of the court votes on the subject, and thus determines what shall be the officially expressed opinion of the court; and that then the Chief Justice designates one of the associate justices to prepare the opinion of the court, that opinion to be delivered and promulgated at some future date.

Then comes more work—and hard work, too, for these grave and reverend seigniors. Each individual associate justice is "put upon his mettle." He knows that the "opinion of the court," which he is to prepare, must pass muster before a majority of the members of the court, and he knows also that it must meet with the critical consideration of all of the legal lights interested in each particular case, and the associate justice must make his work symmetrical, logical, rhetorical and dialectically worthy of a place alongside the masterpieces of John Marshall, Roger B. Taney, and others of the court who have made the opinions of the Supreme Court of the United States worthy of the semi-worship of all legal minds in our country.

Each associate justice realizes that he is writing an "opinion of the court," which may be referred to and quoted as a precedent for some decision in the far-off future. He considers and digests all of the arguments made by the attorneys interested, and he carefully refers to all of the citations of law which have been made by those attorneys, in order to be satisfied that they are correct in every particular. He also must verify or refute the numerous precedents cited, from decisions of the Supreme Court, and of other courts; and he must see to it that no attorney shall foist upon the Supreme Court any forced interpretation or application of citations.

Each associate justice has a library in the office of his residence; and he has also immediate access to the library of the Supreme Court. His stenographer is paid a stipulated salary by the government, and the associate justice gives him sufficient to do to make him feel that he is earning that salary.

Usually the stenographers are put to work in the early morning hours, for it is well known that substantially all of the members of the court do their most profound thinking at night, and are ready in the morning for the dictation of paragraphs, or of whole arguments, as parts of a complete opinion. The stenographers are required to read and re-read all of these paragraphs, arguments, and quotations of citations, also the records of the lower court whence the case has come, and all of this work is done until the associate justice has begun to have clear and well-defined purposeful views, which he will ultimately whip into the "opinion of the court."

These hard-working men of the law are not young men. They are all of them past the years of strenuous struggle. Each one of them is a living refutation of the theory of that man of science who would assassinate all men who have grown old enough to become most wise and useful in the world of mentality.

Chief Justice Melville Weston Fuller was born in Augusta, Me., February 11, 1833. He was graduated from Bowdoin College in 1853, and, according to his autobiography in the Congressional Directory, "studied law, attended lectures at Harvard Law School, and was admitted to the bar in 1855; formed a law partnership in Augusta, Me., and was associate editor of a Democratic paper called the Age; in 1856 became president of the Common Council and served as City Solicitor; removed to Chicago, Ill., in 1856, where he practiced law until appointed Chief Justice, April 30, 1888; and took the oath of office October 8, same year."

Thus it appears that the Chief Justice is in his seventy-eighth year, and still hard at work. Physically he is a little man, but mentally he is the peer of the best of the legal minds of the whole world.

Senior Associate Justice John Marshall Harlan is also 77 years of age, having been born in Boyle county, Ky., June 1, 1833. He "was graduated from Center College, Kentucky, in 1850; studied law at Transylvania University; practiced his profession at Frankfort; was elected county judge in 1858; was the Whig candidate for Congress in the Ashland district in 1859; was elector on the Bell and Everett ticket in 1860; removed to Louisville in 1861, and formed a law partnership with Hon. B. F. Bullock; in 1861 raised the Tenth Kentucky Infantry Regiment and served with Gen. George H. Thomas's division; owing to the death of his father in the spring of 1863, although his name was before the Senate for confirmation as brigadier-general, he felt compelled to resign; was the Republican candidate for Governor of Kentucky in 1871; was again Republican candidate for Governor in 1875; was commissioned associate justice of the Supreme Court and took his seat December 10, 1877."

That is a record of a strenuous life, condensed though it be. In addition to his active duties on the bench of the highest court in this land, the autobiography of this hard worker contains the following statement:

"He has been for more than fifteen years and is now a lecturer on Constitutional Law in George Washington University."

The late David Josiah Brewer, associate justice, told this story of his life in the official autobiography: "Was born in Smyrna, Asia Minor, June 20, 1837; is the son of Rev. Josiah and Emilia A. Field, sister of David Dudley, Cyrus W., and Justice Stephen J. Field; his father was an early missionary to Turkey; was graduated from Yale College in 1856 and from the Albany Law School in 1858; established himself in his profession at Leavenworth, Kan., in 1859, where he resided until he removed to Washington to enter upon his present duties, December 18, 1889."

Associate Justice Edward Douglass White was born in the parish of Lafourche, La., in November, 1845. He took his seat on the Supreme Court, March 12, 1894.

Associate Justice Joseph McKenna was born in Philadelphia, Pa., August 10, 1845. He became associate justice December 16, 1897.

Associate Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes was born in Boston, Mass., March 8, 1841. He took his seat on the Supreme Court December 8, 1902.

Associate Justice William R. Day was born in Ravenna, O., April 17, 1849. He became an associate justice March 2, 1903.

Associate Justice Horace H. Lurton assumed the duties of his present position January 3, 1910. He is 65 years old.

Thus briefly is told the story of the fact that all of the members of the Supreme Court of the United States are "in the sere and yellow leaf of life." Some of them give extended autobiographies for the Congressional Directory, but all of them are modest, unpretentious gentlemen, and the point which is uppermost in the mind of the narrator is the fact that they are yet working men, diligently serving their country, and with great fidelity.

When the news item is published in all of the newspapers of this country, that "the Supreme Court has adjourned for the summer vacation," the reader should understand that the Chief Justice and the eight associate justices of that court have not "gone on a vacation." On the contrary, they seek neither sea shore nor mountain for recreation. They pack their trunks not with impedimenta for junketing nor for pleasure of any kind. Their baggage consists, largely, of the papers pertaining to pending cases. They proceed to their respective circuits, and resume their duties and continue their duties in various parts of the republic; and in their capacity as circuit judges, they conduct courts of appeals. Herein, their duties are onerous, and of great responsibility.

It is exceedingly rare that any decision of an associate justice is ever appealed to the Supreme Court, and it is substantially never that such an appeal is sustained by the Supreme Court in its complete sitting. This is a fact that young attorneys might do well to store away in their memories. It may save them a deal of time and misspent talent.

This exceedingly brief outline of the enormous amount of work annually done by the Supreme Court, collectively and individually, is intended to condense volumes of fact concerning the highest court of this republic of ours, the court which is, but is not generally known to be, a coördinate branch of the Federal government; for the Supreme Court is coördinate in constitutional power with the Congress and with the executive branches of our tripartite government "of the people, by the people and for the people," of the United States of America.

Potato Ambassador.

UNCLE SAM SENDS ONE ABROAD TO SOLVE FOOD PROBLEM.

By a Special Contributor.

WHAT is the matter with Uncle Sam's potato crop?

This question has been bothering agricultural experts at Washington for a generation, and now Secretary of Agriculture Wilson has taken definite steps toward finding out why, with America's immense farm acreage, there are not enough potatoes being raised in this country to supply the demand.

For the purpose of making an investigation of the potato situation abroad, Secretary Wilson has given Eugene H. Grubb of Carbondale, Colo., the post of "potato ambassador," and Mr. Grubb is now on his way to Europe to find out why the farmers of Germany, Russia, France and England can raise more potatoes to the acre than American farmers have been able to do

Potato harvesting on the Grubb ranch

Mr. Grubb was selected for this important mission, which will probably take him a year, and which will call him to South America, as well as Europe, because he is regarded as the foremost potato expert in the United States—not an expert of the laboratory class, but a plain, practical farmer, who has been working out the potato problem on his ranch in Colorado for twenty years, and who has achieved practical results that have astounded the world. Mr. Grubb's ranch is on the western slope of the Rocky Mountains, at the foot of Mount Sopris. Here he has succeeded in working wonders with the potato, and in evolving such remarkable varieties of "spuds" that he has won high praise from Luther Burbank for his scientific accomplishments.

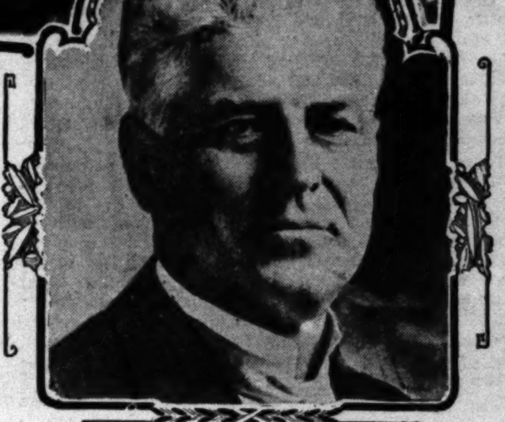
Not alone has Mr. Grubb attracted the attention of scientists through his wonderful work with the humble potato, but he is the father of the "American horse" idea, which the Department of Agriculture is now working out in a practical way at Fort Collins, Colo. He interested Secretary Wilson in the idea of evolving an American type of carriage horse—a type that would thrive among American environments and that would save the millions that are paid annually to foreign horse breeders to replenish the better grades of stock in this country. This experiment has now been in practical operation several years, and is proceeding so satisfactorily that the genuine "American type" of carriage horse may be said to have arrived, and in less than a generation the United States will have a native horse that will challenge the English hackney for style and all other qualities that go to make an admirable carriage animal.

The potato mission on which Mr. Grubb has started is of even greater importance than his work for the development of a native carriage horse. It directly concerns the pocket-book of every wage earner in the country, for the price of potatoes is bound to advance unless some means is found to increase the yield. For thirty years the consumption of potatoes in this country has been about three and one-half bushels per capita, but the supply has not kept pace with the demand. It will surprise the average individual to learn that we import about one-quarter of the potatoes consumed in this country, but such is a fact.

"The only possible solution of the food problem in this country," said Mr. Grubb, before starting on his mission, "is to increase the productivity of our lands. I am going abroad to learn, if possible, why Lord Roseberry, on soil that has been cultivated for hundreds of years, can grow 2000 bushels of potatoes to the acre, where I can raise only 600 on my ranch in Colorado. I am going to find out why a small country like Germany can produce one-third the total potato crop of the world, nearly 1,700,000,000 bushels, while we raise only about 300,000,000 bushels. I am going to find out why Russia and France, and nearly every other European country, can raise three or four times as many bushels of potatoes to the acre as the average farmer in this country produces.

"With cheap potatoes to fall back on, the people of this country need fear no meat famine. But the present price of potatoes in this country is absurd. In Germany potatoes are put to many uses, whereas we seem to think the potato's usefulness is over when it figures as a table necessity. The Germans use their potatoes to make alcohol for commercial purposes. Dr. Wiley has estimated that 100 pounds of potatoes will produce ten pounds of alcohol. In other words, a bushel will produce about six-sevenths of a gallon of alcohol. We ought to be producing enough potatoes in this country to enable us to use denatured alcohol as much as we use expensive gasoline. In Germany, potatoes are even dried and used for feed. In fact, Europe seems to be far ahead of us in utilizing the tuber which we neglect.

"I intend to visit the little island of Chila, off the coast of Chile—a bit of land about the size of the State of Rhode Island—where the potato culture is marvelous. Here is found the red potato known to the Argonauts of California as the potato that kept longer under all conditions than any other.



Eugene Grubb

"Advancement in knowledge of soils, and how to preserve their richness—such is the solution of the food problem in America. We have been wasteful of our soils, which were the best in the world. First we impoverished the soil of New England, and then we moved gradually west, taking the best and wasting it with prodigal hand, until now we have no more new lands to despoil and are face to face with the question of making the best possible use of the old acreage. Europe has faced this problem for centuries, and has solved it, if one is to judge from the immense crops European farmers grow on a restricted acreage. The potato is only one of the many things we must cultivate better and with greater scientific attention—but it is one of the most important factors to be considered."

In the course of his practical experiments on his Mount Sopris farm at Carbondale. Mr. Grubb has evolved potatoes that are of uniform size, and that have thin skins and shallow eyes—points that any housekeeper will appreciate. These potatoes will yield heavily under scientific cultivation. Mr. Grubb has made no secret of his methods, but has been engaged in a sort of evangelical work that has extended to many States. Western railroads have engaged him to instruct new settlers along their lines in getting larger and better potato crops. The New York Central Railroad officials have called him in consultation, in their work of restoring the yield of the "worked out" farms of New England. The "Grubb potatoes" have been in keen demand among the leading railroads of the country for their dining-car service, and Mr. Grubb could make himself immensely wealthy by keeping his potato knowledge to himself and supplying the demand that has arisen for his products.

But this big, plain, shrewd western ranchman is another Luther Burbank in many respects. Not only has he out-Burbanked the California wizard in perfecting the potato, but he believes, like Burbank, that one's knowledge should be turned to general account for the good of humanity. This led him to interest the government in the development of the American type of riage horse, and now it has carried him abroad, a first-hand study of conditions in the leading potat raising countries of the world and to find some tion for the growing food problem in the United

FOG-FREE LONDON.

SPECULATION AS TO SOME OF THE CAUSES OF FALLING OFF.

[London Daily Mail:] The approach of spring brought to London the realization of a very remark fact. London this winter has been practically fog- But there has been a gradual diminution in the ber of fogs for several years, as the following show:

Year.	No. of fo
1905	44
1906	19
1907	24
1908	13
1909	4

The importance of London's growing freedom fog cannot be overestimated. The conversion into night by fog means business chaos. A full fog, it is estimated, costs London £150,000; one tant railway company, it is stated, has expended upon fog-signaling arrangements during an excep ally bad season.

How has London acquired its immunity? The falli off in the number of fogs has corresponded—those are competent to judge declare—with the equally ual diminution in the volume of smoke emitted by chimneys of London.

The introduction of gas fires and gas cookers, electri cal heating apparatus, and the systems of water ing installed in so many city buildings has an importan bearing upon the problem of the lost fogs. Half a lion new gas fires, cookers, and heaters have in years been introduced into London.

There is little doubt, experts also declare, that electrification of the District and Metropolitan railw has helped materially to free London from fog. merly both these railways poured dense clouds of into the air from their stations and ventilators.

Among other factors which have contributed to don's deliverance from fog are the prosecutions taken by local authorities and smoke-abatement tors in cases where excessive smoking from chimneys has been noted. This has been partic beneficial as regards the fringe of London, from in foggy weather, dense clouds of smoke used to over the city.

The cause of fog is that a number of electrons the atmsophere owing to its electrical condition, these act as nuclei to which the minute particles sible for the fog are attracted. Sir Oliver Lodge gests neutralizing these nuclei by an artificial supply electricity of the opposite kind or "sign."

It is asked whether the amount of electricity stantly discharged by wireless telegraphic stations any effect on fog. No effect, however, has been observ at any of the large wireless stations, and the proffered is that the kind of electrical discharge which will dispel fogs must be of one kind only, opposite character to that which is responsible for the fog

"Battleship" Fort.

Recently there have been references in the news patches to a curious fortification which Uncle Sam erecting on a small island named El Fraile, as a part the line of defense of Manja Bay. It was styled a c crete battleship, which was to be fixed upon the island.

El Fraile is a Spanish term which has more than meaning. It is merely a pinnacle of rock rising a feet above the surface of the water.

It was at first a question how the island could be to serve its purpose. According to a story as to the the idea developed of creating on top of the rock a ture of concrete somewhat resembling a battle shape and style of armament, it was first planned large the island in order to obtain the essential for the big guns. This would have cost a good sum, said to be more than $5,000,000, and would provided only a modest fort after all. Then it was gested to shave off the top. A young man conn with the engineering corps brought forward the ary "battleship" plan.

The fort, which is already in process of constru is an ellipse, about 300 feet long and 150 feet wide, walls of concrete being forty feet in height. Within inclosure will be two steel turrets of the kind found battleships. Each will house two of the big new teen-inch guns. The use of the turrets economize Besides these great guns there will be four guns. The entrance to the fortifications, or "co battleship," will be by means of a sallyport. It lieved that the unique fortification will be impreg

The armament itself will be interesting as the teen-inch gun for the navy is a new arm. It is that this weapon will withstand the wear and use much better than the twelve-inch gun, whose has been estimated to be not more than eighty [New York Tribune.

Loaf Bread.

It is perhaps worth recalling that the art of loaves came to Europe quite late in history. Flat were baked even in the earliest times, but as late beginning of the nineteenth century loaf bread paratively unknown in many parts of the contin 1812, for instance, when an English captain loaves to the value of £1 in Gothenburg, the baker lated for payment in advance, on the ground would never be able to sell them in the city if they left on his hands.—[London Chronicle.

The Story of the False Prophet.

"W'EN de Travelin' Prophet come 'long an' said de worl' wuz comin' ter a end in six weeks' time," said Brother Williams, "all de folks in de settlement turned der backs on him—all except Br'er Johnson, who wuz allus ready and willin' to believe in all de trouble you could pile on him.

"He never wuz satisfied wid a peck er mis'ry, but allus axed fer de bushel measure.

"So he tuck de Prophet ter his own house an' helt meetin's dar, an' prayed day an' night an' give $10 ter de heathen, an' went roun' 'mongst his feller-mens an' paid up ever' cent he owed, an' give de church people his house an' lot—seein' dat it 'ud be burnt up anyhow—an' walked 'bout wid sich a sollum countenance dat a graveyard looked cheerful 'longside er him.

"Well, de days went by, an' de weeks went by, till it didn't lack mo'n three days er de time fer de worl' ter blaze, an' w'en de limit come an' nuthin' mo' come ter pass than de Prophet takin' ter de woods dar wuz trouble in Br'r Johnson's habitation.

"It wuzn't dat all de settlement wuz laffin' at him, but dat he'd been fool 'nuff ter pin what faith he had ter dat stray prophet, an' pay up all his debts an' give his house ter de church an' $10 to de heathen in solid gold an' de eagrateful ol' worl' es fur f'um gittin' burnt up es ever.

"Oh, but he wuz mad! An' what did he do but put his two hound dogs on de trail er dat false prophet an' track him ter de woods, whar de dogs 'treed' him.

"Den he built a fire roun' de tree, an' 'lowed dat he wuz gwine ter burn him up—ef de worl' wouldn't ketch fire he'd start a fire er his own and do de bes' he could wid de conflagration business.

"Now, de man wuz up de tree, an' ef he stayed dar de blaze would ketch him, an' ef he come down de dogs would git him; so dar he wuz.

"But he tuck a chance at it an' come slidin' down, an' den Br'r Johnson an' de hound dogs fell foul er him, an' w'en dey got through wid him dar wuzn't 'nuff er him lef' ter make a skeercrow fer an' ol' cornfiel'!

"'What you beatin' me fer?' ax de Prophet. 'Ain't you glad de worl' didn't come ter a end?'

"Br'er Johnson hollered back at him: 'I'm a-beatin' you in two inches er yo' life kaze de heathen hez done had a good time on my $10 gold piece, an' de church got my house an' lot!'"

The Warm Welcome.

SUMMER'S the meltin' proposition,
But the warm days—they will pass,
An' I jest ain't growlin' at my condition
While the cool mint greens the grass.

(Come in, Colonel, fer goodness sake.
Take a chair an'—what'll you take?)

I find no fault when the weather's blazin'—
In fiery sheets unrolled.
The mint you see's of my own good raisin'
An' the Bourbon's ten years old.

(There's a cool breeze blowin'. For goodness sake Take a chair an'—what'll you take?)

For though growling in its business, in reason and in rhyme,
I'll say this much for thunder—'tisn't growling all the time!"

How Old Trouble Lost Out.

"I ONCT met a traveler in de big road," said the old story teller of the settlement, "an' I never seen a man dressed so fine—not in all my life—but I felt suspicious of him, kaze I couldn't help but wonder how it wuz dat sich a well-dressed traveler should be trampin' on de dusty road, w'en he orter been ridin' in his carriage.

"Besides dot, de traveler had a mighty sollum countenance—lak' he'd done los' de las' fr'en he had in de worl'.

"He wouldn't answer no questions, but all time shuck his head an' groaned an' sighed lak' dis worl' and de nex' one wuz agin' him.

"But it wuzn't long fo' I hearn a loud hollerin', and de hollerin' come fum men an' women folks, shoutin' 'Stop him! Stop him!'

"An' at dat de traveler in de fine cloze had a great trimblin' ter come over him and w'en de crowd ketched up wid us he felled on his two knees an' begged fer mercy. De men an' women pulled him ag'in an' hollered:

"'Take off dem cloze, you triflin' ol' rascal! You stoled 'em f'um de young man called Joy, whilst he wuz on de way ter de dance ter play de fiddle fer us. Take 'em off! Take 'em off!'

"An' take 'em off he did. He wuz so skeered dat he fair shuck 'em off, till he stood befo' de crowd in rags—wich wuz his own cloze.

"De crowd said dey'd kill him den an' dar, only fer de fact dat he wuz too tough ter kill; so dey took de fine cloze an' lef' him in his rags.

"Den it wuz dat he up an' tried te 'splain matters ter me.

"'My name is Trouble,' he said, 'an' dar's no welcome fer me anywhars in dis big worl'.

"'I ain't got a fr'en' dat I kin lay my han's on.'

"And den it wuz I spoke ter him lak' dis:

"'You is one somebody dat can't fool folks wid fine cloze; an keep dis counsel in min' ez long ez you live: Mister Joy don't allus dress in de fashion. I has seen him come out er a tumbledown cabin an' go ter dancin' in de sunshine b'ar-footed an' in rags!'"

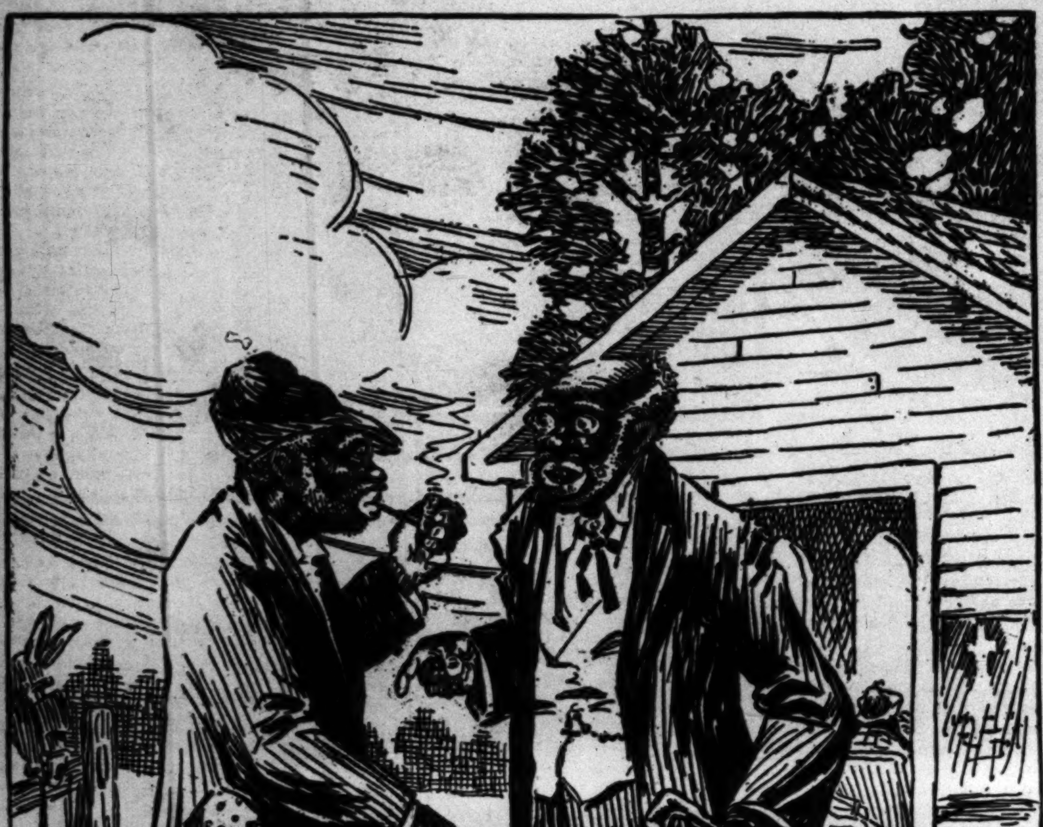
When She Goes the Shopping Way.

THIS here life, I tell you, it ain't no holiday,
Especially when Molly goes the Christmas shoppin' way.
For I think o' the hereafter when the bills will be to pay
Some little time, just after Christmas mornin'.

Of course I'm not a grumbler in the Christmas season bright,
When the mistletoe is temptin', an' the holly is in sight,
Yet I think o' when my pockets will be feelin' mighty light,
Some little time, just after Christmas mornin'.



"ALL DE FOLKS TURNED DER BACK ON DER PROPHET EXCEPT BR'ER JACKSON."

But they're with us in the cities, an' they're with us in the glades,
An' the joy that they are bringin' is the joy that never fades.
Life is better—life is brighter, for the holiday brigades
Some little time, just after Christmas mornin'.

'Twas There He Drew the Line.

SAID the farmer to the Congressman:
We got the seed you sent, and it saved us lots o' money up and down the settlement;
But we've fences needing fixing, and we want a helping hand, will you kindly hitch that mule there and help us plow the land?"

But he made no sign;
It was there he drew the line,
And for once looked like a fellow
Who was ready to resign.

Said the farmer: "Crop''ll suffer, for the weather's mighty dry,
And the thunder is a-sleeping in a hollow of the sky; it's vainly we are hoping that they'll send the light'ning train:
Will you get down on your knees there and ask the sky for rain,"

But he stared a vacant stare;
No use to make that prayer;
It wouldn't stir the sky up,
For they didn't know him there!

The Fine Weather Time.

"FINE weather now," says a Georgia philosopher. "The 'possum is grinning as though he were in a good humor an' felt tickled over the joke on the North Pole; the farmer is not afraid of the sheriff, as he has more crops than the sheriff can levy on; the prophets who predicted that the world would come to an end on the first day of September have gone in search of the brass tube Dr. Cook left at the Pole, and, take it all 'round, it's beginning to look like a mighty good world to live in!"

Carmen Sylva.

POETESS-QUEEN IS BEST BUSINESS WOMAN IN EUROPE.

From a Staff Correspondent.

BUCHAREST (Roumania) March 28.—No other woman, and certainly no other Queen, enjoys such popularity as Carmen Sylva, the poetess Queen of Roumania. For she is popular at home as a Queen, and abroad as a poetess. Her books are read as eagerly throughout Europe as they are in the country where she lives; and in Roumania she has so endeared herself to the people that the most melancholy face brightens at her name.

Any one who travels in the country must ask: "What is the secret of this immense popularity?" The answer is that although she is an Austrian by birth and, till she went to live in Roumania, did not know either its language of its customs, she set herself to study both, and with such success that she speaks Roumanian like a native, has become the best authority on most of the country's problems, and has founded all manner of institutions by which the natural talents and resources of the country, almost dead when her husband began to reign, are now flourishing.

Carmen Sylva's favorite "granddaughter," really her grand niece Princess Elizabeth

King Carol of Roumania

Queen "Carmen Sylva" at her typewiter

She is the best business woman in Europe, and it is due to her clever advertising of the resources of her country and to her own popularity as an author that little Roumania, formerly one of the most insignificant spots on the map of Europe, has become one of the best-known and most prosperous. Her head is so full of ideas and new schemes that one catches oneself wondering if she is not an American, yet she has never been to America in her life.

One of her ideas was to use the Roumanians' talent for embroidery as a commercial asset for the country, which, by the time it had freed itself from the Turkish yoke, was almost bankrupt. Carmen Sylva opened a workroom where the peasants could obtain materials for their embroidery and sell it at a fair, living wage. The work was then sent abroad, and the profits divided among the workers. She also opened shops where peasants can sell their work, which includes carpets, rugs, homespuns, chair coverings, table cloths, clothing of all kinds, and crockery. What is not sent to Germany and Austria is disposed of at home. Hundreds of peasants have been able thereby to free their land from debt, to buy more, to rebuild their cottages and to educate their children. Thanks to their Queen, they have revived the silk industry, which was entirely forgotten when the Turks ruled, or rather oppressed, Roumania. But Carmen Sylva opened a weaving school for peasant girls, gave them simple but practical looms which they can work at home, brought teachers to show them how to make good, wide silk and linen, offered prizes for the best-made stuffs and scattered these expert weavers in various parts of the country where they, in turn, teach their neighbors. She has, attached to this school, an agency for the sale of silk to the foreign factors at much better prices than the peasants could obtain in the country districts.

And Carmen Sylva has energy as well as ideas. Nobody in the kingdom works harder than the Queen. By 9 o'clock she is at her desk, winter and summer, and many of the hundreds of letters received she answers herself. She controls all the institutions she has founded, and takes a personal interest in all the inmates of her homes and orphanages. She knows exactly what is going on and frequently visits all these places, talking to everybody and finding out exactly what each person wants. In addition to all this work, she has always some book in hand and often the supervision of a translation as well. The day is spent on her public work and her correspondence; the night on her literary work. She types all her correspondence herself, and uses three machines—for the Roumanian, French and German languages respectively. Besides this, she reads, on an average, one book a day and arranges receptions and private concerts in the palace several times a month. When one remembers that Her Majesty is over 60, anr far from robust in health, one can only ask: "How does she manage it?"

Many stories are told of her wonderful memory. She never forgets a face, and, people say, rarely forgets a conversation. A distinguished foreign general not long ago visited the Roumanian court, after a lapse of twenty years. At dinner, Her Majesty turned to him with a smile and said:

"Now, General, we will continue the argument we began twenty years ago about bimetallism. You said then that——" And here followed the principal points of their last conversation. It was scarcely strange that the general had forgotten even the conversation. But, on returning home he looked up his diary, and there, sure enough, was an entry, twenty years old, with an account of his visit to the Roumanian court, and the remark: "Her Majesty graciously talked to me about bimetallism, a subject we are both much interested in."

Royal Palace at Bucharest

One day she was driving in the mountains at Sinaia, where the court spends the summer. The horses were tired and the Queen got out so that they might rest. There was a cottage near by, and she went there to drink some milk. She looked at the peasant woman for a moment and said:

"I remember you; your name was So-and-so before you married. You used to bring milk to the monastery at Sinaia, ten years ago."

This retentive memory endears her to the people. The milk maid, whom she had seen once, perhaps, in passing, will always tell this story with pride. "The Queen," she will say, "remembers what I looked like ten years ago."

Queen Carmen Sylva possesses another valuable quality and that is immense personal charm. only queenly and gracious, but lovable as w something in her smile which draws peopl puts them at their ease as soon as she speak nobody would dream of being familiar with respected as well as admired and loved.

The "Honyockers."

Life of a Lively Class of New Settlers in the Dakotas.

By a Special Contributor.

"THOSE are Honyockers."

A traveler in the Dakotas looked up from his book to see who had been boarding the train at that lonely station. Honyockers was a word new to him, and he was puzzled as to what they might be. Just as he had decided they were probably some of those oddly-garbed cestarians from Russia, the "Honyockers" entered the car. That is, he found out afterward they were Honyockers, but nothing in their appearance seemed to warrant such a queer outlander designation.

Three girls and a man they were—girls with clear eyes, bright cheeks and wind-blown hair—girls who looked as if they might have just returned from a busy afternoon of rooting for their side in a university football match. The man was a mere youth, broad-shouldered and pleasant-faced. He presently revealed himself as the brother of one of the girls.

These were Honyockers.

"But why?" asked the traveler, "why are you called Honyockers?"

"Because we're homesteaders," said the most wind-blown one of the three laughing girls. "They call the old-timers 'gumbo grabbers,' but we belong to the Honyocker class. I am sure I don't know why homesteaders are called that, and it never sounded queer to me before."

The term, it transpired, was quite universally used throughout the Dakotas. The traveler asked a good many questions and finally learned that the four young persons were all university students—two of them graduates of the University of Minnesota. They were just returning to St. Paul after "proving up" on their claims. For fourteen months they had lived on the prairie and knew it winter, summer, fall and spring. They had gone out to begin their residence the first of April, two years ago, and so well had they liked the life of the plains that they had stayed on for several months after coming into possession of their quarter sections of land. For land owners they all were; each fresh-cheeked girl of them a full-fledged citizen, so far as her deed of ownership could make her.

"Oh, no, we're not suffragettes," said the oldest one. "We've been too busy. Life is so full of interesting things to do when you live on the prairie."

This was rather a new way of viewing the fabled restfulness of the plains, and the traveler asked her what it was that kept them so busy.

"Well, you see, if you are a true Honyocker" (so the name had to be lived up!) "you keep your own house and keep it clean. Henry and I (her name is Henrietta, you know) had a shack together. It was built of sod and was very warm in winter, on that account, and cool in summer. It was really perfectly lovely to live in, and I hardly know what I am going to do in a hot wooden house. But we're going back to the prairie, and we're going to raise cattle. Busy! Well, if you could see the things one had to do in a day. One gets up early in the morning on the prairie. The prairie chickens begin to drum pretty early and the meadow larks simply shout at you if you stay in bed after 5 o'clock. Then we rush out to the corral to see if Dandy and Bess are all right, and we rush back to the house to make coffee and pancakes."

"Pancakes?"

"Yes, you know pancakes are the staff of Honyocker life. They are so easy to make, and they are so good with syrup of sugar. We didn't have any potatoes for months and months. Ours froze because we didn't make the root cellar deep enough, and we really couldn't afford to buy, and there weren't any to buy. Then, when your appetite is as good as ours was all the time, most anything is nourishing.

"They can't talk to me about food values and scientific feeding. Give me a race on Bess before a strong prairie wind in summer, or a hike after the turkeys."

"The turkeys?"

"Yes, we had turkeys, and we made money out of them, too. They were the best product we had. But I was telling you how busy we are.

"After breakfast we go to work in the garden if the season is right for gardening. If it isn't, we mend our saddles or our riding habits, or make a new print frock, or doctor the little turkeys, or churn. We had only one cow, but when we go back we are going to have a hundred head of cattle.

"Presently it is time to make biscuits for dinner, and nearly always the afternoon is full to overflowing with work. One season brings one thing and another season brings another kind of work. We set out hundreds of little golden willows for a windbreak, and also some fruit trees and box elders. Sometimes, too, there is a long run to make, for we often helped in rounding up the cattle on the ranch of our neighbors. They fenced our ranch in exchange for the help we gave them. Margaret—that's my chum—used to go for the mail to Bixby, the nearest postoffice. It was thirty miles away, and some one would go every few days on horseback—I mean some one in that neighborhood."

"And how large might a neighborhood be?"

"Oh, let me see—about twenty miles or so either way. Margaret could do anything with a horse, and she drove eleven head of horses down to Bixby one day."

"Was it Bixby that we passed?"

"No, that was Lemon. We lived eighty-five miles from the railway, and we came in the automobile stage from Bixby. The prairie roads are fine in dry weather, as smooth and hard as a floor, and one can drive across the prairie anywhere, but when it rains the clay is very sticky and the automobile is apt to get stuck. Give me a horse every time for a steady dependence."

"But didn't you miss the social life you had at home?"

"Not a bit more than I missed having ice cream sundaes. I don't believe you can miss anything if you have something else that's better to fill its place. I am going to be dreadfully homesick for the prairie. I shall feel shut in by the hills and houses.

"I used to study psychology at the 'U,' and I believe I understand some of it now better than I did then. There is that about love of liberty which sometimes makes people break social laws. I believe if everybody could get acquainted with nature as we have got acquainted with her they would respect themselves more as individuals. I think the prairies make egoists, but the egoists make the country, and you can't be properly humble unless you are an egoist, and have ridden the range in the early morning when there was nothing in sight except a solitary shikepoke or a collection of sandhill cranes doing one of their remarkable minuets on the prairie.

"Distance? Why, distance is all there is. You simply can't help stretching your mental wings and soaring. You remember how 'The Girl of the Golden West' is always talking about 'reaching out?' Well, I don't blame her any. The prairie makes you feel that way. No skyscrapers for mine!"

So these were Honyockers. They might be egoists, but the traveler liked them.

W. P. M'GUIRE.

The Making of a Novel.

Telling some one how her novels "grow," Mrs. Gertrude Atherton says:

"The idea lodges down there somewhere in the back of my head, sometimes for years. Then a chance remark shoots it up into the top of my head and I go to work. I shut myself up; the place where I must write comes to me like an inspiration, and I go there if I have to cross the world.

"San Francisco in summer is an ideal place for work; it is cold and foggy, windy and bracing; the people go away and I have it to myself. It is very stimulating. It stormed for fifty days and nights on Mount Tamalpais while I was working last winter upon my new novel, 'Tower of Ivory.' This book is a story of Munich and England, and I had to come 7000 miles to Mount Tamalpais, as I had made up my mind I could write it nowhere else. There were long draughty corridors in the deserted hotel where I could take long walks in my heaviest coat.

"It takes me a long time to touch the spring of a book, but when it is once wound up I want to go right along; no interruption. I don't think anything about filling in a certain number of words a day, but I do work steadily, going to bed at 8 o'clock, and taking long walks in the afternoon."

Japanese Manners.

An American traveler who had heard much of Japanese politeness was witness to an incident the other day which was far from confirming his expectations in the matter. The incident involved two Japanese men and one Japanese woman.

Maybe Nipponese ideas of the attentions due to women differ from those that obtain in America, but certainly when a woman in New York, Chicago, Denver, San Francisco or any other American city drops a handkerchief on the floor of a public conveyance she would not have to pick it up herself if there were men about.

An American sat at one end of a first-class railway carriage going from Yokohama to Tokio, while at the other end sat two Japanese men opposite to her. The woman was looking out of the window, and did not notice that her handkerchief had fallen out of her lap.

The handkerchief fell on the edge of a cuspidor. Somebody had been smoking, and the border of the handkerchief came in contact with the stump of a still burning cigar. Even though the handkerchief was in danger of being scorched, her neighbors made no effort to pick it up. The American had started forward to rescue and restore it when one of the Japanese displayed sufficient gallantry to nudge its owner, point to the handkerchief and then allow her to pick it up herself.—[Yokohama Dispatch.

The Chamois Trail.

Every day at noon at Grindelwald there is a rush of visitors for the telescopes, in order to gaze at one of the most interesting natural scenes in the Alps, "the chamois trail."

Regularly at this hour a herd of twenty to thirty chamois may be seen passing in Indian file up the yawning abysses of the precipitous Mettenberg rocks, separating two glaciers, the male animals leading the way, the king of the herd keeping twenty yards in advance, and on the watch.

At the bottom of the Mettenberg, where the slope is freed from snow, the chamois find a meager subsistence when their usual feeding grounds are under deep snow. It is a curious fact that the chamois descend to their feeding grounds at dawn, when there is little likelihood of avalanches, and return to their haunts at an hour when avalanches—for this portion of the mountain has frequent avalanches—have already fallen and the danger is past.—[Geneva correspondence Pall Mall Gazette.

Where He Wanted to Go.

A man went into the ticket office of the Colorado Midland Railway, at Seventeenth and California streets, recently, and said to Mr. Whitley, the ticket agent: "I want to get a ticket to Lame Water, Colo."

"To what place?" asked the perplexed ticket man.

"Lame Water—it's a mining camp."

Whit put his head in his hands and thought deeply a moment. "Oh," he said finally, "you mean Cripple Creek, don't you?"

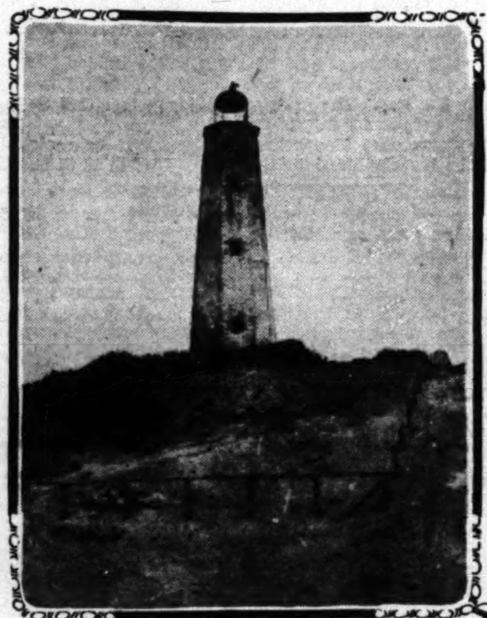
"Yes, that's the place," said the man; "I got it wrong."—[Denver Post.

Hatteras, the Stormy.

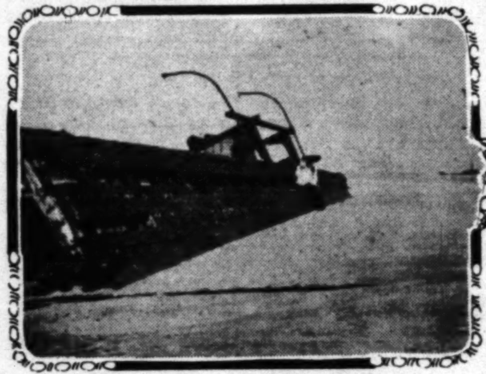
BURDENED BY NATURE AND HISTORY WITH BAD REPUTATION.

By a Special Contributor.

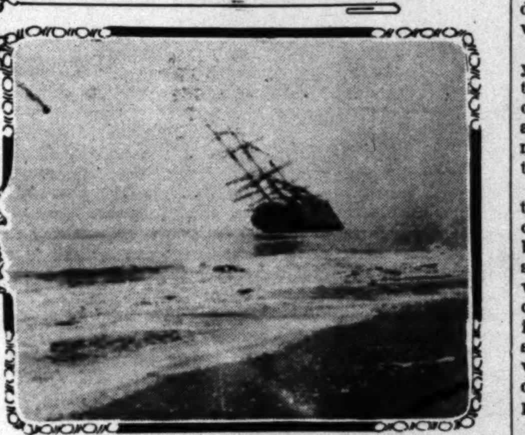
WHENEVER a vessel becomes stranded at Cape Hatteras and is gradually broken to pieces by the incessant pounding of the heavy waves which exist there, it is generally reported that the vessel's timbers were splintered on the bleak shores and rocks of Hatteras. Hatteras, therefore, suffers the burden of all evildoers; its reputation for cruelty has spread far and wide, and there is no limit to the bad things which may be said or believed of it, for in describing this part of the North Carolina coast, our geographers do not mention its construction more than to say that it is a distinct promontory, dangerous on account of its shoals.



Oldest lighthouse in north end of Hatteras coast



The inevitable end



The British ship Clyde

In certain senses Hatteras is a bleak shore, and in some parts a barren one, containing all of nature's strenuosity told of it. From Nag's Head southward nearly sixty miles to the cape, it is nothing more than a bare strip of sand varying in width from a half-mile to a mile, and but a few feet above mean high water. South of the cape, however, Hatteras Island looks like a fairyland of tropical growth where the bleakness is confined to the immediate coast line. There it is three miles wide and nearly down to Hatteras town is dotted with huge sand hills and ridges that are covered by a dense growth of pines and holly. And beneath it all is sand. With the exception of a few stones imported there by the lighthouse authorities and a defunct lumber company, there isn't a rock on the whole island.

But it is this sand which makes Hatteras the most dreaded spot on the Atlantic Coast for mariners, because it extends many miles offshore from the cape under water, and it is these great submarine mounds the deathbed of many a good ship, which give the locality the reputation of being the graveyard of the Atlantic.

The larger of the two shoals, known as the Outer Diamond, lies about twelve miles off shore and covers an area equal to about two square miles. The Inner Diamond, smaller but more lumpy and irregular, lies closer in shore. But though these hidden creatures of destruction are sand, they have proven to be more dangerous than rocks in that they constantly shift their position and form with the changing winds and currents, a trait which signifies to mariners that it is the dreaded quicksand. If a pole is thrust down into it, it is gripped and held as if by a human vise, and if left alone, it will be gradually sucked under.

It can be imagined, then, how quickly and with something akin to fiendish glee, these traveling sands fill in along a luckless ship's keel the moment it strikes. But few cases are recorded wherein it has not marked the ship's end. When not battered to pieces, the hulk remains in practically the same position in which it first struck, settling slowly in the soft sand which literally becomes its grave.

On a mild day with a smooth sea running, it is possible to look down through the clear water and watch the quivering of the Outer Diamond. At the present time nearly a dozen vessels are still visible, among them the British steamship Ariosto, wrecked barely ten years ago; the American steamer Northeastern, stranded in 1905, and the latest victim, the German steamship Brewster, which struck last December.

There have been two attempts to build a lighthouse on the Outer Diamond shoal. But Hatteras has so far defied mankind to rob it of its one claim to notoriety, however much that whim may cost the sailor, and backed by storms and the consequent violent seas, it ended both attempts in disastrous failure, even after both caissons had been sunk and apparently made fast. At present, the government spends over $10,000 annually to keep a lightship on the outer edge of the Outer Diamond, doing all that human agency can devise to warn the mariner of his lurking foe.

Hatteras seems to have been stormy even in its first days of habitation. The first white men known to have set foot on its shore were the members of Sir Walter Raleigh's ill-fated first colony of settlers. They landed in the latter part of the sixteenth century, and finally settled on Roanoke Island in the sound. In a few months their ship went back to England for more colonists and supplies. When it returned several years later, not a sign of the original colony nor of human life could be found. The disappearance remained a mystery to the new colonists until a few months later, when they were attacked by the Croatan Indians and driven off.

Edward Teach, pirate, known today as "Black Beard" and in those days as the "Living Devil," came along in 1719 and added more strife to the record of Hatteras, for it was there that this celebrated villain made his headquarters. Teach was known to have been the most fiendish and barbarous of marine highwaymen. After a round of rich hauls, he sailed from Charleston in the summer of that year with two ships each under the command of his supposed partners, Richards and Hands. The latter commanded the Trent, a small vessel which accompanied the fleet for what reason none knew but Teach himself.

It transpired that on the voyage northward Teach planned to break up his large company, secure the booty, which amounted to more than 15,000 pounds sterling, and divide it among a favored few. Consequently, just before he sighted Hatteras he made for Topsail Inlet, as it was then called, ostensibly to clean ship. He ran aground as if by accident, and called his two ships to his assistance. The Revenge, commanded by Richards, ran aground also, and Teach transferred his booty, himself and his forty favorite hands to the Trent. He sailed on and left the Revenge where it lay, and the following morning set some of the original crew of the Trent ashore on a small island south of Hatteras. On Hatteras Island he disposed of all but his selected few by creating murderous fights among them, and finally by slaughtering the remainder himself.

An instance of Teach's ferocity occurred just after he had established his headquarters at Hatteras. One night aboard his ship he said to three of his men: "Come, let us make a hell of our own and try how long we can stand it."

He descended to the hold with the three men, who dared not refuse his whim, closed up the hatches, and ignited several pots of sulphur and other combustible matter. The men almost suffocated, and after a time they cried for air. Teach finally let them out, but he was much pleased that he had held on the longest.

On another occasion, while sitting in his cabin with two of his lieutenants, he drew his two pistols under the table and cocked them. Then with a diabolical grin he suddenly fired, inflicting a wound on Capt. Hand's knee which lamed him for the rest of his days.

Teach buried his treasure in one of the big hills in the center of the island, and continued his depredations on shipping along the immediate coast. In the meantime, Richards had succeeded in floating the Revenge and had arrived in the James River, where he held a consultation with Lieut. Maynard, of the King's navy, and on November 17, 1719, Maynard sailed on a hunt for Teach. He found the pirate lying inside Hatteras Inlet. Teach had heard the reports of Maynard's quest, and had prepared for battle. That night he went ashore and drank himself and his men into a frenzy. In the early morning Maynard sailed into the inlet, and soon after went aground in the shallow water of the sound. This was exactly as Teach had planned, and he, with his crazy-drunk crew, soon after effected a boarding the Englishman. In the fierce hand-to-hand which followed Maynard himself killed Teach, those of the pirates who did not jump overboard either killed or placed in irons.

Concerning Teach's treasure, if you ask any present residing at Hatteras where the pirate buri they will tell you that the night before he was some one asked him if his wife knew of the abouts of his treasure, in the event of his death. one but the devil and myself know," replied "and the longest liver shall take all." Therefore, say, it belongs to the devil.

About the year 1750 a large Portuguese ship the shoals and was cast ashore on Hatteras Island is claimed that these people made no effort to find mainland. Instead they built a settlement and there peaceably until the smugglers, which in that region in the early years of our government in an appearance. The Portuguese sided with the ernment and attempted to drive off the smugg This, however, was an ideal spot for such operati and as the government could not then maintain a there at all times, the result was frequent and clashes with the Portuguese residents, which told them so heavily that they were finally persuaded sist in the operations.

Next came the slave traders, an even fiercer men. It is said that they would land their human goes on these shores, gather them in huge pens so many cattle, and by force compel the Portug residents to sail them across Pamlico Sound in of a dozen or more, a practice which continued broken up by the combined efforts of Great Br and the United States.

That some of the present-day residents of Hatt are descendants of these shipwrecked Portuguese to be established by the dates entered on some of tombstones marking the graves. Each Hatteras has its family graveyard, the tombstones in which probably imported from some of the near-by main towns. These are marked with dates of deaths ning as far back as 1810, and with ages that from fifty to seventy years.

Many of the people also show physical marks such ancestry. Black hair and olive skin predomi That they are a healthy lot seems to be borne their general appearance, and the small numbe calls received by the one doctor who lives among The men are strong and wiry, and the women those marks of beauty for which many women of day strive hard—a lithe, well-rounded figure, and a velvety complexion.

The ambitions of the Hatterasites do not extend yond the shores of their home. Those who are the government life-saving or lighthouses service content to fish in the fall and spring and build and cut wood in the summer. In the winter they nets and take it easy. Only a few know or care the outside world's happenings.

A story is still current in Hatteras of the days the value of cotton seed as an oil producer was first covered. A large steamer loaded with this produ bound from Savannah to Liverpool via Norfolk, stranded on the shoals during the summer months, was abandoned as a total loss. As soon as the calmed down, the Hatterasites rowed out and boar it. They beheld a hold full of 200-pound sacks of strange meal which, on account of being water-soak was considered useless. But the close-woven mate of the sacks looked good, and a small fortune was poured over the side and the sacks taken ashore.

THE COLONEL OF THE REGIMENT TELLS A STORY.

By a Special Contributor.

AS we were going into action at Corinth, said Col. R. S. Bevier, who commanded a regiment of Missouri Confederates, and the shrapnel and minie bullets were whistling a mournful dirge about us, one could see numerous packs of playing cards fluttering from pockets and haversacks as they were furtively thrown away by the men, while their Bibles were carefully placed in the breast pocket, just over the region of the heart. To see card packs discarded, thrown around on the ground, was a sure sign of an approaching battle. Men did not want to be found dead with them in their possession, while even the most hardened eagerly sought for a Bible to carry into action with him.

At Iuka, just before the terrific struggle of Corinth, an old man, wearinig a Leghorn hat and riding a mule, came into the Confederate camp. While making his way through the lines he had been guyed unmercifully by the soldiers, who supposed him some picturesque old farmer, or perhaps a hill hermit. He paid no attention to their remarks, but kept on until he reached headquarters. Next day word was passed around the soldiers that Bishop Cavanaugh of the Methodist church was in camp and would preach to those who cared to hear him.

Five thousand "rebels" assembled in the grove where the sermon was to be delivered. Great was the amazement of the soldiers when Bishop Cavanaugh proved to be the same man who rode through their lines on a mule. They had all heard of the celebrated churchman, but associated him with big cathedrals, pompous ways and a long robe. This strange being did not at all come up to their ideas of a bishop—not till he began talking. His voice was strong, earnest, melodious.

"Soldiers," he said, "I bring to you today a message from the God of Battles."

His sentences were short and terse, full of meaning. He spoke as if the men before him were in the anteroom of death, as, in truth, they were. Inside of five minutes he had the undivided attention of his immense audience. It was the first sermon the soldiers had heard for many a day, and it seemed providential that it should come on the eve of the great battle.

Bishop Cavanaugh spoke but a little while, when he lined, in the old-fashioned way the "old-fashioned" hymn:

"Before Jehovah's awful throne
Ye nations! bow with sacred joy;
Know that the Lord is God alone—
He can create, and He destroy!"

A tall artilleryman led off, and 5000 lusty voices followed in behind him. The melody of the sublime old hymn burst forth through the forest like a declaration from the Almighty. Bishop Cavanaugh had brought to the soldier a battle hymn of his own choosing, and the soldier had accepted it as a sacred offering on the altar of his duty.

"His sovereign power, without our aid,
Made us of clay, and formed us men,
And when like wandering sheep we strayed,
He brought us to His fold again!"

It is the battle hymn of Christ. It is great enough to fight for. It is grand enough to die for. Take it with you on the march; rest under it in the bivouac; let it swell aloft on the red field of battle! It comes as a beckoning hand to the striving; it is a radiant halo for the victor; a garland for the dying.

"God bless you, men. May He keep you true to the hymn, and whate'er the adventure of the conflict——"

B-o-o-m! B-o-o-m!

"——may He bring you safely into His heavenly home at last. And now may the grace, mercy and peace——"

B-o-o-m! C-r-r-r-a-s-h! C-r-r-r-a-s-h! B-o-o-m!

"——of the Lord Jesus Christ be with and keep you all——"

B-o-o-m! Crash! Crash! Crash!

"——Amen!"

"Attention! Fall in! Dress up there! Forward—march!"

Officers galloped about, fiercely delivering orders. The soldiers rushed for their guns. Artillery barked savagely. The battle was on.

"Yi-Yi-Yi-i-i-i-i-p-yip-yip-e-e-e-yi-yi!"

More terrible than the shrieking of shrapnel, the roar of cannon and the mournful notes of the whizzing minie balls was that screech, weird and unearthly, under which the "rebels" rushed forth to battle.

The beautiful autumn day was overcast by the pall rising from the conflict. Men shouted; riderless horses thundered across the field; cannoneers hung to their pieces like monkeys as they were hurried to the front on the wings of the wind; sulphur fumes filled the air, chokingly; the red death of the cannon flashed huridly in the gloom; quivering arms were raised to God.

. . . .

"Wide as the world is Thy command,
Vast as eternity Thy love,
Firm as a rock Thy truth must stand,
When rolling years shall cease to move!"

Far into the night the soldiers sang as they worked with the dead and wounded. The battlefield was lit with many camp fires. Here and there were small bodies of men, some holding up torches. They were burying the dead. Others were tenderly carrying the wounded to the ambulance tents. Here and there was a soldier kneeling beside some one passing under the rod, taking his message for the loved ones far away.

Under the trees, out on the stricken field—everywhere—flitted an old Leghorn hat, and under it a man in butternut garments. He carried with him a can of fresh water and a small tin cup. In his hand was a notebook, filled with the last words of those who had died under alien skies. Coming near to the edge of the timber, a weak hand was raised. The man in butternut clothes, alert to every signal, knelt beside the soldier.

"I've been an awful sinner, Parson."

"God's mercy hath no end, my son," murmured the old bishop as he took the hand of the soldier.

"When you rode through our lines the other morning I said 'there was Balaam on his ass.'"

"That is nothing."

"I've been guilty of blasphemy. I've played cards for money. The other day I struck down a man, and he was in the right. Will God forgive such wrong as that?"

The dying soldier looked eagerly into the kindly face bent over him. Out on the fields the soldiers were chanting the old hymn—the battle hymn of the Lord. A soft breeze had blown the smoke away and the stars shone bright. To the far north there was a sudden burst of light and a meteor started out in the immensity of the dark space above and traveled far to the southward, strewing brilliant fragments along the way. A soul was on its journey from earth to heaven.

"'I am the resurrection and the life'—laying a wrinkled hand upon the soldier's forehead—'he that believeth in me, though he were dead yet shall he live; and whosoever believeth in me shall never die.'"

The soldier looked up and smiled.

"It's all right, Parson," he said faintly, "I believe."

Grandma.

A PEN PORTRAIT OF A CHEERFUL OLD LADY.

By a Special Contributor.

SHE is the cheeriest little old soul in the world. Old? Dare I presume to call her old when her heart has always kept so wonderfully young? What are wrinkles and gray hairs, anyway, and what are eighty-one years if they be lightly borne?

Once when Grandma was ill and the neighbors who loved her looked at one another with wise shakings of the head and lugubrious expressions of countenance as though to say: "This is probably the last sickness the dear old soul will ever have!" And this one and that one, after a day or two of deliberation as to just whether Grandma would like currant jelly or orange marmalade, or if she could have her appetite tempted by a bowl of easily-digested chicken broth, and when on about the third or fourth day the neighbors had gone in to see her with their little offerings covered with paper napkins, and when, after going softly up the stairs—oh, so softly, for fear that even then the Grim Messenger might be waiting outside Grandma's bedroom door for Grandma——

A well-known laugh rang out, perhaps a little weak and quavery, but easily recognizable as Grandma's very own, and a gay little quavering voice called out cheerily to the neighbors' expressed surprise at seeing her up and dressed and sitting in her own old rocker: "I tell 'em the folsk'll have to come a-running if they want to see Grandma in bed!" And then again that laugh of hers!

"Currant jell? And chicken soup? My, I just guess I will eat 'em! And that bouquet of pansies! Just what I need to pin onto my kimono! Here, Elnory, you pin 'em on. My, but they're pretty—just like little faces, ain't they?"

Grandma rambled on in her pleasant fashion. "Sick? Well, they say I was pretty considerable sick for a little spell, but landy! here I am up again, wrapped in a crazy quilt with bedroom slippers on and a hot-water bag to my feet! Well, I'm thankful for small mercies—glad I've got a crazy quilt to be wrapped up in and a nice fancy pair of red and pink and blue and yellow bedroom slippers to keep me warm. Landy! When I saw those slippers on the Christmas tree and Santa Claus came and gave 'em to me I busted out a-laughing! I couldn't imagine myself with 'em on, yet here I am a-wearing 'em. No one ever knows what's going to happen, do they? I never dreamed I'd ever put 'em on, but I love every single stitch of 'em, for my great-granddaughter knit 'em on purpose for me.

"When will I be downstairs? Why, mercy me! I'm fixing to make me an onion bed next Saturday when Jimmy can be home from school to help me. Every single spring of my life since I was a girl I've made me an onion bed. And this little sick spell ain't a-going to stop me. Elnory bought me the onion sets yesterday, and there's more'n I need. You can have what's left over, if you want. And lettuce—ain't lettuce the prettiest thing you ever saw a-growing? I just look forward to seeing those rows of curly green leaves pushing up through the brown dirt. All my life I've loved a lettuce bed, and I love a nice row of cabbages, too.

"Do you know where I can get me some cabbage plants to set out? They seem to be scarce this year. You do? Old man Davis's got some to sell, did you say? Some to give away! Well! I say it's a shame to let 'em go to waste. My! I wish I could hurry up and get downstairs!"

Grandma frowned and looked down at herself with evident disapproval. One could almost say that Grandma's tired and feeble body was just then disgusting to the bright, eager spirit within—the real Grandma who longed to be up and doing.

"Well," she went on with a little sigh and a smile, "after all it's kind o' nice to set here and be waited on and visit with the neighbors. I believe these little sick spells are sent by the Lord for our own good, and maybe for other people's good, too. I believe we'd never know how many good friends we've got or how much they think of us if we didn't have to lay by and be waited on once in a while.

"I know what I'm talking about, yes, I do. I'm past 81 years old, and I've been a healthy woman all my life, but whenever I was sick I've found out something about somebody that was just beautiful. I've heard tell that if you have to wait on anybody that's sick and helpless you'll get to loving that person in spite of yourself, and I believe it's true. I've seen them that was called cranky, and was cranky, get just as good and kind and tender when they've been doing for me, as an angel.

"You see a lot of these trained nurses nowadays, and I do think they're awful neat and pretty in their striped dresses and white aprons, and all that I've seen have good faces, but I'm old-fashioned, I guess. I like to have the neighbors come in and do for me. I like to have 'em bring the babies along and let 'em set on my bed while their mothers slick up the house or fix me something to eat.

"The blessed babies! It's like a healing stream just to look into their dear little faces. And I like to have the high-school girls come in and set awhile, and bring their school books along and study. And I want they should study out loud. I quit going to school and got married when I was 15, and I never got as far as French or Latin and the other things that girls study these days. I don't know Latin from French, but I do enjoy hearing 'em both."

After a little rest, Grandma went on. "And I love to have the boys come in, too. Any reason I can't set here and darn the holes in a sweater or a pair of football stockings? They know they ain't imposing on Grandma when they bring 'em in to be mended, and I like to do it. I've promised Tom I'll go to the next football game with him. I'm going, too. I guess I know whether I'm too old or not."

That is the secret of Grandma's wonderful youth. She has never grown rusty. Her vital interest in everything up-to-date keeps old age at bay, and she is well posted about the doings of the world. No business man gleans from the daily paper half as much as she. Her grandsons bring from the public library not only the latest novels and the best magazines, but scientific periodicals as well. She sympathizes keenly with Guy's electrical bent, and is delighted with the electric bell which he rigged up at the head of her bed. Indeed, it was that little bell with which Grandma had summoned help when she was taken ill in the night.

She loves the talking machine which a neighbor boy brought up to her room to entertain her with, and she played many a merry game of checkers with still another boy as she sat propped up in bed.

At last Grandma grew drowsy, and the neighbors rose softly to leave. She roused herself. "You've done me good," she said. "I'm much obliged for the things to eat, and these pansies. And you tell old man Davis to save me some cabbage plants. I'll send Tom over for 'em in a few days. Tell him not to throw them away, for Grandma wants 'em. I intend to have many a good boiled dinner out of that cabbage patch. The doctor says it was eating too hearty of boiled dinner that brought on this spell, and maybe it was. But while we live let us live, is what I say. And these little sick spells, as I said before, do us a sight of good, and other folks, too.

"Well, I'll be over with my patchwork some day next week. They can't keep Grandma cooped up here much longer. Oh, what do you think? I'm a-going out riding with the doctor! In his new automobile! And wear my great-granddaughter's new sky-blue automobile veil tied over my ears to keep my bunnit on! And her stylish new military cape a-top of my warm blanket shawl. And they needn't go soft and easy for me. The faster the better, as long as we don't get arrested. I would be ashamed to get arrested at my age, wouldn't I?"

She laughed her jolly little shaky laugh, and waved one little old hand to a passing schoolboy down in the street. Then she turned again to the departing neighbors for one last sally.

"Don't you be a-pickin' out suitable hymns for my funeral, or savin' your white posies to put on me. I'm going to live till I'm a hundred if the Lord'll help me. I'm willing to do my part, and I believe He'll do His if it's right for me to live that long."

And as the neighbors went down the stairs, they said to one another: "Well, if she does live to be a hundred she'll never be a burden to anybody—Grandma won't!"

A Statesman.

Shortly after Mr. Gladstone's death, a local politician delivered an address upon the life of the statesman before a school. When he had finished, he said: "Now, can any of you tell me what a statesman is?" A little hand went up, and a little girl replied: "A statesman is a man who makes speeches." "Hardly that," answered the politician, who loved to tell this story. "For instance, I sometimes make speeches, and yet I am not a statesman." The little hand again went up. "I know," the answer came triumphantly, "a statesman is a man who makes good speeches!"—[Christian Register.

The Guest on the Trail.

HOW SPOTTED ROBE WAS OUTWITTED BY A CREE.

By James Willard Schultz,

Author of "My Life as an Indian."

FOR a number of years in the time of the buffalo, Joseph Kipp & Co. conducted a large trading post on the Missouri about 200 miles below Fort Benton, Mont. Here they got the trade of the Blackfeet, amounting to several thousands of buffalo robes a season. The Crows, however, would not come that far north of the Yellowstone, although at the time there was treaty of peace in force between them and the former tribe. The result was that the company built a post for the Crow trade on Flat Willow Creek, a stream midway between the Missouri and the Yellowstone, and placed one of their most trusted employés, Eli Guardipe, in charge of it. His assistants were Dan Fitz Patrick and Skunk Cap, the latter a half-blood, and a Blackfoot boy named Apsi (The Arrow) and myself, also a boy at that time. The men were contented enough; they loved to swap sugar and tobacco, ammunition, and trade cloth and beads for buffalo robes, and jest and haggle with the Indians over the price for their furs. But trading-post life palled upon Apsi and me. The evenings were well enough, when we sat before the great fireplace roasting buffalo tongues and listening to the older men's tales of stress and adventure, but in the daytime the big sunlit plains and blue-sided mountains were always calling us. Eli appreciated how we felt, and was a generous master; more than once when we were really needed inside he would make the excuse that the meat supply was low and send us out to kill more.

An unexpectedly heavy trade three or four days in succession lowered our stock of ammunition so much that it became necessary to get more out from the Missouri River post without delay. Here was another chance for us to get away from the routine of barter. It was Skunk Cap who should have gone after the stuff, but Eli listened to our pleading, and after some hesitation consented that we should go in his place. When we found how we were to go, the outlook for a care-free jaunt across the plains was certainly clouded; he said that we would have to take a two-horse team and wagon, and haul ten bales of buffalo robes in to the main post. I never knew a plainsman who liked to drive a team; Apsi and I despised a wagon; decided to take one saddle horse and drive the bumpety, backbreaking vehicle by turns.

We started very early one cold, still day. At the last moment Apsi's mother and sister decided that they wanted to visit in the Blackfeet camp for a time, so we hustled their bedding and sacks of what-not aboard, and they perched themselves on top of the load. It was a load for the two grass-fed horses. The ten bales of robes weighed all of a ton, and including the live freight, there was probably 2500 weight in all. The going was good over the hard frozen level plain, but every time we struck a snow-filled coulee we had trouble. There was often a lot of shoveling to do, and once the wagon got stuck in a cut bank coulee, and the whole load had to be taken off before it could be drawn out. As the day waned, it was plain that we were going to be late getting to Big Crooked Creek, the midway camping-place between the two posts. As agreed upon, Apsi rode the saddle horse in the morning, I in the afternoon, but neither of us got any fun out of it. The road was so bad that we both stayed close to the wagon, not once leaving it to hunt the game almost constantly in sight.

Late in the afternoon, upon topping a rise in the plain we sighted something far off on the trail that drew our closest attention. It looked like a person sitting down and closely wrapped in a robe, but it didn't seem possible that any one would be out on the winter plain afoot. There certainly was no horse in sight.

"It is nothing but a big eagle sitting there," declared Otahki (White Weasel Woman,) Apsi's mother. Her eyes were not so good as ours.

"It is nothing but a pile of rocks marking the trail," said Paiota.

"Your eyes are all right for some purposes, Sister," Apsi said, "for threading a needle and that sort of thing, but out here they tell untruths to you. That object over there is a man. A Blackfoot or Crow who has in some way lost his horse.

The three continued to argue until we drew near enough to discern beyond a doubt that it was a person. By the appearance of the hair we knew that it was a man, but until we were right on him he sat stone-still, concealing all of his person below the eyes in the robe close wrapped around him. Naturally, we had our rifles ready for instant use. The team became frightened at the strange object and stopped, fidgeting and trembling, and still the man sat there immovable in the trail, looking at us steadily over the edge of his robe. The situation was uncanny; I heard Paiota give a little wail of distress. Otahki cried: "Na-ye-yah! na-ye-yah! na-ye-yah!"—the woman's exclamation of fear.

Still the person did not move; the horses began to jump in their traces, and Apsi told me to do something. I poked my rifle straight out at the figure and yelled—lest he should be deaf: "Ni-pwo-aht!" (Arise!)

And perhaps, too, I shouted that loud to strengthen my own position; I really had some fear of the sphinx-like figure.

At my command the man slowly got up on his feet and allowed his robe to fall open. He was dressed in buffalo leather clothing, and had a sawed-off, Hudson Bay Company flint-lock fuke stuck in his belt. Three tattooed lines on the chin told us that he was a Cree, and therefore an enemy of the Blackfeet. I may as well explain here that these two tribes are Algonquin, but they have been so long separated from the parent stock that their languages are entirely different except in grammatical structure. Neither will believe that they are of common origin. After the advent of the Hudson Bay Company in the Northwest, a sort of treaty was made between them so that they could both trade at the company's post. The result was that they frequently camped together, and there were even intermarriages during successive intervals of peace. Many of the Crees learned the language of the Blackfeet, but the latter never spoke Cree, nor any foreign language. Regarding all other tribes as their inferiors, they considered it beneath their dignity to speak the despised tongues. The Blackfeet always were a haughty and arrogant people. At the time of my story there was bitter war between them. Several years before, where the town of Lethbridge, Alberta, now stands, the Crees had attacked a Blackfeet camp and been repulsed with the loss of 200 of their number, and there had been no subsequent renewal of peace.

We were surprised to see that this man was a Cree. Apsi made a move to raise his rifle and shoot him, but Otahki seized his arm and ordered him to listen. The Cree had raised both hands, the sign for peace, and was saying in understandable Blackfoot: "Have pity on me. I am very poor; very weak and hungry."

At once Otahki's generous heart took compassion on him, and she shook her son's arm harder. "He says that he is weak and hungry," she pleaded, as if Apsi had not heard. "Now, you be still! I am going to give him food."

With one eye on the boy, she rummaged in a sack and brought forth some dried meat and back fat, and leaning over handed it down to the man, who came eagerly forward to receive it, and at once tore a great mouthful from one of the thin flakes.

Apsi plied him with questions, which he answered between bites with seeming truthfulness. The gist of it was that he had left the north country early in the summer with four companions, to make a raid in the south against the strange and wealthy tribes of that land. They had succeeded in getting away with a fine band of horses from one big camp, but on the back trail they had been surprised by a hunting party of another tribe, who killed his companions. He had escaped by riding to the edge of a dense forest, then leaving the animal and hiding in the depths of the woods until night, when he managed to elude the enemy and continue his way northward. After that, he told us, he had never been lucky enough to get another horse, and working his way homeward had suffered much from the cold, and lately from hunger, as his ammunition had given out. He claimed that for the last five days not a mouthful of food had passed his lips.

"Did you see any people back to the south of us?" I asked.

He grinned as he replied: "I saw the Crow camp and the little fort from which you have probably come. I was there last evening, and would have taken a horse, were it not that I had no rope, and could find no animal dragging one."

"Well, we are going to camp over there on Big Crooked Creek," said Apsi, as he impatiently hit the off-team horse. "You can follow and camp with us if you wish to."

The Cree probably understood why he was not asked to ride, and walked leisurely in the trail of the wagon now rolling rapidly down the long slope to the creek. It was because we wanted to have a chance to talk about him. We reached the camp ground half an hour ahead of him, and had ample time for the purpose. It was agreed that we would take no chances with him. To make sure that none of our horses would be missing in the morning, Apsi was to remain awake the first half of the night and I the latter half.

Even in summer, Big Crooked Creek was a miserable camping-place. The water was alkaline; the low banks afforded little protection from the wind, and there was no fuel except a few buffalo chips, and roots of sage that burned like tinder and were gone. While Apsi and I slung harnesses and saddle from the horses, hoppled their front feet and turned them loose to graze, the women gathered what fuel they could find and made a very small fire. The Cree presently came, and we all huddled around the little blaze. A kettle of meat was set on to boil, and when it was ready, a pot of tea was brewed. These and a few hardtack furnished the simple meal. The meat was cut in thin strips and boiled only a few minutes; where one lives largely on meat, that is by far the most healthful and in the long run, most appetizing, way of cooking it.

The Cree ate voraciously, and drank all alone a second brewing of tea. Afterward, when Otahki filled and lighted her pipe and offered him a turn at it, he drew the smoke into his mouth greedily, and over his face stole the most perfect expression of fulfilled longing that I have ever seen on a human countenance. He was so happy that he couldn't keep still, and words were inadequate to express his feelings. He suddenly broke out singing, and his wordless song was the weirdest thing I had ever heard. In after years, when we came to trade with the Crees, I heard it often, and always as on that night it made me think of the aurora borealis; it rose and fell sharply just as the rainbow-like rays of that northern mystery dance and flame in the sky. I doubt not that it is the Cree's veneration of its dazzling and awful beauty, put into wordless yet descriptive song. There is really much of this in Indian music. The Blackfoot buffalo song, for instance, exactly describes the majestic and ponderous movements of a huge bull; and the antelope song is like that animal, quick in movement, full of abrupt stops.

"Well, where are you going now?" Apsi asked the Cree when he ceased singing.

"I am returning to my people," he replied. "You are going to the Big River. I would like to go along with you."

"You forget that we are Blackfeet," said Ap[illegible] "and so of course your enemy. We here will [illegible] you, but where we are going is the whole trib[illegible] people, and some of them would kill you at [illegible]

"Ah! So the Blackfeet are camped over the[illegible] river," he exclaimed. "That is good. I will [illegible] in their lodges and rest until green-grass time, [illegible] go on to my people. I am tired; I need a long [illegible]

He noticed our looks of surprise, and [illegible] "No, the Blackfeet will not harm me; my mother's [illegible]ter is the wife of your Bull's Back Fat. He wa[illegible] good to me in my young days, and will make [illegible] come now."

That was true enough. With us for an [illegible] could safely enter the camp, and be safe there [illegible] the protection of his relative. His risk would [illegible] continuing his journey; he would certainly [illegible] scalp if some of the young men should come up[illegible] away out on the plain. I mentioned that to him, [illegible] with a careless wave of the hand he replied: "[illegible] Back Fat will give me a horse and help me to [illegible] in the night while the camp is asleep."

It was a bitterly cold night, windless and clear, [illegible] stars shining so bright and close that, as Paiota [illegible] served, it seemed as if one could reach up and [illegible] them out of the sky. Our little pile of fuel was [illegible] consumed, and we prepared to sleep. Mother [illegible] daughter made themselves a warm nest in the [illegible] Apsi cut open a bale of robes and threw out three [illegible] four to the Cree, who bedded down beside the [illegible]ing coals of the fire. Apsi and I laid our beds [illegible] side close to the wagon, and when we were into [illegible] he whispered: "I don't think that this Cree [illegible] any harm, but I'll watch him. You sleep now, [illegible] when the Seven People mark the middle of the [illegible] I'll wake you for your turn."

It could not have been more than 7 o'clock when [illegible] lay down, so I was not at all sleepy, nor did I [illegible] hours, according to the Seven People, as the [illegible]feet call the big dipper. During the night it turns [illegible]pletely over in its course through the sky, and is [illegible] the timepiece of all the people of the out-of-[illegible] Some there are who become nervous and fretful if [illegible] fail to sleep as soon as they lie down. It was [illegible]ent with me in those days: I was well pleased [illegible]main awake and think over the incidents of our [illegible] adventurous life. This night, as usual, the big [illegible] were howling mournfully all around us; I loved to [illegible] them. It was pleasant, also, to hear the horses [illegible] ripping the short, dry, but rich buffalo grass fro[illegible] frozen ground in huge mouthfuls. It came to me [illegible] I was privileged above all other boys in the [illegible] There were my old schoolmates and chums, [illegible] Johnson, Frank Owen, Arthur Willard—how they [illegible] enjoyed trapping muskrats, fishing, the killing of [illegible] little red squirrels! What wouldn't they give to [illegible] my experience! To live with wild Indians who [illegible] friendly, and fight others who were enemies; to [illegible]der in a country of countless game—buffalo, elk, [illegible] bears, antelope and deer and mountain sheep. I [illegible] them that they would never know the joy of it all.

And then I thought of the lone Cree we had [illegible] across, footing it northward over the winter plain [illegible] managing, without the means to kill food, nor [illegible] covering than his worn buffalo robe, to keep going [illegible] survive the terrible blizzards and piercing cold. [illegible] indeed were the white men who could do that!

At last I did fall asleep; by the last glance I ha[illegible] the constellation, it must have been all of 11 o'c[illegible] When Apsi awakened me by a punch in the side, I [illegible] as though I had slept only a few minutes, but I [illegible] by our timekeeper that it was past midnight.

"Kyi! I am going to sleep," he whispered; [illegible] watch him now!"

Answering that I heard him, I turned over fa[illegible] the Cree. The stars gave sufficient light to enable [illegible] to see the outline of his form under the large [illegible] robes. I fancied that I could hear his breathing. [illegible] that I was obliged to keep awake I felt sleepy, [illegible] presently, without realizing it, fell asleep. I awoke [illegible] a start and was ashamed of myself. A glance at [illegible] Seven People proved that the nap had been short; [illegible] Cree was still in his bed, so all was well. "No m[illegible] this napping," I muttered; "I will, I will keep [illegible]

The next thing I knew, the women were buil[illegible] fire and Apsi was getting out of bed; day had [illegible] and I saw that I had slept long and sound. As I [illegible] up, Apsi grinned knowingly, and said in a low [illegible] "Oh, never mind, Brother, the watched slept [illegible] sounder than the watcher. See; he still sleeps."

It was true; the Cree still lay stretched out, [illegible] head covered, and I felt relieved, yet angry at [illegible] for having failed to do what was expected of me [illegible] gathered shivering around the little fire, and the [illegible] soon announced that we could eat; where[illegible] shouted: "Ni-pwo-aht, Sai-i-kwan!" (Arise, [illegible]

There was no answer, so he shouted again, a[illegible] again, but our guest never stirred. The though[illegible] to us all that the man was dead. Apsi ran over [illegible] bed, jerked off the top robe and staggered [illegible] a cry of astonishment; in place of the man a [illegible] rolled-up robe was laid there to represent the [illegible] form.

"Na-ye-yah! Na-ye-yah!" the women wailed.

"The horses! He has taken our horses!" cried [illegible]

We both made a dive for our rifles, ran to [illegible] of the nearest rise and looked all around, and the[illegible] woefully at each other; not a horse was in [illegible]

The women had followed us as fast as [illegible] could run, and now came to where we stood. [illegible] was no need for them to ask if the horses [illegible] sight; our faces told the story. Otahki began [illegible] down the vengeance of the sun upon the thief, [illegible] suddenly stopped and laughed so hard that [illegible] obliged to sit down. "Oh," she said, "think [illegible] wasted my pity on that man. I felt so sorry [illegible] starving and cold and afoot here on the winter [illegible] that I would have gone without food myself [illegible]

The Love of Lucia.

THE SOMBER STORY OF A YOUNG MEXICAN GIRL.

By a Special Contributor.

N an obscure corner of New Mexico, well aside from the tempestuous and e'en profane path of the professional tourist, stands the ancient Mexican pueblo of Palo Blanco, forlorn, well-nigh forgotten fruit of a mission seed planted by the Franciscan fathers in their incursions against enemies of church and king, about the time that the tide of Spanish occupation of the Territory was already on the ebb.

Planted on the bleak, sloping hillside, the low-walled, crumbling adobe houses cling like a colony of mud swallows' nests, their monotonous gray contour picked out by ropes of scarlet peppers festooned beneath the eaves to dry; while the conical mud bake ovens, smoothed and plastered with infinite care, hover close to each domicile, like young lurking near the protecting flanks of the parent.

From the center of the little plaza rises the battered tower and wooden cross of the old mission church, beneath whose walls have knelt generations of the faithful. Almost in the shadow of the church stands the modest two-room casa given over to the use of the padre. At the time of which I am writing there had but recently come from the seminary at Santa Fé the young Padre Antonio, to minister to the spiritual welfare of the little flock gathered within the narrow precincts of Palo Blanco, in the place of good old Padre Estaben, who had been gathered to his forefathers after many years of faithful, if somewhat somnolent, attention to his people.

Padre Antonio entered upon his duties in the fine flush of youthful enthusiasm, and for a time labored among his parishioners with a relentless zeal that caused those worthies to open their beady eyes in consternation, and obliged them, perforce, to galvanize into something very like activity in matters devotional. And there were lamentations and sighs a-plenty for the good old days of Padre Estaben, when one could comfortably attend to the salvation of one's soul with befitting calmness and leisure. But, with it all, life moved inertly and sluggishly in Palo Blanco, as if quite conscious of being stranded in the eddy, while the broad, promising stream of early enterprise and daring swept on and off, leaving only vague memories of more stirring days. And the padre failed to remember that the floods of golden sunshine beat down unceasingly in the square of the little plaza; and that there are always an abundance of the seductive corn-husk cigarettes, whatever else may be lacking in the Mexican domestic economy, while the soft words "poco tiempo" dwell eternally on the lips of all, from the greatest hombre in the village to the smallest muchachito tumbling naked, in his father's door. In the face of this, it need not be said that by imperceptible degrees the old régime of delightful irresponsibility was gradually reëstablished, and peace and blissful stagnation once more held sway.

Worst of all, however, a bewildering change crept over the stalwart young padre himself. The fatal indiscretion of temporizing with duty seemed to have seized upon him. His fervor degenerated into spasmodic efforts that deceived no man, least of all his own accusing conscience, and the padre's flock wagged their shaggy heads knowingly over the curling smoke of endless cigarettes, while a few of the boldest spirits ventured to comment, in cracked whispers, on the peculiar coincidence of the padre's dereliction and the betrothment of pretty Lucia Montoya to her brother's boon companion, the good but stupid Luis Lopez.

It had not escaped the sharp eyes of the old wiseacres that motherless Lucia's dark eyes brightened and her cheeks glowed like a crimson-hearted flower when the padre accosted her—manifestations of maidenly confusion that the most ardent advances from Luis had failed to elicit. And alas! thus ruthlessly evoked by careless, desecrating hands from the tender shadowy outlines of a pure passion scarce conceived, grew the pitiful little romance whose perplexities found only fitting solution in its somber ending.

Meanwhile the weeks came and went till summer had spent itself, and chill October was upon them. The padre still went among his people with pale, set face, looking, in his shabby black cassock, more like a priestly apparition than a creature of flesh and blood; while the soft color faded from Lucia's pretty cheeks, and the haughty little head drooped like a tender blossom beaten down by the hot fury of the tempest.

Night had stolen down upon the swallows' nests from the gloomy cañon, which yawned behind the little settlement like some dusky antediluvian monster, unwinding its tortuous length ere it engulfed its prey. The gentle drone and pipe of human life were stilled for the moment. A hint of frost permeated the crisp air, rendering grateful the prospect of a cheerful, snapping fire to the belated home comer, as he hurried through the thickening shadows.

At the house of the padre the heavy wooden shutters were drawn across the small square windows. Little flickering tongues of light crept through the cracks, and fell aslant the rough adobe walls. Within, a ruddy pitch fire crackled and glowed upon the hearth, throwing into relief the meager furnishings of the room. Upon the clay floor were thrown a few sheepskin rugs, while some prints of Our Lady were tacked on the gray [illegible] walls, their crude coloring softened and toned by the uncertain touch of the flames.

In front of the fire sat the tall young padre, his dark head bent wearily on one hand, his heavy eyes fixed on the leaping flames, as though conning a bitter lesson in their depths.

A timid knock at the outer door caused him to start impatiently, with a half-smothered word of protest. Nevertheless, he called out, somewhat ungraciously: "Enter!" adding bitterly to himself, with a hard smile that sat ill on the gentle mouth: "Yea, even though the heart be breaking, and the very soul writhing beneath its burden of despair, one must not deny one's self to one's people. They must not be refused the exquisite pleasure of pouring into their padre's ear the all-important information that the godless Juan hath stolen lame Pedro's store of chile, or that Jesus hath sorely beaten his spouse for unseemly gadding and gossiping."

The door swung slowly back, and for an instant a slender, girlish figure hesitated on the threshold. A startled exclamation fell from the padre's lips, and his eyes burned like twin fires as he came toward the girl with outstretched hands. Suddenly he paused. The eager light died from his face; his arms fell heavily to his sides, and in a dull, strained voice he said: "Lucia, my child, what brings thee here alone at this hour? Surely thou couldst have waited till morning, and sought me at the mission."

The girl timidly advanced, and threw back the rebosa that was muffled about her head.

"Oh, Padre, do not chide me!" she cried piteously, taking another step toward the priest, who stood gloomily regarding her. "My misery has driven me to you. I could not rest till I had sought you. I came to beg—to implore—you to intercede with my brother José. For I cannot—indeed I cannot—marry Luis. Oh, the horror of it will drive me mad!" She broke off abruptly with the cry of a hurt child, her slim brown hands clasped convulsively over her heaving, girlish bosom. The padre's face quivered, but he only said softly: "Poor little one! Has he again been persecuting thee in behalf of Luis Lopez?"

"Even so, Padre," faltered the girl, "and now he swears by all the saints that I may no longer put aside Luis, but that I must be his wife before another moon shall wane. Today he has gone down into the valley to barter for the herd of goats that is to be my dowry."

The padre did not reply at once, but turned from the seductive face with a gesture of despair. When at length he spoke, his words were strangely uncertain, as of one whose lips refused to move.

"Lucia mia, art thou quite certain that thou canst not do this thing? Think well before putting it from thee, child. Luis is a rough fellow, I grant, but he loves thee, Lucia, and will doubtless make a good husband."

He felt, rather than saw, the look of pained surprise that came over the sensitive face at his coldly-worded counsel, and he knew that the pretty eyes were filled with tears. Poor child, she had turned to him in her trouble, seeking for human love and sympathy, and all he could offer were chill words that fell like stones on the sad little heart.

Dios! but it flavored of the bitterness of death itself to plead the cause of another, when every fiber in his rebellious being cried out against the cruel, mocking words, and demanded that he open wide his strong arms to the fragile, passion-tossed bit of womanhood before him.

But the slender little figure was drawn proudly up, and with gentle dignity she replied: "Pardon, Padre, but you have not understood me. My heart is not with Luis, and therefore I cannot consent to be his wife. No—my heart is not with Luis." The delicate head drooped as the words fell naively from the red lips, till only a mass of glossy black braids were visible.

He could not misinterpret her meaning—it was too pitifully clear. He read the loving woman-soul bared so innocently for his reverent gaze, and his heart was wrung with a new and bitterer anguish at the knowledge that the storm that devastated his own soul had touched the fair petals of the human flower before him.

Gripping the heavy crucifix that hung by his side he strove to put aside the temptation that assailed his tortured being. Through the bloodless lips came the half-articulated words: "Madre de Dios! Have pity—have mercy. Thy unworthy servant is but human!"

The face he raised in supplication was seamed and gray, like that of an aged man. He had fasted, and prayed unceasingly to be delivered from the spell of the red-lipped Mexican girl. He had lain prostrate on the adobe floor before the little tinsel-covered altar night after night, till the cold gray dawn had laced the heavens, writhing in an agony of spirit that distilled the bitter beads of sweat on his forehead. Was it then in vain, he cried out, that he had so crucified his soul?

For an instant the carefully-inculcated doctrines of priesthood wavered in the balance; then, with an inexplicable revulsion of feeling, he reached blindly out, drew the life of his life to his breast.

How long they stood in close embrace they knew not. The dying flames touched the familiar objects in the room with a weird light. The wooden shutter rattled with an ominous sound, and Antonio roused himself as one from a dream. He gently put Lucia's clinging hands from him, and in a voice that fell upon his ears as that of another, said gently: "Dear heart, thou must leave me now. Already hast thou lingered far too long. I could not forgive myself if ought of evil should happen thee. We will talk of our future again, but now it must be good night."

The girl replied by winding her bare arms around his neck, and drawing the dark head down in a caress that brought his heart's blood to his lips. The mantilla she wore slipped from her shoulders, and, as he bent to readjust it with loving touch, he was horrified to see the glowing cheek turn white and rigid under his touch. A sudden premonition of impending evil chilled his blood. His hands fell mechanically from their task, and following the direction in which Lucia's terrified eyes were fastened, he turned to face José Montoya, the brother and protector of the stricken woman who cowered against his side.

For one suffocating instant they faced each other, the padre drawn up to his magnificent height, pale but unfaltering, José's heavy countenance distorted by conflicting passions. A sinister smile curled the corner of the Mexican's mouth, and, advancing a step he coolly leveled his revolver full at the defenseless breast of the padre.

"Die, seducer of women!" he cried, in a voice thin and cracked with rage. "Die like the dog thou art!"

Then came a blinding flash, a deafening report, and the sound of a falling body. When the smoke eddied away in little curling wreaths the young padre lay face down upon the floor, and a tiny ribbon of crimson was stealthily threading its way over the rough clay.

Lucia knelt by the motionless figure, calling his name in piteous accents, and kissing with passionate frenzy the limp hands that had been so strong and tender such a pitifully short time before. José strode forward, still holding his smoking weapon in his hand, and seizing the girl by the shoulder brutally ordered her to cease her driveling, and come with him. The slender young thing cowered for a brief instant over the body of her lover, then a look of cunning stole over the tear-stained face. One small hand moved cautiously to the bosom of her blouse. A slender thread of light gleamed for an instant in her upraised hand, then buried itself in her side. That was all.

Today all that remains to tell of the despairing little drama, so tragically enacted in the lonely New Mexican plaza is two broken mounds on the gray, wind-swept side of a rocky foothill—unmarked, save by a branching cactus, that rears its thorny head in mute protection; unwept but for the scarlet petals dropped like tears of blood by the faithful sentinel.

Dogs For Defense.

A very interesting congress has just taken place in Brussels in connection with the competitions for dogs trained for the defense of their master and his property and for police dogs.

The programme under discussion was divided into two sections, that for dogs privately trained for the defense of their master and his property, and that for police dogs. In the former section dogs of all kinds are used and the matter of training is individual and according to the owner's personal idea. Belgium has an unenviable notoriety in the matter of crime (probably due to its lax punishments,) and a solitary pedestrian in a lonely, unfrequented neighborhood has often a poor chance even in daylight unless armed.

At night even the outskirts of the towns and villages are unsafe, and this is why so many men whose occupations oblige them to face the risk of attack train their dogs to defend them. This idea has enormously developed of late years in Belgium, and competitive trials are now numerous, which with their good prizes and the high sums for which trained dogs are often sold greatly encourage the breeding of suitable dogs.

Many men in Brussels keep a dog solely as a defense for going to and from work, and on any large vacant space of ground one is sure to find some man training his dog with this purpose in view.

The dogs used solely for defense and police dogs, of whom is required a more subtle intelligence, must for their own safety learn certain lessons in common. For instance, they must refuse to accept food from any one, although their master may not be present to restrain them.

Another item settled on the programme was the height of the jumps required of the dogs. Both defense and police dogs must be ablo to jump a fence boarding at least seven feet high, with a maximum ordinarily of eight feet, though some dogs can jump nearly ten feet. With a ditch of over seven feet to take first, the hedge must be at least three feet high, and the animals, which jump at the word of command, must come back over the obstacle the instant they are called.

The dog's capability of guarding his master's property is always tested by means of an individual dressed like an "apache," the point to be aimed at being that the dog will only attack him when he actually touches the property.—[Brussels correspondence London Standard.

The Gift and the Giver.

"A little more loaf with the crust!"
  Ever plead the suffering poor.
What are we doing to grant their quest
  And lighten what they endure?

Have we closed the door to the thought of love
  As it taps to some awful pain
Of a brother low in poverty,
  Too proud to cringe, complain?

"A little more loaf with the crust!"
  Will we halve our crust, if need?
So fill our hearts with o'erflowing love,
  Unasked, unsought, love's meed.

Oh, think how we war, are ever at war,
  O'er our brother and his crust,
While we know that love for our brother man
  Is the foe of accursed lust.

Oh, get it into our inner thought
  That life is to love, let live,
And so to our brother of the crust
  The softened heart we'll give.

"Lo, the Poor Indian."

A NATIONAL MEMORIAL TO THE "VANISHING RACE."

By a Special Contributor.

INDICATIONS are that before the termination of the present session of Congress the necessary legislation will be enacted providing for a national memorial to the North American Indian. The bill, which was introduced in the House by Representative Goulden of New York and in the Senate by Senator Depew, carries no appropriation, but provides that there shall be erected on some government reservation in the Harbor of New York, by Rodman Wanamaker and others, a suitable statue to the memory of the Indian. The bill further provides for the creation of a commission with full authority to select a site and an appropriate design and to contract for and superintend the erection of the monument.

The Indian, the original proprietor of the lordly domain out of which has been carved the greatest republic on earth, unquestionably has played a more prominent part in the pages of American history than any of the influences which we have commemorated in enduring marble and bronze, and yet, nowhere in the country has there been erected a fitting tribute to the First American.

There are a number of Indian monuments in the various States, prominent among them that of Sacajawea, the Indian girl who guided Lewis and Clark on the expedition which gave the Northwest to the world. A colossal statue of this Shoshone maiden stands in one of the public parks in Portland, Or., and the women of North Dakota are raising money to build a monument in her honor in their Capitol grounds at Bismarck. She was the guide and interpreter of the famous expedition, protecting the party from hostile Indians, securing for them food and horses when they had neither, and saving their records and lives at the risk of her own. Pocahontas, the savior of Capt. John Smith and the Virginia colony at Jamestown, has also been remembered by a monument recently completed, and in various towns throughout the country are statues in memory of individual Indians who served the early settlers in some way during pioneer days.

Probably the most fitting Indian memorial ever erected in this country was placed on the summit of an ancient burial mound of the Iroquois Indians near Otsego, N. Y. Upon the plain white marble slab is carved this most touching inscription:

White man, greetings! We, near whose bones you stand were Iriquois.

"The wide land which now is yours was ours.

"Friendly hands have given back to us enough for a tomb."

This plain stone was raised by the white man on whose land the burial mound rises.

The idea of a national memorial originated with Rodman Wanamaker of Philadelphia, who been a student of Indian affairs and who, believing Indians to be a vanishing race, financed two expe tions into the regions now occupied by the red order to obtain records that would be an to the present generation and a true history of and customs of the race for the benefit of to come.

There is a popular idea that the dollar is the nant chord in American life, and that this is larly true of our merchants and other captains dustry. It is pleasant, therefore, to be by the entrance of a merchant prince on a field mote as possible from commercial paths.

Ever since his Princeton days, Mr. Wanamaker been interested in the Indian, and in 1908 he expedition to the Northwest for the purpose of a permanent historical photographic record of the ners and customs, the home life, sports, games of the race. The great purpose of the trip was a picture that should be a classic on early history. The party traveled over 8000 miles, miles being made on horseback. Photographs tion pictures were made of the Indian on the wild animals that roam through his territory, dances, games, and daily life of the red man native heath. The Indians entered into the the undertaking with zest. They danced and native costumes, and records of their music tained.

The real difficulties of the expedition began attempt to reproduce Longfellow's beautiful Indian "Hiawatha." Hundreds of Indians were examined before proper selection could be made of the principal characters. The arrow-maker and wrinkled old Nokomis, Hiawatha and Minnehaha were at last selected. Minnehaha was represented by a Crow maiden of rare beauty. Three expeditions were made to the Big Horn Mountains to kill the deer which Hiawatha is represented as carrying to the tepee of Minnehaha, and a band of fifteen Indians were taken to an elevation of over 8000 feet, where amid the snow-clad peaks the famine scene was worked out.

The second expedition was made in 1909 for the purpose of making a moving picture of an old-time Indian council. By the enthusiastic coöperation of the United States Indian Office in Washington, there were assembled the aged and eminent chiefs from nearly all of the prominent reservations in the country in the Valley of the Little Big Horn in Montana. There a primitive camp was constructed of old-time tepees. The chieftains came dressed in their full war regalia, bringing with them guns, bows and arrows, tom-toms, coup sticks, war shirts and war bonnets. The old warriors rejoiced to put themselves as far back in the generation of the Indian manners and customs as memory and tradition could carry them, and under these conditions each chief told the story of his life with all its thrilling romance and tragedy.

A primitive council lodge was constructed by the Indians, and they lived over again one of their ancient councils. They built a smoke signal on the high hills, lifting at sunrise its tall, black column, calling the tribes together. As in old times runners were sent out. In answer to the runners and smoke signal, chiefs came from the Blackfeet tribe in the far north, where flowers border the snow on the mountainsides; across the fiery desert the Apaches rode from the south; from their lodges in the east came the war-like Sioux; from the far west the Cayuse and Umatillas, and chiefs from a host of other tribes. Majestically they dismounted and entered the council lodge.

When all the speeches had been made, a squaw from the Blackfeet tribe and two Cheyenne maidens, dressed in the full costumes of their people, served to the assembled chieftains bread and meat in a wooden bowl. This in the council answers an Indian communion. Chief Plenty Coos then lighted two long-stemmed sandstone pipes and passed one to his left and the other to his right. When all the Indians had smoked the council pipe, the two pipes were returned to the chief, refilled, and when smoked the second time became the pipe of peace. Without the mockery of speech chief looked into the face of chief, and then they filed through the doorway of the council lodge, facing a land without a horizon. On the broad plain, covered with brown prairie grass, veined with a swiftly-flowing river, girt about by somber ranges of hills, the chiefs mounted their horses and started on the long journey to their distant wigwams.

These expeditions served to deepen Mr. Wanamaker's interest in the Indian, and the idea of a national statue was a natural sequence. It should be a heroic monument placed at the mouth of New York Harbor. Standing at the gateway of the New World, arms outstretched in welcome, the colossal figure in bronze will be a constant reminder of the vanishing race to whom we are indebted for the great, free gift of a continent.

In May, 1909, a wonderful dinner was given at Sherry's, in New York, in honor of Buffalo Bill, who was entertaining the people of the metropolis with his Wild West Show. Gens. Miles, Wood, Porter and other valiant Indian fighters; Remington and Davenport, whose artistic portrayals of the red man are so familiar to us all, and other prominent men to the number of 200, were also present. It was during the after-dinner speeches that the subject of the statue was broached. The picturesque idea of perpetuating in bronze the vanishing race struck a popular chord, and it was soon discovered that although the suggestion was Mr. Wanamaker's, the sentiment which prompted it was continent-wide. Newspapers printed favorable comments. The President, Vice-President, Senators, Representatives, and numerous other statesmen, men prominent in financial circles and in every walk of life, all expressed their approval of the plan. Suggestions as to the design have been freely made, but it is the generally accepted idea that the most striking effect would be secured by a single gigantic figure, hands outstretched, to typify the welcome given the first white men to reach these shores. It is to be a typical American art work in subject and treatment, and in its recognition of the finer, better traits of the Indian, will serve in some measure as an appropriate, if tardy, act of justice.

The history of the white man's invasion of the Indian's domain is too well known to require comment. Generously the red men shared their food and homes with the newcomers, but as the white population increased, they were driven back foot by foot by the all-conquering tide of a superior civilization. From the Atlantic coast they were first forced back beyond the Alleghanies, and later to the shores of the great Father of Waters. When the immortal Sacajawea pointed out the path to the West, she pointed with prophetic finger, and at the signal from that faithful, outstretched hand, the gates of an empire swung open wide. Over the trail, deeply furrowed across the hearts of her people, came the followers of Lewis and Clark, men of dauntless spirit and iron will. With sublime endurance they met the privations of the perilous trail; over mountains rock-ribbed and precipitous, across burning desert wastes, starving, thirsting, scorched with the heat of midsummer, lashed with the frost-laden winds of midwinter, they drove back the red-skinned monarch of the land. From the Atlantic westward and from the Pacific eastward, the tides of civilization drove the Indian until there seemed no place left for him.

Then the generous government staked out reservations and confined them within their borders. One after another, as these lands became more valuable, the reservations have been opened to white occupancy, the tribes being condensed and forced into closer and closer quarters.

Some of the most powerful and pathetic appeals ever made in Washington have been made by chiefs of various tribes protesting against the ever-narrowing borders of their hunting grounds. Among the most forceful of these orators may be mentioned Chief Joseph of the Nez Perces. He had a deep sense of eternal righteousness and of the deadly wrongs his people suffered at the hands of white men. Driven from the hunting grounds of his fathers, moved back and forth over the country in spite of promises made by representatives of the government, he finally grew to understand the hopelessness of achieving his heart's desire, to return with his people to Wallowa Valley, though he never ceased to make his plea for justice.

Have you ever been in Wallowa, that beautiful valley of Winding Waters? It is America's Switzerland. Its lofty mountains rear their heads so high that a snow mantle rests there all the year round. Their feet are in lakes that rival Luzerne. Down the steep slopes, through narrow-walled cañons, where the sunlight never enters, the streams come rushing like cataracts. In their cold ripples, the gamey trout lurks expectant and eager to give battle for his life when the angler temps him with the hook. In the fall the salmon in countless numbers leap the waterfalls and are caught and dried by the Indians for winter food. On the forested slipes, in shadowy ravines, and over the rolling hills the deer and elk, the grizzly and the cinnamon bear, and the wary mountain sheep abound. It is a game paradise, with rich pastures for ponies.

It was in this valley that the grandfather of Chief Joseph welcomed the daring explorers, Lewis and Clark. Speaking of them, Joseph said: "They talked straight, and our people met them with a great feast. All the Nez Perces made friends with Lewis and Clark and promised to let them pass through the country and never to make war on white men. This promise the Nez Perces never broke.

Chief Joseph died a few years ago of homesickness, but many of his sayings are still remembered. Upon his surrender to Gen. Miles he said: "God made me an Indian, but not a reservation Indian. You might as well expect the river to run backward as that any man who was born free should be content when penned up and denied his liberty. Oh, let me be a free man! Free to travel, free to stop, free to work, free to trade where I choose, free to choose my own teachers, free to follow the religion of my fathers, free to think, talk and act for myself, and I will obey every law or submit to the penalty."

Many another chieftain made equally futile appeals against the overwhelming tide of civilization, but gone are the hunting grounds and battle fields; gone the wigwam and council fire. Where once the red man claimed a kingdom, farmhouses and villages, mills and factories dot the landscape. Where once upon the clear air rang out the cries of the war dance, or mingled with the winds of the forest drifted weird and low the chant of the braves, the laughter of white children at their play in the schoolyard or the peal of bells calling men to worship the white man's God ring out across the morning.

"A survival of the fittest," the practical man will say, and he may be right. From the viewpoint of close association with the red man, his faults are apt to be magnified and his virtues forgotten, but when the last member of the vanishing race shall have folded his blanket about him and passed beyond the Great Divide we may remember the Indian as he has ever been, brave, loyal, self-sacrificing, and honorable to a marked degree.

Gen. Miles, the veteran of many Indian wars, has said: "The whites have broken every treaty they ever made with the Indians, but the Indians never broke a treaty they made with the whites." Col. Cody, better known as Buffalo Bill, said: "I have known the Indian since I was a baby. I have known him in war and in peace, and I have known him to be always honorable in war or peace."

The commission provided for in the bill now before Congress is to consist of the chairman of the committees on Library of the House and Senate, the secretaries of State, War, Navy, and Interior, the United States Attorney-General, and Robert C. Ogden of New York. Mr. Wanamaker's original impulse was to furnish the money for the statue, but it is the general opinion that it should be a gift of the people of the entire country. Various societies and the tribes of the Order of Red Men throughout the country have already asked to be allowed to contribute to the fund, and as soon as the bill is passed, arrangements will be made to allow all who desire to take part in the movement.

A Church in a Rock.

In the quaint old German town of Oberstein an ancient church stands built in the great rock rising from the river. The front of the building is of stone, but the church itself is hollowed out of the rock and penetrates far into its heart. Tradition says that in the fourteenth century the Count of Oberstein, one of the old robber barons fell deeply in love with a beautiful young lady, the daughter of a neighboring knight.

His brother also sought the fair maiden's hand, and the two suitors had a violent quarrel. The upshot was that the count flung his hapless brother from the top of his castle wall, high up the precipitous cliff. Repenting of his awful deed, the count vowed that he would build a church where his brother's body first touched the ground. He did so, excavating the church in the rock; and tradition goes on to say a miraculous spring of clear water sprang from the crag as a token that heaven was appeased. This curious church is now the only Protestant place of worship in the town.—[Wide World Magazine.

The King's Physicians.

SOME INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT THE ROYAL DOCTORS.

From M.A.P.

IN all there are twenty-five physicians and surgeons attached to the royal household. Of these, however, four are appointed in Ireland and an equal number in Scotland, and would, in the event of their services being required, only be called upon to attend the King when the court happened to be in Ireland or Scotland.

There are five physicians altogether specially appointed to attend King Edward, but Sir Francis Laking, one of the physicians-in-ordinary, is His Majesty's most frequent medical adviser.

The King sees one of the household physicians every day; but the interview is a mere matter of form and lasts but a few minutes. The fact, however, that the interview has taken place is noted in the medical diary in charge of the physicians-in-ordinary, in which is kept a daily record of His Majesty's health.

His Majesty most happily enjoys extremely good health, and there are few of his subjects less liable to minor indispositions than the King. It is doubtful if King Edward, since his accession, excepting the occasion of his severe illness at the time of the coronation, has had to cancel 1 per cent. of his numerous public and private engagements on account of indisposition; this is a remarkably happy record when it is borne in mind that there are few days in the year, except when His Majesty pays his annual visit to Marienbad, that the King does not keep a number of social and public engagements.

In the event of the King suffering from any illness, however slight, which confines him to his room, one of the physicians-in-ordinary remains what is known as "on call" day and night. The physician on call must be ready to visit the King at a moment's notice. Usually he remains at his own house while on call, but if the illness were of at all a serious nature he would stay at Buckingham Palace, or wherever the King might be.

When the King's indisposition is sufficiently serious to confine him to his room, he is visited three times a day by one of the physicians-in-ordinary; if confined to his room for a longer period than forty-eight hours, bulletins must be signed by two physicians, and a copy of each bulletin is entered in the medical diary.

Should His Majesty not be quite convalescent after forty-eight hours, the bulletins would, in addition to being issued to the public, be wired to the chief courts in Europe.

All medicines made up for the King or Queen are most carefully checked in the dispensing department. Double the required quantity is made up, and one-half is then carefully analyzed by the checker, so that it is literally impossible for any mistake to occur in the compounding of the medicine. Medicine for royalty is always made up in new bottles, and no bottle is ever used twice.

In addition to the physicians and surgeons-in-ordinary appointed to attend the King, there is also a physician to the household, a position held by Sir Thomas Barlow, who attends any resident members of the royal establishment that may require his advice or aid.

The nurses who minister to royalties when they are ill are usually selected from a well-known nursing home in the West End. A nurse at Buckingham Palace is treated with extreme kindness and consideration. There are always two to attend on a royal patient, each remaining on duty for only four hours at a time.

A comfortable private sitting-room is provided for the nurses; they are allowed to order exactly what they please for meals, and one of the palace servants is detailed especially to wait on them.

Her Majesty, of course, takes the greatest possible interest in the nursing profession, and has done a great deal to raise it and elevate the whole tone of it. The Queen is a firm believer in the value of fresh air, both in good or ill health, and the rooms at Buckingham Palace—and indeed at all the royal residences—are kept extremely well ventilated, and the air in them is always fresh.

There is no one, by the way, who is more in the hands of his doctors than the King when he is ill, and of course a very grave responsibility is thrown on his medical advisers. Even during a slight indisposition His Majesty is prohibited from attending personally to his correspondence, except the most private letters, or overfatiguing himself in any way. To the rules which his physicians may lay down the King cheerfully yields obedience, but very happily stringent rules have rarely to be enjoined.

Neither of Their Majesties ever travels unaccompanied by a medical attendant, except when going to Windsor Castle or Sandringham, to which residences of royalty physicians are attached. But when Their Majesties travel abroad, one of the physicians-in-ordinary invariably is included in the royal suite.

Interesting Imports.

Leeches are enumerated by the Bureau of Statistics under its general head of animals imported, the total value of the imports of this species in 1908 having been $5341; in 1907, $6992; in 1906, $4494; in 1905, $3862; in 1904, $3589; in 1903, $3240, and in 1902, $2412—the commerce in leeches being thus of a growing character. The total value of the leeches imported into the United States in the decade ending with 1908 is about $40,000. Leeches are imported free of duty. Snails were at one time enumerated as an article of importation, the records from 1894 to 1898 showing snails imported to the extent of about $5000; but the snail trade so dwindled, showing only $24 of imports in 1898, that the bureau discontinued its statements of this article.—[Philadelphia Record.

The Finished Sketch.

FOUND IN THE LITTLE SHACK OF AN IMPECUNIOUS ARTIST.

By a Special Contributor.

"I'VE brought you a visitor, Walter. She isn't used to the habits of bush rangers, so please don't eat her up. Lady Eskdale, this is my friend, Mr. Harding. Lady Eskdale, Walter."

Looking up from his canvas, the artist scowled at the intruders; but instantly the scowl gave place to an expression of surprise, which in turn yielded to a glance of admiration.

Instead of the "dowdy dowager, frowsy, fat and 50," whom his kindly imagination had painted when Mrs. Dearborn had spoken of bringing Lady Eskdale across the lake to his studio, Harding found himself face to face with a beautiful woman. Like himself, she was still young—certainly not 30; and she had the further advantage of a shapely figure.

So pronounced, indeed, was Lady Eskdale's beauty that it surprised the artist into temporary civility. In response to the gracious inclination of the head and the few murmured words with which the countess acknowledged the introduction, Harding said:

"I am pleased to welcome you to my poor shack, My Lady."

"Go on with your work," Mrs. Dearborn ordered. "Lady Eskdale and I will look at the pictures. If there are any good ones, she'll tell me."

Turning from his easel a few minutes later, the artist saw his guests standing near a canvas that he had painted a month before.

"That is a pretty subject—the calf and its mother," Lady Eskdale was saying. "I wonder if it is for sale."

"Are you going to sell this picture, Walter, or paint it out again, or throw it in the lake?" Mrs. Dearborn asked.

"No—it's sold," Harding snarled. Then, as if regretting that he had been betrayed into a rudeness for which Mrs. Dearborn only laughed at him, he continued, in a more pleasant tone:

"Funny thing about that picture. You know the cow and calf belong to old Fosdyke, up the road here. I went to his field to paint them. I had to go into the pasture several times; and, after I had been there twice, he got to coming around and watching me. When the painting was finished, he asked:

"'How much might yew git fer a pictoor like that?'

"'Oh!—I ought to sell that for $60,'" I said.

"'Sixty dollars!' says Fosdyke; 'why, sakes alive! that's more than I'm like to git for th' cow and calf thersel's. Seems to me as ef yew had oughter to gi' me summat fer lettin' yew pent that cow and calf. Gosh!—sixty dollars. Now, how much would yew git if yew was to pent a pictoor of the hull blame farm, Mister?'"

"Did you give him anything, Walter, for letting you paint the cow and calf?" Mrs. Dearborn asked.

"Yes, I painted him a picture of a $20 gold piece," the artist replied; "and now he's trying to sell it for $25."

The ladies started to go, Mrs. Dearborn intimating that they would come over again.

"You have a beautiful view here, Mr. Harding," Lady Eskdale remarked, as she stood near the door, looking out across the lake; "but I should think you would want to live on the other side, where you could have a nice cottage and pleasant society. What makes you stay here?"

"Because it's cheap," the artist answered.

"Oh, I beg your pardon. I didn't mean——"

"It's all right. No harm done. Always glad to explain. I bought the land—two acres—for $10. Built the shack myself—paid $50 for the lumber, second-hand. Furniture and other appointments cost me $40. The whole shebang as it stands cost me an even hundred dollars. Couldn't get much for that on the other side of the lake, could I, now?"

"I suppose not, Mr. Harding. But I beg your pardon. I had no intention of being inquisitive. Good day, sir."

"Good day, Lady Eskdale," the artist answered, smiling in apparent enjoyment of the discomfiture he had caused the countess by his detailed answer to her questions.

Next morning, however, Mrs. Dearborn's launch was over at the artist's landing before 10 o'clock. After a few words of greeting to Harding, the elder lady went out on the veranda, where she settled herself in a canvas chair, leaving Lady Eskdale with the saturnine proprietor of the hundred-dollar shack.

Sitting in the willow rocking chair that the man had indicated with a jerk of his thumb when she entered the studio, Lady Eskdale was silent for some minutes, but at last she looked up and asked:

"Mr. Harding, would you accept a commission from me?"

"Don't know. What kind?" the man growled.

"To paint me," the countess answered.

With the palette in his left hand, a brush poised in the right, the artist paused in his work and turned to examine the face before him. So long he continued his scrutiny that Lady Eskdale colored and her eyes fell before the man's frankly admiring gaze.

"I am sorry," he said at last; "but I couldn't do it."

"Indeed. May I ask why?"

"Because you are too beautiful," he answered in an unemotional tone, the artist speaking, not the man. "I haven't it in me. The artist never lived who could do you justice," he added, in a lower tone, and accompanying his words with a bow so courteous that Lady Eskdale laughed softly.

"Mrs. Dearborn said you were so brusque," she volunteered, in answer to the man's inquiring look. "She said you'd snap a poor woman's head off."

"Usually, a man is rude who speaks the truth. This time, the truth is not so distasteful, I suppose."

"Won't you even try to paint my portrait, Mr. Harding?" the countess asked.

"How many sittings could you give me, and how long each time?"

"I would come as often and stay as long as you required."

Beginning tomorrow?"

"Yes."

"Ten o'clock, then. I'll try. But I shall disappoint you, and myself, too. If the picture is very bad, I shan't let you have it; so you'll have spent your time in this old shack for nothing."

"The time is never wasted that is spent in the society of a genius," Lady Eskdale answered, as she tripped across the floor and went out to rejoin her friend.

Harding's only answer to the compliment was a growl.

The painting was begun next day, and for three weeks Lady Eskdale gave the artist all her mornings. At last, under the constant sunshine of her presence, his chilly manner began to thaw.

"Do you know, Mr. Harding," the countess said to him one day, "I think it's such a pity for you to be mewed up in this out-of-the-way place. If only you had a few years' travel—if you studied the old masters in Europe and perhaps spent a year or two in the studio of one of our noted modern painters, I think it would not be long before you would rank as one of the world's really great artists."

"You mean to say," Harding rasped out, "that if I had a million dollars, I shouldn't be a poor man. If I could afford to travel for a few years in Europe, I wouldn't need to paint."

"But your art?" Lady Eskdale asked, in a tone of mild reproach.

"Art doesn't go," was Harding's gruff reply. "The most successful artist is the best business man—the fellow who finds or makes a market for his wares. The old masters are all right. I've no grudge against them. But a man has to paint what's in him—what he sees; and he must have something in him to see things right. Perhaps that's why I've never succeeded in getting out of the dollar-a-day class of painters—because there's nothing in me."

During the progress of the work, Harding had not allowed Lady Eskdale to gain a glimpse of the painting; but at last it was finished; and when he turned the canvas round and showed it to her, the countess was strongly impressed.

For several minutes she looked at it without speaking, though her lips were parted as if for some exclamation. Slowly her eyes filled with tears, and, going up to the artist, she laid her hand upon his arm and asked:

"Do I really look like that?"

"Like what?" the man demanded, sharply. "Of course, I haven't done you justice. I warned that I couldn't. But I thought it was a fair portrait. I didn't mean it for a caricature."

"No—no. You don't understand. It is beautiful," the countess declared. "But is it I?"

"Yes; all the beauty that is there is yours," Harding answered. "But it merely suggests your actual beauty. The drawing isn't bad; but the coloring's feeble; and the eyes—your eyes are simply impossible."

"So bad as that?" Lady Eskdale asked, turning her wonderful eyes upon him, with a luminous smile.

"No—impossible for a painter, I meant, that was all. Only the Master Artist knows the secret of their light and coloring."

"Then I may have the picture?"

"If it pleases you."

"Yes. As a painting, it is wonderful; but the most wonderful thing about it is to think that this beautiful picture is a portrait of myself. How much am I to pay you, Mr. Harding?"

"I'll tell you another time," the artist answered, in a low tone, as he turned his back upon his guest and looked out across the lake.

Walking quietly up to his side, the countess laid her hand gently on the artist's arm, and murmured:

"But I'm going away tomorrow."

"Well, go!" he answered, almost fiercely. "Why did you come here at all?"

Lady Eskdale shrank away from the man, as if fearing a blow; but, recovering herself, she went up to him and touched his arm again.

"Do you know," she said, with a little gurgling laugh, "you remind me of one of those 'bad men' out West, who go around with knives and guns, scaring the lives out of everybody, until some dapper little tenderfoot comes along and pulls his nose or cuffs his ears."

"Ugh!—then what?" Harding snorted.

"Why, the bad man says he's only been joking all the time, and treats everybody to a lot of bad liquor; or he takes to the woods and is seen no more in those parts."

"Well, maybe I'm a bear, though I didn't know I was a bully," Harding growled; "but if you know any dapper little gentleman who's looking for a generous handout of trouble, just ask him to step around to this shack and pull my nose or cuff my ears."

"You're terribly literal," the countess complained. "What I meant was that with all your over-acted gruffness, I believe you are, at heart, a kind man, a courteous gentleman. If some little woman, with tact and patience, got hold of you, you'd prove the most tractable and domestic of men."

"I don't know," said Harding, his frown softening by imperceptible degrees into a smile. "I knew a little girl once. It was only a kid's fancy——" He broke off there, looking away again, out across the lake.

"What was a kid's fancy?" Lady Eskdale asked, in a low tone. "Tell me about it."

At this moment, however, Mrs. Dearborn entered the studio, and pouncing upon the portrait of her friend, pronounced it beautiful.

"I'd like to kiss it," she said; "it looks so natural and kissable. But you children have been mewed up in this nasty, stuffy old place every day for a month, and I want you to go right out on the lake. I brought a lunch basket with me, and, as I've cribbed out all the best things for myself, you can take all that's on, Walter. Take Lady Eskdale in your sailb don't come back until it's dark."

The countess looked doubtfully at the artis with a sudden inspiration of civility, some he impulse, perhaps, stronger even than acquired hab turned to Her Ladyship and asked:

"Would you trust yourself with me in a sailbo Lady?"

"I would trust myself with you anywhere, Mr. ing," the countess answered, with a bow.

Harding's preparations were quickly made, and Dearborn watched the couple as they drifted slowly from the shore, round the point and so out of sight.

Then, changing her muslin frock for a volum working apron that she had brought with her, and her hair up in a handkerchief, she started to make on the dirt and chaos in Harding's two-room castle.

When the voyagers returned, they found the la lighted, the table spread in readiness for a dainty the kettle singing cheerily on the stove.

"What's happened here?" was the artist's first tion, as he looked around and saw the startling, ral cleanness of the place.

"If you want the dirt, it's out in the ash bin," Dearborn answered. "Don't ask any more questio but tell me, who is this little scarecrow whose pic I found in your bedroom? Your own work. Real such positive negation of comeliness is a dreadful af tion, and I think it's nothing short of wicked to pa such a picture."

"That—that was a little girl I knew when I was a ki up in the northern part of the State," Harding an swered, handling the picture almost reverently.

"Will you sell me that picture?" Lady Eskdale aske

"No, Madam, I will not," was the artist's uncompro mising reply.

"But, surely, if I offered you enough for it——"

"You couldn't, Madam," Harding snapped.

"Why?" the countess persisted.

"Because there's never been enough money coined to buy that picture," was the artist's decided reply.

"Was this the kid's fancy you started to tell me abo this morning?" the countess inquired.

"Yes," Harding answered dreamily, without removing his eyes from the canvas.

"And you painted her face from memory. It mu have made a great impression on you."

"Goodness! I should think it would make an impression on anybody!" Mrs. Dearborn exclaimed. "It enough to scare one out of a year's growth."

"I painted the picture from a tintype that Lillian and I had taken the day I took her to the circus—the day that, as kids, we became 'engaged.'"

"She jilted you!" Mrs. Dearborn exclaimed. "Lucky boy."

"No, Madam," said Harding, quietly, "she died. She was drowned. Her father was an Englishman, and, soon after we had the tintype taken, he started with his family for the old country. The ship was lost at sea with all the passengers and crew."

"Well, you didn't lose much, Walter," was Mrs. Dearborn's unsympathetic comment. "She'd never have taken a prize in a beauty show; would she, now?"

"There speaks the sleek, well-fed matron who has never felt the pinch of poverty!" Harding exclaimed—"the comely dame, who has never stopped to analyze the constituent parts of her graceful figure, her rosy cheek, nor her sparkling eyes.

"Madam, this little girl is but the unfinished sketch of a very beautiful woman. Lillian Field was poor, but she has the outlines of a rare type—what is sometimes called a patrician type—of perfect loveliness. Give me such a framework as this; and, by adding certain other ingredients, I'll undertake to produce a woman beautiful as—yes, beautiful even as Lady Eskdale."

"And what is your recipe, Walter?" Mrs. Dearborn asked, with an indulgent smile.

"Certain parts of sunshine, fresh air, sea-water baths, sleigh rides, pure milk, new-laid eggs, roast beef, Malaga grapes, oranges, a little wine, music, children's laughter, kind words and looks from older people, dancing, good books, and some education in school. That's all, Madam. It isn't much, is it? and it seems a shame that a man or woman should be allowed to grow up—to grow away from the likeness of the Maker more and more each day, for want of the simple things that the Maker intended for us all."

After this unusual speech from Harding, silence fell upon the little group, and nothing more was said until the meal was ended. Then Mrs. Dearborn ordered the others to go out on the veranda, while she remained indoors to wash the dishes.

"Do you often think of this little Lillian Field?" Lady Eskdale asked, as the artist sat gazing dreamily out over the moonlit waters of the lake.

"Yes," he answered, softly.

"You have been true to a boyish love all these years"

"Yes; just as Lillian would have been, had she lived."

"How would you feel if you were to learn sudden that she was not drowned; that she, the only one of the passengers and crew on that great ship, was pick up at sea and saved; and that afterward she marri

"I should think she must have had strong reasons for breaking her promise."

"She had," was Lady Eskdale's low reply.

"What! She was saved? You knew her?"

"Yes. Don't you know me?"

"You? You, Lillian Field? Impossible! And those eyes! Nobody but Lillian ever had such eye yours. So you forgot your calf love over in Ame

IN STRANGE THIBET.

METHODS IN WHICH THE GOVERNMENT IN THE LAND OF DALAI LAMA IS CONDUCTED.

[London Answers:] Thibet lies between the latitude of Rome and Cairo, yet, owing to the fact that it is nearly all one series of lofty tablelands, its climate is purely Arctic. There is hardly any rain, and biting, dry winds send dust or dry snowstorms forever raging across its inhospitable uplands.

Lhassa, its capital, is the Mecca of the Buddhist world, and pious Buddhists gain much merit by making the pilgrimage.

The reason why this strange city has been so completely cut off from the rest of the world is really simple enough. The Chinese, who conquered the whole country between the years 1300 and 1720, have inculcated among the Thibetans their own dislike of the "foreign devil." The Chinese had a selfish object in view. They wanted to keep all the Thibetan trade to themselves. Some years ago there was war between Thibet and Nepal. Thibet beat Nepal, and one of the conditions of peace was that the trade routes from India should be closed. How well the closing of these routes has benefited the Chinese may be gathered from the fact that Chinese tea of the very worst quality—mere sticks most of it—sells in Lhassa for 3s. a pound.

The government of Thibet is dual. The political side is run by Chinese Ambans, who draw fat salaries from the wretched Thibetan taxpayers; internal and religious affairs are managed by the Dalai Lama and a council of five—four nobles and one layman.

The Amban makes yearly tours of inspection through the country, and as he goes collects his salary, which amounts to the comfortable sum of about £35 a day. On one occasion, when calling at a town named Shi-[illegible], the Amban suddenly demanded £54 a day. The infuriated villagers struck at this extortion, and stoned him. Troops were hurried up, the wretched headman was caught, and terribly flogged, receiving 400 strokes; while the two Mayors had the flesh cut away from their hands. Small wonder, then, that the Chinese are not loved by the Thibetans!

The choosing of the Dalai Lama is one of the oddest bits of swindling to be found anywhere. The main article of the Lamaist creed is transmigration. When a Lama dies, it is believed that he will at once reappear in human form, and it becomes the duty of his survivors to determine in which child he is reincarnated. There are certain physical signs, usually peculiar deformity, which are supposed to indicate the reborn saint, and the names of children answering to the required description are written on pieces of paper, which are rolled up and placed in a golden urn. On the eighth day the urn is spun until a name has come out three times.

Then the boy is brought to Lhassa, and submitted to certain tests. Pure humbug, of course, but they serve to deceive the populace. The election must then be sanctioned by the Chinese Emperor, and the wretched little boy is installed in his new dignities.

The country is full of convents, some of them containing as many as 4000 monks, nearly all of whom claim to be reincarnated. It is said that for every family in Thibet there are at least three monks.

The Thibetan penal code is curious. Murder is punished with a fine, varying according to the importance of the slain; theft by a fine of seven to one hundred times the value of the article stolen. Here, again, the fine depends on the social importance of the person from whom the theft has been committed. The harborer of a thief is looked upon as a worse criminal than the thief himself. Ordeals by fire and by boiling water are still used as proofs of innocence or guilt, exactly as was the custom in Europe in the Middle Ages.

And if the Lamas never inflict death, they are adepts at torture.

Buying and Owning.

The Road Agent.

BILL JENSEN TELLS OF OUTLAW WHO MISSED HIS CALLING.

By a Special Contributor.

BILL JENSEN, driver of the Mesa stage, swung suddenly backward on the reins and plunged his foot downward on the brake.

"Whoa, there, you Jinny!" he said sharply. Fifty feet ahead a man suddenly had appeared from the underbrush and stood with uplifted hand in the center of the roadway.

"Gracious!" whispered the school teacher from Davenport, "is this a hold-up?"

Jensen smiled reassuringly. "Just one of them freight heavers from the Roosevelt Dam. There's a government freighter coming in and we'll have to wait here till it passes."

"Did you ever encounter a real outlaw, Mr. Jensen?" queried the school teacher when the stage was under way again.

"Yes, once," drawled the stage driver. "It ain't a story I tell very often, but as you-all is strangers, I reckon it don't make much difference.

"It was one of them unaccountable experiences you have once in a while, and I've studied a good deal about this outlaw chap. I guess everybody has their pet ideas, and one of mine is what you might call the Art of Eliminating or something like that. You hear lots of talk about saving nowadays and how millionaires got their start keeping little pieces of string and all that, but nobody don't seem to be concerned about the things we carry around with us for months and years that ain't no good to nobody. I've known people who wouldn't burn an old newspaper as long as they had room to store it, and how many people do you suppose has their trunks full of old letters that nobody will ever read again? People are the same way with their ideas. After they have been believing a thing forty years they'll hang onto it from force of habit when they know it's out of date. We're all that way more or less, but it ain't so bad out here in the West—not near. Gossipin' ain't a popular diversion, and a good many things happen that people just make it a business to forget. In Arizony, folks keep close cases on your dealings with them same as everywhere else, but they don't bother about a man's pedigree. I expect you're wondering what all this has got to do with this outlaw chap, but the point I'm driving at is that this didn't happen in New York nor Ohio nor Ioway.

"This was back in the days when Cave Creek wasn't the town it is now. It was pretty much given to scattered 'dobes and mesquite patches, and there wasn't no colonial mansions nor electric lights then. I was running a little ranch that summer out toward the Santa Ritas. We didn't use hay balers much in them days, and I was delivering my first cutting of alfalfa to Goldheimer's corral—that used to be across from the old County Jail.

"Like all lock-ups they built in this country in the early days, the jail had a high 'dobe wall around it. One morning I came jogging into the alley alongside the jail wall with a big load of loose alfalfa. I wasn't payin' much attention to nothin' when sudden I hears something heavy plunk down on the load behind me. I starts to look around, when somebody says low and sharp, so close behind me it made me jump:

"'Damn you, keep your eyes in front of you!' I caught a glimpse of something steely-lookin', and I sabed in a minute where that chap come from. I heard him stretchin' hisself out along the boom pole where nobody could see him from the ground.

"'Where you goin'?' he says, when he had fixed his nest to suit him.

"'Goldheimer's,' I answers.

"'Not today,' says he; 'you just drive back home the shortest way. Sabe?'

"I had been up against enough stage drivin' to see my duty clear without any argument. I heads the ponies for Squaw Peak without askin' no questions.

"When we drives in at the ranch barnyard, he orders me to slide off in front, and I slid, not botherin' to look around, as I knew he was comin' close behind.

"'Into the barn,' he says, cool as you please; 'now, get me a file.' That made me suspicious for a minute, but not being in a position to ask pointed questions, I dug up a rat-tail out of the tool box, all the time him keepin' close behind my back.

"'Fine,' says he; 'much obliged.' Now, take out your watch and stand there five minutes without lookin' around.' I made it six for good measure. When I looked around, he had faded off the landscape.

"That afternoon I goes down to Goldheimer's again with the alfalfa. I didn't say nothin' to nobody about my little adventure. It's a popular thing to be assisting justice, but in them days I wasn't lookin' for no ill-will of a jail breaker that was choosin' my ranch as his favorite haunt. But I heard all about it. The El Verde stage robber had escaped, and the mystery that had the town wrought up was how he did it. He had disappeared from the jail yard—with handcuffs on his wrists.

"I didn't say nothin', but I thought I could tell them a thing or two about what he had in his hands. And then of a sudden it just dawned on me all at once! Lord, I sure could have sold myself cheap right then—that cuss had bluffed me to a standstill finish. I reckon he must have chuckled to hisself layin' back there snug as a bug in a rug, givin' orders, and me sittin' up like a befuddled school kid, scared to turn my head—and him with handcuffs on! I learned he had just been sentenced to a year in the pen, and the Sheriff was sure sore that he had go away before they had landed him in Yuma.

"The next morning I was harnessing the ponies in the barn, when all of a sudden I hears a rustling among the alfalfa in the manger, and a head pops up in front of me. This time there was a gun in the picture, and I didn't feel no qualms about being agreeable. I didn't recognize the face, not havin' seen it before, but I knew the voice.

"'Put the ponies in the buckboard,' he says, smiling friendly; 'we will take a little drive.' I see he was in a good-natured mood, so I comes back at him, trying not to mind the gun:

"'Who's payin' for all these services of mine,' I says, 'and you ain't brought back my file!' He grins, and I see he was a attractive sort of a youngster for all his bein' a road agent. He reaches his hand in his pocket and slides out a $20 gold piece. 'The file is in the tool chest,' he says, still smiling. 'Hurry up with the ponies; we got a long drive ahead.' I've hauled all kinds of passengers without askin' quustions, so I pockets the twenty and runs out the buckboard.

"'Ojo Colorow,' he says when we had got under way. We rode along for quite a spell without sayin' nothin'. Once in a while when we would see a team coming he would slip into the mesquite, and it wasn't long before we was in the hills. But pretty soon I begin to get worried. I wasn't used to chaperoning outlaws, and I ain't never had no appetite for gun business.

"'Look here,' I says finally, 'if you're goin' in for any hold-up programme, you better sashay on alone. I ain't lookin' for trouble.'

"He laughs soft-like. 'Don't worry, friend,' he says, 'we're goin' over to Colorow to see my wife and kid. And when we're through there we're comin' back. Sabe?'

"'Back where?' I says, puzzled.

"'Jail!' he says. I didn't say no more—it didn't seem no satisfaction encouraging a man who could lie like that.

"It was dark when we lands in Colorow, and he takes the lines and brings us up at a little 'dobe down on the flats.

"'Understand,' he says as we was tying the ponies, 'you are a friend of mine, and you fall to everything I say!' For the first time I seehe was a bit nervous and excited. 'She don't know nothing about this road-agent business. Sabe?'

"I followed him into the house, still believin' he was makin' some stall to slip a get-away. But they was there—the wife and kid. A plump, cheerful little woman she was, and the kid was a bouncer. I see short off he hadn't been givin' me no phoney spiel about them. And he seemed as happy and tickled to be with his family again as if a deputy Sheriff never existed.

"'Girlie,' he says, after a bit, 'I have some news you won't like. I've made a pretty good stake, and have enough to tide you and the little one over till I come back. I'm going—to Klondike—for a year.' She gasped a little at that, and her eyes filled up sudden.

"'When do you go?' she says, sort of weak. He squirms a little in his chair and looks across at me as if askin' my opinion how long he dared to stay with them.

"'Right away,' he says, after thinking a bit; 'I dassent stay any longer—I might miss the boat.'

"He takes a bag out of his pocket and empties a pile of gold pieces in her lap. I never fancied them family scenes, so I slides out and fiddles around the buckboard. After a bit he comes out, and we drives off into the night.

"I took his word for it and heads the ponies for home. He never says a word till we turns in at the ranch at daybreak.

"'Going in with alfalfa this morning?' he asks. I said I was.

"'I will ride down with you,' he saws, grinning kind of sickly like.

"'You mean you are going back to that jail—the way you come?' I asks. He nodded.

"'And you made this break just to stake the woman from your caché, and see her and the kid once again!'

"'She won't be worrying now she thinks I'm in the Klondike,' he says, as if not noticin' what I was saying.

"'It seems to me, friend,' says I, 'you ain't got no business being a road agent.'

"He looks at me a long time, then he says sober-like: 'I ain't—that's why I'm going back to take my medicine!'"

"And he did?" queried the school teacher. "Tell me, who was he?"

Jensen shook his head. "Out here in Arizony folks forgets a heap about a man," he commented. "I ain't knockin' a good neighbor like that."

Plant Breaking Up an Island.

Strength is not a thing usually connected with maiden-hair fern, yet if its roots have not sufficient room they will break the pot in which the plant grows. Blades of grass will force the curbstones between which they spring up out of their place, and in a single night a crop of small mushrooms have lifted a large stone. Indeed plants have been known to break the hardest rocks.

The island of Aldabra, to the northwest of Madagascar, is becoming smaller and smaller through the action of the mangroves that grow along the foot of the cliffs. They eat their way into the rock in all directions, and into the gaps thus formed the waves force their way. In time they will probably reduce the island to pieces.—[London Globe.

"'I'm about tired out. Be the cows in the barn?'

"'Yes, Andoniram,' said his wife.

"'Hosses fed and bedded down?' asked the farmer, and he took from his pocket a cigar with a gilt band about it.

"'Yes, Andoniram.'

"'Chickens ain't locked up, though, be they?'

"'Yes, Andoniram, long ago.'

"'Wood chopped for mornin'?'

"'Yes.'

"'Ducks picked and wagon wheel mended for tomorrow's market?'

"'Yes, Andoniram.'

"The farmer lighted the cigar, yawned and said:

"'Well, then, just hand me the Farm Journal and draw me a jug of cider, Maria. I'll turn in soon. Farmin's beginnin' to tell on me.'"

Even That.

REPRESENTATIVE NYE of Minnesota has much of the wit of his lamented brother, Bill Nye. Himself a lawyer, Representative Nye said at a lawyers' banquet in Minneapolis:

"Lawyer's have grand reputations for energy and perseverance. A lad said to his father one day:

"'Father, do lawyers tell the truth?'

"'Yes, my boy,' the father answered. 'Lawyers will do anything to win a case.'"

Grace Before Meat.

EX-MAYOR McCLELLAN of New York, discussing urban architecture at a luncheon at the Union Club in Fifth avenue, said:

"I fear that, with all our skyscrapers, we may be developing a skyscraper taste. I fear we are apt to think height is the criterion of a building's excellence.

"He who thinks that is, of course, as foolish as the Zulu who admires a woman according to her weight. The Zulu can respect a 200-pound woman, but it is only a 300 or 400-pound one that he can really love. We enlightened persons, on the other hand, have been taught to like grace before meat."

Too Blue, Perhaps.

"THERE are too many new-fangled colors," said John Sloan, the well-known etcher, at a luncheon at Sherry's. "Shopping in a department store the other day, I heard a lady say to her companion:

"'No; it's the new spring shade of blue I want. It's lighter than navy blue and darker than Eton blue—hardly a sky-blue nor an electric blue—rather a robin's-egg blue, you know, but richer, verging more on indigo blue, but, of course, not so deep as indigo blue; nearer turquoise blue than that, but with something of aquamarine blue in it, too; yet not at all like a royal blue, but nearer a baby blue if anything.'

"Her companion, with a gruff laugh, said:

"'I see the blue you want—it's milk-trust-milk blue.'"

"Hotel Spoof."

HARRY LAUDER, at a Scotch dinner in Chicago, said during the haggis course:

"I'll tell you a story about Arthur Roberts and me. The pair of us were in Manchester when we saw, on the sporting page of the Guardian, a paragraph that said:

"'In consequence of the number of unsupported challenges recently forwarded to this paper, we give notice that in future only genuine challenges can be accepted for insertion in our columns. As a proof of good faith, each challenge must be paid for at the uniform rate of one shilling.'

"'Arthur,' said I, 'here's a chance for a joke.'

"'How?' said he.

"I read the notice to him, and then and there we concocted a challenge of which I shall never cease to be proud—a hotel spoof challenge. Of course there is no such game or sport as spoof. Spoof is a word very few people have ever heard of. To spoof is to get off impromptu nonsense on the stage.

"Well, our challenge ran:

"'Hotel Spoof.—Harry Lauder, hearing so much talk about A. Roberts being the champion spoof player of England, will play Roberts a game of Hotel Spoof for £500 a side, catch as catch can, over eight flights of hurdles, bathroom barred. Address, money and man, H. Lauder, Comedy Theater, Manchester.'

"That was the challenge, and we had no idea what it meant after we had drawn it up. Nevertheless, we carried it boldly to the Guardian office. The clerk read it in a dazed way.

"'One insertion, please,' said Roberts, planking down a shilling.

"'Excuse me,' said the clerk, 'but what is spoof?'

"Roberts glared at him.

"'None of your nonsense with me, young man,' he growled. 'What is spoof? You'll be asking what chess or whist is next.'

"And the following morning, directly under the editorial notice that 'only genuine challenges could be accepted for insertion,' appeared our little paragraph about Hotel Spoof."

The Ignorant Unbeliever.

THE late Neil Burgess used to clinch, with an anecdote, his claim that atheists were always ignorant.

"A coarse, swaggering fellow," he would begin, "declared in a barber shop:

"'I don't believe in no hereafter. You live and die, and that's the end of ye.'

"'Why, you must be a Unitarian, George,' the barber said.

"'Huh! not me,' was the reply. 'I'm too fond o' me meat for that.'"

The Retraction.

SENATOR MURPHY FOSTER, at a dinner in Washington, said of a certain retraction:

"It was a retraction without value. It recalls the Nola Chucky scandal.

"Deacon Washington, in the heat of a revival, shouted from the pulpit of the Nola Chucky chapel:

"'I see befo' me ten chicken thieves, includin' that thar Calhoun Clay.'

"Calhoun Clay at once rose and left the church. He was very angry. He brought powerful influence to bear, and the deacon promised to apologize.

"So, at the following revival, the old man said:

"'I desires to retract mah last night's remark, namely—"I see befo' me ten chicken thieves, includin' Calhoun Clay." What I should have said, dear brethren and sistern, was, "I see befo' me nine chicken thieves, not includin' Calhoun Clay."'"

Easily Solved.

A NEW YORK poet, at the Authors' Club, in Seventh avenue, told a Conan Doyle story.

"Sir Arthur Conan Doyle," he said, "sat at a dinner, on his last visit here, beside a lady who asked leave to consult him about some thefts.

"'My detective powers,' he replied, 'are at your service, Madam.'

"'Well,' said the lady, 'frequent and mysterious thefts have been occurring at my house for a long time. Thus there disappeared last week a motor horn, a broom, a box of golf balls, a left riding boot, a dictionary, and a half-dozen tin pie-plates.'

"'Aha,' said the creator of Sherlock Holmes, 'the case, Madam, is quite clear. You keep a goat.'"

The Herring Line.

SENATOR BEVERIDGE, apropos of fame, said at a Washington luncheon:

"What is fame, after all? Kipling, when he lived in Brattleborough, took a trip to Montpelier, and the first evening he came down to the hotel dining-room, he overheard this dialogue between two waiters:

"First Waiter: Do you know who that is, George?

"Second Waiter: No. Who is it?

"First Waiter: That's the celebrated Kipperin.

"Second Waiter: What's he done?

"First Waiter: Hanged if I know. Fish line, ain't it?"

"JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, JR.," said a New York banker, "asked me one Saturday afternoon a good Bible text to base an address on.

"'I'm thinking,' he said, 'about that beautiful verse from the Twenty-third Psalm: "The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want."'

"'Beautiful and appropriate,' I agreed. 'But, Rockefeller, there is even a better verse in the same psalm: "Thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over."'"

MISS ALICE PAUL described, at a dinner in Philadelphia, the cockney dialect. Miss Paul, it will be remembered, fought so well in London for the suffragette cause that she found herself obliged to serve a term in Holloway Jail.

"Two cockney woman," she said, "were conversing while they took their exercise behind me in the jail yard.

"'How do you spell fawt?' I heard the older woman ask.

"'F-o-u-g-h-t,' the other answered.

"'Nah, nah,' said the first. 'Fawt; I mean fawt!'

"'Oh, f-o-r-t,' was the hurried reply.

"'Nah, nah, nah!' snapped the first woman. 'I don't mean the fawt yer live in. I mean the fawt yer fink abart!'"

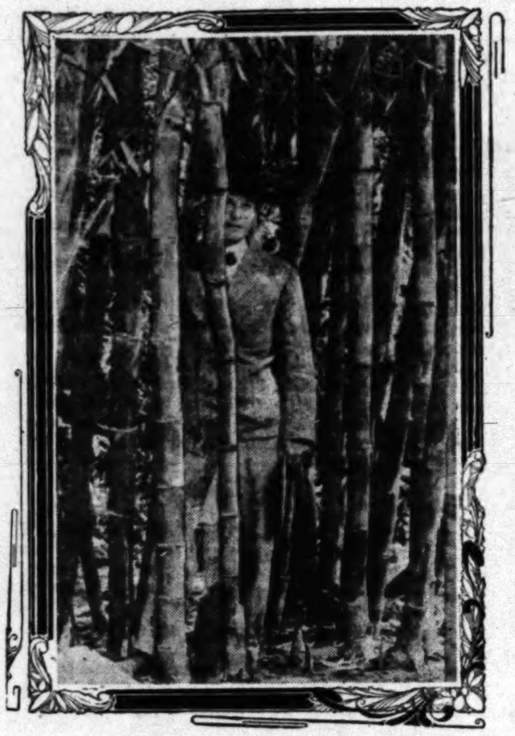
GARDEN FERTILIZERS.

INTEREST MANIFESTED IN THE SUBJECT BY READERS.

By Ernest Braunton.

SEVERAL persons have written concerning the concentrated chemical fertilizer recommended on this page two weeks ago. It is asked how much water should be used; if it is a complete plant food; if it is to be used with other plant foods heretofore advised, alternated with them or used in place thereof. One very intelligent gardener, who seems to know whereof he speaks, claims it is not a complete fertilizer.

It is not a complete plant food nor was such a claim made for it. Several other plant foods have from time to time been herein prescribed and should be used as directed. The plant tonic recommended was intended for use in place of the usual nitrate of soda which is more extensively used alone than in combination with other chemical fertilizing elements. Nitrate is the most important element of plant food, and the one most generally deficient in the soil, and it is for these reasons nitrate of soda is so wonderfully effective. The drugstore tonic prescribed contained no phosphates, as the use of bone meal or bone flour is nearly as general as that of nitrate of soda and has many times been recommended in these pages. The writer has seen it in use in hundreds of homes. As bone meal is not readily soluble in water and a heavy per cent. totally insoluble, it would not prove profitable in a much concentrated fertilizer except the residue were used to apply to the soil also, though the latter could be profitably used in the garden where it would all become available to plants much quicker than in pot culture.



BAMBUSA VULGARIS

It would, then, be as well to use the tonic published two weeks ago and apply afterward dressings of the finest bone meal obtainable. As several wish to use it as a plant food without the application of other liquids or matter it would be well to add to the chemicals noted two pounds of dissolved bone black, as but 2½ per cent. only is insoluble in water. The other ingredients were: One pound nitrate of soda, one pound sulphate of ammonia and one and a half pounds of sulphate of potash. Together with the bone black it should be put in two quarts of water and well shaken until dissolved, or the whole placed on a stove until no settlings are left in the vessel. This is a good plant food, very well balanced, and not far from a complete fertilizer. There are many other elements used in complete fertilizers, but only the ingredients for plant tonics may be obtained at drug stores, and for this reason no other elements were included. It is too much trouble for the home owner to obtain and mix his own fertilizing material, and the use of commercial fertilizers has scores of times been urged in these columns. Any one of ordinary intelligence, by following the treatment for plants prescribed throughout the year will have abundant success. Do not forget how often the use of all your wood ashes has been advised. Their potash content makes them worth from $7 to $11 a ton, and their lime content is also valuable. Well-rotted animal manures should also be freely used, and the liming prescribed in this department two weeks ago should not be overlooked. Lime must not be applied with fertilizers or either immediately before or after their use. When your garden has not been manured for some time, use the lime, and allow it to be mixed with the soil for a month before applying more animal manures.

To those who are interested, we will state that three elements are aimed to be applied to the soil in general fertilizing practice: Ammoniates (nitrogenous fertilizers,) phosphates, and potashes. The usual sources of the first are: Nitrate of soda, dried blood, tankage, fish scrap, cotton-seed meal and barnyard manure, and are valuable for nitrogen content in the order named, as is also true of the lists for phosphates and potashes. For phosphates we use: ground bone, superphosphate, bone tankage, and barnyard manure. For potashes many ashes are used, but all are of lesser value than sulphate of potash and muriate of potash. Barnyard manure, as usual, should be at the foot of the list. The latter is more valuable for amelioration of the physical condition of soils than for the plant food it contains, though the latter is a very important consideration. After all, physical condition of soils should first be made right or plant food is rendered largely useless. It was found by extensive experimentation that the average of the fertilizing elements taken from the soil by 100 field, orchard and garden crops was as follows: Potash, 53 pounds; phosphoric acid, 37 pounds, nitrogen, 23 pounds. Owing to a State law which is pretty well enforced through frequent inspections, we are safe in purchasing commercial fertilizers of known brands, and these should be freely used in the garden.

Bamboos Needed.

WE grow nothing that adds more of tropical luxuriance to the garden than bamboo. Many palms, bananas and other foliage plants are often damaged by very slight frosts, yet we have a long list of bamboos that are perfectly hardy where frosts are occasionally severe.

We do not advocate the use of these plants in every garden, for not all have a suitable place for them; nevertheless if a half-million could be planted in Los Angeles tomorrow the general appearance of the city would soon be decidedly bettered. We have several sorts that grow to an immense size, some erect and others arching. The one we illustrate is a robust arching species of great vigor and rapidity of growth, known as Bambusa vulgaris. It was started from a root cutting in 1894, by the writer, and in ten years the single shoot had become a clump fifteen feet in diameter.

A Weeping Pittosporum.

MANY garden owners object to the use of the weeping willow because it is deciduous, and would plant it were it evergreen. The same objection is urged against its use in parks. In Santa Barbara, there is a weeping evergreen tree, Pittosporum phillyracoides by name, that much resembles the weeping willow. Young plants are obtainable from Santa Barbara nurseries, and we should like to see a few tried in our parks and gardens. Weeping evergreen trees, aside from conifers, are a rarity, and this one is yet a decided novelty, though first planted in Southern California nearly forty years ago.

More Plant Literature.

THERE has just appeared from the University Press, Berkeley, Cal., a publication dubbed "Studies in Ornamental Trees and Shrubs," by Dr. H. M. Hall. The author is as well qualified as any one in the State to treat of the subject noted, and many profitable and pleasant days has the writer spent with him in going over our local trees and shrubs. Those treated of are all peculiar to Southern California, many of them not growing elsewhere, and the publication would prove valuable to every one interested in plant life. Send 75 cents to above address and get a valuable book on both the botany and the garden lore of a great number of well-known plants.

Propagate Poinsettias Now.

NOW is the time to prune your poinsettias, and if you are in need of more plants, use the cuttings for propagation. Nearly all of our poinsettias are too "leggy," due altogether to lack of pruning when young or even at any other time. The plants should be built up each year and should first be branched from close to the ground. Each spring every branch should be cut back to about three "eyes," and after a few years you will have thick, umbrageous bushes capable of, and bearing great numbers of scarlet rosettes. The cuttings should be from six to twelve inches long, governed by the distance between eyes. Let them dry for two or three days until the "bleeding" has ceased, and it is then a good plan to wash this off with hot water, though not an absolute necessity. Make a hole way down in the soil where you wish the plant to grow and put cutting down without bruising the lower end. Leave only two eyes out of the soil, and you should get a good plant. Poinsettias are not easy to move, because of lack of small, fibrous roots, and all the roots are very brittle and easily broken off. A broom handle is a good tool with which to make holes for cuttings. These plants like the hottest location you can give them, and also need an abundance of water in well-drained soils.

Do It Now.

IF your lawn has not been fertilized this season, do it at once. From now until the cold weather of next winter comes, the grass will make a steady luxurious growth, receiving no check, such as is often noticed on lawns which were fertilized too early in the winter.

VALUE OF TREES.

MRS. CARNEGIE'S APPRECIATION AS EXPRESSED IN RIVERSIDE.

A REMARK recently made by Mrs. Andrew Carnegie while riding along one of Riverside's streets calls to the writer's mind the many, many times he had, in these pages, made a plea for the extensive uniform planting of street trees for the one reason that they add materially to the value of the abutting property. It has been clearly demonstrated in a number of specific cases that poor land with a street frontage planted to trees sells for a higher price than the finest land not so beautified. For every purpose except the growing of field or orchard crops, street trees are of greater value to the land than fine quality of soil. Instances have herein been cited where lots have sold for $1000 to $5000 more than adjoining lots because in front of the former stood one or more grand old trees.

RIVERSIDE STREET ADMIRED BY MRS. CARNEGIE.

Our illustration shows a view of a portion of one of Riverside's ordinary streets, where the "average," not the rich, citizen lives. It was here that Mrs. Carnegie exclaimed: "I would like to live here;" yet Riverside has scores of streets just as attractive, and in a very few years will possess hundreds still more charming. In the foreground a few blocks are shown which were planted before the days of municipal street planting. In the background are several blocks of four-year-old pepper trees planted and cared for by Tree Warden Reed. In time these will far surpass in beauty and effectiveness those older ones that have had to go through a reclamation process. These latter are trimmed up just enough to give a clear view of the street from each residence. There comes to our wonderful southland each year enough settlers to make a city as large as Riverside, and many of them are people of means looking for a beauty spot in which to settle down to the "simple life." These persons are looking much more interestedly than Mrs. Carnegie for "a place where I would like to live," for they are the actual homeseekers. None of those looking for an attractive, comfortable home will be lured to stay by bare and untidy streets with borders of weedy parkways. Such streets cannot be counted among a municipality's assets; they are simply convenient byways for traffic and inhabited by people of little taste. The Laird of Skibo perhaps is not looking for a place in California in which to spend his declining years, but doubtless he has friends that are eagerly listening to his impressions of our land, and people and sections that proved attractive to him may yet profit thereby, for it is well known that the Lord (of Skibo) helps those who help themselves. A large per cent. of our homeseekers are persons of discriminating tastes, the most attractive towns will catch them, and street trees are the one feature that make towns attractive. We would ask each reader: Is your town making a "bid" for these high-class "homeseekers?" If not, get busy.

That Ideal Park Superintendent.

SEVERAL persons have asked the writer if he knows what one of our park commissioners meant when he wished a superintendent who is a poet, a painter, a dreamer," etc., etc., "one who cares more for the position than for the salary." We pass. We presume it was meant only in a figurative sense, not literally. We certainly do not want a park superintendent who cares for nothing but the salary, for we have had several of him in the past, and hunger for one who will "catch the spirit," yet no good practical man will seek the position unless he is to be properly remunerated. The specifications noted would bear considerable elucidation, but they were intended for those who understand somewhat of the subject then under discussion. One who is somewhat of an "artist and a dreamer" is a prime necessity where examples of art are to be conceived and carried to completion. Taken literally, the qualifications sound really "gushing;" figuratively they are wonderfully comprehensive.

Bamboos Needed.

IF the writer were asked what one family of plants were most needed by our city parks he would unhesitatingly answer: Bamboos. No other State save Florida can grow bamboos from all lands as well as we of the south and in some park or parks we should have them in all the luxuriance of a tropical jungle. When planted in suitable locations, they give a richness to the landscape hardly possible with any other vegetation, and after planting, their care is practically nothing.

Eugenias for Streets.

FOR narrow streets or where a spreading shade tree is not needed, Eugenia myrtifolia (also known as E. oustralis) would prove of unusual value. We have many good specimens in and about the city of Los Angeles that range from thirty to fifty feet high. One at Santa Barbara is reported to be eighty feet in height, but there is doubtless but this one so tall. It is not very slow of growth, for it attains to thirty-five feet in fifteen years and to fifty feet in twenty years. The foliage is glossy, clean and of an attractive shade of green. The leaves are small and do not drop unduly, and the tree does not look unsightly when severely pruned. The tree is an easy one to grow, and is not fanciful as to soil.

Compulsory Clean-up.

THE City Council of Los Angeles recently passed an ordinance requiring all yards, vacant lots, parkways, etc., to be kept free from weeds or rubbish of any kind. This is the first one passed that looked to control of the weed pest, and we trust it will be generally enforced. It often occurs that weeds going to seed upon a vacant lot furnish a crop for the whole neighborhood. The writer suffers from proximity to just such a lot, and it seems impossible to keep one's garden clear of weeds. Rigidly inforced, this ordinance would in a few years clean our city almost entirely of weeds.

San Diego Tree Planting.

THE City Council of San Diego recently passed a resolution declaring its wish and intention to coöperate with citizens who wish to plant ornamental trees, but requesting all not to plant either peppers or eucalypts within fifty feet of a sewer or within ten feet of a sidewalk. Poor Council! They know little about the proper planting and care of street trees or they would not taboo the pepper, and the eucalypts have no knowledge of the position of a sewer except there are leaks in it, and the moisture leads them on.

Spring Flower Show.

THE plucky Pasadena Gardeners' Association, though without a suitable exhibition hall in their city, are determined to keep up their semi-annual flower shows and have this spring again shown in a mammoth tent. Such tenacity of purpose is worthy of better treatment and a city of the finest gardens in this country should see that the products of these gardens are housed in a manner comparable with their excellence.

Practical Poultry Culture in the Southwest.

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF STANDARD-BRED POULTRY AND THE PEOPLE WHO GROW IT.

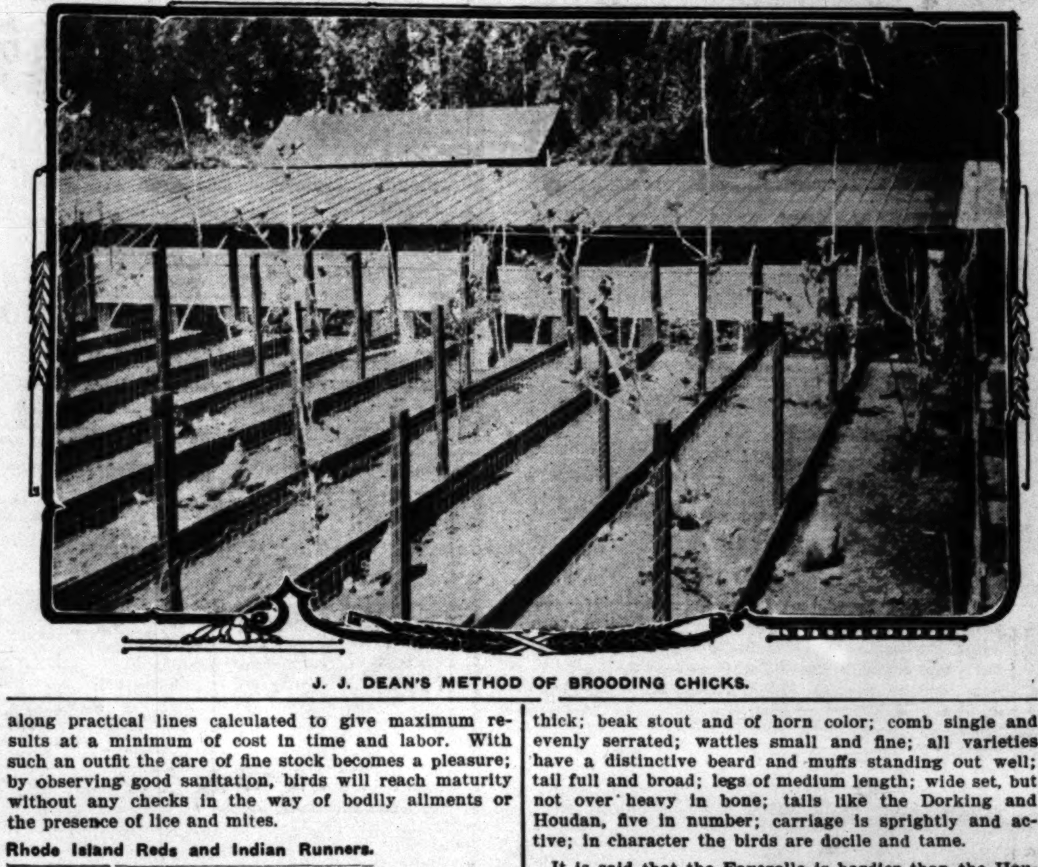
BROODING AND YARDING.

A PLANT THAT IS BUILT ALONG PRACTICAL LINES.

By Henry W. Kruckeberg.

NOTE.—Short articles of a practical nature are cordially solicited from breeders and fanciers, relating their experiences with poultry, giving their successes as well as failures. The writer will be glad, in so far as lies in his power, to answer inquiries of public interest bearing on any phase of an enlightened poultry culture, such as feeding and management, disease and its prevention, market conditions, fancy points, etc. The co-operation of utility breeders and fanciers is cordially solicited, to the end that the best thought and practice in an enlightened poultry culture may find a healthy expression in these columns.

UNDER a Southern California sun outdoor brooding and yarding is certainly ideal, especially after the winter rains are over and everything is pulsating with spring life. Strictly speaking, chicks in many cases are yarded rather than brooded, except during the night, when natural or artificial warmth must be provided. We show herewith a good object lesson in the natural methods of brooding chicks on the poultry plant of J. J. Dean of Moneta, who has the Buff Orpingtons. Notice the ample runs all planted to trees providing shade when the weather becomes hot; the substantial building and wire fencing; the dense rows of eucalyptus trees, affording additional shade and a windbreak in both summer and winter. Indeed, this plant is built along practical lines calculated to give maximum results at a minimum of cost in time and labor. With such an outfit the care of fine stock becomes a pleasure; by observing good sanitation, birds will reach maturity without any checks in the way of bodily ailments or the presence of lice and mites.



J. J. DEAN'S METHOD OF BROODING CHICKS.

Rhode Island Reds and Indian Runners.

Reference has on more than one occasion been made to these two very excellent breeds, both of which are growing constantly in popularity. At the late Breeders' Association Show, held in this city, the Rhode Island Red entry was the largest; the total number shown being over 150 individual specimens. The quality showed marked improvement over exhibits of previous years, clearly indicating that the breed is becoming fixed and breeding more true to color of plumage and type as the years roll by. But beyond this the breed is also winning its spurs along economic lines; the young reach maturity rather quickly, are hardy and make a well-fleshed fowl, the color of meat and carcass nearing to light yellow rather than white. The hens are good layers of deep brown-colored eggs, and are noted as good mothers. They make early broilers, and excellent soft roasters at from four to six months.

The Indian Runner duck is no stranger to our landscape, having been bred in Southern California for something like a dozen years. Its practical values are conceded. It is a splendid layer, often going as high as 200 eggs per duck per year, which continues with some fluctuation until the bird becomes five and six years of age. The eggs are a trifle smaller than the average duck fruit, and for this reason are often marketed with hens' eggs. Flesh is of fine grain, juicy and well flavored. The breed is not addicted to sitting, and when bred in large numbers artificial incubation is generally resorted to. They are hardy and the young easily reared, making them essentially a utility breed.

A Morning Stunt.

When dealing out the morning feed to poultry, whatever it be, one should take notice of the last night's droppings, and see that they are firm and healthy. If soft, something is wrong, and must have remedy; if very soft, the remedy must be immediate. Cold, damp weather affects poorly-housed fowls, and after a storm special vigilance must be abroad. If one feeds a hot morning mush, he can stir ginger into it, and the droppings will become healthy at once. It is better always to feed foods that will remedy, rather than medicines. A bread pill hot with ginger for an individual bird to have choked down him is medicine; when a few droppings are soft a general dose of ginger in food for all the colony is both a remedy and safeguard. To feed ginger in a hot mash during a winter rain each morning is good for the general health of the fowls. If one does not feed a mash, cook some rice and feed hot as soon as cooked. Sickness is sure to follow a general softness of the droppings.

Will It Beat the White Dot?

Late issues of the English poultry papers contain more or less laudatory notices of what they are pleased to term a new variety of a rather old breed, namely, the "White Faverolle." Of this breed there are already three varieties, all popular in France and Belgium; the Salmon, the Light and the Black. The breed occupies much the same position in its native country that the Wyandottes and Plymouth Rocks do with us, and is rated as an all-purpose fowl. In body Faverolles are large, broad and deep; breast prominent with a deep keel; at the shoulders back broad and flat; wings rather small and carried well up; neck and head short and thick; beak stout and of horn color; comb single and evenly serrated; wattles small and fine; all varieties have a distinctive beard and muffs standing out well; tail full and broad; legs of medium length; wide set, but not over heavy in bone; tails like the Dorking and Houdan, five in number; carriage is sprightly and active; in character the birds are docile and tame.

It is said that the Faverolle is hardier than the Houdan; a good layer; a good sitter, and a poor mother. Small of bone and blocky of form, it commends itself to the market poulterer. It is claimed for it that it rapidly puts on flesh, which is clear white, fine grained, and good flavor. Standard weights are males six and one-half to eight pounds; females five to seven pounds.

The claim is made for the whites that they are prolific egg layers, and on account of their white plumage they dress better than the parti-colored varieties. The breast is long, deep and wide, carrying more than the usual volume of white meat. The chicks are hardy and easily reared, whether by artificial or natural methods, and at an early age forage for themselves. Pullets often lay at five months old, while surplus cockerels can be fattened up for table easily in fourteen weeks. They are not, as a rule, much addicted to broodiness, which is a consideration seldom to be avoided with the heavier breeds. They can generally be relied on to commence laying in the early autumn, and continue through the winter.

Food for Little Chicks.

It has been the experience of all the best breeders of today that dry feeding is preferable. No boiled egg, boiled milk and bread crumbs, or sloppy soft foods are given. A food of mixed seed and cracked grains comes in large or small quantities from the supply house, and with fresh water and green makes a complete ration.

A Creditable Effort.

White Leghorn breeders will be interested in the annual catalogue of the National S. C. White Leghorn Club, which has just come to hand. It is indeed, a creditable effort, giving the transactions of the club, list of membership and the economic and fancy points of the breed. California is well represented in the list of officers and in the membership.

Hatteras the Stormy.

which the Hatteras beach is locally famous. Some these wiry little animals have been imported to Roa- ke Island and the middle of Pamlico Sound. The ter surrounding that island is more fresh than salt, nsequently when an easterly wind carries the salt eath of the sea over the island, the ponies prick up eir ears and widen their nostrils in greeting to a tive element and become restless and almost un- nageable.

It is said that this whole strip of land was once oded from Nags Head, opposite Roanoke Island, all way down to Hatteras proper. At present nothing t a few trunks of dead trees is left, due to the action the salt air and the occasional flooding by the more lent storms and tides. It is also claimed by the life- ving crews that the coast line is gradually washing ward and the strip becoming narrower. This, in fact, been borne out by the moving back several times the Chicamacomico station, whose keeper, Capt. Ban dgett, a heroic veteran of the service, says that "what s once the most eastmost point of the coast is not y more eastmost."

Farther up the beach that which was once a solid ip has in recent years become a shallow inlet, now lled New Inlet. This was formerly the lowest part the strip of sand, and during a severe easterly storm sea tide broke clear across and into Pimlico Sound, ppening one night while a patrolman was on his re- rn to the station. His horse suddenly ran breast- p into a huge breaker that washed across, and it s only by the most desperate fight that he managed reach the station. He found the crew "standing by" l ready for action. The station, however, remained its foundation, and by morning the tide had sub- ded. But looking northward they beheld a seething ass of white breakers where once had been solid ound, and not more than a hundred yards from the ation.

From a meteorological standpoint the United States Veather Bureau considers Hatteras one of the most portant stations in the service. It is thirty-eight iles from the mainland, and thus helps the official recasters in most cases to determine whether the Vest Indian hurricanes, which annually move up the ast, will turn out to sea at Hatteras or move on their structive course up the coast.

The memorable hurricane of August, 1899, almost oved the undoing of Hatteras, and for a time reduced population by nearly two-thirds. On the evening of 15th, the observer reported, the wind freshened pidly, making the old weatherwise Hatteras men ake their heads. The following morning bore out eir fears. By 8 a.m. the wind reached a velocity of y miles an hour. Used to storms as they were, the atteras men nevertheless paid many visits to the ather observatory all during the 16th, where, with wind steadily coming from out of the northeast, observer confirmed what they almost instinctively w; namely, that the worst was yet to come.

The early morning of the 17th found them in the oes of a full-fledged hurricane with the wind from enty to eighty-four miles an hour. By 1 p.m. it reached ninty-three miles, with frequent puffs of 120 to 140 miles an hour, the last and strongest which finally blew the recording apparatus away. barometer then read 28.62 inches, the lowest ever orded at sea level in the United States.

The scene all day of the 17th was wild and terrific, breaking the record for such scenes for Hatteras The heavy sea tide drove in the inlet and rose the lowlands at the south end of the island where ation and the town proper is located, and by 11 had reached a depth of ten feet. Lashed into a y by the wind and reinforced by the great waves the ocean, the water tore at a fearful rate across lowlands, carrying everything movable before it. ats, nets, bridges and packing-houses were swept the sound, and in the face of the driving storm the ple abandoned their houses for the safety of the her ground to the north.

The next morning found the fishing industry swept of existence, and as soon as conveyances could be red, a general exodus began toward Roanoke Island. of a population of 200, not more than seventy-five ained by the end of the week to recuperate Hat- as's one industry. Life, however, at any other place s not life as it was at Hatteras, and after the mem- y of that experience had faded most of the faithful s drifted back again. Hatteras now boasts of a pulation of nearly 400 souls.

In the storm of December 4-5, 1902, the writer was an witness to those scenes which have originated the le of Hatteras, the Terrible. Leaving Roanoke and on a small steamer before daybreak, bound down mlico Sound for Hatteras, nothing seemed to indi- e the sudden shift of the wind to the northeast gale ich set in by 11 a.m. The inland sea became a fury of s-seas near New Inlet, into which the captain red to venture, but after heading the steamer back Roanoke Island, the wind and sea proved to be the onger, and far from plowing against the gale, the amer was driven backward. Pitching into the seas the inlet, the little vessel was pounded and beaten mercifully by great waves that lashed across her ks, waves that finally threw her bodily upon a sand opposite one of the life-saving stations.

It proved an easy task on the comparatively mild ter of the sound for the life savers to set the passen- s ashore, and the night was spent in the shelter of home at Big Kinnakeet. Perhaps the best way to cribe the noises of that night would be to say that y were such as make men think of the hereafter. was a continual roar and shriek, punctuated by fre- nt blasts aloft, a steady thunder seaward, reinforced the intermittent booming of the heavier tidal waves. Conversation was impossible, and sleep was only fitful.

At the first break of day a glance out the window showed an extremely active hamlet. A wooden rake floated past, a couple of barrels, then several bundles of shingles and staves and other miscellaneous material, and amid them all bustled the men of the village, striving to save what little they owned.

Later in the day came the usual reports of stranded ships, two foundering on the shoals and one on Hatteras Bar. Later in the week came the grewsome, ghastly results. All three vessels had gone to pieces almost before it was known that they had stranded. Help was therefore impossible, and one had but to sit on the beach and watch the now comparatively calm sea give up its victims, in most cases to a grave as unknown and unmarked as though they had remained at the bottom of the deep. Occasionally a mere trunk of a body would wash ashore, another would follow with an arm or a leg gone, another so horribly mutilated as to sicken the most hardened life saver.

Of the three vessels which came to an unfortunate end in that storm, only one was positively identified, the schooner Wesley M. Oler, and of the eleven men which composed the crew, but one was given a marked grave. This was possible only by the help of the contents of an inner pocket of his storm coat. When the surfmen finally dragged the body clear of the water, they looked upon the horrible and sickening sight of a head without a face, a set of brains held loosely in a topless skull only by a thin tissue. They placed the body in a pine box, carefully numbered it, and entered the name in the station records, and then turned to the sand hill where other unfortunates had preceded. It was only another chapter added to the unending tragedy of Hatteras, a terrible story made still more realistic and sickening by nature in one of its diabolical moods. The same storm which had brought this victim to his last resting-place had blown the sand from the decaying boxes of former victims, and the dried but hideous skeletons gaped forth in greeting.

Anti-Profanity Congress.

An international congress against swearing and profane language is to be held in Rome next month, and will be attended by representatives from almost all the anti-profanity leagues in the world. Strangely enough, Italy, which today is considered the country where swearing is most prevalent, boasts an institution against swearing which is seven centuries old and still flourishes in Florence under its old title of the Venerable Archconfraternity of Mercy.

Toward the middle of the thirteenth century the Florentine porters used to congregate to drink and gamble in a wine shop on the Via Adimari, and they swore so much and so loudly that one of them, an old man named Piero di Luca Borsi, in the hope of saving his fellow-workers' souls and at the same time putting a check on their profanity, proposed to impose a small fine on the swearers. His proposal was accepted and within a short time a large sum of money was collected, which it was decided should be used in some work of expiation.

"In order that the money might benefit both the soul and the body," says an old chronicler, "six stretchers were purchased and destined to each of the six quarters of the city, where a squad of porters was detailed to convey in them such persons as were ill to the hospitals or to carry the bodies of those who fell dead or had been murdered to the cemetery. And each porter was entitled to take a coin from the fine box for every trip."

The institution still exists, and it counts among its members not only porters, but the most prominent citizens of Florence, as well as the King of Italy and the Archbishop. It is no longer supported by the fines imposed for swearing, but by voluntary contributions.—[New York Sun.

Japanese Test of Madness.

On Monday at the Tokio Appeal Court, before Judge Miyamoto, a farmer named Gisel Haseba, 26 years old, convicted of murdering his parents-in-law and severely injuring his wife at Osatogori, Saitama prefecture, in 1908, appealed from the judgment of the Urawa local court, where he was sentenced to penal servitude for life.

Since April last year, during the public trial of the accused, he has not uttered a single word. This attitude led the judge and the public prosecutor to conclude that he feigned madness as a last resort, hoping to get released. He was medically examined by Dr. Kure and Dr. Miyaka, and in this examination Dr. Miyaka adopted a singular method.

There is a belief that the blood of a venomous snake is soluble with that of an ordinary man, but not with that of a madman. The doctor applied this principle to the examination of the suspected lunatic, and sure enough the blood of a venomous snake did not dissolve in the blood of the accused. Thus the doctor concluded that he was really mad.

The other doctor also gave evidence about the lunacy of the defendant. The judge ordered that the trial should be postponed until the accused was recovered from his abnormal condition.—[Japan Advertiser.

Origin of Name Minnesota.

Noted antiquarians of St. Paul disagree as to the origin of the name of our State. It is claimed by some to be a Dakota word, meaning blearish or clouded water. Mr. Stuntz, a skillful Chippewa scholar, advances the theory that it may be from that tongue. The Chippewas, he says, always name natural objects from some peculiarity connected with them. Thus, Az-o-te in that language means the aspen tree. Min-a-zota is applied by them indiscriminately to the Balm of Gilead and the cottonwood tree. The forests of cottonwood abounding in the Minnesota bottoms may have caused them to give the river that name.—[St. Paul Pioneer Press.

The Guest on the Trail.

might eat! I was glad when he said that he was related to Bull's Back Fat. I had it in mind to make some pretty moccasins for him. And he fooled us all, stole our horses while Spotted Robe lay watching him!"

They all laughed at this thrust at me, and I felt my face burn; I could not laugh. Just to satisfy ourselves that the animals really had been stolen, we walked up the creek until we struck their trail in the heavily-frosted grass. Yes, here were the tracks of the Cree. Here, one by one, he had taken off the thong hopples, made a bridle of them, mounted one of the animals, and driving the others before him, rode away to the northwest. Apsi stood looking thoughtfully in that direction out across the great plain, and then said, as he pointed at a pine-crowned butte far on the other side of the Missouri: "He is heading for the Hairy Cap; between it and the Wolf Mountains" (the Little Rockies) "passes the Cree war trail north and south."

We returned to the wagon, and the women rebuilt the fire. Apsi would not wait for anything warm, and grabbing a handful of dry meat he started for the river. "I will send some one with horses to haul you in," he said. "I am going to overtake that Cree and recover our animals."

He was gone before his mother had time to make a protest or caution him to be careful what he did.

It was twenty miles from where we were to the Missouri River post. Apsi must have ran about all the way-in, for by mid-afternoon an employé at the post came for us with a team. We arrived there long after night and learned that Apsi, with a half-dozen friends mounted on the swiftest horses in the big camp, had gone on after the Cree.

The jokes and laughter with which I was met the moment I entered the post were very trying to my youthful self-esteem. I had imagined myself a seasoned, experienced plainsman, and it came hard to realize that I had much of the tenderfoot in me still. My friend and patron, Mr. Kipp, led the fun, and no doubt thought the stolen horses a small price to pay for it. Horses were cheap and plentiful, and he dearly loved a joke. I went to bed feeling very miserable. But it was a good lesson I got; in all the after years when I was on watch, I watched.

Apsi and his friends came singing and charging into camp the next afternoon, driving our three horses before them and dangling aloft a scalp tied to the end of a pole. As Apsi foretold, they had come upon the Cree at the foot of the Hairy Cap, where he was sitting before a fire roasting portions of a freshly-killed buffalo. Upon discovering their approach, he had fired at them, and then mounting one of the stolen horses attempted to escape; but he had come to the very end of his trail; when they fired, he flung up his hands, slid from the horse, and was dead when they reached his side. Upon examination, they found that he was provided with two sets of powder-and-ball pouches, one set, well filled, he had kept concealed from us beneath his leather shirt.

Pullmans for Invalids.

Invalid railroad travelers in Switzerland will soon be able to enjoy all the comforts of a well-equipped sick room. The Swiss Federal Railroads have just ordered four Pullman coaches specially fitted for the transport of invalids.

Each car, costing $12,000, will be divided into seven compartments, the center compartment being for the patients. There is to be an operating-room for urgent cases requiring immediate surgical treatment and another compartment will be equipped as a pharmacy. Electric bed warmers and bath heaters will be provided. The other compartments will be set apart for doctors, nurses and friends of the patients.—[New York Sun.

Farming in California—The Land and Its Products.

CONDUCTED BY J. W. JEFFREY, STATE COMMISSIONER OF HORTICULTURE.

FIELD NOTES.

Practical Suggestions.

I HAVE a small episode to relate, of some interest in itself and involving the broad idea of the value of farmers' meetings. It is not known generally in the south that the Johnson grass is devastating thousands of acres of fine land in the San Joaquin and Sacramento territories. A considerable number of fine young orchards have been abandoned on account of the prevalence of this grass, and a very large area of agricultural land also has been rendered more or less useless. In fact, the noxious weed peril, with this grass and the morning glory most menacing, will soon become a State issue if public effort is not concentrated against the outbreaks of these pests in certain places.

The story I began to tell shows that public sentiment is awakening. I met a farmer recently on the street who is not afraid of Johnson grass. He said he had just purchased a large farm in one of the upper counties of the San Joaquin that he had been wanting for a long time. But it is covered with this grass, and he had decided not to purchase. While attending the fruit growers' convention at Watsonville last December, he heard one of the speakers explaining how this pest could be cheaply and thoroughly controlled, and finally exterminated. One month later, he purchased the farm, and proposes to apply the methods advocated by the speaker.

Of course there are some impracticable theories and undigested experiences set forth at these fruit growers' meetings. But not to the extent formerly noticed. It is safe to say that these fruit conventions are now dominated by practical and successful men, and that the keynote of these conferences is business-like and effective. The speaker who impressed the farmer in the above case is a "book farmer" of the right sort. He had secured every publication relating to the botany, habits and control of Johnson grass and mastered its contents. He then took to the field, advised with every farmer who had tried to destroy the pest, persuaded several land owners to apply the remedies and means of control and supervised these practices. Within two years he has become an authority upon local weed conditions, methods of eradication or control, and his advice is sought for in a score of communities. I have tested his practical knowledge in several cases, and rely upon his judgment and availability. So I have related one incident showing the practical value of "book l'arnin'" coupled with common sense and another proving the business value of horticultural conventions.

Roadside Trees.

IN one of the northern counties the Supervisors have caused to be planted a double row of American elm upon the road's right-of-way. The trees will be placed as near the abutting property line as possible to give all the width possible to the highway. Objection to this act is made by an abutting land owner on the grounds that the trees in a few years will injure the productiveness of his farm for a distance of many feet from the line. Here enters a conflict that perhaps will never be settled satisfactorily to both property owner and public.

When the roadway was originally deeded to the county by the owner, the easement was for roadway purposes only. Is the use of the highway for tree planting authorized by this easement? The abutting land holder still owns the land to the center of the road and has only abandoned its use for the purpose stipulated in the deed. If the trees are within the provisions of the easement, they yet may be debarred on account of damaging land not included in roadway rights. Many delicate questions may have to be decided in the legal battle that may follow this use of the highway to the detriment of adjoining land. The time is coming when roadway, telegraph and telephone franchises will have to be drawn much more specifically. If the present suit reaches the Supreme Court upon constitutional points, we may hope the decision will blaze the way for more satisfactory franchises for roads and wires than is usually provided under the present practice.

Peach Yellows.

A CORRESPONDENT from the chief peach district of Los Angeles county writes for information upon the peach yellows, and is fearful that this blasting disease may get a hold in California. I have always feared the advent of yellows, and have tried to minimize in every way the danger of its introduction. The very bigness of Los Angeles and surrounding districts will soon demand an increase of the peach acreage where that fruit can be successfully grown, and the death of the orchards from old age will also have to be reckoned with. Hence we may expect inconsiderate planters to import peach trees from the east if they are not reminded from year to year of the danger such action would bring. Our home nurserymen should grow a moderate quantity of peach trees to supply the demand, and this would check the desire to import. Also the local horticultural officers should discourage the introduction of eastern peach stock. Then the quarantine inforcement should complete the protection.

It is now 120 years since the peach trees of certain eastern territories began to show weakness and disease. Prior to 1799 there had never been seen a diseased peach tree on this continent. The disease now known as yellows spread gradually for seventy-five years before any particular attempt was made to understand its nature. It has since ravaged the orchards of Delaware, New Jersey, the Virginias and North Carolina. Westward it has followed the north line of the peach belt into Wisconsin. Broadly speaking, it is not safe to import peach trees from north of North Carolina or east of the Mississippi. When we add that the peach Rosette has gone farther south and west, we limit still farther the territory from which peach trees can be brought into the State. Practically this means that no "foreign" trees should be planted here. It is of but little profit to dealers to import these fruit trees, and the whole proposition should be viewed from the point of protection to the orchards already in existence.

Whether this malady is infectious we do not know. Smith of New Jersey, in the thick of this destructive attack writes: "The larger fungi are out of the question, and I can think of nothing but micro-organisms. The spread of yellows from diseased buds to healthy stocks, which I have carefully verified, points strongly to some contagium virum as the cause of the disease."

Another authority almost as noted writes: "A third explanation of the yellows is that it is a physiological disease somewhat in the nature of indigestion, due to the derangement of the chlorophyll of the leaves. Such trouble is thought to be brought about by the presence of some deleterious enzym in the plant. This theory modified by the belief that it is the unfavorable weather conditions (winter freezing and sudden drought) that are directly responsible for the development of injurious enzyms or toxins, is the theory held by the writer."

Avoid mysterious maladies, and then explanations afterward are unnecessary.

Pedigreed Walnuts.

F. E. G., of Linwood avenue, Los Angeles, writes concerning the Klondike walnut. Some one has told him that this nut is the result of grafting the English walnut upon the common black walnut. I do not recall the origin of the Klondike, as the nut is of no commercial importance that I know of, and its history not worth preserving unless from the plant breeder's standpoint. Mr. G. wants to graft two or three trees to pedigreed walnuts. It would pay him to buy the same number of selected walnut stock from some good nurseryman, as it is very difficult for a novice to succeed in walnut grafting. The Southern California Pathological Laboratory at Whittier is good authority upon the improvement of the English walnut, and the director could no doubt tell where to get a few pedigreed scions. The State Commission of Horticulture has published a leaflet upon walnut culture which will be sent free. It is from an address given by one of the Whittier officials.

The large pear referred to must be the Alligator Pear, or Avocado. This fruit is attracting a great deal of attention, and every one should plant a tree in his back yard. The shade will justify, and the fruit pay if it can be produced of good size and quality. While no one should plunge too freely into new things, I feel sure that a good avocado tree in full bearing would be profitable. Any good local nurseryman will supply our people with this tree.

A Tiny Enemy.

ABOUT the year 1904, when the Scutellista were promising to exterminate all the black scale in the south, a sudden malady seized upon the Scutellista threatening their total destruction. Later investigation told the story of the killing of the black scale parasite, for myriads of miles known as Pediculoides ventricocus had attacked the Scutellista and apparently rendered futile the attempt to get it established in California. This mite with the hard name had never been found before in the State, although it had been described by an English scientist many years ago. The mite did not survive the winter of 1904-5, however, and soon the Scutellista regained its numbers and has not been seriously stricken by the ventricocus since.

But a bad penny turns up somewhere, and so did the mite we are considering. It is a marvelous story I am about to give in brief, one of untold annoyance and suffering caused by this microscopic mite. Early last summer there occurred a virulent outbreak of an unknown skin disease among the farmers, grain and hay dealers, and in certain portions of the large cities. The territory affected embraced the southern portions of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois. The victims suffered from eruptions covering the entire body like a rash, only the lesions were more painful and permanent. In one hotel in Philadelphia nearly a hundred people were afflicted; in numerous grain elevators the disease was general, and complaints came from thousands of farmers, mattress-makers and laborers all upon examination showing the effects of the "rash."

Finally a few physicians and economic entomologists made a more systematic study of the disease and discovered the culprit. It was the same Pediculoides ventricocus that had well-nigh obliterated the Scutellista in Southern California. The mite inhabited the wheat and barley straw of large grain areas, and in handling the straw, or sleeping upon mattresses every one had been attacked by the mite. Just as the production of a large number of Suctellista had caused the mite to multiply with us, so the prevalence of grain moth and joint worms had furnished food upon which the mite had multiplied in the grain fields of Ohio and the other States. Fortunately for our people, this parasitic mite was destroyed by the weather conditions of 1905 and by the lack of natural food. So man escaped. Had the people of the stricken districts in the East known the cause of the disease they could have destroyed the mite by fumigation. Science is demonstrating all the time, and that of economic entomology is forging to the front.

Gardening in California—Flower and Vegetable.

Narcissus.

THE narcissus, although not the most showy, is perhaps the most interesting of all this group of bulbous plants. Their rush-like leaves come directly from the bulb and rise to a height of eight to twenty inches. The flowers are borne singly or in clusters upon stalks which grow to about the same height as the foliage. The individual flowers are from one to two and one-half inches across and are white and various shades of yellow. They are tubular below, spreading at the top, and set at the throat with a crown of varying height. In addition to the species there are numerous named varieties, many of which are good to plant. There are both single and double forms, though the former is much to be preferred. In the group it is careful selection of varieties that pays.—[California Cultivator.

The Achimenes.

THE time is now at hand when these beautiful summer flowering plants should be started once more. If the corms have been allowed to remain in the old soil, they should now be shaken out, and placed about one inch apart in shallow pans of sandy soil in a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees. Under these conditions growth will soon commence, and until then water should be given sparingly, or the corms will rot. The pans should be kept in good light position near the glass, otherwise the young growth will become drawn and weak. When about two inches high, the plants should be carefully transferred into the pots, pans, or baskets in which they are intended to flower.

Basket culture is about the best method, yet one rarely adopted. Baskets made of galvanized wire, about twelve to eighteen inches across the top, and from six to nine inches deep are as good as any. The inside of the basket should be lined with nice green moss, then filled up with light soil, and the plants set in the top surface about two inches apart. Some should be placed so as to hang over the side of the basket. When completed, the basket will do well if hung up in a house near the glass and kept at about 60 degrees. When they have got good hold of the new compost, the plants will thrive much better if syringed overhead twice a day. This will also keep in check red spider, which is most partial to the Achimenes.

As the flowering period arrives, a more airy and cooler house will suit them. Achimenes will last in flower for weeks if they are given plenty of water and air, being also shaded from the strong sunlight. Like all other gesneraceous plants, the Achimenes succeeds in plenty of leaf mould; a little rotten manure may be added. When potting or basketing, do not press the soil firm, but leave it as light as possible.—[American Gardening.

Dr. Franceschi Out.

THE manager of the Southern California Acclimatizing Society asks the editor to publish the fact that the relationship between his organization and Dr. Franceschi has ceased. The manager sends us the following statement, embracing what purports to be a decree of

Some months ago, Dr. Franceschi was for various reasons not reëlected to the presidency of the Southern California Acclimatizing Association. Shortly after an action at law was brought by the association in which it contended that Dr. Franceschi was insolvent, that he had conveyed the plants at Montarioso to his daughter, in violation of the rights of the association, and that the association was entitled to the possession of these plants.

"In a decision handed down by the Superior Court of Santa Barbara county on February 21, all these contentions were upheld, and Dr. Franceschi enjoined from selling any of the plants at Montarioso, and ordered to give an accounting of those already sold, as also to deliver the seeds, plants and correspondence he received while president of the association."

A Serious Potato Disease.

BULLETIN NO. 63, recently issued from the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, Canada, and prepared by H. T. Gussow, F.R.M.S., botanist, is a warning to all potato growers on the continent of North America to guard against the introduction of this serious malady which has unfortunately assumed such dangerous dimensions in Europe, where it has been rapidly spreading for the past thirteen years. In England it has been known since 1901. It is there called potato canker, black scab, warty disease, or cauliflower disease of potatoes. It has hitherto been unknown on the continent of America, but was recently recognized by Mr. Gussow (who studied the disease in Europe,) on diseased specimens of potatoes sent from a locality in Newfoundland. When a crop is once attacked there is no hope of being able to save it, and the ground on which a diseased crop has been raised will be unfit for potatoes again for a period of six years; so there is little danger of exaggerating the seriousness of this malady. The disease is chiefly spread by planting infected seed tubers, and Mr. Gussow says: "Great care should be taken when planting potatoes, especially when imported from any part of Europe, to ascertain whether the seed tubers came from infected areas.

"In the early stages of the disease, the eyes will be found to be slightly protruding in the form of a single or compound group of small nodules varying from the size of a pin's head to that of a pea. This nodule may be distinguished from a sound eye by its color which is a rusty brown, instead of the white, rose or purplish color of a healthy eye. Further stages of the disease are as follows: Some tubers will be found, when the crop is harvested, with more or less than one-half of them covered by nodular excrescences which may be larger than the original tuber itself. The growth consists of a mass of coral-like, or more or less scaly excrescences or nodules similar in appearance to the well-known crown or root gall of apples. The growth is not spongy and not detachable from the tuber. . . . In advanced stages the tubers are wholly covered by this growth, having lost every resemblance to potatoes."

Use and Waste of Nitrogen.

THE most costly part of fertilizing is the nitrogen, which is worth about three times as much per pound as the potash or phosphoric acid. In Bulletin 224 Director Voorhees of the New Jersey Experiment Station, in his usual thorough and practical way, goes quite deeply into the nitrogen question. He says that while nearly one-half the fertilizer money is paid for nitrogen, it is the element which is most easily lost or wasted. He finds that not more than 70 per cent. of the quantities applied, even in the best farm, is recovered in the crops, while on the other hand phosphoric acid and potash remain in the soil until taken out by the plants, thus in actual practice the nitrogen used by the crop costs four or five times as much per pound as the other two elements. The loss is caused by the readiness with which nitrogen dissolves and evaporates. Experiments reported by Director Voorhees show some advantage for nitrogen over nitrate of soda or nitrate of lime as compared with other sources such as ammonia, dried blood, etc.

The reason is that the other forms have to be changed into nitrate in the soil before the crops can use the nitrogen, and the chances are that in the process there is some loss before the crops can use all the material. Thus in certain experiments the crops used about 62 per cent. of the nitrogen in nitrate of soda, while in the form of ammonia and dried blood they obtained only 40 to 43 per cent. Of the nitrogen not used by the crop some is wasted and some is held in the soil until the next crop. But the quick availability of the nitrates is certainly an advantage for this source of nitrogen, especially where the material is to be applied by itself. As a matter of practice various sources of nitrogen are used in mixed fertilizers. While nitrate of soda seems to be considered cheapest and best merely as a source of nitrogen, such materials and sources as dried blood, meat, cotton-seed meal are useful in a special way as absorbents, and when mixed with chemicals they improve the texture and make it possible to apply the fertilizers by machine.—[American Cultivator.

Opium-Poppy Culture.

CONSUL THOMAS H. NORTON writes a comprehensive article on the culture of the opium poppy in Asia Minor, with process of extraction and commercial handling that is highly interesting to Californians because of the possibilities of opium culture here, and further because of some experiments already under way in this State. This data he collected for an American manufacturer who was visiting Smyrna. Mr. Norton is of the opinion that the United States offers an admirable field for opium-poppy raising, the importance of the product being evident by the statement that the American imports of opium amount to about $1,200,000 annually.

The total opium crop of Turkey for the past ten years has been as high as 11,000 "couffes" or baskets of 165 to 175 pounds each (the crop in 1902,) but the crop of 1905 totaled only 3500 baskets. The average annual exportation of opium from Smyrna amounts to from 200, to 225 tons, ranging in value from $1,400,000 to $1,600,000. Mesopotamia also averages $500,000 in opium exports per year. Another opium region is Malatia, near Harput, where the best grades assayed 10 per cent. morphine. From Samsoun, in Northern Asia Minor, about seventy tons are exported annually. In European Turkey the opium is marketed at Salonica, where some grades have assayed as high as 13 per cent. morphine. A large proportion of Turkey's opium production is exported to the United States.

Mr. Norton suggests that for poppy culture in the United States the numerous upland regions offer climatic conditions closely resembling those which exist in the favored sections of Asia Minor. In Turkey the old-time methods of opium-poppy culture are still in vogue, which the consul believes American ingenuity could greatly improve upon. The American Department of Agriculture has already been experimenting with growing the opium poppy in Vermont, Texas, and California, the greatest success having been attained in the first-named State. They announce that they have already been successful in producing morphine directly from the poppy and are looking for further favorable results from experimental work. The Department of Agriculture at Washington will furnish inquirers with full information on the subject. Opium poppies are among the most beautiful in the poppy family and should be found in every California garden.—[Rural Californian.

Fasting for the Cure of Disease.

FOLLOWING Associated Press dispatch from Seattle was published in The Times under date of March 29:

"A post mortem examination held today on the body of Earl Edward Erdman, aged 26, who died last night, after long abstention from food to cure indigestion showed that he had died of starvation. Erdman, a railroad civil engineer, had been treated three weeks for indigestion by a woman physician whose treatments involved eating no food.

"Other patients of the woman doctor have died of starvation, it is said, but the Coroner says there is no law under which she can be prosecuted."

The woman physician here referred to is undoubtedly Dr. Linda Burfield Hazzard, mentioned later on in this article.

Fasting for the cure of disease, or the improvement of health, has become quite a fad in this country during the past few years. Many remarkable cures of diseases, declared by medical men to be incurable, have been reported.

The forty days' fast of Jesus 2000 years ago, and the twice-repeated forty days' fast of Dr. Tanner—now of Long Beach—about twenty-five years ago, have since then frequently been exceeded. Many have fasted over six weeks. A Chicago lawyer, three years ago, went sixty one days without food, and thus cured himself of a chronic stomach trouble. So far as the editor of the Care of the Body is aware, a hundred days of entire absention from food is so far the limit, and that has rarely been attained. All this goes to show how utterly idiotic and absurd is the commonly entertained idea that if you miss eating for a few days you will starve. Suffer to some extent you may, for the first few days. This comes from the irritation caused by the food particles that remain undigested in the stomach, and the inflamed lining of the stomach.

The average loss of weight during a fast is about a pound a day. A fast is a thorough housecleaning. It is sometimes the only means of curing disease and saving life. There is a great difference between fasting and starvation. Starvation is compulsory abstinence accompanied by worry while fasting is voluntary abstinence with a quiet mind. That is why we sometimes read that sailors and prisoners have starved to death in ten days or so. They have not starved to death. They have worried to death, as proved by the fact that hundreds of people have fasted six, seven, eight weeks or more, with much benefit.

The ancient churches recognized the value of fasting to purify the body and clear the mind, as do the religionists of Hindoostan today. In ancient times a church fast was a real abstention from food. Today it is more of a farce than a fast.

More than any other man in this country, the late Dr. Edward Hooker Dewey introduced and popularized the idea of fasting. His book, "The Fasting Cure and the No-Breakfast Plan," was reviewed here several years ago. (The Dewey books are published by the Fowler & Wells Company, New York.) Dr. Dewey showed the remarkable fact that in a prolonged fast, while other portions of the body gradually decrease, the brain does not lose any weight at all, feeding itself at the expense of the body. From this he deduced the belief that the most malignant tumor may be absorbed into healthy brain tissue by means of a prolonged fast.

Some people object to a fast, because they say that it is a species of cannibalism—that the body feeds on itself. Well, in that sense, we are all cannibals, for whether we fast or not, we are always feeding on ourselves. Every particle of food we consume has to be converted into blood and lymph—to become an intrinsic part of our living bodies—before it can sustain life.

Some recommend, in preference to an entire fast, a "fruit fast," in which a person eats nothing whatever but fresh fruit in season. This may sometimes be preferable, especially where a person is ill-nourished. In organic diseases it is the only way, but in some functional diseases an entire abstention from food is necessary to achieve the best results.

Fasting, like anything else, may, of course, be overdone. For instance, it is the height of folly to take frequent fasts, and then to begin again to gorge. It is of little use to fast unless, after the end of your fast, you adopt a temperate, rational mode of life. In other words, as a writer on the subject has truthfully said: "Fasting is but a means to an end, a cleansing and resting process that prepares the body for right living in future time. The cure is not accomplished until the individual himself, coöperating with nature, completes what the fast began."

Dr. J. H. Tilden recently wrote as follows, in "A Stuffed Club:"

"Fasting is the only remedy in some cases that will permit the system to throw off disease and come to a physiological equilibrium, but it is a mistaken idea that fasting cures disease. The cure is to come after the fast, for the disease was brought on by wrong living, and fasting will not cure errors of life any more than any other so-called cure. After the fast has allowed the system to get rid of its superabundant load of by-products that have been left in the system because of imperfect oxidation, then the real cure is to begin. The patient is to be taught moderation in eating as well as correct eating, and this is to be balanced with the proper amount of exercise, correct breathing, sleeping, clothing, bathing, etc., and, neither last nor least, he must learn to govern his mind. Right mental poise is just as essential as correct bodily poise."

There are simple precautions that must be taken during a fast, in order to receive the full benefit and not suffer injury. For instance, elimination from the body must be well provided, through the bowels, the kidneys, and the skin.

It is a mistake to suppose that fasts are only good for fat people, who weigh more than they should. On the contrary, thin, nervous, anemic people, who suffer from indigestion and lack of nutrition, are frequently much benefited by a prolonged fast. What is the use of continually putting food into the stomach if it does not digest? These people are really suffering from starvation, although they may eat enough for three healthy men.

For ordinary purposes—where there is no serious ailment, but a general lack of spring and efficiency—a few short fasts will be found highly beneficial. Omitting breakfast, and once a week fasting twenty-four hours, from the evening meal of one day to the evening meal of the next, is a good plan. In this way you cheat yourself by getting a twenty-four-hour fast, and yet do not miss eating for a day.

We will now refer briefly to a few books that will prove of great service to those who think of contemplating a fast:

"Fasting for the Cure of Disease" is the title of a book of 180 pages by Dr. Linda Burfield Hazzard of Seattle, referred to at the beginning of this article. (Harrison Publishing Co., Seattle.) Dr. Hazzard makes a specialty of fasting for the cure of disease, and has treated by fasting during the past two years over 600 persons, having lost only six, and in all of these cases an autopsy showed that death was inevitable. Dr. Hazzard was a pupil of Dr. Dewey. In her foreword the author says:

"Appetite is Craving; Hunger is Desire. Craving is never satisfied; but Desire is relieved when Want is supplied.

"Eating without Hunger, or pandering to Appetite at the expense of Digestion, makes Disease inevitable."

This little book gives excellent advice. The chapter on diet is particularly good.

"The Best Thing in the World—Good Health, How to Keep It for a Hundred Years," is a book of 120 pages by J. Austin Shaw. (Published by Charles C. Haskell & Co., Norwich, Conn.) The author is a traveling representative of several large horticultural firms. Finding himself suffering from chronic ill-health, he decided to fast, and did so for forty-five days, while keeping up his arduous work as a traveling salesman. He reduced his excessive weight from 235 to 175 pounds. A month after his fast he was only two pounds heavier than when it closed. In this book he describes his experiences, in the shape of a diary.

Edward Earle Purinton is a young man in whom the mental temperament strongly predominates. In one of his writings he suggests that he is insane. One would not think of disputing with a gentleman on a delicate personal subject like this. However, we know that there is a very narrow margin between genius and insanity. In a certain sense all men of genius are more or less crazy.

In his book, "The Philosophy of Fasting" (published by Benedict Lust, No. 124 East Fifty-ninth street, New York,) Mr. Purinton sets forth the virtues of fasting for various purposes—for health, enjoyment, freedom, power, beauty, faith, courage, poise, virtue, spirituality, instinct, inspiration, and love. He also gives a "personal prologue" and "twenty rules for sane fasting."

Describing a fast of thirty days, the author tells us that in the ten months immediately following the fast he transcribed over 200 poems, twenty-seven coming in a single week and eight in a single day. This unparalleled volume of verse he attributes directly to the thirty-day fast. Before deciding whether this was a blessing or otherwise it would be necessary to inspect the poems which emanated from the author's "aching void" in this brief period of time.

Mr. Purinton urges that during a fast one should plan congenial, but not compulsory, work.

Last, but not least, on this subject, is a big book entitled "Vitality, Fasting and Nutrition," by Hereward Carrington. (Published by the Rebman Company, No. 1123 Broadway, New York.) This is a book of 650 pages divided into five parts. The part relating to Vitality, Sleep, Death and Bodily Heat was reviewed here several months ago. It may be remembered that Mr. Carrington advances the revolutionary theory that heat and energy are not derived from food, but are renewed in the body from some mysterious outer force, during sleep, food being needed only to repair waste. In this he is not entirely alone, as some others have expressed the same idea. As stated by the editor of the Care of the Body in the review, this is going to an illogical extreme, as might easily be proved by living for a time on two ounces of pure gluten, when one would die sooner than if one were to eat nothing at all. However, it is a fact at a great majority of people eat far too much, and at we may flourish and display more energy, and live nger on a half or even a third of the amount of food nerally eaten—that is to say, if we eat natural food, od that has not been devitalized by cooking.

Mr. Carrington, who has recently come into some no- oriety in connection with psychic investigations, was for ix months, in 1902 and 1903, employed as a clerk in inneapolis by Dr. Hazzard, above referred to. He is a oung man, being not yet 30 years of age. In his book e quotes a number of cases of cures by fasting. Dr. Hazzard claims that with few exceptions the cases cited e those of patients treated by her prior to, or at the ime that he was in her employ, although in the book e gives her no credit whatever for these cases.

The author goes at length into the physiology and ilosophy of fasting, hygienic auxiliaries available dur- g a fast, and studies of patients during their fasts. the fourteen cases detailed, the fasts lasted respect- ely from eight to fifty days, except one, which was olonged to seventy-nine days. The daily loss of eight was from half a pound to 3½ pounds, the aver- e being a little over one pound. The diseases from ich these patients suffered—and of which, as a rule, ey were cured—were dyspepsia, paralysis, catarrh, con- ipation, diarrhoea, insomnia, diabetes, headaches, asms, bronchitis, congested liver, partial deafness, indness, nervous prostration, rheumatism, consump- on, eczema, and asthma.

This will be found a valuable book by all who may ontemplate undertaking a fast.

In conclusion, the editor of the Care of the Body, who as made a special study of this subject, urges his read- rs not to undertake a prolonged fast unless they feel oroughly satisfied in their minds that it is going to enefit them. When a fast is accompanied by worry nd anxiety it will do harm instead of good. Before ndertaking a fast, it is well to get advice from an ex- erienced person as to the simple precautions that hould always be taken. Care in resuming eating after long fast is of special importance.

ew Medical Inventions.

A DISPATCH from Ann Arbor, Mich., was recently published in The Times relating to a session of the ichigan Academy of Science. Following is an extract: "Dr. Frederick Novy of the University medical de- artment, told of the discovery of a new filterable virus iscovered by an unexpected epidemic among rats in the laboratory, used for experimenting upon. The virus produced a fever never before discovered. Reduced and diluted to a one-billionth part, it will cause an infection that is sure death. After being kept on ice for two months, it is as deadly as before being chilled."

How exceedingly interesting and important. If there is one thing that the human race is badly in need of, it is a new poison—and next to that a new disease. How much animal torture was necessary to acquire this invaluable information?

Beer Goes Up.

THERE seems to be no end to this increased cost of living. A number of the local cafés have raised the price of a stein of Los Angeles beer to 20 cents, when consumed in the evening. The wholesale price of the beer which a stein holds is about a cent and a half. So far, none of the café proprietors appear to have charged that this increased price is due to the tariff.

The Cost of Living.

WHILE the United States Senate Committee is still (presumably) struggling with the question as to whether the cost of living in America has been advanced, several eastern railroads have voluntarily increased wages, giving as a reason "the general prosperous condition of the railroads and the increased cost of living."

In a St. Louis dispatch recently published in The Times it was stated that J. Ogden Armour of Chicago had celebrated his indictment by the Hudson-county grand jury for conspiracy in controlling the prices of meat products with a "good time" in St. Louis. Mr. Armour would do well to remember the old saying that "he laughs best who laughs last." This question of the increased cost of living is by no means a joke to the great mass of American people who are compelled to struggle to make ends meet.

Mr. Armour also volunteered the information that the farmers are to blame for the increased cost of living. This is "important if true."

The "Argonaut" on Medical Tyranny.

IN the Care of the Body last week was reproduced a dispatch to The Times from Santa Cruz, announcing that a judge of the Superior Court had declared unconstitutional the State law making vaccination compulsory for all children in the public schools of California. Commenting upon this decision, that sterling journal the San Francisco Argonaut—which, as will be seen, does not oppose vaccination—comments thus, under the heading, "Medical Tyranny at Watsonville:"

"Judge Lucas F. Smith of Santa Cruz is to be congratulated upon his refusal to allow the State Board of Health forcibly to exclude a large number of children from the Watsonville schools upon the ground that such children have not been vaccinated. The law, says Judge Smith, is unconstitutional, inasmuch as it enforces vaccination upon the children of public schools and pointedly exempts those who attend private schools. It is therefore class legislation that draws a distinct line between the rich and the poor, seeing that there are many parents who dislike vaccination and yet who cannot afford to pay for the immunity furnished by the private institution.

"The decision will of course be described as a blow at vaccination. It is nothing of the sort, or it would not be applauded by the Argonaut. Most intelligent people believe in vaccination, but most intelligent people are also beginning to frown severely upon the medical legislator, the medical policeman, and the medical jailer. The decision is a rebuff to medical arrogance that tries, in the words of Judge Smith, 'to compel, by writ of mandate, another board of equal standing before the law to exclude children from public schools when there is no public necessity for so doing.'

"Medical legislators will have no one but themselves to blame if they find a wave of public sentiment running strongly against them, and such a sentiment will react against the whole profession. The action of the San Francisco Board of Health shows the extent to which the official doctor will go when he finds a community weak enough or superstitious enough to yield to his persuasions. The effrontery with which the board of health demanded for itself and for its politically-appointed and unqualified assistants the right to pronounce a sentence of perpetual imprisonment against any poor consumptive wretch selected for the purpose is evidence enough of the danger incurred when the doctor begins to pass laws. It is true that this particular demand was somewhat modified, but even in its modified form it remains a disgrace and an injury to the city. Judge Smith may feel that public opinion is behind him when he curtails the arrogance of the scientific tyranny which is capable of a relentless and remorseless cruelty that could not exist for twenty-four hours but for the fostered superstitions and credulities that sustain it."

Incidentally, this furnishes another strong argument against the granting of more power to the political doctors, in the shape of a national Department or Bureau of Health.

An Unpleasant Human Trait.

IN the Care of the Body of March 27 the leading article was entitled "The Lust for Blood." In it the editor of the department showed how much of the savage still survives under our thin veneer of what we call "civilization."

A confirmation of some of the statements made in that article was recently furnished by a well-known actress, Miss Florence Roberts, who, in an interview published in a local contemporary, declared that she had shelved all comedy rolls—that the public loves to view suffering. Miss Roberts went on to say:

"There is in every human being more or less of the brutish spirit. The average person enjoys, in a secret manner, his fellow's suffering. An accident in the street will draw an immense crowd, but a man laughing or in pleasant conversation is scarcely noticed.

"After performances of the most morbid and almost grewsome dramas I have welcomed any number of women to my dressing-room. Through their tears and between sobs every one of my visitors has said: 'I never enjoyed anything more in my life.' My visitors had had a most delightful cry. They had enjoyed seeing the suffering and misery of the character I portrayed. As we must give the public what the public wants, I shall continue to present tear-compelling dramas."

"'Tis pity, pity 'tis 'tis true." A great majority of human beings, male and female, take a secret satisfaction in the suffering, sins, and sorrows of others. It is, however, unfair to call this spirit "brutish"—unfair to the brutes who in some respects are above us. It is a purely human sentiment.

A Woman's Long Walk.

E. ZELLER, who until recently was a baker of hygienic bread and other foods in Los Angeles, recently moved to Inyo county, where he is now ranching, the bakery business being carried on by his son. He went by wagon, and had a hard trip. His wife made the entire journey of 260 miles on foot. Pretty good, this, for a woman fifty years of age who, ten years ago, was given up as a hopeless case by the "regulars."

The Wicked Flea.

THE political doctors in California, having about worked out the bubonic-plague-rat-flea bugaboo, are now trying to find further reasons for their continued (salaried) existence. The following dispatch from Sacramento was published in The Times under date of March 26:

"On the suggestion that California may be in danger of an invasion of fleas twice the size of the normal flea, Dr. W. F. Snow, secretary of the State Board of Health, has instituted an investigation of a colony of alleged trained fleas performing in San Francisco. The danger lies in the fact that should a pair of these escape from captivity it might not be long before California would be infested with droves of lusty insects eager for human gore.

"As soon as danger was suggested to him, Dr. Snow telephoned to Morris Mitzman, flea expert, connected with the United States plague commission at San Francisco, and asked him to take a look at the monsters on exhibition at the Chutes.

"Upon the report of Mitzman will depend the action to be taken by Dr. Snow. There is a quarantine against most kinds of foreign creatures which might invade the United States, but what might be done against this flea colony should it be decided a menace is a matter of conjecture."

This is indeed alarming. What are we to do about it? Perhaps they might call out the militia. Or, how would it be to call a special session of the Legislature, and have a law passed, providing for the muzzling of all fleas?

First, however, it would be necessary to catch the fleas.

The Bible says: "The wicked flee when no man pursueth." Yet the political doctors seem to stay right on their jobs. How's that?

A California Health Food.

ANOTHER addition to the long list of health foods has been placed on the market by our friend Otto Carqué. It is composed almost entirely of California products, including dried fruits, nuts, and a little partially-cooked grain. Such a food possesses advantages over the raw cereal foods on the market, which are harmful to the digestive organs, especially of those whose digestion is weak.

A "Crisis."

A MOTHER of a 7-year-old lad was daily expecting a visit from the stork, and found the little fellow's conduct so annoying that his father was called upon to interfere.

"Bobby," said papa, "mamma is quite ill, and we are afraid that if you are not a better boy and mind your mother, it will bring on a crisis. Now, my boy, perhaps you don't know what a crisis is."

"Oh, yes, I do, papa," said Bobby blithely, "it's either a boy or a girl."—[Judge.

Food, Health and Energy.

IN the April number of McClure's, one of the best of the American magazines, was an interesting and valuable article entitled "Some Modern Ideas on Food" by Burton J. Hendrick. Last year Mr. McClure spent some time at the Battle Creek Sanatorium, where he became greatly interested in the subject of rational diet. Since then he has, with some of his family and a part of his staff, adopted a reformed dietary. One result of his visit was the article above referred to, the author being specially detailed to make a thorough and careful investigation of the subject.

In the article the author goes into details in regard to the importance of thoroughly masticating food—

Care of the Body.

"Fletcherizing"—a low protein dietary, and the omitting, or eating little meat.

In opening his article the author errs somewhat in stating that medical "science" is gradually conquering all diseases. While some diseases have been lessened—not on account of medical "science," but rather on account of increased intelligence on part of the public—others, like cancer, have increased, and are increasing with awful strides. Several eminent physicians have expressed the belief that this increase in cancer is largely due to the operations of medical "science" in pumping animal poisons into the human blood during the past half a century, in the effort to suppress other diseases.

The author of the article also minimizes—in fact almost ignores—the importance of the organic salts in food. In some respects this is the most important part of our foods. It may be described as the "soul" or "essence" of food. The absence or partial removal of these organic salts is largely responsible for many of the ills that afflict poor humanity, and is undoubtedly the main cause of such diseases as leprosy, fish, also cocoanuts, being entirely lacking in iron.

The author refers to the "three chemical types of food, protein, carbohydrate, and fat." As to the organic salts, he dismisses them thus curtly: "Outside of minute quantities of certain mineral salts," etc. Again, he says: "Now the whole modern problem of nutrition of which we hear so much is essentially this: How much protein, and how much carbohydrate and fat are needed in the daily dietary?"

Nay, nay, dear Mr. Hendrick, you are entirely mistaken. The main problem in the food question is that the food we consume shall contain a sufficiency of life-giving mineral elements in the organic form—elements that are found in the human body. Otherwise, we must get sick and die before our time. When we consider that in cooking—especially in prolonged cooking—these salts are changed from the organic to the inorganic form, in which they cannot be utilized by the body, when we consider further that they are largely removed in the bolting of flour, and almost entirely removed in throwing away water in which vegetables are cooked, then we need not be surprised that many people, although they eat too much, are chronically starved. Also it is a deficiency of these salts that is one of the main causes of a craving for stimulants.

The author gives two menus adopted by Prof. Chittenden and Prof. Mendel of Yale University, to test the low-protein diet. These menus are exceedingly faulty, containing a surplus of starches and sweets, and being absolutely lacking in raw foodstuffs—green leaves and fruits—which are rich in the organic salts. This is an error common in most vegetarian dietaries, and accounts for the fact that so many people make a failure of a fleshless diet. As the editor of the Care of the Body has frequently said, the mere dropping of meat from the menu is not necessarily a step in advance, from a hygienic point of view, but may really be a step backward. The average vegetarian dietary, with its surplus of starches and sweets, is really more harmful than a diet including a little meat, and plenty of raw green stuff.

The author quotes Prof. Irving Fisher as saying that "real energetic health is the rarest possible human quality. Almost every mature man and woman is in some degree ill, in the sense that their bodies and minds do not realize their complete capacity. An ideally healthy man free throughout from ailment and disability is rarely, if ever, found."

What Prof. Fisher says is undoubtedly quite true.

An influential, widely-circulated magazine like McClure's can do an immense amount of good by taking up the discussion of hygienic questions from a sane point of view. The editor of the Care of the Body strongly recommends his hundred thousand or more readers to get a copy of April's McClure's if they have not one already, and to read this article. If you cannot get the magazine from your book seller, send for a copy to the S. S. McClure Company, No. 44 East Twenty-third street, New York.

Aseptic Drinking Cups.

A MOVEMENT for the abolition of public drinking cups has been started by the California State Board of Health. The Board will ask civic commercial and health bodies throughout California to take up the movement, by asking for bubbling drinking fountains in place of cups.

One does not have to be a crank or an extremist to object to the idea of placing one's mouth where a few minutes before have been the lips of a person who may have been suffering from some filthy disease, or, at least, may have been unclean in his habits.

A Los Angeles physician sends the editor of the Care of the Body samples of an aseptic individual drinking cup, made in Boston, of paper covered with paraffin, similar to milk bottles that were introduced in Los Angeles some time ago.

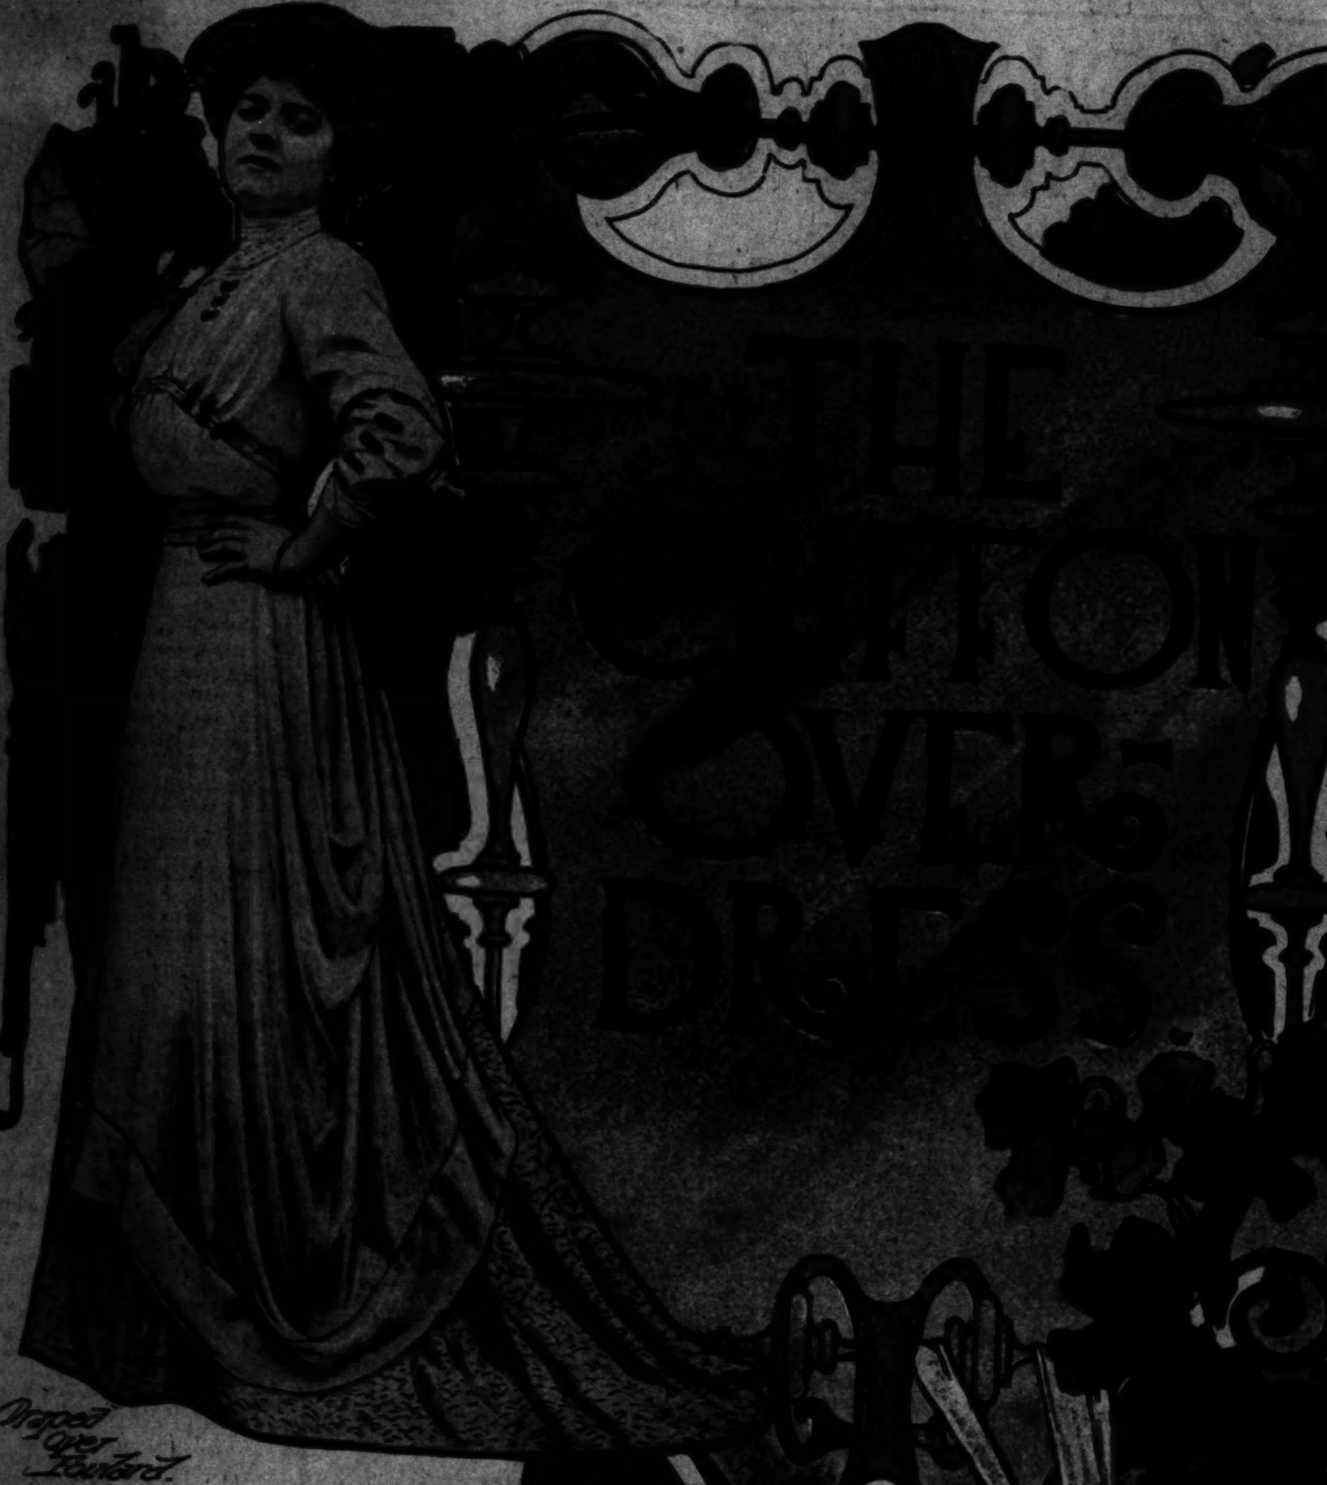
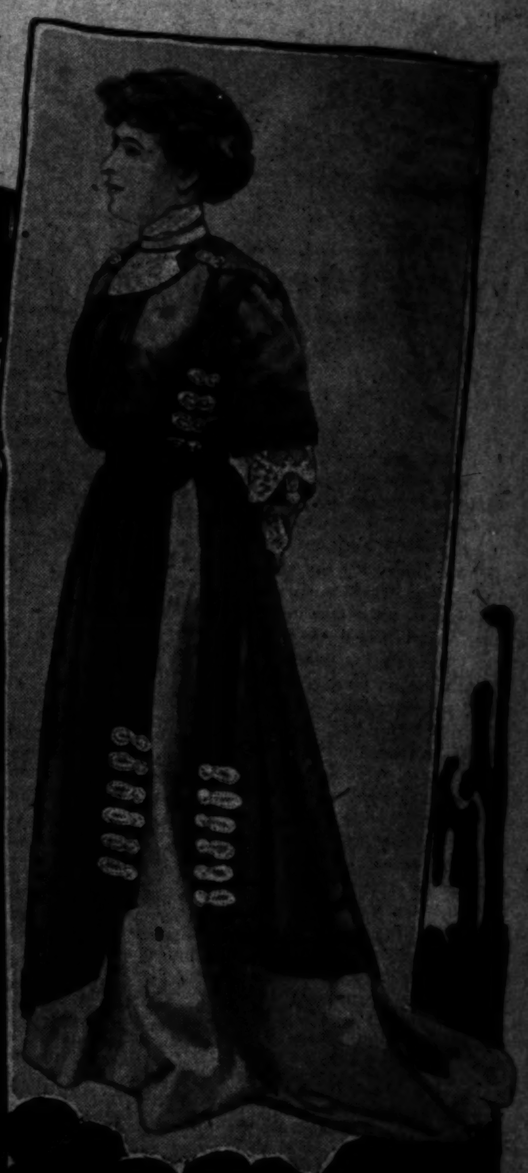
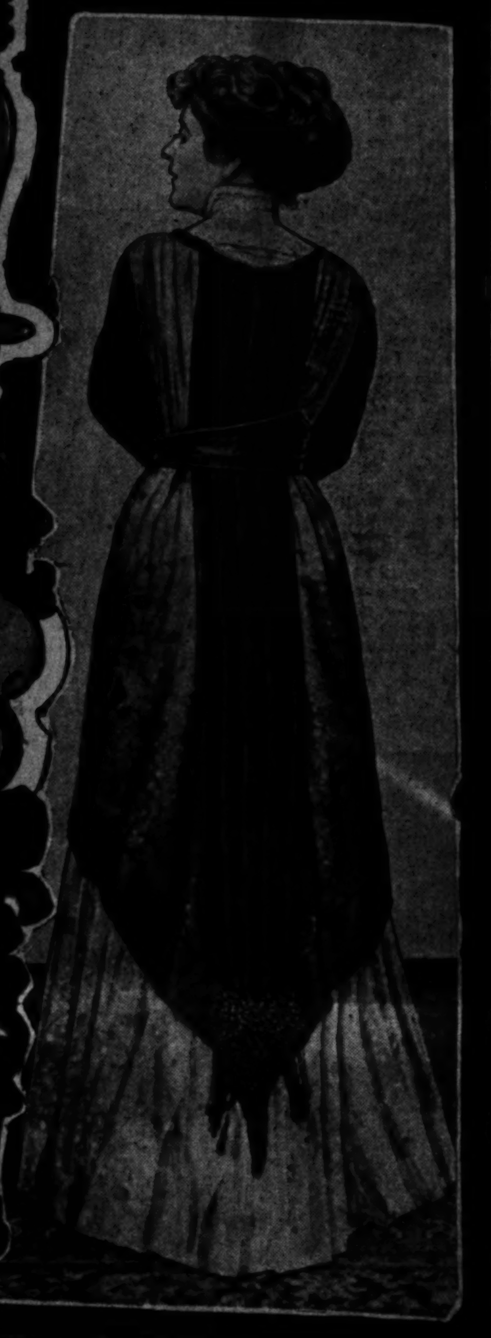
THE CHIFFON OVERDRESS



Draped over Foulard.



Black Over Blue Silk.



Weighted at the Back.

THE alliance of different materials in the same costume finds beautiful expression in the overdress of chiffon that is combined with a foundation as varying as the occasions of a woman's day demand.

Although filmy and unsubstantial in texture, it forms an important part of the afternoon frock or the dinner gown, and in many cases the whole effect depends upon the construction of this overdress.

The overdress with the shirred top offers a suggestion to one who can use fulness of line to advantage. Cords are used to give a firm foundation at the top, and the half-length sleeves are full and edged with a pointed cuff. Embroidery forms a decorative border for the tunic, belt and cuffs. The whole is slipped over a white dress.

Over the blue charmeuse the black chiffon is adjusted. Fine tucks ornament the bodice, black satin forms the girdle and silk buttons and cord of blue are placed at the side of the bodice and slashed skirt. The half-length sleeves lessen any contrast between the lace undersleeves and the black foundation. This suggests the use of another season's silk dress with a short length of chiffon.

The lingerie dress of white embroidery has come under its sway. In the pale rose tunic there is a simple use of chiffon which, by its loose lines, promises success to even the amateur. The sleeves and bodice are in one piece, and the lines are suggestive of the Russian blouse. Soft silk and pearl buttons furnish the trimming.

The dark overdress gives a long, broad line at the back, secured by folds of the chiffon and weighted at the end by a huge jet ornament. This is artfully contrived to hold the filmy tunic in place over the no less soft figured chiffon.

When draped over foulard, the chiffon is particularly attractive. Again the kimono sleeve is in evidence, and the touch of black velvet is used on the chiffon as a reflection of decoration on the undersleeves. A panier effect is secured by the soft folds below the hip.

The apron form is just one more change of which the chiffon overdress is capable. Bound at the pointed top and the armholes with silk of the same tone, it is crossed over the front and is fastened under the arm. The straight section at the back falls from the waist in full folds that suggest the gathered skirt that is the accepted note on many new gowns.

There is art in the fashioning of the overdress, and wise is she who from these tangible evidences of this idea selects the general scheme and adds to it any points that will insure a becoming whole.

WHEN WE MUST USE CANNED GOODS—and HOW

A COUNTRY correspondent, who lives six miles from a railway and three from the nearest gro- ry, has a lamentable tale to tell: "We are not, strictly speaking, vege- rians, but we agree with you that it not wholesome to eat too much meat. oreover, unless we are content to have lt pork for dinner three times a week, e must go meatless many times in the inter. Heavy storms block the roads d hinder the butcher from making his unds twice weekly. Then, again, we e vegetables. Our potato bin is well lled and lasts us until late in the ring. We have turnips and beets and bbage. But we get tired of all three! e used to vary them by 'canned oods,' and very much to our satisfac- n. For the last two years we have ard so many dreadful things about ese same canned things that we have, my old Scotch grandmother used to y, 'Ta'en a scunner against them.' e feel the lack of them more than I n tell. We miss the nice corn pud- ngs and the string beans and toma- es and asparagus we used to buy by e dozen cans and set in goodly order pon our storeroom shelves in the fall draw upon during the long winter. n you help us to a substitute for the nished provisions, or tell us if all these ngs ought really and truly to be assed as 'embalmed foods'?"

. E. S. (Pinehurst, Ulster county, N. Y.).

It is not surprising that you should ve been set against preserved foods the revelations of the last few years. confess to the same dread in my own se. The able chemical experts who are nd enough to aid and abet me in the vestigations I have made along the ne of adulteration and chemical treat- ent of meats, vegetables and fruits ve supplied me, in days now, I would in hope, gone by, with startling analy- s of divers natural products designed r the consumption, and presumably e nourishment, of human beings—so rtling in some instances that I have ruck canned meats and a majority of nned fruits and vegetables from my t of household commodities. Hence e return to the practice of twenty-odd ars ago, of putting up our own pre- rves and pickles and canning all man- r of eatables for winter use.

PROTECTIVE MEASURES

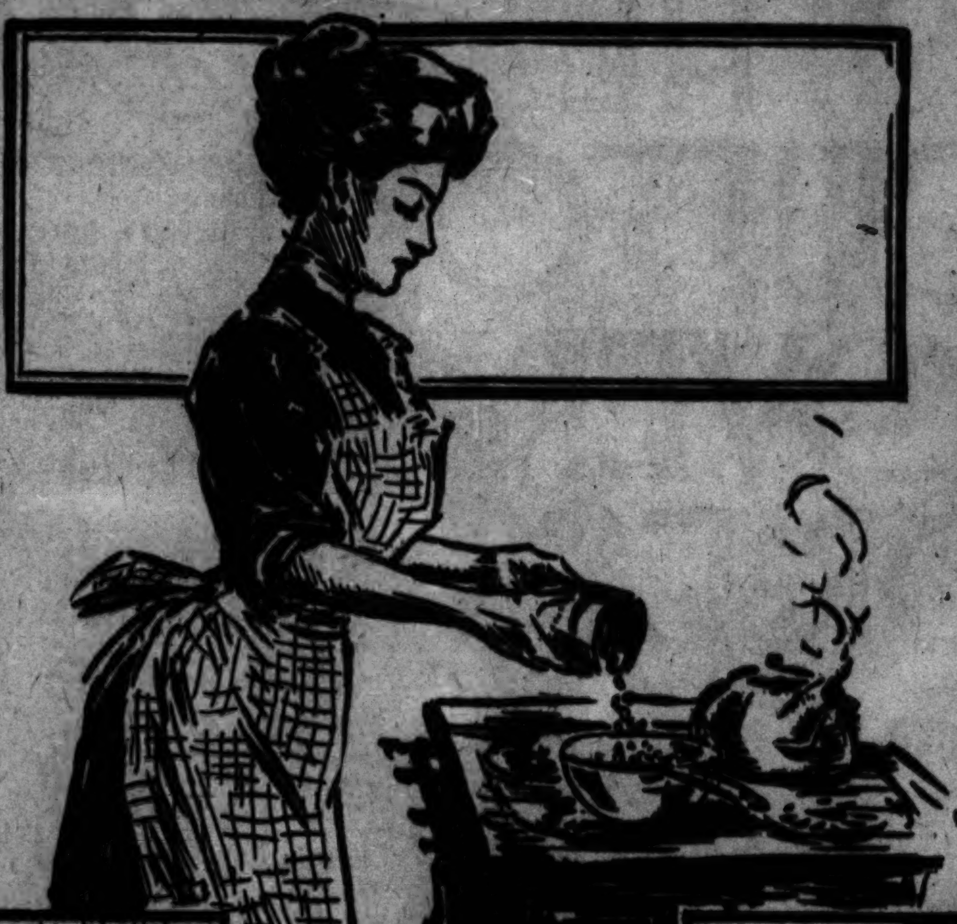
Now, or so I am credibly informed by ose who claim to be qualified to speak ith authority upon the subject, the re-food law has so far reformed the uses of which we have spoken that is quite safe to partake of "canned ods" that have been put up since the ssage of that law. If artificial means —the use of chemicals intended to pre- ent fermentation—are resorted to in he preparation of such foods for the arket, the manufacturer incurs the anger of a heavy fine if he neglect to tate the fact in the label upon the can r jar containing the vegetable or ani- ual substance. This protective measure s an unspeakable boon to the house- other who does not live near enough o city or town market to obtain the resh vegetables and fruits that are rought from the South and defy the nterdict of winter.

Before we talk of the proper use of anned foods, let me remark, with em- hasis and gratitude, that I have ex- epted tomatoes from the ban placed pon other artificially preserved vege- ables. Perhaps because the simple process of heating has been found sufficient to guard them against decomposition, we have not yet detected in cans of this invaluable vegetable any trace of mineral preservatives. We have used canned tomatoes freely and fearlessly throughout the embargo period.

Not one cook in twenty prepares canned foods properly for the table. To this ignorance or carelessness is due a large proportion of the suspicion with which the "tinned stuffs," as they are called in England, are regarded by thousands of caterers and eaters. At their best, they were but an indifferent substitute for fresh fruits, vegetables, meats and fish. So much the more reason why we should bestow intelligent care upon them, restoring to them, as far as possible, the flavor and nutritive properties of their former estate.

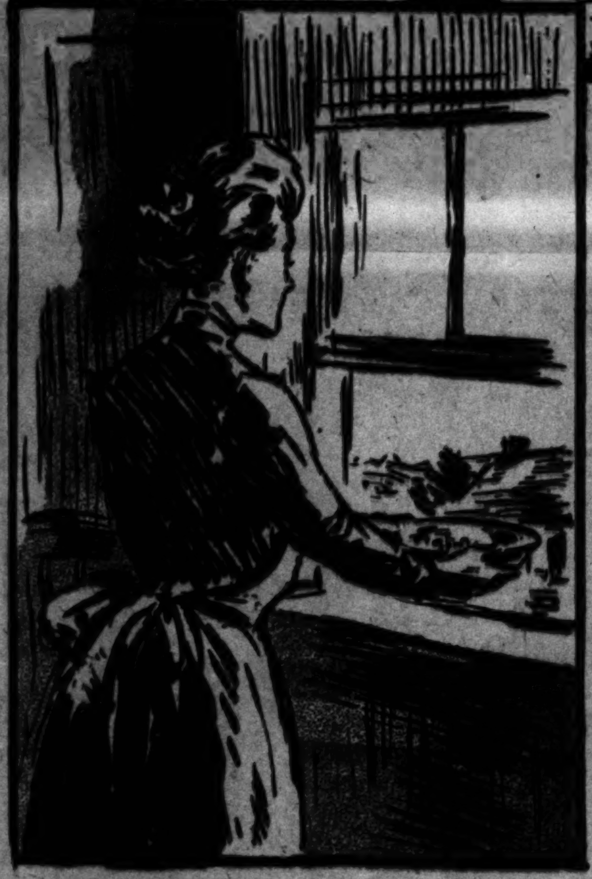
AN INVARIABLE RULE

To begin with—and to this dictum there is no exception—the contents of can or glass jar should be turned out into another vessel five or six hours before it is to be cooked or eaten. Tomatoes, corn, beans, peaches, plums, spinach, and especially green peas, should, one and all, be aired to get rid of the "close" taste imparted by cooling in hermetically sealed cans. It may not be unwholesome; it is undeniably unpleasant. If I lay stress upon the necessity that green peas should be aerated, it is because they suffer more from the long stages of airlessness than less delicate edibles. The slight smoky flavor of canned French or American canned peas is commonly accepted as inseparable from them when they have been artificially preserved. We all know it, and most of us submit to it. Some dislike it so heartily that they never eat canned peas. If the contents of the can be poured into a colander, the liquor in which the peas have been kept thrown away and the peas put into an open bowl of iced water and left there for two or three hours, then cooked in the usual way, there will be no taste or smell of the "smoke." Keep the water cold, changing once for fresh. The average cook will hardly "take the trouble" to obey directions so simple, and which involve little loss of time or toil. The independent housemother who "does her own work" will be thankful for the hint.

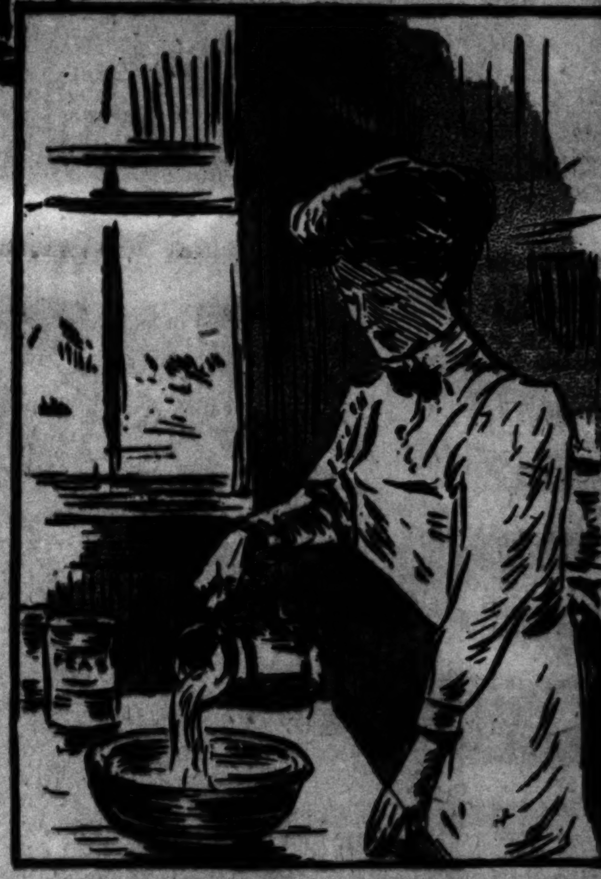


"The average cook merely dumps the contents into a saucepan."

Treat lima beans and asparagus to the bath of cold water. The liquor in which they have lain for weeks and months was devitalized by boiling, and it holds the undesirable raw essence of the esculent. Never cook a vegetable in the water in which it was canned. Tomatoes and spinach are preserved in their native juices. They are, therefore, exceptions to the rule. While it is not practicable to drain from corn the milk that exudes in canning, it is well to pour away the thinner liquid. Give the contents of the can a slight shake in the colander to rid them of the watery part of the liquor; let them air for several hours in a cool place (not the icebox); put over the fire in the inner vessel of a double boiler, and when they have cooked ten minutes add half a cupful of hot milk into which you have stirred a tablespoonful of butter, with salt and white pepper to taste. Simmer ten minutes longer, and you will have corn somewhat resembling in sweetness the original article.



"Let canned vegetables air in a cool place."



"Peas are put into a bowl of ice water."

A corn pudding eaten as a vegetable is a wholesome variety in a winter menu. After preparing it as for stewing, take from the fire, stir in two beaten eggs and a teaspoonful of flour rolled in cornstarch. Bake, covered, for twenty minutes, then brown.

Succotash made of corn and lima beans that were canned separately is far superior to the canned succotash sold by the grocer. Treat the corn as if it were to be cooked alone; air the beans and soak in cold water for two hours. Put them over the fire in hot salted water, bring to a boil, drain and add to the corn, which is simmering in another vessel, seasoned as for stewing. Heat the two together not more than five minutes.

WHEN TROUBLE PAYS

More troublesome than when the can marked "succotash" is opened twenty minutes before dinnertime, "dumped" just as it is into a common single saucepan, seasoned with a lump of butter, a dash of salt and a shake of pepper. I do not deny it! Yet if you will examine the provisions of the recipe you will see that compliance with them is a matter of brain expenditure and neither of time nor labor. The distinction makes all the difference between intelligent and unskilled, slovenly culinary operations.

One of my masculine critics—of which, I am proud to say, we register so few that they hardly count in the number of approving friends of the same gender—warns me against "frills" in writing for housewives who "do not keep a girl." If these commonsense directions for securing the best results from cheap materials without increase of cost be "frills," then—as Patrick Henry said of the imputation of "treason"—let my censor "profit by the example" of th who makes her brain supply the money.

Spinach comes to us now in at a price that does not preclu pearance weekly upon the table family of moderate means. Turn five hours before cooking it. double boiler with the top off hour; season with a tablesp butter, salt and paprika to taste spoonful of sugar, a wee pinch meg or mace and a tablespoonful on juice. Cook one minute garnished with triangles of If you can spare three tablesp cream, beat into the spinach have a smooth green mass not forgetting the toast.

The possibilities of tomatoes yond counting. As one example truth of this, take scalloped Drain off all the liquor that will away without pressing, setting it for other purposes. Butter a bak and put a layer of the drained in the bottom. Cover this with of fine crumbs, season with salt, and a few drops of onion juice lightly with sugar and dot Now another layer of tomato more seasoned crumbs. Fill the this order, the last layer being dotted rather thickly with butte closely and bake half an hour. brown slightly. If the tomatoes not been drained too much, moisture will be left in them to the scallop soft.

FROM THE LEFT-OVERS

The reserved liquor may be made soup or into tomato aspic, which a few leaves of lettuce, will supp with a delicious salad. Half a d cans of tomatoes may be bough cents. You may put both these upon your table for cents.

Or, if you have scraps of any kin meat in the refrigerator, drain the matoes, chop the meat and mix wit cupful of boiled rice and the drained matoes. Moisten with a little stock a left-over of gravy and bake as would scalloped tomatoes. You then a soup and a meat dish. This may be done for 25 cents.

In both these cases the excellen the dishes depends upon seasoni ly. Do not think it beneath you nity to study effects of combi and of flavoring in cookery. these means that you may obt best results from unpromising rials.

THE HOUSEMOTHERS' EXCHANGE

White Fruit Cake

A RECIPE for white fruit cake is called for in the Exchange.

If "C. H." will take a good recipe for a plain white cake and add fruit according to her judgment (as I do), a nice white fruit cake will be the result.

The white cake for which I [illegible] recipe may be baked in layers with a fruit filling. It is fine.

Plain White Cake.

Eleven eggs beaten stiff; three full cups of sugar; one full cup of butter; one cupful of hot water; three cupfuls of flour, or enough to make a good batter. (I have [illegible] but it takes four cupfuls; it depends upon the brand of flour.) The water should be so hot that you can just bear your hand in it.

Cream the butter and sugar; add flour and water alternately until all the water is used up. Next add, alternately, the rest of the flour and the beaten eggs, with a teaspoonful of baking powder with the flour. Flavor to taste.

This can't be excelled as a white cake.

PERCY (Louisville, Ky.).

Our Kentucky members are such noted housekeepers and cooks that I accept your statement as to the excellence of a cake that seems to me rather oddly put together. And what makes it "white"? The yolks of eleven eggs should color it richly. Please write us again and throw light upon this point. Perhaps you meant to write: "The whites of eleven eggs." But you didn't!

The same correspondent sends in a recipe for something of which she says: "I do not know the name. The German lady from whom I got it gave none." With her permission I christen it

German Tea Cakes.

One cupful of nut kernels; half a pound of raisins (seeded and chopped); a quarter pound of butter; half a cupful of molasses; one even teaspoonful of soda, and the same each of cloves, allspice and colander (?) flour to make a stiff batter. Roll into a sheet and cut into round cakes.

You have written "colander" so plainly that I cannot mistake the word. Is it a spice unknown to me? Or something else?

A second reason why we should have another letter from you.

Actual Figures Demanded

We are having letters from Marion Harland on the subject of living cheaper, on hired girls, on cooking beef tongue and calf's liver, etc.; but, say, on the level, why don't we have something that will be of benefit to the people who live in the $12-a-month houses, and who constitute the [illegible] of the population, doing the [illegible]-a-monther," who, two to one, helps to add to the "overhead expense" that is charged up in the retail price—in other words, the clerks, salesmen and others? How about the poor devils who must feed two, four or six on $8 to $12 per week, and don't keep any hired girl to throw in the slopbucket what would feed a family on the back street? We hear a lot about using the "cheaper pieces of meat." What are they, and how can they be made eatable and wholesome? What vegetables make good selection and what are useless, so far as food value is concerned? Figure it all out for a week, and give us the "menu" for each meal of the twenty-one, without a whole lot of "frills" that the average poor man's wife has neither the time nor strength to bother with. The fellow who has got to the "keep-a-girl" stage of affluence ought to have brain enough to figure out his own economy in the household.

In connection with Marion Harland's expressions as to girls staying home and helping mother, instead of working in offices and stores, etc., a friend of the writer, who has traveled considerably, made the statement some time ago, "No daughter of mine will ever be a stenographer; I have seen too much." It is a matter of wonder to the writer that mothers will permit their daughters to work in offices where they know nothing, absolutely, of the conditions and people with whom the girl comes in contact.

INTERESTED (Philadelphia).

It would require a whole page to answer all the queries and criticisms of our masculine critic. In the preparation of my weekly menus, I have honestly believed that I was catering for families of moderate means. I have never assumed to make out "menus" that would feed six people upon 75 cents a day. I can tell them of foods that will sustain life and keep one in a fair degree of health at that rate. If I were to confine my directions to that class, what of the great multitude of the "halfway poor" I have in mind continually?

I told some weeks ago of the contented laddie who breakfasted, dined and supped upon "brose"—id est, oatmeal porridge—and when asked if he did not get tired of it, returned in surprise, "An' why should a mon weary o' his meat?" "Meat" standing with him for his daily food.

If American "Interested" is willing to breakfast upon plenty of "brose" with milk, and lend a savory smack to his bread by a rasher of bacon or a strip of salt pork, washing it down with a cup of coffee; if he will dine upon a bowl of broth thickened with barley or rice, potatoes, bread and cheese, with bread and treacle for a last course; if he will crackers and cheese, cookies and tea—he will fare better than Scotch and English peasant and as well, so far as materials go, as the French laborer. The difference between him and the last-named is that the French wife knows how to prepare homely fare until it approximates luxury and the wives of the others do not. Hundreds of American farmers do not see "butcher's meat" upon their tables more than once a week. "Interested" can afford this luxury upon $8 a week for a family of six. It will be a "chuck rib," or brisket of corned beef, or pig's feet, or such bits of mutton as the butcher heaps together at the end of the counter "to sell to foreigners," as one told me when I asked what they were kept for.

"Who know no better than to buy them!" sneered a woman who overheard him.

I could not help saying quietly: "Who know how to cook them!"

A toss of the head was all the comment she made.

I shall probably get the same, or its equivalent, from "Interested."

If I have not made it plain in all these months and years how the cheaper cuts may be rendered eatable and wholesome, I cannot hope to do it in the compass of one page. Not one American cook in forty knows how to make soups that are both palatable and wholesome. Giblets, liver, the heads and hearts and tongues of calves and sheep, the ragouts and hashes that might be compounded from "trimmings" are so much trash in her sight, as salads are "frills."

A Southern woman wrote to me once, saying that the deer were so abundant and tame in the forests near her house that her husband might shoot one a day if he liked. "Could I tell her of some way of cooking venison that would make it tolerably eatable?"

The reader may draw his own moral from the anecdote.

As to vegetables—potatoes have gone up until they are no longer a cheap article of diet. They will hold their own upon thousands of tables, be the price what it may, if for no better reason than that custom has made them a necessity to most of us. Rice is more wholesome and nutritious—if (ah! that fatal "if"!) the housemother knows how to cook it. The water in which rice is boiled is a valuable addition to the stockpot. Yet nineteen out of every [illegible] as they would dishwater. May I describe one simple dish which my family enjoy as a "pick-up luncheon"?

A Luncheon Dish

Break into inch lengths half a pound macaroni or spaghetti, and boil it tender in salted water. If you have a weak stock, so much the better. If stock be used, return it to the pot when the spaghetti is drained. The cereal has enriched it. Put a layer of spaghetti in the bottom of a bakedish and strew over it any minced meat you may happen to have. Over this put a layer of drained and chopped canned tomatoes, seasoning each layer with pepper, salt and onion juice. Fill the dish in this order, pour in enough stock to keep it from drying, cover with fine crumbs and bake, covered, for half an hour. Then brown lightly. We like the addition of grated cheese to the uppermost layer, and now and then omit the meat and substitute grated cheese.

Any bits of cold cooked meat will flavor the dish sufficiently with the touch of savoriness the meat-eater's palate craves. It is of Italian origin, and very good when rightly seasoned. Should any be left, chop it next day and put into your soup. Rice may be used instead of macaroni, if you like.

Straight Talk.

Onions are never dear and are exceedingly nutritious. Boil them in two waters always, and if you can spare enough milk to use instead of the second water, they are delicious.

Turnips hold too great a percentage of water to be of value as bone or brawn or brain makers. Yet they introduce pleasant variety into plain fare and are liked by many.

Carrots are very nourishing. Cooked tender and served in a white sauce, they are wholesome and palatable. They are more palatable when parboiled, cut into short lengths and fried in batter.

Canned tomatoes are said to have suffered less from artificial preservatives than any other vegetable. They may therefore be eaten freely. A quart will supply material for the Italian dish I have described and the foundation of a nice soup. Boil, season well; thicken the juice to your fancy, and just before serving stir in a cupful of milk, boiling hot, to which you have added a quarter teaspoonful of baking soda.

I could talk on this head for a longer time than "Interested" can spare from exhausting it, and yet, perhaps, without convincing him that cheap foods are not of necessity coarse.

If I do not see that "keeping a girl" implies "affluence," or that that or any other degree of affluence implies brain enough to keep family expenses down when prices are inflated, it is probably because what brain is left to me after hammering upon the "economy" anvil for three months is not of a quality to appreciate my critic's ideas of cause and effect.

To "S. J. W.," of Virginia

Is this what "S. J. W.," of Virginia, wants?

Marshmallow Cream.

One-half pound of fresh marshmallows; one cup of chopped English walnuts; one cupful of whipped cream (stiff); two teaspoonfuls of powdered sugar; one teaspoonful of vanilla. Cut the marshmallows into small bits; stir these with the sugar and vanilla into the whipped cream and sprinkle the chopped nuts on top. Set in the ice until you are ready to serve. I often use this instead of ice cream at small gatherings.

E. F. E. (Milwaukee, Wis.).

An acceptable substitute for the invariable ice cream without which good Americans fancy they cannot "entertain." And how tired some of us get of it!

To "C. H.," of Bolton, Ga.

Dear C. H. (Bolton, Ga.).

In answer to your request for a recipe for white fruit cake, please accept the inclosed. I have tried it and we like it very much.

White Fruit Cake.

Whites of three eggs; one large cupful of pulverized sugar; one-half cupful of butter; one-half cupful of sweet milk; one and a half cups of flour; two level teaspoonfuls of baking powder; one large cupful of chopped raisins; chopped citron—as much or as little as you fancy.

Beat the whites of the eggs very stiff and fold in, last of all. Bake in a moderate oven, in a mould or in a large shallow pan.

F. M. K. (Pittsfield, Mass.).

For the excellent, and brief, formula we are your grateful debtors, albeit it was meant for a single reader. I laid hold upon it for the general good.

Another White Fruit Cake

Cream together half a pound of butter and a pound of powdered sugar until very light. Add a cup of cold water and three cups of flour which has been sifted twice with two rounded teaspoonfuls of baking powder. [illegible] and chopped raisins, a quarter pound of shredded citron, a half pound each of chopped figs, chopped dates and chopped blanched almonds. Dredge these thoroughly with flour. Now stir into the batter the whites of five eggs whipped very stiff. Do this with light swift strokes, beating the batter up from the bottom with each stroke. Lastly, beat in the fruit.

Bake for three hours in deep pans lined with paper. Ice with tutti-frutti frosting.

EMILIE (Brooklyn, N. Y.).

I am thinking, in transcribing the recipe, what a fine wedding-cake your white loaf would make. We hope to hear from you again, and thank you for your compliance with our request for the recipe.

Calf's Liver

May I pass along my way of cooking calf's liver? I have read with much interest what you say of the possibilities of it and other materials which should be better known.

The Recipe.

Have it sliced by the butcher. Roll the slices in flour; fry in deep lard or dripping until they are done and nicely browned. Take it up and keep hot upon a platter while you mix a tablespoonful of browned flour into a thin paste with vinegar. Put a little water in the frying pan; bring to a boil; stir in the flour paste, and season to taste. When done, pour over the liver. You will soon learn what are the right proportions of vinegar, water, etc.

My John likes liver cooked in this way and in no other.

Many dishes require much work to get them just right, but this is very simple.

E. R. F. (Muscatine, Iowa).

Referred to a Trained Nurse

Kindly tell me what experience one must have before entering a hospital as a nurse, and where I should inquire for the position.

I am 25 years of age, and must earn my own living. I should like to study a profession in which I could learn something and at the same time earn my living. I have an inclination for nursing.

Mrs. S. C. (New Jersey).

In asking some of the trained nurses who co-operated with us in the mission of holding hands whenever we may be of use to others to reply to this query, I remark that the profession requires long and diligent training. Severe examinations must be passed and work performed that tyros little dream of when they are led into it by natural inclination and the need of self-support. May I not look for a brief statement from a trained nurse, of what must be done in order to enter the ranks and of

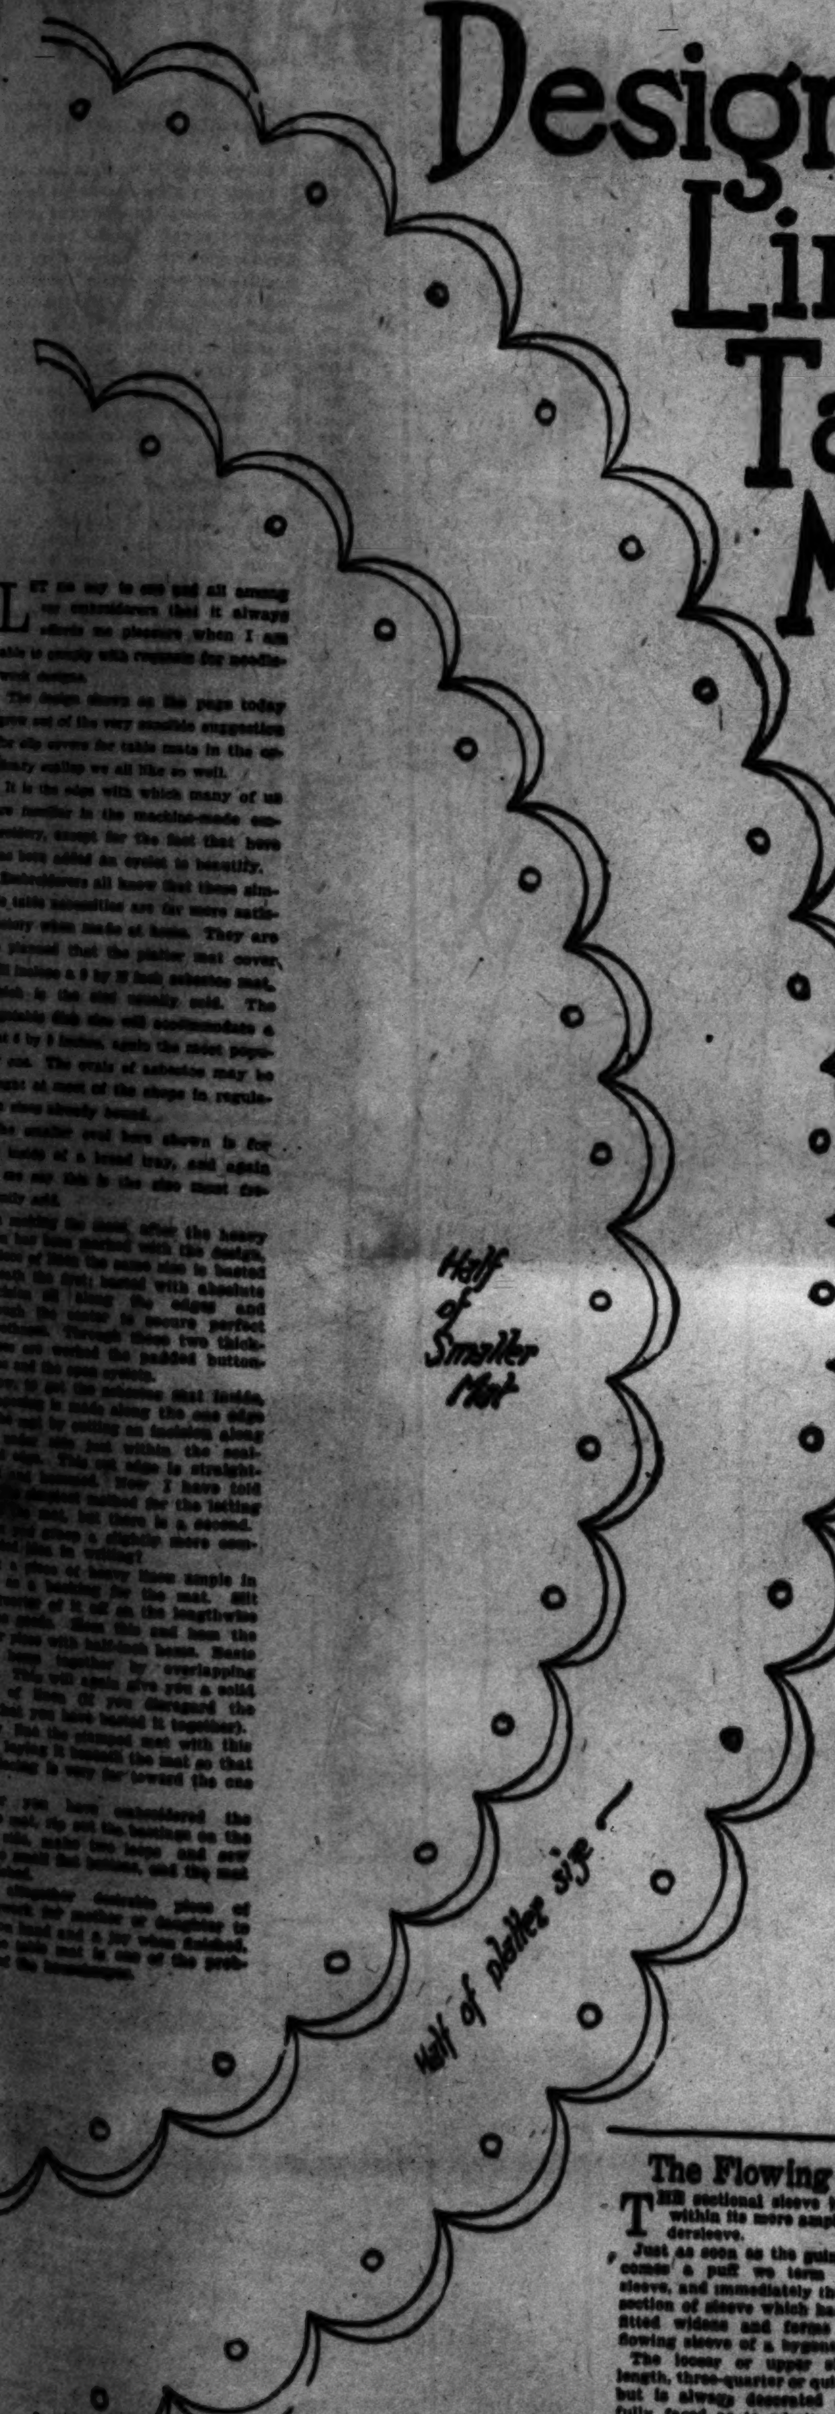
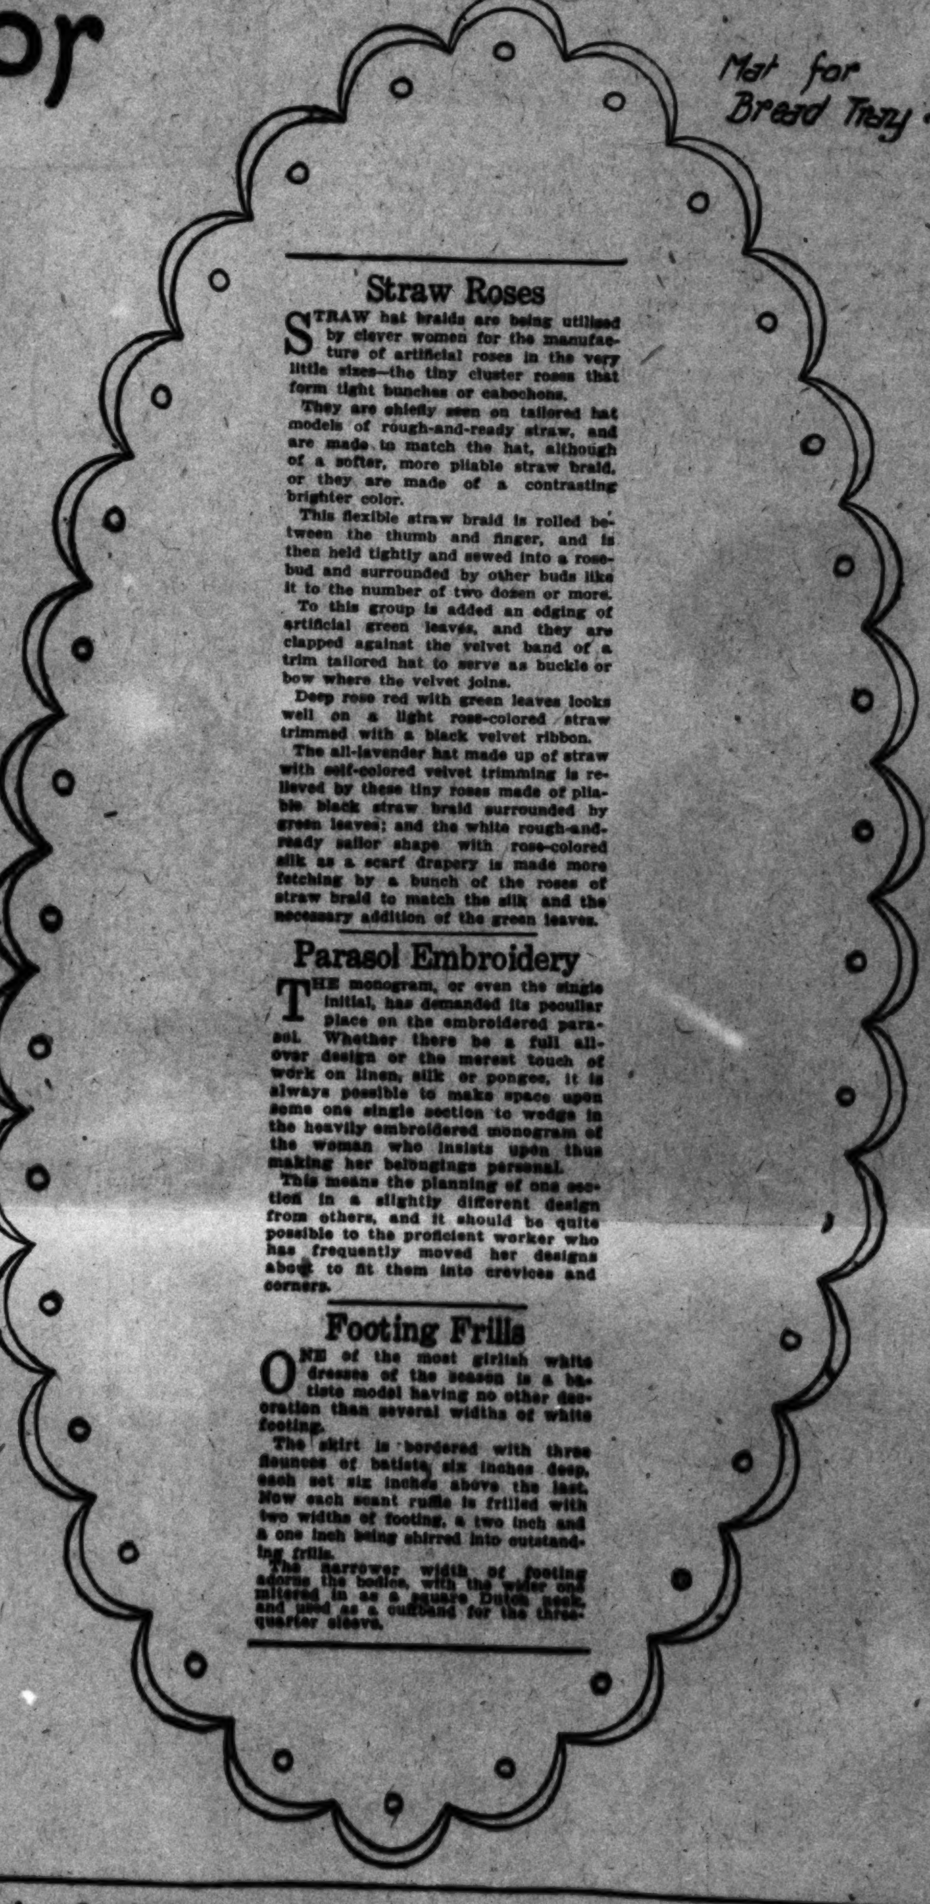
Design for Linen Table Mats

Designed by E.T. Buchman





LET me say to one and all among our embroiderers that it always affords me pleasure when I am able to comply with requests for needlework designs.

The design shown on the page today grew out of the very sensible suggestion for slip covers for table mats in the ordinary scallop we all like so well.

It is the edge with which many of us are familiar in the machine-made embroidery, except for the fact that here has been added an eyelet to beautify.

Embroiderers all know that these simple table necessities are far more satisfactory when made at home. They are so planned that the platter mat cover will inclose a 9 by 12 inch asbestos mat, which is the size usually sold. The vegetable dish size will accommodate a mat 6 by 9 inches, again the most popular one. The ovals of asbestos may be bought at most of the shops in regulation sizes already bound.

The smaller oval here shown is for the inside of a bread tray, and again let me say this is the size most frequently sold.

In making the mats, after the heavy linen has been marked with the design, a piece of linen the same size is basted beneath the first; basted with absolute precision all along the edges and through the center to secure perfect smoothness. Through these two thicknesses are worked the padded buttonholes and the open eyelets.

Now, to get the asbestos mat inside, an opening is made along the one edge of the mat by cutting an incision along the under side just within the scalloped edge. This cut edge is straightened and hemmed. Now I have told [illegible] simplest method for the letting in of the mat, but there is a second. Can you grasp a slightly more complicated idea in writing?

Cut a piece of heavy linen ample in size as a backing for the mat. Slit one-quarter of it off on the lengthwise of the goods. Hem this and hem the larger piece with half-inch hems. Baste these hems together by overlapping them. This will again give you a solid piece of linen (if you disregard the fact that you have basted it together). Now line the stamped mat with this piece, laying it beneath the mat so that the piecing is very far toward the one side.

After you have embroidered the double mat, rip out the bastings on the under side, make two loops and sew on two small flat buttons, and the mat is finished.

An altogether desirable piece of needlework for mother or daughter to keep on hand and a joy when finished, for the table mat is one of the problems of the housekeeper.

Straw Roses

STRAW hat braids are being utilised by clever women for the manufacture of artificial roses in the very little sizes—the tiny cluster roses that form tight bunches or cabochons.

They are chiefly seen on tailored hat models of rough-and-ready straw, and are made to match the hat, although of a softer, more pliable straw braid, or they are made of a contrasting brighter color.

This flexible straw braid is rolled between the thumb and finger, and is then held tightly and sewed into a rosebud and surrounded by other buds like it to the number of two dozen or more.

To this group is added an edging of artificial green leaves, and they are clapped against the velvet band of a trim tailored hat to serve as buckle or bow where the velvet joins.

Deep rose red with green leaves looks well on a light rose-colored straw trimmed with a black velvet ribbon.

The all-lavender hat made up of straw with self-colored velvet trimming is relieved by these tiny roses made of pliable black straw braid surrounded by green leaves; and the white rough-and-ready sailor shape with rose-colored silk as a scarf drapery is made more fetching by a bunch of the roses of straw braid to match the silk and the necessary addition of the green leaves.

Parasol Embroidery

THE monogram, or even the single initial, has demanded its peculiar place on the embroidered parasol. Whether there be a full all-over design or the merest touch of work on linen, silk or pongee, it is always possible to make space upon some one single section to wedge in the heavily embroidered monogram of the woman who insists upon thus making her belongings personal.

This means the planning of one section in a slightly different design from others, and it should be quite possible to the proficient worker who has frequently moved her designs about to fit them into crevices and corners.

Footing Frills

ONE of the most girlish white dresses of the season is a batiste model having no other decoration than several widths of white footing.

The skirt is bordered with three flounces of batiste, six inches deep, each set six inches above the last. Now each scant ruffle is frilled with two widths of footing, a two inch and a one inch being shirred into outstanding frills.

The narrower width of footing adorns the bodice, with the wider one mitered in as a square Dutch neck, and used as a cuffband for the three-quarter sleeve.

FOR THE HOME MILLINER

MALINE in the hands of the u to-date milliner has taken u itself a new significance. A actual trimming it now appea whereas it was once used merely bolster up the hat or to soften along the line of the coiffure. Pok into the crevices beneath the hat, has done noble duty in the past, b it is now raised to a more promine position in the millinery world.

The spring hat, and even more n ticeably the summer hat, will show t maline treatment at its best.

Whole hats are made of it upon wi frames. Firstly, let the danger note sounded: keep the hat airy and daint and, secondly, be it remembered th quantity stands for almost more th quality in maline.

Upon no condition cover the fra first with heavy silk; one of the bea ties of the shirred or rolled maline h is its sheerness. Never mind if t daylight shows through your crown your brim; this is one of the notes of very lacy season.

So that you may be able to make t hat, cover the frame first with mali itself, or with the sheerest mousseline the same shade, or the lighter of t two if yours has been a choice of t shades to make a changeable hat.

CHANGEABLE EFFECTS

The last note in dressmaking and millinery is the effect changeable, a delicate hat fabrics give wonderful o portunity for bringing this about.

Black over gold-colored or over whi maline is fetching, or the rolling plaiting together of long strands of di ferent tones, such as blue with black light green with black, is most effecti and suggestive of this very promine note in millinery.

If you would cover a whole hat wi rolls or plaits of maline, get a small beehive frame than is your final objec because these big, loose twists w vastly increase the size. On a larg brimmed model from Paris—one with roll to the side—there was a plait maline made up of three long stri loosely folded over some long stran of raffia. The plait was so large an thick as to lie loosely upon the who brim.

Bordeaux red raffia covered with bla on a black hat is a perfect combina tion.

The large bows upon the maline-deco rated hat are almost innumerable counted, and the milliner no longer de pends upon wires, which she may or ma not conceal, to hold them up. She hold twists round each wire a long, wi ribbon, and this she loops in the cent of each big maline loop, so that it hold up the great bows, while it helps t adorn them and the hat.

Persian, paisley and even pompadou ribbons have been used under almos any shade of plain maline in this sup port. Still another device is the loopin into bows of two thicknesses of malin one black, the other a deep rose, an then covering the upholding wires wit a thick decorative wrapping of the ro maline.

SOME LITTLE POINTS

Flowers are largely veiled with some thing diaphanous, and the same shee stuff with which we are growing so fa miliar is used instead of artificial leave It is poked in among roses and othe flowers to give the leaf effect in sma green loops.

The cabochon has not escaped a frivo lous touch. The tiny quills that go t make up large feathered disks ar brought into cabochon shape and char acter by a pleated or gathered strip o maline mounted upon a disk of cape ne The pleating surrounds the disk and th feathered "wheel" fills up the cente The same pleating of maline surround many a rosy cabochon made of artifici flowers and leaves.

More than ever before is it necessar for the home milliner to know certai choice materials belonging to the trad Cape net is one of these. It is a stif fened bobbinet used for the backs o certain round or high ornaments, an for the stiffening of large crush crown that would otherwise not stand in plac

Another friend of the milliner is th thinnest possible wire covered with sewing silk. It is sold by the yard from spools and is not always easy to locate. Usually the kind-hearted milliner will sell it from the stock of artificial flowers and feathers.

It is necessary in maline work, in the gracing of the tall lace bows and for surrounding the edges of upturned lace.

Those who would attempt the manufacture of the French hand-made flower will find it invaluable for the bracing of the leaves and for long silk stems; for these purposes the green covered is desirable.

When we talk of roses made by hand, maline once more comes to mind, for there is no newer flower than the maline (or chiffon) rose. In either material they may be accomplished by hand and with patience. The latter is a most necessary part of the process, but the result will justify all expenditure of time and energy.

Hemstitching

TO THOSE women who wish the attractive touch of hemstitching without the trouble and time necessary for handwork, a suggestion comes from one of our circle that is well worth trying.

After drawing the required number of threads, turn down the hem and baste, with the edge of the hem in the center of the drawn threads.

Now loosen the tension of the machine and stitch the hem on the exact [illegible]. Remove the basting threads and, with the hem in one hand, pull the garment away from it, thus drawing down [illegible] to the bottom of the [illegible].

[illegible] tucks can be made in [illegible] and after a little practice [illegible] of perfection can be attained [illegible]

Wash Silk for Children

ONE of the best ways of trimming the striped wash silks for very little girls is with the narrowest ribbon velvet made into bows.

It is not generally advisable to use silk for little children, but we make the exception in favor of colored striped silks from Japan and China, which are so very launderable and which shed the dust as do no wash materials of cotton or linen.

The ribbon velvet bows and rosettes are necessarily ripped off when the little garment goes to the wash.

Shirtwaist Tucks

WOULD you vary your shirtwaist tucks? Use the widest—a two-inch—tuck, alternated with the narrowest

The Flowing Sleeve

THE sectional sleeve has now taken within its more ample folds an undersleeve.

Just as soon as the guimpe sleeve becomes a puff we term it an undersleeve, and immediately the overhanging section of sleeve which has been closely fitted widens and forms almost the flowing sleeve of a bygone day.

The looser or upper sleeve is half length, three-quarter or quite full length, but is always decorated and so carefully faced as to admit of free movement of the arm without danger of disclosing an unfinished interior.

Undersleeves are lace, lawn, net or organdie, chiffon, marquisette and even delicate silk.

Tucks to Curve Sleeve

MADE on rather straight lines, the best blouse sleeves of sheer linen show from five to seven tiny tucks crossing the front seam of the sleeve just where the sleeve naturally wrinkles with the turn of the arm.

You see, these will give the desired—the necessary—curve, and you may select the exact position for your own exclusive pleats by trying on the blouse with the sleeve in place and secured at the armhole, and by observing the wrinkles at the turn of the arm.

Stocking Feet

DON'T consider it an economy to put children's feet into last summer's outgrown stockings. Short feet in stockings may permanently deprive the child of grace, and may even

To Roughen Leghorn

IT IS almost impossible really to injure a good leghorn hat, and by the roughest sort of a process the too well-finished specimen may be brought into such a complete state of submission that it will finally turn out the thing you most desire it to be.

For the present season it should be rough, unfinished, uneven and a delightful natural yellow, and this is possible if it be scrubbed with strong soap, ammonia and a scrubbing brush until all the dressing has disappeared.

It should be pressed on its wrong side with a hot iron, but with a piece of new unbleached muslin between iron and hat, and, further, upon the wrong side if the straw shows the least tendency to get flat or glossy.

After the hat has been properly pressed it should be colored a deep yellow with a mixture of oil paint and gasoline.

This will also tend to roughen it to that delightful texture now so fashionable.

Embroidery Upon Lace

UPON some of the most exquisite French underwear there is a copyable little note for the deft-fingered women of our needlework guild. Heavy motifs of embroidery ornament valenciennes lace.

They appear upon the cross section of the nightdress, the chemise and the corset cover; also upon those strips passing over the shoulder, and again on the lace drawer ruffles. Several strands of white untwisted cotton are used for this work, and the pattern of the lace is usually selected as the design—that is, some single motif or spray of blossom and leaf is set in exactly the proper place when the garment is made, so that it may be made more prominent by this enriching process.

"Painting the lily," you will suggest, this putting of embroidery upon lace; but it is recommended, as is all extra effort, to the persistent embroiderer who

Some Hints for the Amateur

NEATNESS is always a requisite of good sewing, and besides the fact that durability is increased, there is a satisfaction in knowing that the inside of a garment need not be withheld from a critical eye. Binding the seams is a little thing, but most effectual in the attainment of the neatness that marks the careful sewer.

If it is difficult to adjust binding, the edges of seams can be pinked—a method in favor with tailors. There is no fraying of the edges, and the bulky line is obviated.

Hems of heavy material can be successfully and neatly finished if the raw edge of just one turn be stitched down underneath a pliable tape of the same color. Two rows of stitching are necessary, but the scheme is worth a trial.

If a bias strip be used for binding armholes or seams, it can be adjusted easily and evenly if it be creased in the center before it is placed on the edge of the seam.

When attaching a collar, never allow any fulness at the back of the bodice, unless, of course, there is regular gathering. If by any chance the collar line of the bodice has stretched, hold it in to the straight collar, allowing the extra fulness to be disposed of from the front edge to the shoulder seam.

When cutting very sheer chiffons, batistes or soft materials, it is well to draw a thread as a guide line.

It is better to shrink washable materials before making them into garments. A little salt in the water will set the color, and it is only necessary to wring out and hang by the selvage on the line.

When fastening a dress at the back, it should be hooked from right to left.

It is always advisable to hold all fulness, whether it be of the sleeves or the skirtband, toward the person when sewing it to a plain piece of material.

Skirt braids of worsted or mohair should be shrunken before they are sewn to the skirt. The main point to remem-

Made-Over Cockade

HAVE you an old coque plume? One of those ever-attractive greenish bronze-colored affairs, made of the long tail feathers of our family friend, the rooster? Well, now is the time to restore him to his original glory. He can never be any more in fashion than this season.

He is no longer a winter commodity, for spring has ushered him out of the barnyard into the presence of the head milliner of most establishments.

Take the separate feathers and wire them together with that finest of millinery wire, which is silk covered, into first a small close bunch with a good stem by which to fasten the cockade to the hat. Then fasten to half of its feathers, halfway up, another bunch; wire them fast, and to half of these secure another bunch.

Proceed in this way until the height of the cockade is suitable for your purpose, and with sufficient wire, wrapping all along, to make a firm mass of feathers that will not fall when placed.

By using a quantity of the separate feathers in each bunch and by t[illegible]ing the cockade as you make it, a perfect one of its kind may result from feathers you might have discarded.

Black Embroidery

ECRU linens striped with black are good, and are bought by the artistic dressmaker with a view to their embroidering possibilities.

Black mercerized cotton is "fast" and will work up well in solid work upon the striped linen ground.

The pattern is stamped upon the stripe, regardless of it, for therein lies the beauty.

Striped Collars

COLLARS, the plain turnover variety, are once more embroidered upon striped linen and in the color of the stripe.

This is a particularly attractive idea

Remodel Lace Blouse

THE all-over lace waist, which is a perfectly good left-over from the wardrobe of two years ago, may be worked into a this-year's garment of quite a good and reliable style by making as a part of it a white cotton voile skirt with a paneled back and front, the panels extending up over the shoulders, where they are seamed together. This will leave the side gores of the skirt belted in.

A complete garment you will now have, which is to be slipped on over the lace blouse.

How satisfying to be able to use a good garment without making it completely over!

If desirable, the collar and cuffs may be removed, leaving the lace bodice collarless and with three-quarter sleeves.

Motifs cut from the discarded lace may possibly be so shaped that they

The Smartest Fashions of Well-Dressed Folk

At the Flower Seller's

DEAREST ELEANOR:

Yesterday afternoon I walked abroad in the sun, and I could not resist the temptation to linger in an improvised flower garden on one of our streets. Azaleas and geraniums seemed to have been "cornered" by the enterprising vender, and I had an excellent opportunity to see a few street gowns because of the indecision of the customers.

One little girl had a great time selecting her family tree. She was dressed in a very simple little frock with a smocked yoke and cuffs (one of the newest touches, I believe). Her hat was of shirred pink silk, of a mushroom shape that is always becoming to childish faces.

But the mother's dress was a beauty! Of linen in one of the old-rose shades, with very attractive lines. Embroidery was the main feature, forming decorative points at the yoke and girdle and outlining the lower edge of the tunic. The cuffs on the elbow sleeves were embroidered in the same effective way. Of course, with these new short-length sleeves long gloves were worn.

The large hat of natural-colored straw was turned up at the back and trimmed with large flowers and foliage.

Coming down the street was an older woman who showed how well dressed our mothers can be in this enlightened age. A small straw turban with flowers at one side was a conservative choice of hat. The afternoon costume of gray silk had a shallow yoke, cut square, and an arrangement of a tunic that fell from the shoulders to the knees. A belt was used at the sides and back, and buttons were sanely added as trimming. One of the new marabou-trimmed scarfs was thrown around the shoulders of this matron. Verily, the day of woman of any age has arrived! Write to me soon.

Your sister,
MADGE.
